Exhibit 22. One Gurunath Balaji died on September 30, 1918 leaving a Will. Probate proceedings with regard to the Will were pending in the District Court at Dharwar, instituted by the first defendant, in whose favour the Will in question had been passed. On January 5, 1919, the parties concerned with the Will executed a submission paper, Exhibit 23. What was submitted to the arbitrators was the dispute with regard to the estate of Gurunath Balaji. The arbitrators made an award, which is Exhibit 22, by which, after it was recited that in order that the two parties should not ruin themselves unnecessarily by going to litigation in respect of this dispute existing between them with reference to the estate of Gurunath Balaji, the disputes were referred, various properties were allotted to the disputing parties. Clearly, although the submission paper was in a general form, it was never considered that the arbitrators were to decide whether Gurunath had, as a matter of fact, executed a Will. It is apparent, on the face of the award, that the arbitrators were in no way ousting the jurisdiction of the Court before which Probate proceedings were pending. They made no attempt whatever themselves to decide whether or not Probate should be granted. Obviously, that could not be decided by them.

But it is contended by the appellant that, because Probate proceedings were pending, therefore, the award was illegal. No authority was cited for that proposition. But the appellant relied upon the decision of this Court in Manilal Motilal v. Gokaldas Rowji (1). That decision could only be applicable if there had been a suit pending between the parties, the issues in which had been referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court. There was nothing whatever to prevent the parties going to arbitration with regard to the division of the estate, leaving the Court to decide whether or not Probate should be granted of the Will. That was a question entirely outside the functions of the arbitrators, while the actual questions regarding the division of properties in dispute between the parties could properly be referred to them.

) 59 Ind. Cas. 53; 22 Bom. L. R. 1048; 45 B. 45.

The simple test in this case would be to consider what would have happened if the parties had waited until Probate had been issued to refer to arbitration the question how the properties of the deceased should be divided. It could not possibly be said then that the submission to arbitration would be illegal. The mere fact that it was entered upon before the Probate proceedings had come to an end cannot possibly affect the question of its legality or illegality. The order of the lower Court was right and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

W. C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE

No. 753 OF 1921.

August 10, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerji, Kt., and Mr. Justice Rankin.

MONMOTHA NATH KAR—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

PROBODH CHANDRA RATARHI—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 50 (2)—Presumption, whether applicable to suit for ejectment—Landlord and tenant—Transfer of holding—Demand of rent from transferee of holding, effect of—Construction of document—Admission of executant, value of.

Section 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is by its terms limited in its application to suits or proceedings under the Bengal Tenancy Act, but even in cases where the section is not directly applicable the Court may act on a presumption similar to the one arising under the section, if the facts justify the necessary inference. [p. 418, col. 1.]

Rasamoy Purkait v. Srinath Moyra, 7 C. W. N. 132., Sarat Chandra Ghose v. Shyam Chand, 10 C. W. N. 930, Nityananda Pal v. Nanda Kumar Chowdhuri, 10 Ind. Cas. 163; 13 C. L. J. 415; Buzlul Karim v. Satish Chandra Giri, 10 Ind. Cas. 325; 13 C. L. J. 418; 15 C. W. N. 752, and Prau Krishna v. Mukta Sundari, 21 Ind. Cas. 544; 8 C. L. J. 193, referred to.

MONMOTHA NATH v. PROBODH CHANDRA.

The presumption contained in section 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies whether the rent is payable entirely in cash or partly in cash and partly in kind or entirely in kind, and the same principle applies to suits or proceedings to which the rule embodied in section 50 is extended by analogy. [p. 418, col. 2.]

Dina Nath Pal v. Rajar Sati Prasad, 72 Ind. Cas. 663; 36 C. L. J. 220; 27 C. W. N. 115; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 74, followed.

A demand by the landlord for rent from the transferee of a holding professing to be in occupation of the holding as a tenant is good evidence of mutual consent to the creation of a tenancy unless the landlord is able to explain that the demand was not unqualified and should be differently interpreted. [p. 419, col. 1.]

Underhay v. Read, (1888) 20 Q. B. D. 209; 57 L. J. Q. B. 129; 58 L. T. 457; 36 W. R. 298; Brown v. Storey, (1840) 1 M. & G. 117; 1 Scott (N. R.) 9; 9 L. J. C. P. 225; 4 Jur. 319; 133 E. R. 270, relied upon.

Deonandan Pershad v. Meghu Mahton, 5 C. L. J. 181; 11 C. W. N. 225; 34 C. 57, distinguished.

The admission of the executant of a document cannot be utilised to contradict the document. Evidence cannot be admitted to show the intention of the executant which is not disclosed by the authorised channel, namely, the words which he himself selected. [p. 418, col. 2.]

Great Western Railway v. Bristol Corporation (1918) 87 L. J. Ch. 414; 16 L. G. R. 393, relied on.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Midnapore, dated the 13th December 1920, reversing that of the Munsif, Second Court, at that place, dated the 13th of November 1919.

Dr. Dwarkanath Mitter (with him Babu Pyari Mohan Chatterji), for the Appellant.—The defendant is the appellant. The appeal arises out of a suit to recover possession of two non-transferable occupancy holdings on the allegation that the same had been purchased by defendants in execution of a money-decree in 1917. The defence is that the holdings are one and a consolidated rent is payable and has been recorded as such in the Record of Rights, that they are raiyats at fixed rates and that the rent has been uniformly paid for 20 years. A portion of the holding was not mortgaged and hence plaintiff was not entitled to re-enter. The First Court dismissed the suit. On appeal that decision has been reversed. I submit the landlord recognised me. The sale certificate clearly shows that the entire holding did not pass by sale. The evidence shows that for 30 years the same rent has been paid part in cash and part in paddy. That entitle me to a presumption under section 50, Bengal Tenancy Act.

Babu Lalit Mohan Mittra, for the Respondent.—The plea of recognition was not definitely taken. The finding is conclusive that there was no recognition. See Deonandan Pershad v. Meghu Mahton (1). Rent in kind cannot be treated as fixed rent. See Baneswar Mukherji v. Umesh Chandra (2), Pran Krishna Saha v. Mukta Sundari Dassya (3). He is also precluded from raising the question under section 115, Bengal Tenancy Act. See Pirithi Chand Chowdhury v. Sheikh Basarat Ali (4).

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the defendant in a suit for recovery of possession of land upon establishment of title. The plaintiff is the landlord of the disputed property, which, according to him, comprises two non-transferable occupancy holdings and was purchased by the defendant on the 21st August 1917 at a sale in execution of a mortgage decree. The defendant contended, first, that the holdings belonged to a raiyat at fixed rent and were consequently transferable under section 18 of the Bengal Tenancy Act; secondly, that what had been mortgaged and was brought to sale was not the entire land of the two tenancies, so that he was the purchaser of a portion of the holding and was consequently not liable to be evicted; and, thirdly, that he had been recognised as tenant by the landlord, who had, after his purchase, demanded rent from him. The Trial Court held that the tenancy could not be deemed to consist of holdings at fixed rent, as the rent was payable partly in cash and partly in kind. The Court further held that there had been, no recognition by the plaintiff of the purchase of the tenancy by the defendant. But the Court upheld the contention that what had been mortgaged and sold was less than the entire land of the tenancy. In this view, the claim for recovery of possession was dismissed; Daya-

(1) 5 C. L. J. 181; 11 C. W. N. 225; 34 C. 57.

(2) 7 Ind. Cas. 875; 37 C. 626.

(3) 12 Ind. Cas. 544; 18 C. L. J. 193.

(4) 3 Ind. Cas. 449; 10 C. L. J. 343; 13 C. W. N. 1149; 37 C. 30 (F. B.)

MONMOTHA NATH v. PROBODH CHANDRA.

moyl v. Ananda Mohan Roy (5). Upon appeal, the Subordinate Judge has reversed this decision. He has affirmed the finding of the Court of first instance upon the question of the nature of the tenancy and the plea of estoppel. The Subordinate Judge has, however, held that the sale certificate covers the entire lands of both the holdings. In this view, he has concluded that the holdings had been abandoned by the original tenants, with the result that the plaintiff was entitled to re-enter. Upon the present appeal, the decision of the Subordinate Judge has been challenged on three grounds; namely, first, that the holdings constituted tenancies at fixed rents, notwithstanding that the rent was payable partly in cash and partly in kind; secondly, that the question, whether the defendant has made a valid purchase of all the lands of the holdings must be determined with reference to, not the sale certificate, but the mortgage-deed; and, thirdly, that the question of recognition has not been properly decided.

As regards the first question, the evidence, it is urged, makes it abundantly clear that the holdings have been held at rent which has not been changed for many years. It is not disputed, however, that the rule of presumption embodied in section 50 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not by its terms applicable. That section is, by its terms, limited in its application to suits or proceedings under the Bengal Tenancy Act. A suit for ejectment does not fall within that description Sarat Chandra Ghose v. Shyam Chand (6), Rasamoy Purkait v. Srinath Moyra (7). But it has been ruled that even in cases where section 50 is not directly applicable, the Court may act on a presumption similar to the one arising under the section, if the facts justify the necessary inference; Nityananda Pal v. Nanda Kumar Chowdhuri (8), Buzlul Karim v. Satish Chandra Giri (9), Pran Krishna Saha v. Mukta Sundari Dassya (3). Now, in respect of section 50, it has been recently held, in the case of Dina Nath Pal v. Raja Sati Prosad [S. A. No. 2108 of 1920] (10) [decided by Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ., on the 7th August 1922] that the presumption applies whether the rent is payable entirely in cash or partly in cash and partly in kind, or entirely in kind. The same principle plainly applies to suits or proceedings where the rule embodied in section 50 is extended by analogy. It follows that the Courts below have erroneously held that the disputed holdings could not be tenancies held at fixed rents merely because the rent was payable partly in cash and partly in kind. The relevant facts must accordingly be investigated and the Court must determine whether the tenancies have been held at a uniform rent or rate of rent for such a length of time as to justify the inference that they must have been in their inception holdings at rents fixed in perpetuity; in other words, mourasi moharrari holdings.

As regards the second question, it is plain that the Subordinate Judge has not examined the matter from the correct standpoint. The root of the title of the defendant is the mortgage-deed. With reference to the boundaries set out therein, compared with the entries in the Record of Rights, the Trial Court came to the conclusion that one plot, that is, No. 996, was not included in the mortgage. This finding has not been expressly reversed by the Subordinate Judge; but he has proceeded on the assumption not founded on the evidence that there may have been a mistake in the Record of Rights. We are of opinion that this point requires re-consideration. We may add that whatever title may have vested in the defendant, must be traced to the mortgage-bond and cannot be rested on an admission of the tenant himself. The question clearly is not, what the tenant intended to mortgage but what was conveyed by virtue of the description actually inserted therein. The admission of the tenant cannot be utilized to contradict the document and it would be dangerous to allow outside evidence to show the intention of the writer, which is not disclosed by the authorised channel, namely, the words which he

(10) 72 Ind. Cas. 663; 36 C. L. J. 220; 27 C. W. N. 1151 (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 74.

(5) 27 Ind. Cas. 61; 42 C. 172; 18 C. W. N. 971; 20 C. L. J. 52.

(6) 10 C. W. N. 930.

(7) 7 C. W. N. 132.

(8) 10 Ind. Cas. 163; 13 C. L. J. 415.

(9) 10 Ind. Cas. 325; 13 C. L. J. 418; 15 C. W. N. 752.

CHUNI LAL ASHARAM v. KASHIBHAI NATHABHAI.

himself selected. This does not require elaboration and reference need only be made to the decision of the House of Lords in Great Western Railway v. Bristol Corporation (11) where the earlier authorities will be found reviewed.

As regards the third point, we are of opinion that the question of recognition has not been properly examined. The evidence indicates that the plaintiff demanded not from the defendant, with full knowledge that the latter was in possession as purchaser of the tenants' rights in the land. Prima facie this is evidence of an intention, unless otherwise explained, to recognise the title of the purchaser, and unless repudiated would constitute the relationship of landlord and tenant. The observations in Deonandan Pershad v. Meghu Mahton (1) where on the authority of Evans v. Elliot (12) and Towerson v. Jackson (13), it was stated that mere demand for rent is not sufficient to create the relationship of landlord and tenant, unless followed by assent in response thereto, do not affect the case before us. Here the defendant purchased the holdings on the assumption that they were transferable and he professed to be tenant in occupation. In such circumstances, demand by the plaintiff for rent is good evidence of mutual consent to the creation of a tenancy unless the plaintiff is able to explain that the demand was not unqualified and should be differently interpreted; see Underhay v. Read (14) which refers to Brown v. Storey (15). This aspect of the case has not been investigated by the Courts below.

The result is that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the Subordinate Judge set aside, and the case remanded to him for reconsideration. Costs will abide the result.

Z. K.

*Appeal allowed ;
Case remanded.*

- (11) (1918) 87 L. J. Ch. 414; 16 L. G. R. 393.
(12) (1838) 9 A. & E. 342; 48 R. R. 520; 1 P. & D. 256; 8 L. J. Q. B. 511; 112 E. R. 1242.
(13) (1891) 2 Q. B. 484; 61 L. J. Q. B. 36; 65 L. T. 332; 40 W. R. 37; 56 P. J. 21.
(14) (1888) 20 Q. B. D. 209; 57 L. J. Q. B. 129; 58 L. T. 457; 36 W. R. 298.
(15) (1840) 1 M. & G. 117; 1 Scott (N. R.); 91 9 L. J. C. P. 225; 4 Jur. 319; 133 E. R. 270.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 292 OF 1921.

February 16, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

CHUNILAL ASHARAM—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

KASHIBHAI NATHABHAI—

—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47—Execution of decree—Defendant against whom suit dismissed, whether party to suit—Objection by such defendant to attachment, nature of—Court, duty of.

P. instituted a suit against C. and D, father and son, and obtained a decree against the son D alone. P then applied to attach D's property whereupon C applied to the Court not to execute the decree against the property which he alleged belonged to himself. The Court, after considering affidavits filed by the parties, granted C's application, and referred P to a regular suit to have it declared that the property was the property of his judgment-debtor and was liable to be attached and sold in execution of his decree. On appeal:

Held, (1) that although the suit against C had been dismissed he was still a party to the suit within the explanation to section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, and any question arising between him and P with regard to the execution of the decree would have to be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit; [p. 420, col. 1.]

(2) that C's application was premature and ought not to have been entertained, that the application could only be made when the property had actually been attached and the applicant's rights interfered with, and that the question in C's application should be decided upon evidence and not upon affidavits. [p. 420, col. 1.]

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, at Ahmedabad, in application in Darkhast No. 382 of 1919.

Mr. G. S. Rao, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. R. J. Thakor), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from an order of the First Class Subordinate Judge on an application of a very curious nature. The plaintiff filed a suit against two defendants, who were father and son. The suit was dismissed against the first defendant, and decreed against the second defendant. The plaintiff applied to the Court to attach the property of the son. The first defendant then applied to the Court that the Court should not execute the decree against properties which he alleged belonged to him, but if the Court had granted execution and attached his properties, the attachment should be raised. The learned Judge allowed affidavits to be filed and came to the conclusion that the first defendant had proved his case for the purpose of the application, and that the relief of the decree-holder was to bring a regular suit and get it declared therein that the property was of the judgment-debtor and liable to be attached and sold. So he ordered that the property should not be attached, and if the view were taken that they were already attached, as the Court had passed an order for attachment, he ordered that the attachment should be raised and that the plaintiff should get it first declared in a regular suit that the properties he sought to attach were of his judgment-debtor and liable to be attached in execution of his decree.

CHUNI LAL ASHARAM V. KASHIBHAI NATHABHAI.

Now, if the claimant, the first defendant, had been an outsider he would have had to prefer a claim against the attachment which would have been investigated under O. LVIII. The decision of the Court on that application would not be appealable. The remedy of the dissatisfied party would be by a suit, and it would certainly seem from the remarks of the Judge in the Court below that he thought he was making an order under O. XXI, r. 60. But as the first defendant, although the suit had been dismissed against him, was still a party to the suit within the explanation to section 47, any question arising between him and the plaintiff with regard to the execution of the decree would have to be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit. Therefore, the first defendant's claim to the property would have to be determined by the Court executing the decree.

But the real question is whether this application came within the provisions of section 47 of the Code. It was open to the first defendant to ask the Court to hold that a question had arisen between the parties and to decide it. But the first defendant was exactly in the same position as any ordinary outsider claiming against an executing plaintiff with regard to his cause of action. An outsider could not prefer a claim to the property until injury had resulted to him by the property which he claimed to be his having been attached. He could not ask the Court to decide any question relating to the property until his property had been attached. The order directing that the property should be attached effected nothing against the interest of the first defendant. His application was in effect a quia timet application to prevent that happening which he was afraid would happen of the Court after making an order for attachment of his property actually detained his property. No authority has been cited to us which sanctions such an application. In our opinion the application was premature and ought not to have been entertained by the Court. When the property had actually been attached, then the first defendant could complain that his rights had been interfered with and ask the Court to remove the attachment.

We should like to point out that the question which may arise with regard to this property between the plaintiff and the first defendant, and which may have to be tried by the Court executing the decree, is not a question which could possibly be tried by affidavits. Evidently the Court considered, in dealing with the first defendant's application, that it was competent to deal with the matter in a summary manner, the question between the parties having to be ultimately decided by a regular suit, so that if this matter comes eventually before the Court, it will have to deal with the question on evidence, and that evidence would have to be taken in the same way as in a regular suit. The appeal must be allowed and the application dismissed with costs throughout.

W. C. A.

Appeal allowed.

BUBBY HURRY & CO. v. HERTZ & CO.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1559 OF 1918.

February 28, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice,
and Mr. Justice Fforde.MESSRS. BUBBY HURRY & CO., THROUGH HARI RAM OF AMRITSAR—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MESSRS. M. HERTZ & CO., LTD.,
MANCHESTER, ENGLAND—PLAINTIFFS —RESPONDENTS.Construction of contract—Sale of goods—C. I. F. contract, incidents of—Purchaser, whether can refuse payment except on delivery.

One of the clauses in a contract for the sale of goods provided that the vendor shall draw upon the purchaser through any Bank in sterling for the total amount of the invoice at 60 days' sight, the Bills of Lading and shipping documents to be handed to the purchaser on payment of the draft. The purchaser further bound himself to accept such drafts for presentation and pay at maturity notwithstanding any objection he may have on account of any variation whatever from the terms of the indent, such objections, if any, to be settled privately or by arbitration. The purchaser also agreed not to raise any claim in respect of the transaction unless he had accepted and retired the draft or drafts:

Held, that on a true construction of the agreement the purchaser was bound to accept the drafts upon presentation on tender of the Bills of Lading and shipping documents, and no claim could be raised by him, nor arbitration invoked until such payment had been made. [p. 422, cols. 1 & 2.]

When goods have been sold upon C. I. F. terms, the contract of the seller is performed by tendering to the buyer the documents which would enable the latter to obtain on the ship's arrival the delivery of the goods contracted for. These documents must be tendered within a reasonable time from the time agreed upon for shipment of the goods which they represent. If the contract of sale provides that payment is to be made by draft drawn on the buyer, the latter is bound to accept the draft on tender of the proper documents. This he must do even though the goods be lost or destroyed at the time the draft is presented. The delivery he is entitled to as against payment of the contract price is not the goods contracted for but their symbol represented usually by the Bill of Lading, Charter-party, Invoice and Policy of Insurance. Upon payment he can, upon arrival of the ship demand the goods themselves, and should these not be forthcoming, or, when forthcoming, not be of the nature contracted for, all his remedies at law are then open to him. [p. 423, col. 1.]

Clemons Horst Co. v. Biddell Brothers, (1912) A. C. 18; 81 L. J. K. B. 42; 105 L. T. 563; 17 Com. Cas. 55; 12 Asp. M. C. 80; 56 S. J. 50; 28 T. L. R. 42, relied on.

First appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Amritsar, dated the 30th April 1918.

Lalas Sardha Ram and Jagan Nafh, for the Appellants.

Mr. Philip Morton, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal of the defendants against the judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Amritsar in an action brought to recover damages for breach of contract arising out of an agreement, or agreements for the sale of certain goods. The facts are fully set out in the judgment of the Court below and we will only re-state them so far as is necessary for the purpose of making our reasoning clear.

On the 23rd of December 1909 the defendants-appellants entered into a contract in writing with the plaintiff-respondents whereby the former agreed to buy and the latter to sell certain goods upon the terms and conditions therein contained. This document contains 23 clauses and concludes with a statement that the parties shall "accept the above contract as the basis of the agreement between them."

Clause 2 of the document provides that the vendor shall draw upon the purchasers through any Bank in sterling for the total amount of the invoice at 60 days' sight free of interest, the Bills of Lading and shipping documents to be handed to the purchasers on payment of the draft. The purchasers further bind themselves to accept such drafts upon presentation and pay at maturity, notwithstanding any objection they may have on account of any variation whatever from the terms of the indent, such objections, if any, to be settled privately or by arbitration.

Clause 8 contains the provisions as to arbitration and commences with the statement that the purchasers shall not raise any claim in respect of the transaction unless they have accepted and retired the draft or drafts.

The goods are to be shipped on purchasers account and risk and all offers and prices are deemed to mean "Free Karachi Harbour."

On the 31st December 1912 the appellants wrote to the respondents three letters, the first ordering 20 cases of prints, the second 5 bales of khaki, and the third 5 cases of white mulls, upon certain terms which need not be fully referred to.

BUBBY HURRY & CO. v. HERTZ & CO.

The first two letters expressed terms to be C. I. F. Karachi Harbour, and all three opened with the phrase "please supply the following goods on our usual terms and conditions."

The respondents contend that the words "our usual terms and conditions" mean the terms and conditions contained in the agreement of the 23rd December whereas the appellants' contention is that these words refer to the course of business actually transacted between themselves and the respondents and have no reference to the document of the 23rd December which applied only to a specific transaction of that date. The appellants further contend that even if that document does in fact govern the contracts in dispute it does not bear the construction placed upon it by the respondents.

The contest between the parties is mainly concerned with clauses 2 and 8 referred to above.

The respondents claim that under those clauses they are entitled to payment for goods shipped to the order of the defendants upon tender of the shipping documents, and that no question as to quality or condition of the goods can be raised by the purchasers until payment has been effected by the retirement of the drafts. The appellants, on the other hand, maintain that even if these clauses govern the contracts of sale, they are entitled to reject goods which are not up to sample; or of the nature ordered, without retiring the drafts. They also contend that under the arbitration clause they are entitled to refer to arbitration any dispute which may arise as to nature or quality of goods shipped to their order, before any payment need be made. The respondents deny that arbitration can be invoked until the drafts have been retired.

So far as the agreement of the 23rd December is concerned, we have no doubt at all that upon the true construction of that agreement the purchasers are bound to accept the drafts upon presentation, on tender of the Bills of Lading and shipping documents; and that no claim by the purchasers can be raised, nor arbitration invoked, until such payment has been made.

The further question then arises as to whether or not this document governed the transactions in question. This question would have been material but for the fact that the transactions in dispute are expressed to have been, and obviously were, upon the usual cost freight and insurance contract—a form of mercantile dealing, the principles and legal effects of which have been so exhaustively defined by judicial decisions that no room is left for any doubt or ambiguity whatsoever whenever that form of contract has been adopted.

That it has been adopted in the cases before us is clear beyond question, even if we leave the document of the 23rd December out of consideration. Not only did the letters of the appellants ordering the goods expressly state the terms to be C. I. F., but if any further assurance were required on this point it is provided by the Bills of Lading themselves, which bear on their face the following terms;—

C. I. F. Karachi Harbour draft 30 days' sight.

"Through the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China.

"Documents against payment
"Insured for £ 75."

No clearer evidence of a C. I. F. contract could be found.

The appellants, indeed, admit that the contract was a C. I. F. one, but still contend that this does not take away their right as purchasers of specific goods to reject those goods on arrival at the port of destination if they are not up to sample. They maintain that the rights of examination and rejection before payment are implied in C. I. F. as in other contracts for the sale of goods. In support of this contention Counsel for the appellants has referred us to the decision of the Court of Appeal in the well known case of Biddell Brothers v. E. Clemens Horst Company (1) It was there held by Vaughan Williams, L. J., and Farwell, L. J., (Kennedy, L. J., dissenting) that on a C. I. F. contract "terms net cash" the buyers were not bound to pay for certain hops on tender of the shipping documents but were entitled to refuse payment, until upon the arrival of the hops they had been given an opportunity for inspection of them.

(1) (1911) 1 K. B. 934; 16 Com. Cas. 197.

RUBBY HURRY & CO. v. HERTZ & CO.

Apart from the fact that the contract in that case materially differed from the one before us in that it contained no term expressly providing for a payment against shipping documents—an omission which went to the root of the decision of Farwell, L. J., the decision of the Court of Appeal was unanimously reversed by the House of Lords on appeal Clemens Horst Co. v. Biddell Brothers.⁽²⁾ and the dissenting judgment of Kennedy, L. J., adopted with very strong expression of approval. The effect of that and a number of subsequent judgments is to make it clear beyond all possibility of doubt that when goods have been sold upon C. I. F. terms the contract of the seller is performed by tendering to the buyer the documents which would enable the latter to obtain on the ship's arrival the delivery of the goods contracted for. These documents must of course be tendered within a reasonable time from the date agreed upon for shipment of the goods which they represent. If the contract of sale provides, as it does in the present case, that payment is to be made by draft drawn on the buyer, the latter is bound to accept the draft upon tender of the proper documents. This he must do even though the goods be lost or destroyed at the time the draft is presented. The delivery he is entitled to as against payment of the contract price is not the goods contracted for but their symbol represented usually by the Bill of Lading, Charter-party, Invoice and Policy of Insurance. Upon payment he can, upon arrival of the ship, demand the goods themselves and should these not be forthcoming, or, when forthcoming, not be of the nature contracted for, all his remedies at law are then open to him. So far, therefore, as this part of this case is concerned we are satisfied that the appellants' contentions are unsustainable. The shipping documents and the drafts were duly tendered to them and they refused to pay, and they have accordingly failed to perform their part of the contract. The respondents, treating this refusal—as they were quite entitled to do—as a breach of the contract, then proceeded to sell the goods by private treaty after having given to the appellants due notice of their intention to do so, and the only matter which remains to be considered is whether or not the respondents had, under the circumstances, a right of re-sale and, if so, whether that right was properly exercised?

That they had the right to re-sell the goods cannot be seriously disputed. If the parties were bound by the terms of the agreement of the 23rd December, the right of sale is governed by clause 3 of that document, which provides that upon failure by the appellants to accept the draft on presentation or pay at maturity, the respondents may sell the goods by public auction or private sale after giving ten days' notice of intention to do so, the appellants undertaking to make good any deficiency or loss sustained and waiving any profit on such sale should there be any.

If the appellants' contention that they are not bound by this agreement be accepted, the right of re-sale is conferred upon respondents by section 107 of the Indian Contract Act (corresponding to section 48 (3) of the English Sale of Goods Act, 1893) which is in all material respects identical in effect with clause 3 of the agreement. Indeed, this clause was obviously based upon section 107 of the Statute. The only difference between respondent's right to re-sell under the Statute and their rights under the agreement is that in the former case it could only be exercised if the property in the goods had passed to the appellants at the time of the breach of contract, while in the latter case it could be exercised irrespective of whether such property had or had not passed. The distinction in the present case is not material as the property undoubtedly passed to the appellants at the latest at the moment of tender of the shipping documents. The only question, therefore, which remains to be considered is whether the sale was a proper one or not. Upon the answer to that question depends the respondents' right to the amount of damages claimed in the present action, namely, the difference between the contract price and the price realised by the sale. As to this, the appellants say that the sale was collusive and fictitious and at an under value. It is true that the manner in which the transaction was carried out was not all that it ought to have been. A person of more than doubtful reputation in commercial matters was selected as commission agent to negotiate the sale, and a good deal of mystery surrounds the identity of the actual purchasers; and, moreover, the evidence as to market-value of the goods at the time of sale is lamentably deficient. But the fact remains that the price actually obtained was higher than an offer made by the appellants themselves. They had ample opportunity to investigate the validity of the transaction at the time and neglected or failed to do so. They have not produced any satisfactory evidence to show that the price realized was an under-value. This question was closely inquired into at the trial, and the Court below has held that the goods realized a proper price and that there was nothing collusive or improper in the manner in which the sale was effected.

⁽²⁾ (1912) A. C. 18; 81 L. J. K. B. 42; 105 L. T. 563; 17 Com. Cas. 55; 12 Asp. M. C. 80; 56 S. J. 50; 28 T. L. R. 42.

TIMMAPPA ANNAYA & MANJAYA JATTAYA:

Although we may not entirely agree with the learned Subordinate Judge on this particular finding, yet we cannot on the evidence before us hold that he was not reasonably entitled to find as he did.

For the reasons we have given we have no alternative but to dismiss the appeal, the parties to pay their own costs in this Court.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 733 OF 1921.

February 6, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

TIMMAPPA ANNAYA BHATTA—

PLAINTIFF NO. 2—APPELLANT

versus

MANJAYA JATTAYA SHETTI AND OTHERS— DEFENDANTS AND

PLAINTIFFS NOS. 1, 3 AND 4—

RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II,
r. 2—Tenancy-in-common—Suit for profits—
Subsequent suit for partition, maintainability of.*

Where there is a tenancy-in-common, there is always a constantly recurring right for each tenant to demand partition from the other. Therefore, it is always open at any time, as long as the tenancy-in-common continues, for one tenant to file a suit for partition irrespective of any suit or suits which may have been filed for a share of the profits previously.

The fact, therefore, that in a suit by a joint tenant for a share of his profits he did not sue for partition, would not bar a subsequent suit for partition, as the causes of action not being the same O. II, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, would not apply.

Second appeal against the decision of the District Judge, Kanara, in Appeal No. 114 of 1922.

Mr. G. P. Murdeshwar, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. V. Palekar, for Respondents
Nos. 2 to 6 and 8.

Mr. Alex A. Pais, for Respondents
Nos. 9, 13 and 14.

JUDGMENT.

Macleod, C. J.— The plaintiffs sued for partition and separation of their half share in the plaint lands. The first issue was, whether the suit was barred by O. II, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code. That issue was found in the affirmative by the Trial Court, and the plaintiffs' claim for partition was disallowed, but a decree was passed against certain of the defendants for Rs. 150, being the plaintiffs' share of the profits of the suit property. An appeal against that decree was dismissed. It has been found that the plaintiffs were entitled to a moiety of the mulgent lease relating to the land, and in the Record of Rights of 1909, the plaintiffs were entered as mulgenidars along with the defendants' family.

ZAINAB V. GHULAM RASUL.

Then, in 1916, the plaintiffs claimed to have let their moiety of the mulgenti to defendants on chalgenti for Rs. 50 a year, and they claimed five years' accumulation of unpaid rents. The Court held that there was no evidence of any shalgenti. But it held also that plaintiffs and defendants were tenants-in-common, and as the defendants could not prove exclusion, they had to pay the plaintiffs their half share of the mesne profits.

In this suit they asked for partition, in addition to the profits belonging to their share. Now, it will be seen that the cause of action on which the plaintiffs relied in the suit of 1916 was a chalgenti lease. It was found that there was no such lease. The Court, however, gave them something which they did not ask for, namely, profits belonging to their share as mulgenidars. It is difficult to see, then, how it could possibly be said that the cause of action in the present suit has any connection with the cause of action in the suit of 1916. But even if the plaintiffs in that suit had claimed a half share of the profits in the suit property, which belonged to them and the defendants as tenants-in-common, without suing for partition, I cannot see how such a suit would bar a later suit for partition under the provisions of O. II, r. 2. It is always open to a tenant-in-common to claim his half share of the profits of the land which is jointly owned, and there is no obligation lying on him in his suit for profits, also to claim partition. The cause of action in a suit for profits would be the fact that there is a tenancy-in-common, the fact that one of the tenants has collected the whole of the rents, and the fact that the other tenant is entitled to his share, and the relief which could be claimed on that cause of action would be half a share of the profits. There must always be a constantly recurring right for each tenant to demand partition from the other. Therefore, it would always be open at any time, as long as the tenancy-in-common continued for one tenant to file a suit for partition irrespective of any suit or suits which had been filed between them for a share of the profits during the continuance of the tenancy-in-common. Therefore, it is clear that O. II, r. 2, does not apply to this case, and the claim for partition must be tried on its merits. The appeal must be allowed and the suit returned to the Trial Court for disposal. The appellant will be entitled to his costs in this Court and in the lower Appellate Court. The costs in the Trial Court will be costs in the cause.

Crump, J.—It seems to me clear that the cause of action in the previous suit is not identical with the cause of action in the present suit. The words "cause of action" must, I think, be interpreted with reference to those facts which the plaintiffs set out as grounds for the relief he claimed. In the previous suit he sued as a landlord to recover rent. In that suit it is difficult to see how he could have claimed partition of the property. That in the course of that trial it was held that he was jointly interested in certain properties and was, therefore, entitled to a share in the profits does not alter the cause of action on which the suit was based. The cause of action for the later suit is the co-tenancy which was held proved in the former suit; and it is clear that those two causes of action are not identical; and, therefore, O. II r. 2 has no application here. Indeed, it would be unfortunate if we were compelled to dismiss the suits on any such grounds, for that would clearly lead to most inconvenient results.

W. C. A.

*Appeal allowed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 361 OF 1920.

February 20, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Florde.Musammât ZAINAB AND ANOTHER
—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS*versusGHULAM RASUL AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 123, 144—Muhammadan Law—Succession—Suit to recover share—Limitation.

ZAINAB V. GHULAM RASUL.

The joint family is not an institution of the Muhammadan Law. [p. 426, col. 1.]

On the death of a Muhammadan each of his heirs becomes entitled to claim his or her share and limitation begins to run against each under Art. 144 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. [p. 427, col. 1.]

There is no presumption in such a case that the male heirs hold the shares of the female heirs on behalf of the latter as managers of a joint family. [p. 427, col. 1.]

Nasiruddin Shah v. Lal Bibi, 89 P. R. 1888, Murad Khatun v. Muhammad Bakhsh, 33 Ind. Cas. 742; 84 P. R. 1916; 85 P. W. R. 1916, followed.

Khadersa Hajee Bappu v. Puthen Veetil Ayissa Ummah, 6 Ind. Cas. 50; 34 M. 511; 20 M. L. J. 288; 8 M. L. T. 4; (1910) M. W. N. 447, referred to.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Multan, dated the 17th December 1919, reversing that of the Junior Subordinate Judge, Multan, dated the 23rd December 1918.

Mr. Abdul Rashid, for the Appellants.

Mr. Anant Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This order will dispose of three connected second appeals from the decrees of the District Judge of Multan, dismissing the suits of the plaintiffs in three cases as barred by time.

The pedigree table of the parties will be found printed at page 10 of the paper-book in Civil Appal No. 361. The house of which portions are in dispute in each of the three cases belonged to Nur Mohammad, the common ancestor of the parties, who died some 40 years ago. From the plan put in by the plaintiffs it appears that the house is in possession of the three sons of Khuda Bakhsh or of their descendants on approximately equal shares. The eastern portion is in the possession of the sons of Karim Bakhsh, the western portion in the possession of the sons of Peer Bakhsh and the central portion was occupied by Ali Muhammad during his life time. Ghulam Rasul had Ali Muhammad's house attached in execution of a decree against Ali Muhammad. Musammal Zainab, the daughter of Nur Muhammad, and Murad Bakhsh, his daughter's son, plaintiffs in Case No. 39, objected to the attachment but their objection was disallowed, and they, therefore, sued for a declaration that they were owners of half of the house attached in execution of the decree against Ali Muhammad. Similarly, Ghulam Rasul got the portion of the house occupied by Karim Bakhsh's sons attached in execution of a decree against his three sons. This house was also attached by Kaura Lal in execution of his decree against Faiz Bakhsh. Musammal Khairan, Musammal Bakht Bhari and Musammal Murad Khatun objected to the attachments and claimed a share in the house and, their objections having been disallowed, they instituted Suits Nos. 40 and 102 to establish their rights. The plaintiffs claimed that they were governed by Muhammadan Law. The lower Appellate Court, without deciding definitely whether the parties were governed by Muhammadan Law or by custom, held that, on the assumption that they were governed by Muhammadan Law, all the suits were barred by time under Art. 123 of the Indian Limitation Act. It further held that the plaintiffs in the suits out of which Civil Appeals No. 362 and 364 have arisen have no locus standi because Karim Bakhsh, from whom they claim, died in the lifetime of his father Khuda Bakhsh, and, therefore, his daughters and widow could not claim any share in the house under Muhammadan Law. In second appeal it is urged by Mr. Rashid on behalf of the appellants that Art. 123 of the Indian Limitation Act does not apply and in support of his argument he relies upon the case of Khadersa Hajee Bappu v. Puthen Veetil Ayissa Ummah (1) wherein it was held that where a Muhammadan dies intestate his estate at once vests in his heir as tenants-in-common and there is no one charged by law with its distribution and in a suit by one of the heirs to recover his share, Art. 123 of the Limitation Act does not apply. The learned District Judge referred to this authority which he admitted was in favour of the view that the suits were within time but he considered himself bound to follow Nasiruddin Shah v. Lal Bibi (2) which was approved in Murad Khatun v. Muhammad Bakhsh (3). In Nasiruddin Shah v. Lal Bibi (2) the learned Judges pointed out that the joint family is not an institution of Muhammadans governed by

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 50; 34 M. 511; 20 M. L. J. 288; 8 M. L. T. 4; (1910) M. W. N. 447.

(2) 89 P. R. 1888.

(3) 33 Ind. Cas. 742; 84 P. R. 1916; 85 P. W. R. 1916.

SAYAD MIRA SAHEB SAHAJI MIA RAFI & BAI CHHOTI BEGAM.

Muhammadian Law and that in that particular case it could not be concluded that there was any joint holding after the death of the proprietor whose estate was in dispute, and further that it could not be presumed that the male relations were holding as managers of an admittedly joint family. They went on to say, at page 240* of the Record, "each sharer became entitled, on Ghulam Nabi Shah's death, and on Kabir Shah's death, to a share, and limitation runs against each." They did not definitely mention Art. 123 of the Indian Limitation Act but held that the suit was barred because of the rule of 12 years' adverse possession. Again, in Murad Khatun v. Muhammad Bakhsh (3) at page 257† of the Record, the learned Judges remarked: "There is no proof of the existence of a joint family, and it is manifest that each heir was entitled to claim his or her share on the death of the owner, whose estate was in dispute. Yar Mohammad, Umar, Ramzan and Kadir Bakhsh died more than 12 years prior to the suit, and limitation began to run from the date of each owner's death. It is clear that the right of inheritance of other persons became barred after the lapse of 12 years, vide Nasiruddin Shah v. Lal Bibi (2) which is on all fours with the present case." It appears to us that both these cases were decided under Art. 144 of the Indian Limitation Act and, premising that this Article applies to the present case, we have no doubt that the claim of the plaintiffs is barred by time. The learned District Judge has found that the plaintiffs had never been in joint possession of the house along with their male relatives. This is a finding of fact which cannot be contested in second appeal. It is quite clear that the descendants of Khuda Bakhsh have divided the ancestral house between them in practically equal shares. There is no ground for holding that they took possession on behalf of the female descendants of Nur Muhammad. It is clear that they were holding on their own behalf and, therefore, the Punjab rulings are clearly in point.

As regards the suits brought by Musammât Bakht Bhari, Musammât Khairan and Musammât Murad Khatun, Mr. Rashid had to admit that under Muhammadian Law they had no locus standi as Karim Bakhsh, through whom they claimed, died before his father Khuda Bakhsh.

We note that a preliminary objection was raised by respondents' Counsel to the effect that in the absence of a certificate by the District Judge the appeals were not competent. The judgment of the lower Appellate Court, however, shows that that Court did not definitely decide whether the parties were governed by Muhammadian Law or by custom though it inclined to the view that they were governed by custom. No certificate was, therefore, necessary.

The appeals accordingly fail and are dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeals dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 135 OF 1922.

March 7, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

SAYAD MIRA SAHEB, SAYAD SAHAJI MIA RAFI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—APPELLANTS

versus

BAI CHHOTI BEGAM AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—"Auladdar aulad," meaning of.

The expression auladdar aulad in a document includes descendants whether male or females except descendants through females.

Abdul Ganne Kasam v. Hussan Miya Rahimulla, 10 B. H. C. R. 7, followed.

Second appeal against the decision of the District Judge, Surat, in Appeal No. 84 of 1920.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. R. J. Thakor), for the Appellants.

Mr. M. B. Dave, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs sued to recover possession of the plaint property on the allegation that defendant No. 1 to whom it was given for residence, delivered it: to defendant No. 2, after executing a gift-deed. The plaintiff's suit was decreed in the Trial Court, but after a remand this decree was reversed by the District Judge. The house was admittedly wakf property. By the document, Exhibit 40, which has been relied upon by both sides, undoubtedly the descendants of the person who executed that document were entitled to reside in the suit house. It was argued the term "auladdar aulad" only meant male descendants, but there is no authority for that argument. On the contrary, the decision in Abdul Ganne Kasam v. Hussien Miya Rahimtulla (1) clearly shows that "auladdar aulad" include descendants whether male or female, except descendants through females. The plaintiffs had to admit that female descendants had a right of residence until their marriage, and also if a female of the family was forsaken by her husband or became a widow and has no house of her own, she could come and live in the house. But there can be no distinction between female descendants through males, for the right of residence belongs to them by reason of their descent, and not merely by reason of their being unmarried, or widows, or forsaken, as defendant No. 1 has a right of residence in the house, then it must follow the plaintiffs are not entitled to recover the property mentioned in the plaint. If they are dissatisfied with the arrangement which exists at present with regard to the residence of various members of the family, then they can take the necessary proceedings for claiming distribution of the premises. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

*Page of P. R. 1888—[Ed.]

†Page of P. R. 1916—[Ed.]

GALSTAUN V. ABID HUSAIN.

S. R. P.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 10 B. H. C. R. 7.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 20 OF 1919.]

February 2, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, J. C., and
Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.J. C. GALSTAUN—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

Mirza ABID HUSAIN—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.

Parties—Mortgage suit—Person claiming title paramount, whether proper party—Muhammadan Law—Legitimacy—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 18—Admission by predecessor-in-title, when admissible.

A plaintiff mortgagee cannot be allowed so to frame his suit as to draw into controversy the title of a third party who is not in any way connected with the mortgage, and who has set up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee. [p. 432, col. 1.]

This rule is not one of convenience merely, and where the holder of a title paramount objects to being made a party to the mortgage-suit he must be discharged, even where it would be convenient to try his title in the mortgage-suit proceedings. At the same time, where no clear and distinct claim is made in the pleadings by such a party defendant and a prayer in express terms to be dismissed from the suit not being made the Court is permitted to proceed to a trial on the merits, without protest the party cannot during arguments in the first Court after a protracted trial demand that he should be dismissed from the suit. [p. 432, col. 1.]

The Muhammadan Law raises a strong presumption in favour of legitimacy where a child is born under a man's roof and continues to be maintained in his house without any steps being taken on the father's part to repudiate his title to legitimacy as his offspring. [p. 433, col. 2.]

Statements made by persons from whom the parties to a suit have derived their interest in the subject-matter of the suit are admissible as admissions only when the admissions are of a date prior to the date of the transfer. Statements made by persons in possession of property and qualifying or affecting their title thereto are receivable against the party claiming through them by title subsequent to the admission. [p. 434, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, dated the 23rd December 1918.

Messrs. Zahur Ahmad and Bisheshwar Nath, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Wazir Hasan and P. L. Banerjee, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Lucknow in a suit for sale on foot of a simple mortgage. Mirza Sayed Hasan

GALSTAUN V. ABID HUSSAIN.

Khan, the plaintiff, sued the mortgagor, Nawab Sultan Hasan and Mr. Hyam for recovery of Rs. 19,700 odd by sale of a one-fourth share in two properties:—

(1) A house in Calcutta at No. 13, Russell Street, and

(2) Revenue-paying property in a village in the Lucknow District.

The mortgage was executed on 15th September 1908 for Rs. 10,000 carrying interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem re-payable in 8 months after the execution of the deed. In paragraph 5 of the plaint the reason given for joining Mr. Hyam as defendant was that he gave himself out as a vendee of the entire house in Russell Street from a co-sharer of the mortgagor. The mortgagor in his written statement admitted the claim and the contest lay between the plaintiff and Mr. Hyam. In the first part of his written statement Mr. Hyam denied the ownership of the Calcutta house by defendant No. 1 and the alleged mortgage. In paragraph 3 he alleged that the plaintiff had no cause of action, more particularly against him; and in paragraph 5 he claimed to be in possession of the house as purchaser under a deed of sale executed by Nawab Mehdi Ali Khan, his daughter Nawab Ummat-ul-Khatima Begam and her two sons, Mohammad Hashim Ali Khan and Muhammad Kasim Ali Khan in 1915, and in paragraph 6 he denied that the plaintiff was entitled to any relief against him. Paragraphs 7 to 12 of the written statement contained additional pleas:

(7) that the alleged title of the mortgagor rested on a claim to inherit a share in the house from his alleged father, Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah,

(8) that the mortgagor was never in possession of his alleged share of the house and that Mr. Hyam's vendors had all along been in adverse possession,

(9) that the right of the mortgagor, if any, to a share in the house became extinct on 21st August 1910 by expiry of 12 years from the death of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah,

(10) that such a right, if any, lapsed on 19th March 1913, when the mortgagor withdrew his suit against Mr. Hyam's vendors and a decree was passed by this Court accordingly, and

(12) that the suit was barred by limitation as against Mr. Hyam.

The 11th plea was a repetition of the two previous ones. The suit was filed on 24th October 1916 and the written statement was filed on 5th February 1917. On the 28th March 1917 Mr. Hyam's learned Counsel made a statement that the allegation in the plaint, of the mortgagor being a son and heir of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah was denied. On the same date the following issues were framed by the learned Judge of the lower Court:—

(1) Is the defendant No. 1 one of the sons and heirs of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah?

(2) Is the defendant No. 2 estopped from denying the allegation embodied in the first issue?

(3) Did defendant No. 1 own the property in dispute in 1908? If so, did he mortgage it to the plaintiff by a deed dated 15th September 1908, (Exhibit I) for consideration?

(4) (a) Was the defendant No. 1 in possession of one-sixth share in Kothi No. 13 situated in Russell Street, Calcutta, at the time of the mortgage in question?

(b) If not, did he lose his right to the same subsequent to mortgage as alleged. If so, to what effect?

(5) Was defendant No. 1's right to one-fourth share in Kothi No. 13 in Russell Street, Calcutta, extinguished by a decree of the Court, or by the defendant No. 2's vendor's remaining in possession of the property for above 12 years as alleged?

(6) Cannot.....bring the property to sale as alleged?

(7) To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled and against which of the defendants?

On the 3rd December 1918 after arguments commenced the learned Judge added two more issues Nos. 7 and 8 bringing the 7th issue previously framed as 9?

(7) Has the plaintiff any cause of action against defendant No. 2?

(8) Is the suit as against defendant No. 2 barred by limitation?

The suit was decreed against both the defendants whereupon Mr. Hyam appealed to this Court. The grounds of appeal excepting No. 13 relating to costs attack the findings of the lower Court on all the issue?

Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah died on 1st August 1898. On 5th February 1895

GALSTAUN V. ABID HUSSAIN.

he had executed a deed of trust purporting to transfer to two trustees, his wife, Nawab Ummat-ul-Fatima, and her father, Nawab Mehdi Ali Khan, properties situated in Oudh and the house in suit in Calcutta upon trust for the benefit of his wife during her life, with remainder to his two sons by her, Hashim Ali Khan, Kasim Ali Khan. After the death of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah, his widow and her father declaring themselves to be trustees and in possession of the house in Russell Street which is in dispute in this case, executed a power of attorney in favour of Madho Lal Doongar on 29th August 1902, a usufructuary mortgage deed on 13th September 1902, and two deeds of further charge in 1904. On 7th September 1907 another usufructuary mortgage was executed in favour of the same persons. Out of the consideration only a portion was devoted to the payment of the prior mortgages. The lady and her father in the same capacity conveyed the house to Mr. Hyam under a sale-deed dated 28th January 1915, and a portion of the sale consideration was left with him to redeem the mortgage of Madho Lal Doongar. This is how Mr. Hyam contested the suit as owner of the house in Russell Street. The present appellant, Mr. Galstaun, is a purchaser of the rights and interests of Mr. Hyam in the house in suit.

There were certain transfers of the estate of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah in Lucknow which led to litigation which requires mention in this case. On 26th June 1900 the Nawab's widow executed a simple mortgage of some of the Lucknow property in favour of the plaintiff-respondent for herself and on behalf of her two sons, then minors. On 3rd November of the same year Sultan Hasan Mirza mortgaged his share of certain properties to the plaintiff. In 1908 there were two suits by the plaintiff against the lady and her two sons to enforce the mortgage of June 1900, and another by the lady's two sons, Hashim Ali Khan and Kasim Ali Khan, against Sultan Mirza and the plaintiff for a declaration that the former had no rights in the property which he could mortgage to the latter by the deed of November 1900. The plaintiff of the present suit was successful in the Trial Court. In both suits he lost in appeal here. Permission was granted by the Court to file an appeal to the Privy Council but subsequently Sultan Mirza withdrew from the appeal and the plaintiff prosecuted both the appeals alone in the Privy Council which set aside the decrees of this Court and restored those of the Trial Court Sadik Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan (1). In 1910 Sultan Mirza sued the lady, her sons, Madho Lal Doongar and others for recovery of possession of his share of the Russell Street house, among other properties. This suit was withdrawn by him unconditionally and dismissed in 1913.

The first point argued on behalf of the appellant is covered by the first three grounds of appeal. The contention was that the defendant-appellant was not a proper party to a suit for sale by the plaintiff on foot of his mortgage of 15th September 1908 and should have been discharged at the commencement of the proceedings in the lower Court. It will be noticed that it is in this Court for the first time that a specific plea has been put forward that the defendant-appellant was not a proper party to the plaintiff's suit. As already pointed out in the written statement, the plea was that the plaintiff had no cause of action against other defendants and, in any event against the defendant-appellant. It is obvious that the lower Court did not take this to be a plea under O. I, r. 13 as to mis-joinder of parties requiring an immediate decision under O. XIV, r. 2 of an issue of law raised in the pleadings. The general issue "To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled and against which of the defendants?" did not include a question as to the form of the suit and the joinder of parties. The intention was to determine under that issue whether a decree could be passed after contest against the defendant-appellant or not. The defendant-appellant had an opportunity on 28th March 1917 of clearing the pleadings and raising objections to the issues framed by the Court. In fact an objection to the first paragraph of the fourth issue, was raised by the plaintiff's Counsel, and if the Counsel for the defendant-appellant had considered the issues to be defectivor insufficient he would have pointed this matter out to the lower Court. From the nature of the pleadings it is clear that the intention of the defendant-appellant in the Trial Court was to enter into contest and it was not till 20 months later during arguments that a specific objection was raised to the form of the plaintiff's suit. The rule is well recognised as laid down in the case of Jaggewar Dutt v. Bhuvan Mohan Mitra (2), that a plaintiff mortgagee cannot be allowed so to frame his suit as to draw into controversy the title of a third party who is not in any way connected with the mortgage and who has set up a title paramount to that of a mortgagor and mortgagee. This is the only case so far as we know where persons who were parties to the suit and had a paramount title to the property were dismissed from the suit by the Appellate Court. In the other reported cases where this rule was followed the stranger having paramount title desired to be made a party defendant to the suit and such a claim was refused: Satagauda Appanna v. Satappa Daragauda (3). Joti Prasad v. Aziz Khan (4) Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir Rowthan (5). It would, therefore, be necessary to examine with some care the principles of the decision of the Calcutta rulings. It is important to notice that the suit was first resisted by Dutt defendants on the ground that it was not properly framed inasmuch as adverse claimants in their position could not repeatedly be made parties to the mortgage suit for the purpose of litigating their titles. The Trial Court gave its decision on this contention first and overruled their objection that they ought to be dismissed from the suit. After this preliminary order, evidence was taken in the case which was heard on the merits. The plea in the opinion of the High Court was not one of jurisdiction but of the frame of the litigation and the scope of its enquiry. The same Judge who delivered the judgment of the Bench pointed out in another case a few months later, Bhaja Chowdhury v. Chuni Lal (6), that the question whether the title which a third person alleges to have acquired after the plaintiff's mortgage is or is not a real title which is entitled to priority over the mortgage sought to be enforced is a question which may be tried and adjudicated in a mortgage suit. The learned Judge, therefore, observed: "The question is not one of jurisdiction, but rather of the form of the litigation, and the scope of its enquiry; in other words, the question was a question of multifariousness or of convenience affecting the discretion only and not the jurisdiction." He quoted with approval the following observations of a learned Judge in an American case:

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 104; 19 O. C. 192 at p. 212; 31 M. L. J. 607; 14 A. L. J. 1248; 18 Bom. L. R. 1037; 21 C. W. N. 130; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 377; 21 M. L. T. 401; 38 A. 627; 1 P. L. W. 1371; 4 O. L. J. 22; 25 C. L. J. 363; 6 L. W. 378; 10 Bur. L. T. 140; 43 I. A. 212 (P. C.).

GALSTAUN V. ABID HUSSAIN.

"Having assumed the role of being a proper and necessary party defendant, having pleaded to the merits, a person cannot, after being cast in the suit, now change front and insist that error occurred in making him a party-defendant. Parties litigant are not allowed to assume inconsistent positions in Court; having elected to adopt a certain course of action, they will be confined to that course which they adopted."

In Jaggewar Dutt v. Bhuvan Mohan Mitra (2) the learned Judge did lay down that the rule is not merely one of convenience but he proceeded to investigate whether the rule had any, and if so, what exceptions. He pointed out that one of the exceptions was that when a person who has been made a defendant in a foreclosure suit has set up in answer a paramount title and when that matter without objection has been gone into he cannot, if defeated, rightly ask a reversal on the ground that the issue was not properly triable in the action. Though the learned Judge held the rule to be not one of convenience merely, he went on to consider the question of convenience with respect to the case before him and gave it as his opinion, that it would be more convenient to discharge the Dutt because in any case the paramount title had not been properly enquired into by the Trial Court and a remand would be necessary if they were kept as parties on the record. To deduce a principle it may be

(2) 33 C. 425; 3 C. L. J. 205.

(3) 57 Ind. Cas. 577; 44 B. 698; 22 Bom. L. R. 815.

(4) 1 Ind. Cas. 53; 31 A. 11; 6 A. L. J. 51; 5 M. L. T. 471; A. W. N. (1908) 263.

(5) 16 Ind. Cas. 250; 10 A. L. J. 259 at p. 261; 16 C. W. N. 1009; 23 M. L. J. 321; 12 M. L. T. 338; (1912) M. W. N. 935; 14 Bom. L. R. 1034; 35 M. 607; 16 C. L. J. 596; 39 I. A. 218 (P. C.).

(6) 5 C. L. J. 95; 11 C. W. N. 284.

GALSTAUN V. ABID HUSSAIN.

said that the rule is not one of convenience merely and where the holder of a paramount title objects to being made a party to the mortgage suit he must be discharged even where it would be convenient to try his title in the mortgage suit proceedings. At the same time, where no clear and distinct claim is made in the pleadings by such a party defendant and a prayer in express terms to be dismissed from the suit not being made the Court is permitted to proceed to a trial on the merits, without protest, the party cannot during arguments in the First Court after a protracted trial demand that he should be dismissed from the suit. In the present case the suit was instituted on 24th October 1916, and decided on 23rd December 1918. The appeal filed on 3rd April 1919 has come to a hearing in 1923. We ought not to grant the appellant's prayer for discharge from the suit in 1923 when he failed to insist upon it as he ought at the end of 1916.

If we enquire into the reasons for the general rule it appears to be founded on three grounds of objection.

1. Multifariousness:—The joinder of causes of action against a mortgagee and a holder of a paramount title are prohibited under O. II, r. 4, except by leave of Court.

2. Confusion:—Their Lordships of the Privy Council pointed in Radha Kunwar v. Reoti Singh (7), that the joinder of the parties was irregular and tended to confusion where the persons entitled to the benefit of the mortgage sued, along with the mortgagors, certain people who had set up adverse claim to the mortgaged property.

3. The trial of the adverse title by a Court not competent to try a suit properly framed for the purpose:—A Munsit may have jurisdiction to try a suit of samil valuation to enforce a mortgage while the value of the property in respect of which an adverse title is set up may be large and within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge.

In the present case the third objection does not exist; the lower Court tacitly permitted the causes of action to be joined and if any slight confusion has arisen the Counsel of the parties have removed it by their able conduct of the suit and arguments by them in the lower Court and here.

We do not assent to the plea of the respondent's learned Counsel that the provisions of section 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure will prevent us from discharging the appellant from the suit. We have noted that the provisions of that section in their present altered form were first enacted subsequent to the ruling in Jaggaswar Dutt v. Bhuban Mohan Mitra (2) noticed above but they have no application here because the plea of the appellant is not that the suit should be dismissed for mis-joinder of parties but that he should be relieved of the burden of the lower Court's decree because he was not a proper party to the suit.

We hold that at the present stage of the proceedings the appellant is a proper party to the suit.

We shall next consider the question of legitimacy of Sultan Mirza. (Grounds of appeal Nos. 5 to 9). Objection was raised on behalf of the appellant to the admission by the lower Court of certain documents. We think that the mutation applications, Exhibits 8 to 16, by which Sultan Mirza and the lady Musammam Ummat-ul-Fatima applied for mutation with regard to the revenue-paying properties situated in Oudh on the death of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah were rightly admitted both under section 13 and section 50 of the Evidence Act. Those were the occasions when Sultan Mirza asserted his right as a legitimate son of the Nawab and every one of them may also be taken as an expression of the lady's opinion at the time that Sultan Mirza was legitimate. Exhibit 24 is a copy of a plaint filed by the relations of Sultan Mirza in which he is described as the son of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah and Exhibit 25 is a copy of another plaint in which Sultan Mirza and his relations appeared jointly as plaintiffs and in which he was described as the son of Nawab Zaigham-ud-dowlah. Both these documents are admissible under section 50 of the Evidence Act. The judgments, Exhibit 5 and Exhibit 6, of the Subordinate Judge and of the Privy Council are evidence of a transaction in which the plaintiff to the present suit asserted the right of (7) 35 Ind. Cas. 939; 38 A. 488 at p. 491; 14 A. L. J. 1002; 20 C. W. N. 1279; 20 M. L. T. 211; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 200; 31 M. L. J. 571; 18 Bom. L. R. 850; 24 C. L. J. 303; 5 L. W. 456; 43 I. A. 264 (P. C.).

GLASTAUN V. ABID RUSSAIN.

Sultan Mirza as legitimate son of the Nawab and are, therefore, relevant under section 13 of the Evidence Act. We do not think that Exhibits X, Y and Z (an application for guardianship of her sons and an application for Succession Certificate, both presented to the District Court by the lady, and a mortgage-deed executed by her) were not rightly admitted by the lower Court during the lady's cross-examination. These copies ought to have been filed on behalf of the plaintiff at the first hearing as laid down in O. XIII, r. 1, and could be admitted subsequently under rule 2 if the Court was satisfied that there was good cause for the non-production thereof at the proper time. In the present case no cause was alleged for the delay and the reason given by the lower Court for the admission was in the interest of justice. In cross-examination their use ought to have been confined to the extent of contradicting the lady under section 145 of the Evidence Act. To permit a party to file new documents bodily at a late stage of the proceedings would be very unfair to the other party. The lady herself admitted the presentation of the two applications and the execution of the mortgage-deed so no occasion arose to contradict her. As regards the mortgage she stated: "I agreed to mention and did mention Sultan Hasan's name in the deed as one of the sons and heirs of my husband." Further on she said: "I mortgaged the trust property under this deed." It is not clear how the mortgage-deed, Exhibit, Z, was required at this stage to contradict the lady's statement. In this judgment we shall not make use of the Exhibits X, Y and Z beyond referring to the statement of the lady and her transactions in these matters.

In the present suit Sultan Mirza asserted on oath that he was a legitimate son of the Nawab and the lady did not positively deny the legitimacy. We notice with satisfaction that the Judge of the lower Court himself took the trouble of visiting the lady's house and recording her statement himself. The suggestion of the plaintiff was that Sultan Mirza was a legitimate son of the Nawab by a mutu wife. The lady's statement was, "I learned from anna (wet-nurse) that Sultan Mirza was son of Zohra who was not married either by nikah or by muta to Nawab Saheb, but I do not know how far this is correct." The Muhammadan Law raises a strong presumption in favour of legitimacy where a child was born under a man's roof and continued to be maintained in his house without any steps being taken on the father's part to repudiate his title to legitimacy as his offspring. It is certain that Sultan Mirza was the Nawab's son by Zohra. The lady has admitted that the Nawab used to bear the expenses of Sultan Mirza's bringing up and that she appeared before Sultan Mirza. On the death of the Nawab, Sultan Mirza was given a share in Zemindari property in Oudh and has been treated throughout his life as the legitimate son of the Nawab, wherever any legal proceedings were taken with respect to the estates of the Nawab, after his death Sultan Mirza was mentioned as his son and one of the heirs of his property. There is no definite evidence or any possible inference from any conduct of the Nawab's relations to the contrary. In the previous litigation when the plaintiff to the present suit asserted the right of Sultan Mirza as the legitimate son of the Nawab that right was recognised by the Privy Council, (Exhibit 6). The evidence leads entirely one way and we hold that Sultan Mirza is the legitimate son of the Nawab.

We now come to the most important question of this appeal: Whether Sultan Mirza's title to the Calcutta house had been extinguished by adverse possession of the lady at the time of the execution of the mortgage in suit. A very feeble attempt was made in this Court to support the trust made by the Nawab during his lifetime. A copy of the trust-deed was not filed on behalf of the appellant. The trust deed may either operate for the consideration of the lady's dower or as a gift under the Muhammadan Law. The lady gave no release of a dower debt. In her statement she does not specifically say that she accepted the trust in lieu of her dower-debt and relinquished her claim for dower. If the trust amounted to a gift under the Muhammadan Law immediate possession by the trustees or at least possession during the lifetime of the donor ought to have been proved. There is no such proof on the record. We have already seen that mutation as regards the Oudh zemindari property included in the trust was made after the Nawab's death and not during his lifetime. The mortgage-deed of 8th September 1904 executed by the lady and her father in favour of Madho Lal Doongar contained a recital of a suit in the High Court of Bengal of 1895 during the Nawab's lifetime. Neither the file of that suit nor a copy of the decree is before the Court, and it is not possible to determine how far that suit would support the possession of the trustee during the life-time of the Nawab. The lady stated that after the execution of the trust-deed she recovered the rent of the house through her husband in whose favour she had executed a power of attorney. A copy of any such power of attorney is not on the record. She then went on to say that her father also collected rent on her behalf on the authority of a power of attorney from her. The gift was in favour of the lady and her father so her statement would indicate that the father never took possession. There is thus no evidence that a deed of trust operated either by way of consideration or as a gift and we hold that it was inoperative.

GLASTAUN V. ABID HUSSAIN.

We have, first, to consider the nature of the lady's possession of the house in suit at its inception. She was entitled to possession as one of the heirs of her husband, so the inference must be that she took possession of the house on her husband's death in that capacity. On behalf of the appellant it was not pointed out when and how the possession became adverse and what notice Sultan Mirza had of any such adverse title. The argument here was that at its very inception the lady's possession was adverse but we cannot accept that contention because the lady had a legal title to possession. She herself admitted that Sultan Mirza never demanded any share of the rent of the house and that, therefore, there was no occasion for her to refuse payment. All the mortgage-deeds and the sale-deed in favour of Mr. Hyam were executed at Calcutta at a great distance from Lucknow, where Sultan Mirza lived. The evidence of the mortgagee, Madho Lal Doongar which was recorded in another suit was admitted in evidence by the lower Court as he had died since. The first mortgage-deed was executed in 1902 and it will appear from his evidence that most of the money was spent in the repairs of the house. After that the rent of the house went towards payment of interest and principal amount. Some vague statements are made by witnesses of the house being rented to one Mrs. Emmett prior to 1902, but the evidence is not definite as to the lady realising any net income from the house between 1898 when the Nawab died and 1902 when the house was first mortgaged. Sultan Mirza has stated that he first came to realise the lady's dealings with the property adversely to him when Madho Lal Doongar was examined as a witness in the previous suit on 27th June 1908. Since then 12 years had not elapsed before the institution of the present suit on 24th October 1916.

The appellant's Counsel relied on one document and a reference to another document to establish the lady's adverse title. On 28th July 1910 Sultan Mirza sued for his share of the house in Russell Street, as already mentioned. In that plaint, Exhibit B-1, he based his cause of action on the lady's adverse possession from the date of the death of the Nawab. The statement, however, is not admissible as an admission against the plaintiff under section 18 of the Evidence Act. Statements made by persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject-matter of the suit are admissible as admissions, only when the admissions are of a date prior to the date of the transfer. Statements made by persons in possession of property and qualifying or affecting their title thereto are receivable against the party claiming through them by title subsequent to the admission. The mortgage in suit was executed prior to the date of the plaint and so the statement of Sultan Mirza cannot be admitted as an admission against the plaintiff. During the examination of Madho Lal Doongar on 27th June 1908 he was questioned whether he had received a letter from Sultan Mirza on 12th November 1904, and replied that he did not remember. Neither the letter nor a copy is before us: so it is not clear what conclusion the appellant desires the Court to draw from this reference. Sultan Mirza has denied sending any such letter. The reference is too slight to justify any Court in holding that Sultan Mirza was aware of the mortgage in 1904 and that the lady had been in adverse possession as against him since that date. Moreover, such an inference would not help the appellant, because the present suit was filed within 12 years of 12th November 1904.

GLASTAUN v. ABID HUSSAIN.

It was argued on behalf of the appellant that when Sultan Mirza was given a specific share in the zemindari property of the Nawab in Oudh, there was sufficient notice to him that the lady was holding the Calcutta house adversely to him. The lady has deposed that, after the death of her husband, Sultan Mirza threatened to kill her sons if she did not give him a share in some of the Nawab's property, but we do not believe this statement. It seems to us the lady had regard for Sultan Mirza and, therefore, went to the length of a temporary disagreement with her father and allowed him his share in the property left by the Nawab. The relations between the two appear to have been amicable throughout. We have seen how Sultan Mirza withdrew his suit and the Privy Council Appeal against the lady's sons. The relations between the parties being of this nature there was no reason for Sultan Mirza to fear that the lady would act against his interests. As already pointed out, there is an entire absence of evidence to prove any income from the house in Russell Street. Her actions immediately after the death of her husband were entirely favourable to Sultan Mirza as is apparent from her making him a party to the various mutation applications. When such was the case the appellant ought to have pointed to some definite indication of her hostile attitude which would warn Sultan Mirza that her interests had become adverse to his. The appellant's learned Counsel pointed to the various mortgages as proof of the fact that she did not act on behalf of her husband's heirs but adversely to their interest. The circumstances, however, easily explain that she should have assumed the role of a trustee without any intention of injuring the rights of her co-heirs. There was the trust-deed in existence and reference has been made to a friendly suit in the High Court during the life-time of the Nawab. When money was urgently needed for repairs it was the most convenient course for the lady to borrow in the capacity of a trustee. On a consideration of all facts of the case we hold that the lady entered into possession of the house after the death of her husband as one of his heirs; that her possession was not adverse to that of the other heirs, and that Sultan Mirza had no reason to believe that she was holding adversely to him until the statement of Madho Lal Doongar was recorded on 27th June 1908. Sultan Mirza had, therefore, a subsisting title in the house at the date of the mortgage in suit on 15th September 1908. It was admitted by the appellant's learned Counsel that the withdrawal of his suit of 1910 by Sultan Mirza did not extinguish the plaintiff's title under the mortgage.

We next come to the question of limitation viewed from a different stand point. The suit is one for sale on foot of a mortgage-bond and the lower Court held that Art. 132 applied. The argument on behalf of the appellant was that that Article covered the case only of the mortgagor while the claim against him was covered by Art. 120. He argued that the suit as against the appellant was really one for a declaration of title. Not to multiply rulings, we may mention that this point was decided by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Raj Nath v. Narain Das (8). It is applicable here, because Mr. Hyam's possession was subsequent to the date of the mortgage. In that case the plea was that Art. 144 applied. That Article will not avail the appellant here, because the suit was brought within 12 years of the lady's possession becoming adverse to that of Sultan Mirza to his knowledge. The arguments on behalf of the appellant have not disclosed any reason to induce us to differ from the opinion of the Allahabad High Court. We were asked to consider the appellant's contention favourably on the ground that, if he had not been improperly joined in the present suit, the plaintiff's claim against him would have been time-barred. We do not think such would have been the case if the plaintiff had been permitted to obtain a consent decree against Sultan Mirza in 1916 and a purchaser of the property had sued the appellant for possession within

(8) 24 Ind. Cas. 997; 36 A. 567; 12 A. L. J. 982 (F. B.).

CHAMPSEY BHARA & CO. v. JIVRAJ BALLOO SPINNING & WEAVING CO.

12 years of July 1908. The inordinate length of the present litigation, for which Mr. Hyam and the present appellant are principally responsible, has extinguished the title of any such purchaser, but that is no reason for showing any favour to the appellant's contention.

As regards the 3rd, 4th and 6th issues mentioned in the ground of appeal No. 12 we uphold the findings of the lower Court.

We dismiss the appeal with costs.

W, C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.APPEAL FROM THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

March 6, 1923.

Present.—Lord Dunedin, Lord Atkinson and Lord Wrenbury.

CHAMPSEY BHARA & Co.

—APPELLANTS

versus

THE JIVRAJ BALLOO SPINNING AND WEAVING CO., LTD.—RESPONDENTS.

THE JIVRAJ BALLOO SPINNING AND WEAVING CO.—APPELLANTS

versus

CHAMPSEY BHARA & Co.—

RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration—Arbitrators sole judges of law and fact—Exceptions to rule—Error of law on face of award, meaning of—Jurisdiction, question of.

Where a cause or matters in difference are referred to an arbitrator, he is constituted the sole and final judge of all questions both of law and fact. The only exceptions to this rule are, where the award is the result of corruption or fraud, or where a question of law necessarily arises on the face of the award or upon some paper accompanying and forming part of the award. This latter exception should not be given an extended meaning. [p. 438, col. 1.]

Hodgkinson v. Fernie, (1857) 3 C. B. (N. S.) 189; 27 L. J. C. P. 66; 3 Jur. (N. S.) 818; 6 W. R. 181; 140 B. R. 712; 111 R. R. 614, followed.

An error of law on the face of the award means that there is in the award, or a document actually incorporated thereto, some legal proposition which is the basis of the award and which is erroneous. [p. 439, col. 1.]

The question of whether an arbitrator acts within his jurisdiction is for the Court to decide, but whether the arbitrator acts within his jurisdiction or not, depends solely upon the clause of reference. [p. 439, col. 2.]

Messrs. Upjohn, K. C. and Wallish, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Lowndes, K. C., Raihes and Claughtan-Scott, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Dunedin.—In these consolidated appeals it will be convenient to consider the first case by itself. The appellants as sellers entered into two contracts with the respondents as buyers of certain bales of cotton. The contracts were made subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association, Limited. Rule 12 of the said Association provides:—

"All questions or disputes as to quality between buyer and seller shall be referred to the arbitration of two disinterested persons, one to be chosen by each disputant, such arbitrators having the power to call in a third arbitrator. The award made by such arbitrators or any two of them shall be final and binding subject only to the right of appeal to the Appeal Committee. All arbitrations held under this rule must be held in accordance with rule 5, and only shareholders and/or Directors shall be eligible to act on arbitrations held in the rooms of the Association. Associate members, however, shall be eligible to act as arbitrators when the arbitration is held in the seller's jetha and/or godown as provided under rule 5."

Rule 13 provides:—

"All questions in dispute (other than that of quality) arising out of, or in relation to, contracts made subject to the Rules and Regulations of The Bombay Cotton Trade Association, Limited, provided one of the parties to the contract is a member or associate member of the Association, shall be referred to the arbitration of two disinterested persons being shareholders or Directors of the Association, one to be chosen by each disputant; such arbitrators having the power to call in a third arbitrator who must also be a shareholder or Director of the Association.

"The award made by such arbitrators or any two of them shall be final and binding on both parties, subject only to the right of appeal to the Board within 15 days of the date of the arbitrators' award on payment of Rs. 100."

CHAMPSEY BHARA & CO. v. JIVRAJ BALLOO SPINNING & WEAVING CO.

The cotton was delivered but objected to by the respondents as being not up to contract. Upon this an arbitration was entered into between the parties, and the arbitrators under rule 12 made an award as to quality. Thereupon the respondents rejected the cotton. The appellants resorted to claiming damages. This dispute was referred to arbitrators under rule 13. They issued their award as follows:—

"To all to whom these presents shall come, we, Purshotamdas Thakoredas of Bombay Hindu Inhabitant, and Vincent Alpe Grantham, also of Bombay, European Inhabitant, send greeting! Whereas by a contract dated 17th day of August 1918, Messrs. Champsey Bhara and Company had agreed to sell to the Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, 100 bales of Mundra M. G. Fully Good Staple cotton on the terms and conditions mentioned in the contract. And whereas by another contract dated 4th day of September 1918, the said Messrs. Champsey Bhara and Company had also agreed to sell to the said Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, 100 bales of New M. G. Mundia Cotton Fully Good Staple on the terms and conditions therein contained. And whereas both the said contracts were made subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association, Limited. And whereas the goods tendered under the said contracts by the said Messrs. Champsey Bhara and Company were rejected by the Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, on the grounds contained in their letters dated 25th November 1918, and 11th November 1918, respectively. And whereas the said Messrs. Champsey Bhara and Company claimed from the said Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, the sum of Rs. 25,000 (rupees twenty-five thousand) in respect of the aforesaid contracts. And whereas the said Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, denied liability in respect of the said sum or any part thereof. And whereas the said disputes were referred to the arbitration of us, Purshotamdas Thakoredas and Vincent Alpe Grantham, who were appointed Arbitrators by the Deputy Chairman of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association, Limited. And whereas on the 12th day of December the time for making our Award was extended by the Deputy Chairman to the 27th day of December 1918. Now know ye that we, the said Purshotamdas Thakoredas and Vincent Alpe Grantham, having taken upon ourself the burden of the said reference, and having done all acts necessary to enable us to make a valid Award, hereby make our Award as follows, that is to say:— We award and direct that the said Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, do pay to the said Messrs. Champsey Bhara and Company the sum of Rs. 25,000 (rupees twenty-five thousand) and we do further award and direct that the said Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, do pay the costs of this our Award, which we assess at the sum of Rs. 55 (rupees fifty-five).

"In witness whereof we have hereunto set our respective hands this 23rd day of December 1918.

Signed and Published	}	(Signed) Purshotamdas Thakoredas. V. A. Grantham.
this 23rd day of December, 1918, by us,
Purshotamdas Thakoredas and Vincent Alpe Grantham in the presence of (Signed) J. A. Grant."

An appeal was made to the Appeal Committee, who confirmed the award. The respondents then presented a petition to the Court asking that the award should be set aside. They alleged two grounds (1) that there was no question referable to the arbitrators under rule 13; (2) that there was an error of law on the face of the award. The case depended before Pratt, J., who dismissed the petition. Appeal was taken to the Appellate Division of the High Court, and they reversed the judgment holding that there was an error in law on the face of the award. The way that the learned Judges arrived at that conclusion was this: They said that the recital that the respondents had rejected the cotton on the grounds mentioned in the letters of the 11th and 25th November, 1918, respectively, allowed them to look at the letters. The letter of the 11th November is as follows:—

CHAMPSEY BHARA & CO. v. JIVRAJ BALLOO SPINNING & WEAVING CO.

"To Messrs. Champsey Bhara and Company.

"Dear Sirs,

"Re: D Order No. 27 dated 6-11-18 for "100 bales

N. M. G. Mundia.

"Please note that at the survey held this day on the above lot tendered by you against contract No. 56, dated 4th April 1908, as the Arbitrators have in their award allowed Rs. 10½ off, we hereby reject the said lot and refuse to take delivery thereof.

"The Jivraj Balloo Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited."

The letter of the 25th November is in identical terms referring to the other contract. The learned Judges then held that if clause 52 of the Regulations is looked at—it being the clause which deals with what is to happen when arbitrators, as to quality make certain findings—it becomes apparent that the arbitrators here could only have arrived at their judgment if they entirely misinterpreted Art. 52. They based their opinion upon the case of Landauer v. Asser (1).

The law on the subject has never been more clearly stated than by Williams, J., in the case of Hodgkinson v. Fernie (2):—

"The law has for many years been settled, and remains so at this day, that, where a cause or matters in difference are referred to an arbitrator, whether a lawyer or a layman, he is constituted the sole and final judge of all questions both of law and of fact.... The only exceptions to that rule are, cases where the award is the result of corruption or fraud, and one other, which, though it is to be regretted, is now, I think, firmly established, viz., where the question of law necessarily arises on the face of the award, or upon some paper accompanying and forming part of the award. Though the propriety of this latter may very well be doubted, I think it may be considered as established."

This view has been adhered to in many subsequent cases, and in particular in the House of Lords in British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company v. Underground Electric Railways Company (3).

The question to be decided is: Does the error in law appear on the face of the award? In the British Westinghouse case (3) it clearly did. The arbitrator had stated a special case and got an opinion of the Divisional Court; in making his award he stated that opinion and founded his award upon it. The opinion as given was held to be erroneous, and so there was an error in law on the face of the award. In Landauer v. Asser (1) the state of affairs was different. The question was as to liability and interest on a policy of insurance effected by sellers for and on account of buyers, and the arbitrator framed his award thus:—

"I decide that as the parties to the contract dated the 3, November 1903, were by the terms thereof the principals thereto, their interest and liability in insurance is defined to be the value of the invoice plus 5 per cent. and that the buyers are, therefore, entitled to, and only to, the said amount, the balance one way or the other being due from or to the sellers."

The Court of Appeal held that this entitled them to look at the contract and to come to the conclusion that the decision was erroneous in law. The case of Landauer v. Asser (1) is not binding on their Lordships and it was contended that it was wrongly decided, but in their Lordships' opinion it is not necessary to consider that point, for the present case differs from Landauer's case (1) in an essential particular. In that case the legal proposition was stated in terms on which the award proceeded. In the present case, no legal proposition at all is stated as a ground of the award. The reference to the letters is only in the narrative, and even when the letters are looked at they only contain the view of one party. To make this case equiparate with that of Landauer's case (1) the award would have to run somewhat thus:—"In respect of the ground of rejection contained in the letters of the 11th and 25th November, and in respect of clause 52 of the Article. I decide that, etc."

(1) (1905) 2 K. B. 184; 74 L. J. K. B. 659; 93 L. T. 20; 53 W. R. 534; 10 Com. Cas. 265; 21 T.L.R. 429.

(2) (1857) 3 C. B. (N. S.) 189; 27 L. J. C. P. 66; 3 Jur. (N. S.) 818; 6 W. R. 181; 140 E. R. 712; 111 R. R. 614.

(3) (1912) A. C. 673; 81 L. J. K. B. 1132; 107 L. T. 325; 56 S. J. 754.

CHAMPSEY BHARA & CO. v. JIVRAJ BALLOO SPINNING & WEAVING CO.

Now, the regret expressed by Williams, J., in Hodgkinson v. Fernie (2) has been repeated by more than one learned Judge and it is certainly not to be desired that the exception should be in any way extended. An error in law on the face of the award means, in their Lordships' view, that you can find in the award or a document actually incorporated thereto, as for instance, a note appended by the arbitrator stating the reasons for his judgment, some legal proposition which is the basis of the award and which you can then say is erroneous. It does not mean that if in a narrative a reference is made to a contention of one party that opens the door to seeing first what that contention is, and then going to the contract on which the parties' rights depend to see if that contention is sound. Here it is impossible to say, from what is shown on the face of the award, what mistake the arbitrators made. The only way that the learned Judges have arrived at finding what the mistake was is by saying: "Inasmuch as the arbitrators awarded £0 and so, and inasmuch as the letter shows that the buyer rejected the cotton, the arbitrators can only have arrived at that result by totally misinterpreting clause 52." But they were entitled to give their own interpretation to clause 52 or any other article, and the award will stand unless, on the face of it, they have tied themselves down to some special legal proposition which then, when examined, appears to be unsound. Upon this point, therefore, their Lordships think that the judgment of Pratt, J., was right and the conclusion of the learned Judges of the Court of Appeal erroneous.

The Counsel for the respondents then argued the other point, which the learned Judges of the Court of Appeal found it unnecessary to decide, and which the Trial Judge decided against them. He said that upon a proper construction of the contract the moment his client rejected the cotton in virtue of the decision by the arbitrators as to quality, he was entitled to do so, and the contract was repudiated or came to an end; that then the arbitration clause could no longer be appealed to, and he said that inasmuch as this was a plea to jurisdiction the Court ought to decide it.

Their Lordships think that this argument is based upon a confusion of thought. The question of whether an arbitrator acts within his jurisdiction is, of course, for the Court to decide, but whether the arbitrator acts within his jurisdiction or not depends solely upon the clause of reference. It is, therefore, for the Court to decide in this case whether the dispute which has arisen is a dispute covered by clause 13 of the articles. It clearly is so, because it is undoubtedly a dispute arising out of or in relation to a contract made subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Cotton Trade Association. Now, that clause refers to the arbitrator the whole question whether it depends on law or on fact, with the exception only of dispute as to quality. It is, therefore, for the arbitrator and not for the Court to decide what is the effect of a rejection based on an award as to quality. In truth, this point is decided in terms by the recent case of Sanderson & Son v. Armour & Co. (4). It was a Scotch case, but in no way depended upon any peculiarity of the Law of Scotland.

The decision of the first appeal in this sense disposes of the second appeal without further argument, as it is obvious that in that case even the reference in the narrative to the grounds of defence in the letters is absent, and there is nothing but the bare statement that a certain sum was awarded. It follows that in the first appeal the appeal must be allowed and the judgment of the Trial Judge restored; the appellants must have their costs here and in the Courts below. The second appeal must be dismissed and the respondents will have their costs.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

W. C. A.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Hughes & Sons.

(4) (1922) S. C. (H. L.) 117; 91 L. J. P. C. 127 L. T. 597.

DUKHI RAM V. B. N. W. RAILWAY.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 100 OF 1922.

November 23, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ryves.

DUKHI RAM BARAI—APPLICANT

versus

B. N.-W. RAILWAY—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Evidence, admissibility of—Goods consigned to Railway—Damages, suit for—Valuation of goods—Invoice, admissibility of.

In a suit for damages, against a Railway Company, on account of the deterioration of goods while in transit, an invoice, sent to the claimant by the consignor, showing the value of the goods, is a prima facie evidence of what the claimant was charged for them and what presumably he would have to pay for them, and in the absence of cross-examination, it is admissible in evidence and it is not necessary to put the consignor into the witness-box to prove what was the actual value of the goods sent.

Civil revision from an order of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Azamgarh, dated the 21st April 1922.

Mr. Mukhtar Ahmad, for the Applicant.

Messrs. A. Sanyal and Benoy Kumar Mukerji, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in civil revision filed by the plaintiff to set aside the decree of the Judge of the Small Cause Court at Azamgarh. Two consignments of betel leaves were delivered to the Bengal Nagpur Railway at their station of Danton in the Midnapur District to be conveyed to the plaintiffs who are pan-sellers at Mau in the Azamgarh District. The consignments travelled from Danton to Howrah over the B. N. Railway, a distance of 104 miles. From Howrah they were sent to Moghal Sarai on the E. I. Railway 418 miles. From Moghal Sarai to Benares they were carried for a distance of 10 miles over the O. and R. Railway and from Benares to Mau they were carried by the B. and N.-W. Railway, a distance of 58 miles. There was considerable delay in transit and when the goods arrived at Mau they were found to be in a rotten condition and the plaintiff refused to take delivery. He then entered into correspondence with the authorities of the B. N. Railway, the E. I. Railway Company and the B. and N.-W. Railway, but failing to get redress he brought this suit in the Court of Small Causes at Azamgarh against the B. N. Railway, E. I. Railway Company and B. and N.-W. Railway claiming Rs. 204 damages. All three defendant

Companies contested the suit. The learned Judge has held that the goods were delivered to the B. N. Railway at Danton as alleged and that when they arrived at Mau they were rotten. He has also held that it is not proved that the damage was caused to the goods while they were being carried either by the E. I. Railway or the B. and N. W. Railway. He, however, has dismissed the suit on technical grounds which seems to me to be wrong. He has held, in the first place, that no notice such as is required by section 77 of the Indian Railways Act was served on the defendants. There was evidence of the plaintiff's son that notices were sent by registered post to the Agents of all three Railways. There is on the record the registered receipt of the Agent of the B. N. Railway. The Judge holds that it is not proved that registered receipt was for the notice sent by the plaintiff. If it was not for that notice, it is hard to conceive for what it was. The plaintiffs swear that it was and it seems to me almost farcical to hold that any further proof was required as there was no cross examination, besides which there are letters on the record from the B. and N.-W. Railway actually making an admission that they were prepared to pay a small sum in full satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. In the face of letters on the record it seems to me impossible to hold that notice was not sent within the meaning of section 77 of the Act. Another ground on which the learned Judge has dismissed the suit is that the amount of the damages is not proved. The plaintiff sought to prove it by producing the invoices sent to him by the consignors showing that the value of the goods amounted to Rs. 204. The Judge holds that this is not legally admissible evidence of the value. It is prima facie evidence of what the plaintiff was charged for the goods and what presumably he would have to pay for them and in the absence of cross-examination, in my opinion, it is perfectly admissible evidence and it would not be necessary to call the consignors and put them into the box to prove what was the actual value of the goods sent. It has been found that the goods were irretrievably damaged and, therefore, I think the plaintiff is entitled to a decree. I hold that the amount of the damage was, as sworn by the plaintiff, and corroborated by the invoices, Rs. 204. On the finding that it has not been proved that the damage was caused during transit over the lines of the first and second defendant I think that under section 80 the B. N. Railway are liable. I, therefore, allow this application. I dismiss the suit as against the B. and N. W. Railway and the E. I. Railway but I decree it against the B. N. Railway with costs in both Courts.

GHANSHAM O. RAMJI LAL.

N. K.

*Application allowed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 241 OF 1918.

May 2, 1923.

Present—Mr. Justice Martineau and
Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

GHANSHAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

RAMJI LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Partition—Widow, whether can claim partition—Burden of proof.

The widow of a deceased co-sharer has a statutory right to demand partition, and the onus is upon the party who disputes the widow's right to obtain a partition to prove that such right does not exist.

Bhag Bhari v. Wazir Khan, 14 Ind. Cas. 45; 70 P. R. 1912; 91 P. W. R. 1912; 124 P. L. R. 1912. Sant Singh v. Basant Singh, 71 Ind. Cas. 28; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 81, followed.

Abdul Qadir v. Rabia, 41 Ind. Cas. 473; 4 P. R. 1917 Rev.; 1 P. W. R. 1917 Rev, dissented from.

First appeal from the decree of the Assistant Collector, First Grade, with powers of a Munsif, First Class, Gurgaon, dated the 29th October 1917.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.
Dr. G. C. Narang, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the death of Tula Ram in 1891 his land was mutated in equal shares in favour of the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 3 and 4, who were the sons of Tula Ram, by his wife, Musammam Raji, and Khem Ram, defendant No. 1, and Yad Ram, who were, stated to be his sons by another wife, Musammam Lali. In 1917 Khem Ram and Yad Ram's widow, Musammam Bholi, applied for partition of their shares, and this has given rise to the present suit, in which the plaintiff contends that Khem Ram was not the son of Tula Ram and is, therefore, not entitled to a share, and disputes the right of Musammam Bholi, to have her share partitioned. The suit has been dismissed and the plaintiff appeals.

The plaintiff has produced three witnesses of an ordinary type who say that Khem Ram is the son of one Sita. On the other hand, Khem Ram himself has deposed that he is the son of Tula Ram, to whom, he says, his mother Musammam Lali was married and he is corroborated by other witnesses. Although the plaintiff was not present at the time of the mutation in 1891 his brothers, Mangal Singh and Net Ram, defendants Nos. 3 and 4, were present and admitted Khem Ram to be Tula Ram's son, and from that time no objection was ever taken by the plaintiff to Khem Ram's succeeding to a share in Tula Ram's property until Khem Ram and Musammam Bholi applied for partition in 1917. Had Khem Ram not been a son of Tula Ram the plaintiff would not have kept silent and allowed Khem Ram to remain in possession for so many years. The plaintiff says he partitioned the property with defendants Nos. 3 and 4, and Musammam Bholi about five years before suit, and has been in possession of one-fourth of the land ever since, but we agree with the lower Court that he has failed to prove this allegation. The lower Court is right in finding that Khem Ram is the legitimate son of Tula Ram.

The second question relates to Musammam Bholi's right to a partition. The issue framed was, whether she was not entitled to apply for partition, although the real question is as to her right to obtain a partition. The lower Court has held following Abdul Qadir v. Rabia (1), that she has no right to obtain a partition except under a decree of a Civil Court, but we do not agree with this view. It has been held in Bhag Bhari v. Wazir Khan (2) that a widow of a deceased co-sharer has a statutory right to

(1) 41 Ind. Cas. 473; 4 P. R. 1917 Rev.; 1 P. W. R. 1917 Rev..

(2) 14 Ind. Cas. 45; 70 P. R. 1912; 91 P. W. R. 1912; 124 P. L. R. 1912.

GHULAM MOHIUDIN v. DAYABHAI CHIMAN LAL;

SALIG RAM v. BARKAT ALI.

demand partition, and in Sant Singh v. Basant Singh (3) that ruling was followed, and it was held that the onus was upon the party who disputed the widow's right to obtain a partition to prove that such right did not exist. That onus in the present case has not been discharged.

Moreover, Musammal Bholi's right to a partition is clear from the Rivaji-i-am in which it is stated (page 51 of the paper-book) that any one of the persons upon whom the estate devolves, irrespective of the sex of such person or of the relationship in which such person stood to the deceased, can claim a partition as a matter of right.

The suit has been rightly dismissed and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.
(3) 71 Ind. Cas. 28; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 81.

Mr. G. N. Thakor, with Mr. R. J. Thakor, for the Appellants.

Mr. J. G. Rele, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The first defendant held over after notice was given to vacate the suit property which was let out to him by the plaintiff. He sub-let the premises and in addition to the rent received a premium of Rs. 1,250. Under section 2 (12) of the Code "mesne profits" of property means those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually has received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, and clearly Rs. 1,351 was profit received by the first defendant, so the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for that amount together with rent at the annual rate of Rs. 271 for the period for which he sued, less the amount which had been paid by defendant No. 1, namely, Rs. 542.

The plaintiff claims that Pleader's fees are payable on Rs. 5,000 the value of the subject-matter of the suit. We think that contention is sound under the law regulating the charge for Pleader's fees when the suit was filed. The appeal, therefore, succeeds and there must be a decree in terms of the judgment with costs throughout.

W. C. A.

Appeal allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 301 OF 1922.
February 16, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.
GHULAM MOHIUDDIN NARMAVALA
—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DAYABHAI CHIMANLAL—DEFENDANT
—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and Tenant—Notice to quit—Tenant holding over—Sub-letting by tenant at profit—Landlord, right of, to recover such profit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 2 (12).

Where after receiving notice to quit a tenant holds over and sub-lets the premises leased to him and in addition to the rent receives a premium from the sub-tenant, such premium amounts to profits received by him while in wrongful possession within the meaning of section 2 (12) of the Civil Procedure Code, and he is liable to pay the sum so received, together with the rent, to the landlord.

Second appeal from the decision of the Judge of the Court of Small Causes with A. P., at Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 73 of 1920, confirming the decree passed by the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmedabad, in Civil Suit No. 817 of 1918.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 80 OF 1920.
February 3, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice,
and Mr. Justice Fforde.

SALIG RAM AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

BARKAT ALI AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

*Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), s. 3 (5)
(a)—Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890),
s. 29—Sale by guardian of minor with sanction of Court, whether liable to pre-emption.*

HARI SHRIDHAR PRABHU DESAI v. SAKHARAM PADMANNA MAGDUM.

Section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act prohibits the sale by a guardian of the property of a ward without permission of the Court. The Court, under this section, makes no order for sale, but merely authorises a transaction which would otherwise not be binding upon the minor. The sale is in fact a transaction inter partes approved of by the Court, and the Court, having approved of the contemplated sale, has no further say in the matter.

Such a sale cannot be described as one made in execution of an order of a Civil Court within the meaning of section 3 (5) (a) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, and is not, therefore, exempted from liability to the exercise of the right of pre-emption.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 7th October 1919, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Gujrat, dated the 31st May 1919.

Dr. Khalifa Shuja-ud-din, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—The only question we have to determine in this appeal is, whether the sale in respect of which the right to pre-emption is sought to be exercised, comes within the exceptions in sections 3 (5) (a) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act of 1913. It is there provided that 'sale' shall not include, inter alia, a sale in execution of an order of a Civil Court. The sale in the present case was of certain property owned by a minor and, therefore, required the sanction of the Court.

The guardian of the minor accordingly applied to the Court under section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act for leave to execute a sale-deed which had already been drawn up and approved of by the parties. Leave was granted and the conveyance was duly executed and registered.

The appellant contends that this transaction comes within the definition of a sale in execution, of an order of a Civil Court. We cannot accept this contention.

The sale in the present case was an ordinary private transaction and only required the sanction of the Court because one of the parties to it was under disability. Section 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act prohibits the sale by a guardian of the property of a ward without permission of the Court. The Court under this section makes no order for sale, but merely authorises a transaction which would otherwise not be binding upon the minor. The sale is in fact a transaction inter partes approved of by the Court. The Court having approved of the contemplated sale has no further say in the matter.

We are accordingly of opinion that, section 3 (5) (a) of the Pre-emption Act has no application to the case before us and we dismiss the appeal.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL, NO. 259 OF 1922.

February 20, 1923.

Present.—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

HARI SHRIDHAR PRABHU DESAI—
PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SAKHARAM PADMANNA MAGDUM—
DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47—Waste committed after decree—Execution of decree—Court, duty of—Judgment-debtor, liability of.

The question with regard to waste committed by a judgment-debtor after a decree for possession of property has been obtained against him, is a question arising between the parties, relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code, and ought to be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit.

If property in respect of which a decree is made has depreciated in value, or been damaged since the decree, owing to the wilful action of the judgment-debtor the question whether he is liable to make good the loss is a question in execution.

Appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Ratnagiri, in Appeal No. 235 of 1921, confirming the decree passed by the Subordinate Judge at Rajapur, in Darkhast No. 368 of 1920.

Mr. G. B. Chitale, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. R. Manerikar, for Mr. G. S. Mulgaonkar, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant in this case obtained a decree for possession of the suit property. An appeal was filed, and pending the hearing of the appeal the defendants remained in possession. The appeal was dismissed and then the appellant discovered that the present respondents, while in possession of the property pending the appeal, appeared to have committed waste by cutting down trees. Consequently, the appellant took out a Darkhast to ascertain the damages alleged to have been committed by the respondents.

HADAYAT ULLAH v. GHULAM MUHAMMAD BEG.

It was contended that this was not a question in execution, and that the appellant would have to file a separate suit. Both the lower Courts have dismissed the Darkhast on this ground. But we think that the question with regard to the waste committed by the judgment-debtor after decree was a question arising between the parties relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and must be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit. The appellant is entitled under the decree to the property of which possession was directed to be given to him. If the property has depreciated in value or been damaged since the decree, owing to the wilful action of the defendants, it is a question in execution whether defendants are liable to make good the loss. Therefore, we remand the Darkhast to be decided on its merits. The appellant is entitled to his costs in this Court and in the Court below. Costs in the Trial Court to be costs in the cause.

W. C. A.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1776 OF 1922.

February 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

HADAYAT ULLAH—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

GHULAM MUHAMMAD BEG AND
ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Interpretation of Statutes—Court, duty of—Pre-emption—Pre-emptor, title of, whether relates back to date of sale—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XX, r. 14—Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), s. 16—“Owner,” meaning of.

Courts cannot read into Statutes provisions which are not there, even if they think that anomalies are not to be avoided otherwise. [p. 446, col. 1.]

In the Punjab the Legislature has taken the responsibility of embodying the customary rules of pre-emption in a Statute and the Courts must presume that Statute to be exhaustive and must follow it. [p. 446, col. 1.]

There is nothing in the Punjab Pre-emption Act, which declares that a pre-emptor's title vests at the date of the sale or which modifies the explicit direction contained in O. XX, r. 14 of the Civil Procedure Code that Courts shall declare the title of the pre-emptor to be deemed to accrue from the date of payment into Court of the purchase-money after decree. [p. 446, col. 1.]

A successful pre-emptor is vested with the rights of the vendee whom he dislodges, not from the date of the sale but from the date on which he enforces his rights, that is, from the date on which he satisfies the conditions of the decree and brings it into operation. [p. 445, col. 2.]

Kehr Singh v. Mahman Singh, 25 P. R. 1908; 128 P. L. R. 1908; 51 P. W. R. 1908, dissented from.

Dhanna Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh, 4 Ind. Cas. 337; 91 P. R. 1909; 161 P. W. R. 1909; 148 P. R. 1909, referred to.

L. Beli Ram v. Hari Chand, 59 Ind. Cas. 744; 128 P. W. R. 1921; 3 L. L. J. 205, Deonandan Prasad Singh v. Ramdhari Chowdhuri, 39 Ind. Cas. 958; 44 C. 675; 32 M. L. J. 459; 1 P. L. W. 527; 15 A. L. J. 375; 21 C. W. N. 786; 25 C. L. J. 573; 19 Bom. L. R. 437; 6 L. W. 65; (1917) M. W. N. 470 and 811; 22 M. L. T. 196; 44 L. A. 80 (P. C.), followed.

The word “owner” as used in section 16 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act does not mean a person who is not in danger of losing his ownership right at the instance of a pre-emptor. [p. 446, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 15th February 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Hoshiarpur, dated the 2nd August 1921.

Lala Faqir Chand, for the Appellant.

Lala Badri Das, R. B., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This judgment will dispose of three Second Appeals Nos. 1776, 1777 and 1778.

A certain house in Hariana was sold by Maule Bakhsh on the 19th May 1917, two-thirds to Ghulam Muhammad Beg by two deeds and one-third to Murad Ali Beg. On the 20th May 1917, Murad Ali Beg transferred his bargain to Ghulam Muhammad Beg.

HADAYAT ULLAH v. GHULAM MUHAMMAD BEG.

On 20th May 1918, Hadayat Ullah, the owner of the contiguous house on the east, brought three pre-emption suits, one for each sale-deed on the two grounds of dominance and contiguity. Ghulam Muhammad Beg resisted the suits on the plea that he had an equal right of pre-emption by reason of his ownership of contiguous property on the north, and his plea was upheld by both the Courts below who found that the property in suit was not servient to that of Hadayat Ullah.

Hadayat Ullah has come up to this Court on second appeal, and the sole question for determination is whether his right is superior to that of Ghulam Muhammad Beg as an owner of contiguous property. The question of dominance of tenement is also raised in the memorandum of appeal but this claim was abandoned in the lower Appellate Court and has not been mentioned in arguments before me.

The property which was the basis of Ghulam Muhammad Beg's assertion of equal pre-emption rights with Hadayat Ullah was acquired by him by purchase on 21st and 23rd January 1917. There were five sale-deeds and on 18th January 1918 Hadayat Ullah instituted five suits for pre-emption. All eight suits were decided by the Munsiff in one judgment dated 2nd August 1921. The three suits now under consideration were dismissed, as already stated, but the five suits for possession by pre-emption of the rights of ownership acquired by Ghulam Muhammad Beg in the land of the north were decreed in favour of Hadayat Ullah.

Ghulam Muhammad Beg thus was owner in the contiguous land on the north at the time of the sale and at the time when the suit was instituted. If the title to this land of the successful pre-emptor, Hadayat Ullah be regarded in terms of O. XX, r. 14 (1) (b), Civil Procedure Code, as having occurred from the date of payment of the pre-emption price, he was also owner when Hadayat Ullah's present suits for pre-emption of the house were dismissed.

It is argued, however, for Hadayat Ullah, the plaintiff-appellant, that Ghulam Muhammad Beg's right of pre-emption at the date of the sales to him was a defeasible right and, therefore, no right at all in the light of the fact that it has been defeated and of what was laid down in Kehr Singh v. Mahman Singh (1), a Single Bench judgment.

In Kehr Singh v. Mahman Singh (1) it was held that a vendor, who by reason of a prior purchase had become a landholder in the village, and, as such, was competent to resist the claim of a pre-emptor with respect to a subsequent purchase, cannot, if in a pre-emption he loses the first bargain, retain the subject-matter of the second bargain. A dictum by Mr. Justice Rivaz in a former case was cited with approval that the effect of a pre-emption decree is to vest the proprietary right in the pre-emptor from the date of the sale, which is a transaction voidable at the option of the pre-emptor.

The lower Appellate Court considered this judgment but thought, not without reason, that subsequent remarks recorded by the learned Judge who delivered it. Shah Din, J., in Dhanna Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh (2) indicated a change of opinion. The pronouncement of Rivaz, J., was doubted in Dhani Nath v. Budhu (3) and is directly contrary to what has been ruled by a Division Bench of this Court in a very recent decision, Muhammad Akram Khan v. Muhammad Azim Khan (4), that a successful pre-emptor is vested with the rights of the vendee whom he dislodges, not from the date of the sale but from the date on which he enforces his rights i.e., from the date on which he satisfies the conditions of the decree and brings it into operation. The same view was taken by Martineau, J., in Beli Ram v. Hari Chand (5) and he dissented expressly from Kehr Singh v. Mahman Singh (1) mainly on the authority of the Privy Council judgment Deonandan Prasad Singh v. Ramdhari Chowdhri (6).

(1) 25 P. R. 1908; 128 P. L. R. 1908; 51 P. W. R. 1908.

(2) 4 Ind. Cas. 337; 91 P. R. 1909; 161 P. W. R. 1909; 148 P. L. R. 1909.

(3) 136 P. R. 1894.

(4) 73 Ind. Cas. 318; 4 L. 137.

(5) 59 Ind. Cas. 744; 28 P. W. R. 1921; 3 L. J. 205.

(6) 39 Ind. Cas. 958; 44 C. 675; 32 M. L. J. 459; 1 P. L. W. 527; 15 A. L. J. 375; 21 C. W. N. 786; 25 C. L. J. 573; 19 Bom. L. R. 437; 6 L. W. 65; (1917) M. W. N. 470 and 811; 22 M. L. T. 195; 44 I. A. 80 (P. C.).

BISHUN SARUP V. BINDRABAN.

There are certain rulings of the Allahabad High Court which support the contention of the appellant but in this Province the Legislature has taken the responsibility of embodying the customary rules of pre-emption in a Statute and the Courts must presume that Statute to be exhaustive and must follow it. There is nothing in the Punjab Pre-emption Act which declares that a pre-emptor's title vests at the date of the sale or which modifies the explicit direction of O. XX, r. 14, Code of Civil Procedure, that Courts shall declare the title of the pre-emptor to be deemed to accrue from the date of payment into Court of the purchase-money after decree nor has the Act qualified the term "owner" so as to mean a person who is not in danger of losing his ownership right at the suit of a pre-emptor. Courts cannot read into Statutes provisions which are not there, even if they think that anomalies are not to be avoided otherwise.

According to the plain terms of section 16 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, Ghulam Muhammad Beg owned immoveable property contiguous to the property in suit at the date of the sale. His right of pre-emption was, therefore, at that time equal with that of Hadayat Ullah which was brought into existence only by the sale and for the enforcement of which he was entitled to sue only when the sale had been completed.

The appeals must fail and are dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeals dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1547 OF 1921.

March 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rafique.

BISHUN SARUP—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

BINDRABAN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Malicious prosecution—Charge absolutely false—Probable and reasonable cause—Further evidence, whether necessary.

Where in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution it is found that the charge made by the defendant was absolutely without foundation, further evidence directly going to show that there was no reasonable and probable cause for making the charge is not necessary, as, in such a case, it is legitimate to infer that the defendant had no probable or reasonable cause.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Jhansi, dated the 29th of August 1921.

Mr. Baleshwari Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Sailanath Mukerji, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by one Bindraban for the recovery of damages for malicious prosecution. It appears that Bindraban had a decree against the defendant-appellant which he proceeded to execute. The amin of the Court went to the house of the judgment-debtor and attached some articles. The defendant-appellant was away from home at the time and on his return he filed a criminal complaint of theft against Bindraban charging the latter with having stolen a ring set with precious stones and a pair of silver anklets. Bindraban was tried for theft and acquitted. Thereupon he filed the suit out of which this appeal has arisen for damages. The claim was resisted on various pleas. The Court of first instance dismissed the claim. On appeal the decree of the first Court was set aside and the appeal of Bindraban was allowed.

In second appeal the defendant-appellant contends that the burden of proof was cast wrongly on him and that there should have been positive evidence to the effect that he had no reasonable and probable cause for the charge of theft brought by him against Bindraban. From the evidence on the record which has been believed by the lower Appellate Court it is quite clear that the charge of theft brought against Bindraban was absolutely without foundation. In view of that finding it is not open to the defendant-appellant to contend that there should have been further evidence directly going to show that there was no probable and reasonable cause for him to charge Bindraban with theft. If the charge was absolutely baseless, it is legitimate to infer that the defendant-appellant had no reasonable and probable cause for making the charge. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs including fees in this Court on the higher scale if any.

RAM SARUP v. ZORAWAR MAL.

There are cross-objections by the plaintiff-respondent with regard to the amount of damages. I have examined the reasoning of the Court below with regard to the amount of damages carefully, and I am not prepared to differ from it. The cross-objections are also dismissed with costs.

W. C. A.

*Appeal dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 162 OF 1923.

May 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.RAM SARUP—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER
versus

ZORAWAR MAL AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 12—Time requisite for obtaining copies, what is—Appeal, second—Finding of fact—Revision.

Under section 12 of the Limitation Act only the time from the date of making the application for copies up to the date on which the copies are ready for delivery can be excluded.

A finding as to the time requisite for obtaining copies under section 12 of the Limitation Act is one of fact and cannot be attacked in second appeal, much less in revision.

Sher Singh v. Pem Raj, 48 Ind. Cas. 31; 100 P. R. 1918; 185 P. W. R. 1918, Bawa Singh v. Thakur Singh, 67 Ind. Cas. 478; 4 U. P. L. R. (L) 80; (1922) A. I. R. (L) 423, followed.

Petition, under section 44, Act VI of 1918, for revision of the order of the District Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 29th November 1922, affirming that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 12th June 1922.

Lala Gobind Ram Khanna, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order passed by the District Judge of Ferozepore holding that a certain appeal was barred by limitation. It is argued on behalf of the petitioner, that the appeal to the District Court was within time, inasmuch as in computing the period of limitation for his appeal the period from the date of his applying for copies of the judgment and decree up to the date on which the copies were delivered to him should have been excluded. I am unable to agree with this contention. It has been held in a recent judgment of this Court reported as Bawa Singh v. Thakur Singh (1) that, under section 2 of the Limitation Act, only the time from the date of making the application for copies up to the date on which the copies are ready for delivery can be excluded. I see no reason to dissent from this view on the facts of this particular case, and hold that the learned District Judge was right in holding that the appeal was barred. Moreover, there is ample authority for holding that the finding as to the time requisite for obtaining copies is one of fact and cannot be attacked in second appeal, much less in revision [Sher Singh v. Pem Raj (2), Bawa Singh v. Thakur Singh (1).]

E. I. RY. CO. v. FIRM MOHAN LAL-PANNA LAL.

I do not see any force in this petition, and dismiss it with costs.

Z. K.

Petition dismissed.

(1) 67 Ind. Cas. 478; 4 U. P. L. R. (L) 80; (1922)

A. I. R. (L) 423.

(2) 48 Ind. Cas. 31; 100 P. R. 1918; 185 P. W. R. 1918.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 629 OF 1922.

January 29, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY, LTD., CALCUTTA—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER*versus*THE FIRM MOHAN LAL-PANNA LAL—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Carriage of goods—Damages for non-delivery—Railway Company—Risk Notes, Forms A and B—Loss, proof of.

A Railway Company seeking shelter behind a Risk Note in Form A or B for the non-delivery of the whole or a part of a consignment must show, in the first instance, that the goods have been lost, before the person claiming compensation for their loss can be called upon to prove that the loss was due to the neglect of the Company or to theft or to wilful neglect of its servants, etc. [p. 450, col. 1.]

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY CO. v. FIRM MOHAN LAL-PANNA LAL.

Ghelabhai Punsi v. East Indian Railway Company, 63 Ind. Cas. 241; 23 Bom. L. R. 525; 45 B. 1201, relied on.

Agent, G. I. P. Railway v. Karaylal, 48 Ind. Cas. 294; 14 N. L. R. 122, East Indian Railway Company v. Kanak Behary Halder, 44 Ind. Cas. 691 22 C.W.N. 622, dissented from.

Petition, under section 44, Act IX of 1919, for revision of the order of the District Judge, Delhi, dated the 1st April 1922, reversing that of the Additional Munsif, First Class, Delhi, dated the 30th August 1921.

Kanwar Dalip Singh, for the Petitioner.

Lala Nanua Mal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question of law that arises in this application in revision is whether in case of short delivery of a consignment booked under Risk Notes in Forms A and B the initial onus of establishing "loss, destruction or deterioration of, or damage to the said consignment," lies on the Railway Administration concerned, or whether the loss should be presumed, and the onus of proving that it was due to the neglect of the Railway Administration or to theft by, or to the wilful neglect of, its servants, etc., should be thrown on the person claiming compensation for it.

The facts are few and simple. The plaintiffs delivered to the defendant—Railway Company—at Calcutta on three different dates three consignments of sugar, two of 125 bags each, and one of 126 bags, to be conveyed to Delhi, and gave in respect of each consignment Risk Notes in Forms A and B. The first consignment was delivered short by one bag only. Out of the second consignment one bag was not delivered and there was a shortage of 9 maunds and 15 seers of sugar, and out of the third there was a short delivery of 3 maunds and 2 seers. The plaintiffs sued to recover compensation for the quantity of sugar not delivered. They denied to have executed the Risk Notes and asserted that "loss did occur owing to gross neglect of the Railway Company." The defendants pleaded protection under the Risk Notes and denied all liability for the loss but made no statement as to how it took place, with the exception of the loss of one bag from the first consignment which they stated was stolen in the course of transit.

The Trial Court (Munsif, Delhi) framed only two issues, one as to the execution of the Risk Notes by the plaintiffs-consignors, and the other as to the amount of compensation due, decided the first against the plaintiffs and dismissed their suit on the ground that in the face of the terms of the Risk Notes they were not entitled to any compensation without proving neglect, etc., on the part of the Railway Company. The plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge who upheld the Munsif's finding as to the execution of the Risk Notes, disallowed the plaintiffs' claim with regard to the bags stolen in transit, but accepted their plea that it lay on the defendant—Railway Company—to prove, in the first place, that the goods were lost, and remanded the case to be decided afresh after an enquiry into the following issue:—

Was the short delivery in each case with the exception of the bag proved to have been stolen due to loss or to leakage or wastage?"

The defendant—Railway Company—has come up to this Court on the revision side to urge that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in throwing upon it the initial onus of substantiating their plea that the goods not delivered had actually been lost. There can be no doubt that the authorities on the point are conflicting, but the learned District Judge followed the ruling of a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in Ghelabhai Punsi v. East Indian Railway Company (1), and further referred to Jamnadhar Baldev Dass v. Burma Railways Company, Ltd. (2) to show that the same view of the law was taken by the Burma Chief Court. The only ruling cited by the learned District Judge to the contrary was that of the Judicial Commissioner, Nagpur, printed in Agent, G. I. P. Railway v. Karaylal (3). Mr. Kanwar Dalip Singh, who appeared for the Railway Company,

(1) 63 Ind. Cas. 241; 23 Bom. L. R. 525; 45 B. 1201.

(2) 64 Ind. Cas. 395; 10 L. B. R. 354; 13 Bur. L. T. 190.

(3) 48 Ind. Cas. 294; 14 N. L. R. 122.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY CO., LD., CALCUTTA v. MOHAN LAL-PANNA LAL.

argued that the Bombay High Court based its decision on an Irish case governed by the Carriers Act whose provisions on the point in question were different from those of the Indian Railways Act, and cited two more judgments; one of a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court and the other of a Single Judge of this Court, to the same effect as the Nagpur case. The Calcutta judgment is reported as East Indian Railway Company v. Kanak Behary Halder (4). The judgment of the Punjab Chief Court is dated the 30th June 1922 in Civil Revision No. 19 of 1922.

A reference to the judgment of the Bombay High Court does not bear out the argument that the Irish case relied on therein was not governed by a Risk Note similar to the Risk Note Form B under the Indian Railways Act. The learned Judges of the Bombay High Court dealt with the question thus:—

"* * * the question was argued whether it was sufficient for the defendants merely to admit that the goods were lost without leading evidence to show that they were lost. None of the Indian cases cited really deal with this particular question, which certainly did arise in the Irish case of Curran v. Midland Great Western Company of Ireland (5). In that case two pigs consigned by the plaintiff were short delivered and the Railway Company sought to escape liability under the Risk Note drawn up in very similar form to the present Risk Note Form B. The suit was decreed clearly on the ground that, although the Company admitted the loss, they did not lead any evidence as to how the pigs came to be lost. * * * If the present contention of the defendants were right, the consignor whose goods were short delivered would have no remedy even although, as a matter of fact, if evidence were taken, he might show that his case came within one of the exceptions in the Risk Note. If the plea of the Company that the goods are lost were sufficient, then, all that evidence is excluded."

The learned Judges cited with approval the following from the judgment of Mr. Justice West in Mohansingh Chawan v. Henry Conder (6):—

(4) 44 Ind. Cas. 691; 22 C. W. N. 622.

(5) (1896) 2 Ir. R. 183; 2 Ir. L. R. 739.

(6) 7 B. 478 at p. 480; 8 Ind. Jur. 98; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 322.

"The Railway Company in this case were bound to deliver the particular bags which they received from the plaintiffs' firm for carriage. They did not deliver them, nor did they, so far as the evidence goes, announce their inability to deliver them on account of having lost them either in transit or by misdelivery to some one not entitled. The natural presumption under such circumstances is that all the goods arrived, and that the Railway Company was in a position to deliver them. We are asked to infer from the mere non-delivery that they could not be delivered, because they were lost; but that is an affirmative fact of which the Company ought to have given evidence. Prima facie, the responsibility rested on the Company, and the non-delivery of the goods might arise from other causes than loss. Had the Company announced to the plaintiff that his goods were lost, that might have helped the defendants' case; but no such announcement was made, and the plaintiff could only tell that goods received and carried for him were not delivered."

The Punjab case cited by Kanwar Dalip Singh affords no assistance, because in that case the goods were lost in transit and the plaintiff failed to establish wilful neglect on the part of the Railway Company which he imputed to it. It has been held by the same Division Bench of the Bombay High Court that in case of loss from a running train the Railway Administration is fully absolved from liability if the consignment was booked under the Risk Note Form B.

The Calcutta case is certainly in favour of the defendant—Railway Company—but the question of initial onus was not discussed therein, and the defence in that case also was that the missing bags were stolen from the running train between Bhatinda and Allahabad. The learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court laid down a very wide proposition without a reference in their judgment to the plea of the defendant—Railway Company—but there can be no doubt that they had it in view in deciding the question of onus. After reproducing the relevant portion of the Risk Note B and without stating the facts they proceeded to record their conclusion as below:—

"As these words (in the Risk Note) stand, they have the effect of throwing the burden of proving in what manner a particular consignment or part of a consignment is lost on the consignor or the person claiming damages from the Railway Company."

RIKHI KESH V. MEHA RAM.

Having regard to the facts of the present case I am of opinion, that the view of the law taken, and the interpretation of the language of the Risk Note given by the Bombay High Court is correct, and was rightly followed by the learned Judge of the Court below. A Railway Company seeking shelter under a Risk Note for the non-delivery of the whole or a part of a consignment must show that it was lost. Therefore, I dismiss this petition for revision. The defendant—Railway Company—would pay the plaintiffs' costs in this Court.

Z. K.

*Petition dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 577 OF 1922.

February 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

Pandit RIKHI KESH—DEFENDANT—

PETITIONER

versus.

MEHA RAM—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 116—Landlord and tenant—Estoppel—“At the beginning of the tenancy,” meaning of:

The words “at the beginning of the tenancy” in section 116 of the Evidence Act apply only to cases in which a tenant is put into possession of the tenancy by the person to whom he has attorned and do not apply to cases in which the tenant has previously been in possession. [p. 450, col. 2.]

Lal Mahomed v. Kallamus, 11 C. 519; 5 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 1104, Sibu Sant v. Netai Charan Das, 9 Ind. Cas. 806; 15 C. L. J. 114, Yerraguntla Seshacharlu v. Mukkumalla Chinniah, 25 Ind. Cas. 721, relied on.

Ketu Das v. Surendra Nath Sinha, 7 C. W. N. 596 and Mahra Prasad v. Gokal Chand, 51 Ind. Cas. 548; 17 A. L. J. 835; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 100; 41 A. 654, distinguished.

In answer to a suit for rent on the basis of a written lease the defendant stated that the house to which the lease referred was really the joint property of himself and the plaintiff, who was his brother and who had agreed to a scheme of partition by which the house in dispute was to go to him and another house to the defendant, and that as a guarantee for carrying out the terms of this arrangement the defendant had been persuaded to execute the lease, but that the partitions had fallen through and the document remained a mere formality, no rent having ever been paid;

Held, that in the absence of proof of any rent ever having been paid or that the defendant was inducted as a tenant by the plaintiff, the former was not estopped from denying that he was the plaintiff's tenant. [p. 451, col. 1.]

Revision petition against the order of the Small Cause Judge, Amritsar, dated the 10th June 1922.

Mr. Gobind Ram, for Mr. B. D. Qureshi, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Des Raj Sawhney, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit in the Court of Small Causes, Amritsar, by Meha Ram, against his brother, Rikhi Kesh, for arrears of rent. The suit was brought on a written lease regarding which the only evidence taken was that of the defendant. The defendant stated that the house to which the lease referred was really the joint property of himself and his brother who had agreed to a scheme of partition by which this house was to go to the plaintiff and another house to the defendant. As a guarantee for carrying out the terms of this arrangement he, the defendant, was persuaded to execute the lease. Later on, the partition fell through. In point of fact, no rent had ever been paid and the document was a mere formality.

The learned Judge of the Small Cause Court held that the defendant was estopped, under section 116, Indian Evidence Act, from denying the plaintiff's title as landlord and decreed the latter's claim for Rs. 90 rent.

The defendant has applied to this Court for revision and on his behalf is cited a ruling of the Calcutta High Court, Lal Mahomed v. Kallamus (1), wherein it was held that the words in section 116 “at the beginning of the tenancy” only apply to cases in which tenants are put into possession of the tenancy by the person to whom they have attorned, and not to cases in which the tenants have previously been in possession. This rule was afterwards followed by the Madras High Court in a case reported as Yerraguntla Seshacharlu v. Mukkumalla Chinniah (2) and also in another case Sibu Sant v. Netai Charan Das (3).

(1) 11 C. 519; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1104.

(2) 25 Ind. Cas. 721.

(3) 9 Ind. Cas. 806; 15 C. L. J. 114.

DHOBI ROY v. MAHADEO SINGH.

The learned Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent challenges the correctness of Lal Mahomed v. Kallanus (1) and quotes two cases in which the opinion was indicated that the above rule was expressed in too broad terms. These, however, do not apply to the facts of the present case. In the first, Ketu Das v. Surendra Nath Sinha (4), rent had actually been paid by the defendant, and in the other, Mathra Prasad v. Gokal Chand (5), the defendant was proved to have been put in possession as a tenant by the predecessor-in-interest of the person who claimed rent from him.

In the case before me there is no proof of any rent ever having been paid; or that the defendant was inducted as a tenant by the plaintiff. The parties are brothers and, admittedly, the house was once joint property. In these circumstances, on the authorities quoted, I hold that the defendant was not estopped from denying that he was the plaintiff's tenant and that there is no evidence to prove that he was, or to rebut his explanation of how he came to sign the lease.

I accept the revision, set aside the decree of the Judge Small Cause Court and order that the suit be dismissed with costs.

L. K.

Application accepted.

(4) 7 C. W. N. 596.

(5) 51 Ind. Cas. 548; 17 A. L. J. 835; 1 U. P. L. R. (A) 100; 41 A. 654.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 41C OF 1922.

March 5, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Ross,

DHOBI ROY—PETITIONER

versus

MAHADEO SINGH AND OTHERS—

OPPOSIE PARTY.

Execution of decree—Sale of tenure—Crops, whether belong to raiyat or purchaser.

The sale of a tenure in execution of a decree would pass all that is growing upon the land, unless the growing crops are excepted by the notification of sale, or else a custom is proved that the outgoing raiayat should have the crops, subject to a payment for use and occupation of the land while they remain on the ground.

Afatoonla Siddar v. Dwarka Nath Moitry, 4 C. 814; 4 C. L. R. 95; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 516, relied on.

Application against an order of the District Judge, Monghyr, dated the 28th July 1922, upholding that of the Munsif, Jamui, dated the 10th July 1922.

FACTS.—That the petitioner obtained a mortgage-decree, dated 24th February 1913, against the opposite party and in execution of the said decree 15 bighas 7 cottas of land belonging to the judgment-debtors were sold and the decree-holder purchased the same at the execution-sale on 10th March 1921.

2. That the judgment-debtors filed a petition under O. XXI, r. 90, Civil Procedure Code, for setting aside the sale which was dismissed for default.

3. That on appeal against the said order dismissing the petition the Appellate Court remanded the case to the Munsif.

4. That after remand the learned Munsif of Jamui heard the parties and dismissed the petition on 10th July 1922, holding that there was no justification for setting aside the sale.

5. That against the said order of the Munsif dismissing the petition the judgment-debtors have appealed to the District Judge of Monghyr.

6. That on 20th July 1922 the judgment-debtors filed a petition before the District Judge praying that execution may be stayed which was rejected by the District Judge on 28th July 1922.

7. That on 3rd August 1922 the judgment-debtors again filed a petition to the District Judge for re-consideration of his order dated 20th July 1922 which was also dismissed on 18th September 1922 as the delivery of possession had already taken place in July 1922.

8. That on 30th October 1922 the judgment-debtors again filed a petition before the District Judge praying that a Commissioner be appointed to appraise the crops standing on the land and the Court granted this petition.

9. That on 9th November 1922 the judgment-debtors filed a petition before the Munsif of Jamui praying that the crops may be delivered to them on their deposit-ing security as the crop had been raised them and the Court ordered Rs. 600 to be deposited as security.

SAMAIL, v. AHMADA.

10. That the decree-holder objected to the petition on the ground that the crop had been raised by the decree-holder and, secondly, that the security of Rs. 600 was insufficient for 400 maunds of paddy.

11. That on 14th November 1922 the learned Munsif was pleased to overrule the objection of the decree-holder and allowed the security to be deposited.

12. That on 16th November 1922 the decree-holder moved the District Judge against the said order of the Munsif dated 14th November 1922 and the learned District Judge was pleased to uphold the order of the Munsif by his order dated 22nd November 1922.

Mr. Hareshwar Prasad, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application against an order of the learned District Judge of Monghyr upholding an order of the Munsif of Jamui permitting the opposite party to take away the paddy crop on land which formerly belonged to them but which had been sold in execution of a decree on the 16th of March 1921 and of which delivery of possession had been given on the 31st of July 1922. In Afatoonla Sirdar v. Dwarka Nath Moitry (1), it was held that, "the sale of the tenure would apparently pass all that was growing upon the land, unless the growing crops were excepted by the notification of sale, or else a custom was proved that the out-going raiyyat should have the crops, subject to a payment for use and occupation of the land while they remained on the ground." In the present case, apparently, the opposite party were tenants continuing on the land and any crop that they raised must be taken to have been raised for the benefit of the owner of the land.

The application is allowed and the order of the District Judge is set aside and the crops will be delivered to the petitioner. As the opposite party did not appear there will be no order as to costs.

Z. K.

Application allowed.

(1) 4 C. 814; 4 C. L. R. 95; 2 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 516.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2273 OF 1918.
February 21, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

SAMAIL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

AHMADA, MINOR, THROUGH Musammât
SABO, HIS MOTHER, AND ANOTHER
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Gift in favour of collateral—Gilotar Jats of Jhang District.

Among Gilotar Jats of the Jhang District a male proprietor is empowered by custom to make a gift of ancestral property in favour of a collateral to the exclusion of other collaterals. [p. 453, col. 1.]

First appeal from a decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, First Class, Jhang, dated the 28th March 1918.

Mr. C. L. Gulati, for the Appellants.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this suit are related as under:—

Baqar made a gift of his land in favour of Ahmada, who is his daughter's son as well as the son of his nephew. His right to do so has been impeached by Samail and others, the plaintiffs in this case, who are also the collaterals of Baqar. Baqar is dead, but the plaintiffs sought a declaration of by their rights, inasmuch as his widow,

BHARAT INDU v. ASGHAR ALI KHAN.

Musammal Wallan, is still alive. The parties are Gilotar Jats of the Jhang District and the defence set up on behalf of Ahmada was that, by the custom of their tribe, Baqar had the power, to make a gift in his (Ahmada's) favour. The Trial Court has, after a careful inquiry, come to the conclusion that Baqar was competent to make the gift, and the plaintiffs have, therefore, come up to this Court in appeal through Mr. C. L. Gulati whom we have heard. As stated above the parties are Gilotar Jats of the District of Jhang, and according to the riwaj-i-am, this tribe recognises the right of a male proprietor to gift lands in favour of collaterals. The riwaj-i-am has been held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Beg v. Allah Ditta (1) to be a strong piece of evidence in support of the custom therein declared. In the present case there is practically no rebuttal of the entry in the riwaj-i-am, whereas the defendants have succeeded in proving several instances of gifts made by male proprietors in favour of collaterals to the exclusion of other collaterals. The evidence on the record, both documentary and oral, supports the entry in the riwaj-i-am, and we are, therefore, satisfied that the view taken by the Court below is correct and that among the Gilotar Jats of the Jhang District, the custom, set up by the defendants by which a male proprietor is empowered to make a gift in favour of a collateral, has been established.

We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 354; 45 P. R. 1917; 12 P. W. R. 1917; 21 M. L. T. 310; 32 M. L. J. 615; 19 Bom. L. R. 388; 15 A. L. J. 525; 21 C. W. N. 842; 4 C. 749; 26 C. L. J. 175; 44 I. A. 89 (P. C.).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 2 OF 1922.

October 23, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

BHARAT INDU AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—APPELLANTS
versus

ASGHAR ALI KHAN—OPPOSITE-PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, applicability of, to execution proceedings—Application for execution dismissed in default—Remedy, proper—Order refusing to restore application for execution dismissed in default, whether appealable.

The provisions of O. IX of the Civil Procedure Code have no application to execution proceedings. Where, therefore, an application for execution of a decree is dismissed in default, the proper remedy of the decree-holder is to make a fresh application for execution of his decree. [p. 453, col. 2.]

An order refusing to restore an application for execution of a decree dismissed in default of prosecution is not open to appeal. [p. 454, col. 1.]

First appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Bareilly.

Mr. Surendro Nath Sen, for the Appellants.

Mr. Agha Haider, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the decree-holder in an execution matter. In the form in which it comes before us in consequence of the decision of the Court below, it raises a simple question of law. On the 28th of May 1921 an application for execution of a certain decree, which had been made on the 7th of April 1920, was dismissed by the Execution Court on the ground that the decree-holder had failed to prosecute it with due diligence. On the 1st of June 1921 the decree-holder presented to the Court below an application not described as falling under the provisions of any specified section or rule of the Code of Civil Procedure, but offering an explanation of the alleged default of prosecution and asking the Court to restore the application of April the 7th 1920, to its file and to proceed with its disposal according to law. The Court below has rejected this application on the ground that the provisions of O. IX of the Code of Civil Procedure have no application to execution proceedings and that the decree-holder's remedy, if any, was to make a fresh application for execution of his decree. The authority quoted for this view of the law is the decision of the TOTARAM CHUNILAL v. CHHOTURAM MOTIRAM.SANT SINGH v. GOBIND RAM.

Privy Council in the case of Thakur Prasad v. Fakir Ullah (1). On the face of it, this case is decisive against the decree-holder. He had no right in law to apply for the restoration of his application of the 7th of April 1920 and, what is more, nothing in O. XLIII, r. 1, clause (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure would give him any right of appeal against the decision of the Court below rejecting his application. It has been contended before us that the decision of the Privy Council above referred to ceases to govern the case, by reason of the provisions of section 141 of the present Code of Civil Procedure (Act No. V of 1908) in which an explanation which had been added by the Amending Act No. VI of 1892, to section 407 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, was omitted. The history of this matter is somewhat curious, but we think there can be no doubt that the correct view is that taken by the Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Hari Charan Ghosh v. Manmatha Nath Sen (2). This ruling has since been followed by the Patna High Court in the case of Ritu Kuer v. Alakhdeo Naram Singh (3).

We think the decision of the Court below was correct and, moreover, that no appeal lies against it. We dismiss this appeal with costs.

W. C. A. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 17 A. 106; 5 M. L. J. 3; 22 I. A. 44; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 526; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 393 (P. C.).

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 683; 4 I. C. 1 at p. 4; 18 C. W. N. 343.

(3) 47 Ind. Cas. 154; 4 P. L. J. 3303 (1918) Pat. 265; 5 P. L. W. 208.

r. 89—Sale-proceeds, payment of, into Court—Money received by decree-holder.

The payment of sale-proceeds into Court is not sufficient to constitute them money received by the decree-holder within the meaning of r. 89, O. XXI, of the Civil Procedure Code.

Appeal from an order passed by the First Class Subordinate Judge, at Jalgaon. In Miscellaneous Application No. 28 of 1922.

Mr. D. C. Virkar, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. H. Kelkar, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The question in this appeal is clearly covered by the decision in Trimbak Narayan v. Ramchandra Narsingrao (1) where it was held that payment of sale proceeds into Court is not sufficient to constitute them money received by the decree-holder. That decision was under section 310A of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. The same words are used in O. XXI, r. 89, of the present Code. As long as the Legislature has decided that only money received by the decree-holder can be taken into account, then it is not for the Court to say that money paid into Court, and not put into the pocket of the decree-holder, is money received by him. The appeal, therefore, must be dismissed with costs.

W. C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 23 B. 723; 1 Bom. L. R. 215; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 483.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2691 OF 1921.

November 9, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

SANT SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

GOBIND RAM—PLAINTIFF—ATMARAM
—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913)—Building mainly used as residence and part as workshop—"Shop," meaning of.

The mere fact that a part of a building, which is mainly used as a residence, is used as a tail r's workshop, would not convert the whole of it into a shop. [P. 455, col. 2.]

The word "shop" denotes a building primarily used for the retail sale of goods. [P. 455, col. 1.]

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 48 OF 1922.
February 15, 1923.

Present.—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

TOTARAM CHUNILAL SHET—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

CHHOTURAM MOTIRAM SHET—

DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI,

DAGDU RAJARAM V. LAXMAN PANDUSHET.

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 24th October 1921.

Mr. Kanwar Dalip Singh, for the Appellants.

Mr. Jagan Nath, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff having been given a decree for pre-emption of a certain building situate in Mohalla Jilan in the Jullundur City, the defendant-vendee has come up in the second appeal to this Court on the ground that the building is a shop and not a house and that, therefore, it cannot be pre-empted. The lower Courts have concurrently held that the building is a house and upon the facts found by them there is no difficulty in holding that their decision is correct.

The building according to the sale-deed consists of a kotha, which is used as a residence, a roofed sehn, a stair-case and a shop. Atma Ram, the vendor, admittedly lived in the back part of the premises with his family and used the front room, which opens on to the lane, as tailor's shop. According to the finding of the learned District Judge, Atma Ram merely worked as a tailor and did not sell any goods in the so-called shop. In other words, he used it as his workshop. In the learned District Judge's opinion the term "shop" does not include a workshop. In Bhamba Ram v. Allah Bakhsh (1) it was held that the ratio decidendi in cases in which the property is used for more than one purpose is to find out the primary or main purpose for which it has been used. In Nawal Kishore v. Amir Khan (2) it was held that the use of a residential property as business premises for transacting the business of commission agency does not alter the nature of such property and it would not in consequence of such usage be considered to be shop property. I have no doubt that the word "shop" denotes a building primarily used for a retail sale of goods. I asked Mr. Dalip Singh, who appeared for the appellant, whether there was any evidence on the record to show that Atma Ram used any portion of the building as a retail shop. He referred to defence witnesses Nos. 6, 7 and 8. Defence witness No. 6 said that Atma Ram used to sell clothes, whilst defence witnesses Nos. 7 and 8 said he used to sew clothes. In other words, he did the ordinary work of a tailor who makes clothes for people. It is clear that the learned District Judge considered this evidence and in his opinion Atma Ram merely used the front portion of the building as a workshop and not as a retail shop. On the facts found by him I have no difficulty in holding that the building was mainly used as a residence and that the mere fact that Atma Ram used a part of it as a tailor's workshop did not convert the whole of it into a shop.

No other point was argued before me. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

With regard to the cross-objections, Counsel did not urge the first ground which relates to a finding of fact and said he would leave the question of costs to the Court. I am not prepared to interfere with the order as to costs which, under the circumstances, was a proper one.

W. C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL EXTRAORDINARY APPLICATION NO. 231

OF 1922.

March 22, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Cramp.

DAGDU RAJARAM MARWADI—

DECREE-HOLDER—APPLICANT

versus

LAXMAN PANDUSHET THAKUR—

OPPONENT.

Vakalatnama—Execution proceeding—Claim petition—Separate Vakalatnama, whether necessary.

Where a Pleader files a vakalatnama in a proceeding in execution of decree, he ought not to be required to file a separate vakalatnama when a claim petition is made against the execution.

Application against an order passed by the Joint Subordinate Judge at Thana,

(1) 31 Ind. Cas. 191; 69 P. R. 1915; 156 P. W. R. 1915.

(2) 122 P. R. 1906; 80 P. L. R. 1907; 161 P. W. R. 1906.

KALYANASUNADARAM AIYAR v. NARASIMHA AIYANGAR.

Mr. D. C. Virkar, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—We think that the Rule must be made absolute. The decree-holder's Pleader put in his vakalatnama in the proceeding for execution. It cannot be contended that because a claim petition was put in against the execution, it was necessary for the decree-holder to file another vakalatnama.

W. C. A.

Rule made absolute.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER NO. 80 OF 1921.
December 21, 1922.

Presents—Mr. Justice Spencer and
Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

C. L. KALYANASUNADARAM AIYAR
—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

S. NARASIMHA AIYANGAR AND OTHERS
—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 64—Attachment of decree obtained by Receiver—Leave of Court not obtained, effect of—Bona fide purchaser for value, rights of, whether affected.

An attachment of a decree obtained by a Receiver in a suit is invalid without the leave of the Court that appointed the Receiver.

An act done without the Court's sanction to proceed against a Receiver can, however, be validated by subsequent sanction.

Karooth Parakote Ammukutty v. Manavikraman, 59 Ind. Cas. 568; 43 M. 793; 12 L. W. 331, Jangana Sanyasiah v. Mycherla Peda Atachanna, 70 Ind. Cas. 759; 15 L. W. 289; 42 M. L. J. 339; Banku Behary Dey v. Harendra Nath Mukherjee, 8 Ind. Cas. 11, 15 C. W. N. 54, Sarat Chandra Banerjee v. Apurba Krishna Roy, 11 Ind. Cas. 187; 15 C. W. N. 925; 14 C. L. J. 55, relied on.

But where no steps have been taken to validate an irregular attachment of a decree obtained by a Receiver by the time the Receiver assigns his interest as decree-holder to an innocent purchaser, the rights of the attaching creditor cannot be allowed to prevail over those of a bona fide transferee for consideration of the decree-holder's interest.

Appeal against an order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Coimbatore, in I. A. No. 536 of 1920 in O. S. No. 113 of 1919.

Mr. A. Ramachandra Iyer, for the Appellant.

Messrs. C. A. Sashagiri Sastrier and N. R. Sasha Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The Subordinate Judge was rightly of opinion that the appellant's attachment of the decree obtained by the Receiver in Original Suit No. 113 of 1919 was invalid for want of the leave of the Court that appointed the Receiver. We accept the principle that an act done without the Court's sanction to proceed against a Receiver could subsequently be validated, as has been held by this Court in Karooth Parakote Ammukutty v. Manavikraman (1) and Jangana Sanyasiah v. Mycherla Peda Atachanna (2), and by the Calcutta High Court in Banku Behary Dey v. Harendra Nath Mukherjee (3) and Sarat Chandra Banerjee v. Apurba Krishna Roy (4) respectively.

But in this case no step had been taken to validate the irregular attachment by the time that the Receiver assigned his interest as decree-holder to the innocent purchaser, who is 1st respondent in this appeal, and, therefore, the appellant's right as an attaching creditor cannot be allowed to prevail over the rights of a bona fide transferee for consideration of the decree-holder's interest. An attempt has been made to show that the Receiver had no power to assign the decree under the powers vested in him, but this contention cannot be maintained in view of the wide authority given by the vesting order of 18th April 1908, which expressly refers to the "full powers" of O. XL, r. 1.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

V. N. V.

- (1) 59 Ind. Cas. 568; 43 M. 793; 12 L. W. 331.
- (2) 70 Ind. Cas. 759; 15 L. W. 289; 42 M. L. J. 339.
- (3) 8 Ind. Cas. 11; 15 C. W. N. 54.
- (4) 11 Ind. Cas. 187; 15 C. W. N. 925; 14 C. L. J. 55.

THAKUR DAS v. BRIJ LAL.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1304 OF 1922.

January 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

THAKUR DAS—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

BRIJ LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11 Expl. IV—Res judicata—Plea not taken in previous suit—Subject-matter, difference of, effect of.

Defendant obtained a decree against one M. in execution of which he brought to sale and purchased a certain undivided share in a house which was alleged to have belonged to M. Subsequently, defendant brought a suit against B., the nephew of M., for rent of the purchased share. B. denied the purchase by defendant but did not put forward the plea that the share purchased had never belonged to M. The suit was eventually decreed. B. then brought the present suit for possession of the share purchased by the defendant on the ground that M. was not the owner of the share:

Held, (1) that the question of M's ownership of the share purchased by the defendant was res judicata between the parties by virtue of Explanation IV to section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code;

(2) that the fact that the subject-matter of the earlier suit was not the same as the subject-matter of the later suit did not make any difference.

Gobind Lal v. Rao Baldeo Singh, 24 Ind. Cas. 931; 12 P. R. 1915; 226 P. L. R. 1914; 128 P. W. R. 1914, followed.

Second appeal from a decree of District Judge, Sialkot, dated the 31st January 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Sialkot, dated the 10th November 1921.

Diwan Mehr Chand, for the Appellant.
Lala Daulat Ram, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In 1910 Thakur Das obtained a decree against the estate of one Mul Raj in a suit which was defended by the latter's widow, Musammat Sukh Devi. In execution of his decree he attached an undivided share in house property which was alleged to have belonged to Mul Raj and in subsequent auction-sale purchased it. In 1919 Thakur Das brought a suit against Brij Lal, nephew of Mul Raj, and Musammat Thakur Devi, widow of a brother of Mul Raj, for rent of the purchased share. Other persons actually in possession as tenants were also joined. In his plaint Thakur Das asserted that he was owner by purchase in execution-sale, and attached to the plaint copies of certain documents which showed that he claimed to have purchased Mul Raj's share. Brij Lal as defendant denied that there had been any auction-sale, denied that Thakur Das had purchased any share in the house property or had got possession, and denied that he (Brij Lal) was a tenant of the plaintiff. On the pleadings an issue was struck whether the plaintiff, Thakur Das, had purchased a share in the house property in suit and had obtained possession. Both the Trial Court and the Appellate Court found this issue in favour of Thakur Das and he was granted a decree in the Appellate Court for Rs. 59-10. The present suit was lodged on the 1st of July 1921 by Brij Lal for possession of the share sold to Thakur Das on the ground that Mul Raj was not the proprietor of that share. The suit had been decreed by the Trial Court and the decree has been upheld in appeal by the learned District Judge.

A second appeal has been preferred and it is urged that, under section 11, Explanation IV of the Code of Civil Procedure, the question of Mul Raj's ownership rights in the share in suit is res judicata. This contention must, I consider, be sustained. The learned District Judge has disposed of the point in language which is by no means clear. He says that it would not appear that Brij Lal has much chance of effectively raising the question in the previous suit whether Musammat Sukh Devi had actually any saleable interest in the property sold. I cannot see how this was so. The plea was an obvious one for Brij Lal to raise, especially since the ultimate result proved that the plea which he did raise, namely, that there had been no auction-sale at all, was frivolous.

It is argued on behalf of Brij Lal before me that the plea that Mul Raj had no rights in the property was raised in the former suit, but that it was not put in issue and, therefore, was not heard and finally decided. I am referred in substantiation to a statement in the written pleas of Brij Lal and Musammat Thakur Devi that they are owners and not tenants and that the houses are their ancestral property. Now Mul Raj was the uncle of Brij Lal and the brother of Musammat Thakur Devi's husband and a bare assertion by these two persons that their ownership rights were ancestral could hardly be taken to contain an implication that Mul Raj had no rights; any implication would be to the contrary. The further argument that a decision in a former suit is not res judicata in a subsequent suit when the subject-matter is not the same has no force and has been disposed of in Gobind Lal v. Rao Baldeo Singh (1), a ruling which is distinctly in point here.

BINDESHRI PRASAD v. SARJU SINGH.

I accept the appeal with costs, set aside the decree of the Courts below and order that the plaintiff's suit be dismissed with costs throughout.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 931; 12 P. R. 1915; 226 P. L. R. 1914; 128 P. W. R. 1914.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL, APPEAL NO. 308 OF 1922.

April 4, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Lingsay and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

Babu BINDESHRI PRASAD—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

Kuar SARJU SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 23, 25—Unlawful consideration—Debt incurred when borrower under Court of Wards—Inadequacy of consideration.

A debt unenforceable at law because of its having been incurred by a ward of the Court of Wards is not an unlawful consideration, within the meaning of section 23 of the Contract Act, for a bond executed after the estate is released by the Court of Wards.

A consideration for a bond is not inadequate within the meaning of Explanation 2 of section 25 of the Indian Contract Act, if a portion of it consists of a debt which was unenforceable because of its having been incurred at a time when the debtor was a ward of the Court of Wards.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Cawnpore, dated the 9th of January 1922.

Messrs. R. Malcomson, M. L. Sandal, K. N. Kaiju and Shafi-ullah, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. L. Banerjee, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—We are of opinion that the decree of the lower Court must be affirmed. The facts are that, on the 20th August 1912, the father of the present defendant, Bindeshri Prasad, executed a promissory-note in favour of the plaintiff for a certain sum.

At the time this promissory-note was executed the defendant's father was a ward of the Court of Wards and, consequently, it follows that the contract evidenced by this promissory-note was a void contract and that no debt resulted.

After the release of the estate from the Court of Wards and the death of the defendant's father, the present defendant on the 19th August 1915 executed a bond for Rs. 3,000 in favour of the plaintiff.

It is found that this sum of Rs. 3,000 was made up of Rs. 1,800 advanced at the time and that the balance, Rs. 1,200, represented the sum which had been secured by the promissory-note executed by the defendant's father.

The present suit was on this bond and the Courts below have decreed the claim. The argument in the Court below, as here, is that in no case can the plaintiff recover this sum of Rs. 1,200 on the ground that there was an unlawful consideration.

We think this plea cannot be maintained. We agree with the learned Judge of the Court below that the consideration so far as it concerns this sum of Rs. 1,200 was not an unlawful consideration within the meaning of section 23 of the Contract Act.

Further, it cannot, we think, be argued that there was no consideration for the bond so as to bring the case within the purview of section 25. It may be that there was no existing debt in respect of this sum of Rs. 1,200, but the fact remains that under this bond an advance of Rs. 1,800 was made to the defendant and that there was, therefore, real consideration for the bond. The Court below finds that the plaintiff would not have advanced Rs. 1,800 without the undertaking of the defendant to pay the money which had been advanced to his father.

We are not concerned with the adequacy of the consideration. That is not a matter which has to be taken into account in considering a question of this kind (see Explanation 2 to section 25 of the Indian

GHAMANDI LAL-NARAIN DAS V. CHURANJI LAL-POKHAN MALL

Contract Act). The decree of the Court below is correct. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs including fees in this Court on the higher scale.

M. D. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 210 OF 1920.

February 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and
Mr. Justice Ffiorde.

FIRM GHAMANDI LAL-NARAIN
DAS—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

FIRM CHURANJI LAL-POKHAN MALL,
—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Construction of contract—Contract for sale of goods—Arbitration clause—Claim for damages for non-delivery, whether claim arising out of contract.

A contract for the sale of goods contained a clause providing that any claim or dispute of any sort whatever arising in connection with the contract, unless amicably settled, must be referred to arbitration. Plaintiff sued to recover damages for non-delivery of a portion of the goods contracted for:

Held: that the plaintiff's claim being for damages arising out of the failure of the defendant to fulfil his contract to supply the goods, was covered by the arbitration clause and his suit was not, therefore, maintainable. [p. 460, col. 1.]

Ganesh Das-Ishar Das v. Durga Dai-Jagan Nath, 60 Ind. Cas. 776; 2 L. 19; 3 L. L. J. 61; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 97, follow.d.

Charles Louis Dreyfus v. Jai Chand, 18 Ind. Cas. 316; 54 P. W. R. 1913; 124 P. L. R. 1913, Chajju Mal & Co. v. Gurmukh Singh-Bhagwan Das, 42 Ind. Cas. 95; 72 P. R. 1917; 139 P. W. R. 1917, referred to.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Delhi, dated the 18th of September 1919, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Delhi, dated the 18th October 1918.

Mr. M. L. Puri, for the Appellant.

Sheikh Niáz Muhammad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The action out of which this appeal has arisen was brought to recover damages for breach of a contract to deliver certain goods. The contract in question was in writing and contained a clause providing that any claim or dispute of any sort whatever in connection therewith, unless an amicable settlement could be arrived at, must be referred to arbitration.

Upon a claim being made for non-delivery of a portion of the goods contracted for, the defendants referred the matter to arbitration under the provisions of this clause. The plaintiffs, however, refused to attend the arbitration, and alleged as their reason for such refusal that arbitrators are invariably a prejudiced tribunal, and that such proceedings are always subject to such delay.

The arbitration, thereupon, proceeded in the absence of the plaintiffs and ultimately an award was made dismissing the claim.

The plaintiffs then brought their suit before the Sub-Judge at Delhi upon the same cause of action as had already been disposed of by the award. The defendants set up the award in defence, but the learned Subordinate Judge held that the award was no bar to the action as the arbitration clause did not apply to a case of non-delivery and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Upon appeal to the District Judge the decree was affirmed.

The plaintiffs have, at no time, attacked the award upon any of the grounds upon which such a document may be impeached, but have, throughout, rested their case against its validity, solely upon the contention that the arbitration clause does not apply in the case of non-delivery.

In support of this contention, Counsel for the plaintiffs has referred to the decision of Kensington, J., in Charles Louis Dreyfus v. Jai Chand (1) which was approved of by Broadway, J., in Chajju Mal & Co. v. Gurmukh Singh-Bhagwan Das (2). Both these cases, however, were discussed in Ganesh Das-Ishar Das v. Durga Dai-Jagan Nath (3) where the applicability of this identical arbitration clause in the case of a short delivery of goods was the subject of decision. The Court in this last mentioned case refused to follow these decisions, and held:

(1) 18 Ind. Cas. 316; 54 P. W. R. 1913; 124 P. L. R. 1913.

(2) 42 Ind. Cas. 95; 72 P. R. 1917; 139 P. W. R. 1917.

(3) 60 Ind. Cas. 776; 2 L. 19; 3 L. L. J. 61; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 97.

AMIN-UD-DIN V. ABDUL SHAKOOR.

that the reason given in the Court below for refusing to delay the suit, namely, that such an arbitration clause did not apply to short delivery of goods, was incorrect. We can see no difference in principle between the case of short delivery and non-delivery. The plaintiff's claim in the present suit was for damages arising out of the failure of the defendants to fulfil their contract to supply the goods in question. We fail to see how it can be seriously contended that such a clause does not come within the meaning of the words "any claim or dispute arising in connection with this contract."

We are satisfied that, in the events which have happened, the arbitration clause in question is clearly applicable.

The parties have, by agreement, elected their own tribunal, and must be bound by its decision unless it can be impeached upon any of the well-known grounds upon which such a decision can be challenged.

The plaintiff having failed to establish any plea against the award set up in bar of the suit, the suit accordingly fails and the appeal must be allowed with costs throughout.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1569 of 1921.

April 5, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

AMIN-UD-DIN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

ABDUL SHAKOOR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 199 (1) (b)—Question of title decided by Assistant Collector, Second Class—Subsequent suit for ejectment before Assistant Collector, First Class—Res judicata.

Under ordinary circumstances the decision of an Assistant Collector, Second Class, would not be res judicata for a suit only triable by an Assistant Collector of the First Class. [p. 460, col. 2.]

Ram Gobind v. Sri Thakurji Mahasaj, 19 Ind. Cas. 126; 11 A. L. J. 231, relied on.

But if an Assistant Collector of the Second Class decides a question of proprietary title under the provisions of section 199, sub-section (1) (b) of the Agra Tenancy Act his decision is one of a Civil Court and would act as res judicata in a subsequent suit brought in the Court of the Assistant Collector of the First Class in which such a question is involved. [p. 461 col. 1.]

Shahzade Singh v. Mohammad Mehdi Ali Khan, 3 Ind. Cas 954; 6 A. L. J. 917; 32 A. 8 followed.

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Allahabad, dated the 16th July 1921.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Appellants.

Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal by the plaintiffs in a suit for ejectment which was filed in the Court of an Assistant Collector of the First Class. The defendant set up proprietary right in the land. Section 199 of the Tenancy Act requires the Court in such cases either to refer the defendants to the Civil Court or to decide the question of title itself, unless the question has already been determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction. The issue between the parties is whether the question of title had previously been determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction whose decision is conclusive in the present suit. The lower Appellate Court has answered this question in the affirmative. It appears that in the year 1919 the plaintiff filed a suit for arrears of rent against the defendants in the Court of an Assistant Collector of the Second Class. The defendants alleged that they were not tenants but had a proprietary right. The Assistant Collector framed the following issue, "whether the relationship of landlord and tenant exists between the parties?" This was the sole issue in the case. In the course of his judgment the Assistant Collector held that the defendants were in possession of the land in suit not as tenants but as owners. His finding on the issue framed by him is embodied in the following sentence: "I, therefore, hold that the defendants are not tenants of the plaintiffs."

Under ordinary circumstances, the decision of an Assistant Collector of the Second Class would not be res judicata for a suit only triable by an Assistant Collector of the First Class. This is clear from the language of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, which requires that the Court which decides the former suit shall be a Court competent to try the subsequent suit and it has also been directly held in Ram Gobind v. Sri Thakurji Maharaj (1). In this case, however, if a question of title was decided by the Assistant Collector under section 199 of the Tenancy Act his decision under the provisions of that section is treated as equivalent to the decision of a Civil Court. The Civil Court which would have been competent to decide the question of title if the Assistant Collector had referred it under clause (a) of the section instead of deciding it himself under clause (b) would have been the Court of the Munsif. The Court to which a reference would have had to be made in the present case was also the Court of the Munsif. In deciding the question of title the Assistant Collector was not acting as a Revenue Court but as a Civil Court of the lowest grade, and his proceedings were in all respects governed by the Civil Procedure Code. It is difficult, therefore, to see how the Courts below could avoid the conclusion, when the question of title was raised before them in a second suit, that it had already been decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction in the former litigation, and the case in Shazade Singh v. Mohammad Mehdi Ali Khan (2) relied on by the District Judge is direct authority for this view.

JHAMMAN LAL, v. DAULAT RAM.

In view of the form of the issue raised by the Assistant Collector in the former suit I had at first some doubt as to whether the Assistant Collector really did decide a question of title. It is true that this point had not been raised by the appellant in this Court and was not suggested in the Court below. In form, the Assistant Collector restricted the issue to the question whether the relationship of landlord and tenant existed. It is clear, however, that in the particular circumstances of this case the decision of that issue necessarily involved the question of title. The only ground on which the defendants denied the relationship was that they themselves were the owners, and it was on a definite finding of their proprietary right that the Assistant Collector decided the suit. It has been pointed out on behalf of the appellants that in that litigation the plaintiffs claimed in the alternative either under a direct agreement of tenancy or, in case the defendants were occupying the land without right under section 34 of the Tenancy Act. The suit, therefore, could not have been dismissed except on a finding that the plaintiffs had not the proprietary right which they claimed.

For these reasons I affirm the decision of the Court below and dismiss the appeal with costs.

W. C. A. & N. H. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL,
No. 8 OF 1919.

November 22, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof and
Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

JHAMMAN LAL—DECREE-HOLDER—
APPELLANT
versus

DAULAT RAM AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-
DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182 (4) —Execution of decree—Amendment of decree after execution has become barred, effect of.

A decree which is capable of execution and is not executed within the period of limitation becomes dead and cannot be revived by a subsequent application for amendment. [p. 462, col. 2.]

Rabiuddin v. Ram Kanai Sen, 59 Ind. Cas. 186, followed.

Where a decree is quite capable of execution as it stands, its amendment cannot entitle the decree-holder to a fresh period of limitation under clause (4) of Art. 182 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. [p. 462, col. 2.]

Anandram v. Nityananda Barham, 32 Ind. Cas. 744, relied upon.

Miscellaneous second appeal from the order of the District Judge, Lahore, dated the 6th May 1918, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Lahore, dated the 20th October 1917.

Lala Sardha Ram, for the Appellants.

Lala Madan Gopal, for Lala Tirath Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal arising out of proceedings in execution of a decree. The following facts will disclose

(1) 19 Ind. Cas. 126; 11 A. L. J. 231.

(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 954; 6 A. L. J. 917; 32 A. G.

RAM KISHEN RAI v. SHEO SAGAR.

the nature of the question which we have to decide in this appeal.

On the 22nd January 1909, the Arbitrators made an award granting a decree in favour of the appellant in this case for Rs. 4,000. Two conditions were mentioned in the award, namely, (a) that the judgment-debtor might pay the amount in three years by equal instalments, the first instalment falling due on the 1st of January 1910; and (b) that if the judgment-debtor paid Rs. 3,500 within seven months of the date of the award he would be allowed a remission of the remaining Rs. 500.

On the award being filed in Court, certain objections were raised which delayed the passing of a decree on the award. A decree was eventually passed on the 23rd May 1910 for Rs. 4,000 without incorporating the clauses above-mentioned. A default in payment of the first instalment had already taken place and the judgment-debtor had also failed to pay Rs. 3,500 within seven months. Consequently, according to the terms of the award, the plaintiff had become entitled to realise the entire amount of Rs. 4,000 from the judgment-debtor and an unconditional decree for the amount was passed in his favour. An application for the execution of the decree was made on the 23rd June 1913. In this application the decree-holder rightly stated that, owing to the failure on part of the judgment-debtor to fulfil the condition mentioned in the award, he had become entitled to recover the whole amount of Rs. 4,000 in a lump sum. An objection was taken to the execution of the decree on the score of limitation and the application for execution being clearly beyond three years from the date of the decree was held to be barred by time and was dismissed.

The decree-holder then applied on the 30th June 1915 for the amendment of the decree, stating that all the terms of the award had not been incorporated in it. The decree was amended on the 25th of October 1915 and the decree-holder put in a fresh application on the 18th June 1917 for the execution of the amended decree within three years from the date of the amendment and relied upon clause (4) of Art. 182 of the Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908).

Both the Courts below have dismissed the application, holding it to be barred by time on the ground that the decree had already become dead when its amendment was applied for and it could not be revived by being subsequently amended. They have correctly stated the law that where a decree is quite capable of execution, as it stands, its amendment cannot entitle the decree-holder to a fresh period of limitation under Art. 182, clause (4). In support of its decision the Appellate Court has relied upon the case of Anandram v. Nityananda Barham (1). In our opinion, the decision of the learned Judge of the Court below is fully supported by the ruling quoted by him. This ruling was followed in another case, namely, Rabiuddin v. Ram Kanai Sen (2), where it has been laid down that "a decree which is capable of execution and is not executed within three years from its date becomes dead and cannot be revived by a subsequent application for amendment." We are entirely in accord with the view expressed in these two rulings. We are, therefore, constrained to hold that the application for execution is clearly barred by time and has rightly been dismissed.

We accordingly dismiss the appeal, but having regard to the circumstances of the case we do so without costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 744.

(2) 59 Ind. Cas. 186.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1477 OF 1922.

April 4, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

RAM KISHEN RAI—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

SHEO SAGAR PANDEY AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17, 49—Petition to Revenue Court in mutation proceedings—Admission of title—Registration, whether necessary—Agra Tenancy Act (I I of 1921), s. 32—Suit for possession of portion of holding, maintainability of.

RAM KISHEN RAI V. SHEO SASAR.

An application in the mutation proceedings in the Revenue Court, by the defendant admitting plaintiffs' claim to a portion of a holding is not a document of title and does not require registration.

Jagrani Misrain v. Bisheshar Dube, 35 Ind. Cas. 701; 38 A. 336; 14 A. L. J. 449 (F. B.), distinguished.

Section 32 of the Agra Tenancy Act does not bar a suit for the recovery of a fractional share in a holding against a person in lawful possession.

Kedar v. Deo Narain, 39 Ind. Cas. 80; 37 A. 656; 13 A. L. J. 919, followed.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Ghazipore, dated the 23rd of May 1921.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Appellant.

Dr. M. L. Agarwala, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal by the defendant, Ram Kishen Rai, arises out of a suit for possession of a 1-4th share in plot No. 590-1 in the village of Kosara in the Ballia District in which the parties are permanent tenure-holders. The plaintiffs' title to a 1/8th share in this plot based by purchase is admitted. The dispute is as to the remaining 1/8th. In the plaint the plaintiffs simply set up their ownership of the plot and their unlawful dispossession by the defendant in June 1918. The case which they set up at the trial and which has been accepted by both the Courts below is that they came into possession of the remaining 1/8th share under a private partition which took place 8 or 10, according to one witness, and 15 or 16, years ago, according to another. A private partition can be effected without any written document. In this Court the defendant's appeal is urged on two grounds neither of which was put forward in either of the Courts below and which this Court might, therefore, well refuse to entertain on this ground alone.

In support of the plaintiffs' case reliance was placed by the Courts below on an application for correction of papers filed in the Revenue Courts in 1916 in which the defendant admitted that the plaintiffs were in possession of the area in suit by mutual arrangement and asked that the papers should be corrected accordingly to prevent future disputes. The proceedings for correction of papers were ultimately struck off for default but this fact is immaterial. It is the admission that is relied on. The plea put forward here is that this application is being relied on as a document of title and that as such it was inadmissible in evidence without registration. In fact, the document is not and does not purport to be a document of title, it is merely an admission of possession based on a previous arrangement between the parties and a request to the Court to give effect to that possession. In my opinion the ruling in Jagrani Misrain v. Bisheshar Dube (1) on which the appellant relies does not apply. It is said that, apart from this document, there was no evidence of title but the judgment of the Trial Court which the learned District Judge has confirmed shows that this was not the case. The document was not relied on as a foundation of title but as an admission of it. The second plea is that the suit was barred by section 32 of the Tenancy Act. Section 32 contains two sub-sections. The first declares that no division of a holding should be binding on the landholder unless he consents. In this case the landholder is not a party to the proceedings and no question of his consent was ever raised. The second sub-section forbids the Courts to entertain a suit for the division of a holding. It has, however, been held in Kedar v. Deo Narain (2) that this section does not apply to a suit to recover a fractional share in a holding against a person in lawful possession. For these reasons the appeal, in my opinion, fails and I accordingly dismiss it with costs.

M. A. A. & N. B. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 35 Ind. Cas. 701; 38 A. 336; 14 A. L. J. 449 (F. B.).

(2) 30 Ind. Cas. 89; 37 A. 656; 13 A. L. J. 919

CHIMANBHAI KALYANBHAI V. KESHAVLAL BULKHIDAS.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL EXTRAORDINARY APPLICATION

NO. 210 OF 1921.

February 21, 1923.

Present.—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

CHIMANBHAI KALYANBHAI—

PLAINTIFFS—APPLICANTS

versus

KESHAVLAL BULKHIDAS

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—OPPONENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115
—Order refusing to pass decree in terms of award.—Interlocutory order.—Revision.

An order refusing to pass a decree in terms of an award made in the course of the suit, and directing the hearing of the suit to proceed is an interlocutory order, and is not open to revision by the High Court under section 115, Civil Procedure Code.

Application against an order passed by the Additional First Class Subordinate Judge, Surat, in Suit No. 236 of 1917.

Messrs. H. C. Coyajee and M. B. Dave, for the Applicants.

Messrs. G. N. Thakor and N. K. Mehta, for Opponents Nos. 1, 2, 7, 10, and 11.

Messrs. G. N. Thakor and R. J. Thakor, for Opponents Nos. 3, 4, to 9 and 12 to 15.

JUDGMENT.—In this case there was a reference to arbitration in which an award was made. When an application was made to the Court to pass a decree in terms of the award, objections were taken to it on various grounds. The Judge framed three issues for preliminary trial:—

(1) Was the permission of the Court taken to refer this dispute to the arbitrator in this case so as to make the reference binding on the minor defendants on the record?

(2) If not, is the award, Exhibit 191, binding on the said minor defendants? Is the reference itself not bad if the first issue is held in the negative?

(3) Is defendant, Dhansukhlal, not a major now? Did he attain his majority pending the suit; if so, on what date?

It was found that defendant, Dhansukhlal, became a major on July 19, 1920, pending the suit. The first two issues were found against the plaintiffs seeking for a decree on the award. The consequence was that the Court refused to pass a decree in terms of the award. The arbitration proceedings became a nullity and the suit had to proceed in the ordinary course.

From that order of the Judge an application has been made to us under section 115 of the Code. A preliminary objection has been raised by the opponents that it is not competent to this Court in such a case to consider an application in revision. In Damodar Trimbak Dharap v. Raghunath Hari (1) it was held that an order under section 521 of the Code of 1882, setting aside an award made under Chapter XXXVII of the Code on a reference to arbitration in the course of a suit, on the ground of the arbitrator's misconduct, was not subject to revision under section 622. The order complained of was interlocutory and, if erroneous, might form a ground of appeal against any decree that might be passed in the suit.

Under section 115 of the present Code, the High Court may call for the record of any case which has been decided by any Court subordinate to such High Court and in which no appeal lies thereto. It cannot be said in this case that there has been a decision of the suit by the Subordinate Judge. He decided not to pass a decree in terms of the award but to continue the hearing of the suit by the Court. There is no appeal from that decision and as it is clearly an interlocutory order, an application to revise it is not competent. It is unnecessary, therefore, to discuss the grounds on which the Judge decided that he should not pass a decree in terms of the award. When the suit is finally decided it may be open to the parties supporting the award to appeal on the ground that a decree ought to have been passed in terms of the award. But we may refer, perhaps, at the present moment to the decision in Atmaram Yekoba Vani v. Bhila Ganpat Vani (2), in which this Court decided that an agreement to refer in a suit was an agreement coming within the provisions of O. XXXII, r. 7. Therefore, the sanction of the Court was necessary in the case of a minor party. The Rule is discharged with costs. It is desirable that the hearing of this suit should be expedited as much as possible.

(1) 26 B. 551; 4 Bom. L. R. 267.

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 424; 15 Bom. L. R. 223.

ABHAIKAR KUAR v. DATA DIN.

W. C. A.

Rule discharged.

OUDE JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 66 OF 1922.

December 16, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.

Thakurain ABHAIKAR KUAR—

PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

DATA DIN—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Stamp Act (I I of 1899), s. 2 (22), Sch. I, Art. 5—Promissory-note—Instrument undertaking to deliver grain on demand, nature of—Stamp-duty leviable.

An instrument which contains an undertaking to deliver a certain quantity of grain on demand is not a promissory-note as defined in section 2 (22) of the Stamp Act. It is an agreement requiring a stamp of eight annas under Art. 5 of the Stamp Act.

Revision against the order of the Munsif, Kunda, District Partabgarh, dated 7th July 1922.

Mr. H. C. Sen, for the Applicant.

Mr. Radha Krishna, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of a decree of a Small Cause Court. The suit was on the basis of a document described as a pro-note by which the defendant bound himself to deliver 10½ maunds of grain on demand. The document was treated as a promissory-note, liable to a stamp-duty of one anna and as the one-anna stamp which it bore was not cancelled it was technically unstamped and could not be received in evidence even on payment of duty and penal y. It is now admitted that the instrument was not a promissory-note as defined in section 2, clause (22) of the Stamp Act, inasmuch as a promissory-note must be an undertaking to pay a definite sum of money and, unlike a bond, does not include an undertaking to deliver grain. Under the erroneous impression that the instrument could not be admitted even on payment of penalty, the learned Munsif allowed the plaintiff an opportunity to prove the debt apart from the instrument and as he failed to do so dismissed the suit. The instrument, for the reasons given, is not a promissory-note. It is also not a bond under clause (c) of the definition because it is not attested by a witness. It appears to be an agreement requiring a stamp of eight annas under Art. 5, and this is the view taken in Donough's Commentary on the Stamp Act, 6th Edition, page 49. As the learned Munsif's decision proceeds on an erroneous view of the instrument, I set aside the decree of the Court below and send the case back to it for decision de novo. Costs here and heretofore will abide the result.

HIRACHAND v. NEMCHAND.

W. C. A.

Decree set aside.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 224 OF 1921.

February 14, 1923.

Present.—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.
HIRACHAND AMICHAND GUJAR—
PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NEMCHAND FULCHAND MARWADI—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), s. 6 (e)—Damages, right to claim, whether transferable.

A right to claim damages for an alleged breach of contract is not transferable under section 6 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act.

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Sholapur, in Suit No. 361 of 1920.

Messrs. H. C. Coyajee and N. V. Gokhale, for the Appellant.

Messrs. G. N. Thakor and R. A. Jahagirdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The firm of Jivraj-Amichand entered into contracts for the purchase of specified goods at various rates, as evidenced by the sale-notes from the Laxmi Mills. Then the same firm contracted to sell the goods bought under the aforesaid agreements to the defendant firm, Nemchand-Gulabchand, at a profit. Jivraj-Amichand complained that the defendant would not take delivery and purported to sell the goods against the defendant. The result was that, owing to the refusal of the defendant to take delivery, there appeared to be a loss of Rs. 13,000 odd to Jivraj-Amichand. It was open then to Jivraj-Amichand to file a suit against the defendant for damages for breach of the contract. Instead of so doing, Hemchand, one of the partners of the said firm, purported to transfer to the plaintiff the right to recover damages.

RAM SARUP SINGH v. JAGESHAR SINGH.

The suit was dismissed in the Trial Court on the ground that the defendant did not break the contract. When it came before us in appeal it seemed to us obvious that the right to claim damages against the defendant-firm could not be transferred under section 6 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act. It was merely a right to sue, and it was not a transfer of an 'actionable claim' as defined in section 3 of the Act, being neither a debt nor a beneficial interest in moveable property.

The same point had to be decided by the High Court of Calcutta in Abu Mahomed v. S. C. Chunder (1). Maclean, C. J., said (page 351*):

"I do not think that we can properly bring a mere claim for damages for breach of contract within those words (actionable claim). Now, if it does not fall within the definition of 'actionable claim' what is it except a mere right to sue, a mere right to sue for damages resulting from an alleged breach of contract. It seems to me that it is not anything more or less than that; and, if so, that cannot be transferred."

With due respect, that reasoning seems obviously right. Therefore, this appeal must be dismissed. The appellant's Counsel urges upon us that he ought not to be made to pay respondents' costs, as this point was not taken in the Court below. But it was open to the respondent's Counsel to dispute the plaintiff's case in this Court on any point which was open to him, and as the plaintiff was not satisfied with the decision of the Trial Court, but wished to take his chance of obtaining a decision in his favour, in this Court, he must pay the costs of the appeal.

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 827; 36 C. 345; 13 C. W.N. 384.

*Page of 36 C.—[Ed.]

W. C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 315 OF 1921.

December 20, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C., and Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.

RAM SARUP SINGH AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

JAGESHAR SINGH AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Invalid mortgage by deceased father—Pious obligation of sons.

A mortgage by a Hindu father, not incurred for legal necessity or for the payment of an antecedent debt, is not binding on his sons even after his death, on the ground of any pious obligation on them to pay their deceased father's debts.

(Case-law reviewed.)

Appeal against the judgment and decree of the Officiating Subordinate Judge, Unao, dated the 28th July 1921, modifying the judgment and decree of the Munsif, Purwa, Unao, dated the 23rd December 1920.

Mr. Bisheshar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellants.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for redemption. The original mortgage was executed on 12th June 1896 by Ram Sewak Singh who is now dead. The plaintiffs who seek redemption are pious mortgagees under a mortgage executed by Ram Sewak Singh's sons Bishunath Singh and Raghubar Singh, defendants Nos. 5 and 6. On the same date as the original mortgage, which was usufructuary, Ram Sewak Singh executed a deed of further charge for a sum of Rs. 300 on which over Rs. 2,000 is now claimed as interest. It was found by the Trial Court that this mortgage was not executed for legal necessity or antecedent debt. The question in dispute is, whether this mortgage is binding on the family estate in the hands of the descendants of the original mortgagor after his death subject to the plea noted at the conclusion of this judgment; it is common ground that, if Ram Sewak Singh had been still alive, the mortgage would not, in view of the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1), be binding on the estate. The proposition contended for by the defendants was that, though the mortgage was originally invalid, it became binding on the death of the father in virtue of the pious obligation of Hindu sons to pay their father's debts. As this is a point on which there has been some conflict of authority in this Court it has been referred to a Bench in order that the point may be finally settled.

RAM SARUP SINGH v. JAGESHAR SINGH.

The First Court dismissed the suit in so far as the deed of further charge was concerned. The lower Appellate Court allowed the defendants' appeal and required the plaintiffs to deposit also the amount due on the deed of further charge on pain of having the property sold. The respondents relied on observations contained in two decisions of this Court—Ram Saran v. Mangal Singh (2) and Muhammad Baqar Ali Khan v. Hazari Lal (3). These observations certainly support the view which the learned Subordinate Judge has taken, but in neither case were they strictly necessary for the decision of the appeal. In the former case legal necessity for a large number of items was discussed. In regard to one item it was said that, where the ancestor is dead the pious obligation to pay his debts is not concerned with the question whether the debts are secured or unsecured. It was, however, also found that in this particular case the purpose for which the debt was incurred amounted to legal necessity. In the latter case, the learned Judges gave what purports to be a summary of the principle deducible from the decision in Sahu Ram Chandra's case (1). In the course of this summary they say, that a transfer which was originally invalid may be given effect to against the sons on the death of the father owing to the pious obligation to discharge their father's debt. This summary was entirely unnecessary for the decision of the case before them and it has been dissented from in two subsequent decisions of this Court. In Ram Chhattar v. Ram Lal (4) the learned Judicial Commissioner pointed out that there was nothing in the judgment of their Lordships which either directly or indirectly supports the proposition laid down. In the case before their Lordships the question of pious obligation was ruled out altogether as the father was alive at the time of the suit, but in dealing with the case their Lordships say that responsibility for paying the father's debts is an entirely distinct question from that of the validity of a mortgage of the joint estate. So far, therefore, as any inference on this question could be drawn from their Lordships' judgment it is rather against, than in favour of, the respondents. It was also pointed out by the learned Judicial Commissioner that in the Full Bench Allahabad case of Chandra-deo Singh v. Mata Prasad (5), which was expressly approved by the Privy Council in Sahu Ram Chandra's case (1) the father was dead at the time of suit, and yet a mortgage incurred by him not for legal necessity or antecedent debt was not held to be binding on the family estate. The same view was taken by one of us in Gajadhar Bakhsh Singh v. Batinath (6) the head-note of which runs:—

"The mere circumstance of pious obligation to pay does not validate a mortgage which is invalid for want of legal necessity or of the necessity for the payment of antecedent debt."

This view of the law is strongly supported by another Privy Council judgment delivered shortly after the decision in Sahu Ram Chandra's case (1)—Jogi Das v. Ganga Ram (7). This was a suit to enforce a mortgage. Two of the four original

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 21 C. W. N. 668; 1 P. L. W. 537; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 141 (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 221; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.).

(2) 60 Ind. Cas. 1219; 23 O. C. 327; 21 U. P. L. R. (O.) 191; 8 O. L. J. 87.

(3) 52 Ind. Cas. 108; 6 O. L. J. 297 at p. 306.

(4) 65 Ind. Cas. 950; 24 O. C. 395.

(5) 1 Ind. Cas. 479; 31 A. 176; 6 A. L. J. 263.

(6) 65 Ind. Cas. 967; 8 O. L. J. 605.

(7) 42 Ind. Cas. 791; 21 C. W. N. 957 (1917) M. W. N. 739 (P. C.).

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. G. I. P. RAILWAY.

mortgagors were alive and two were dead. The suit was brought against the surviving mortgagors and the sons and grandsons of the deceased mortgagors. There was no proof of legal necessity or antecedent debt. The High Court dismissed the suit as against the family property, and the Privy Council upheld the decisions remarking, in language borrowed from the decision in Sahu Ram Chandra's case (1), that the mere circumstance of a pious obligation does not validate the mortgage. This is direct and very strong authority in favour of the view taken in Ram Chaitar v. Ram Lal (4) and Gajadhar Bakhsh Singh v. Bai Nath (6).

The learned Counsel for respondents has sought to avoid the effect of these decisions by suggesting that there is no limitation against a defence, and he has also urged cases in which a plaintiff seeking to set aside an alienation has been put to terms and required to re-pay the consideration he has received. Neither of these pleas is valid. The plaintiffs are seeking to redeem and have been given a decree for redemption of a mortgage binding on the estate. The mortgagees are seeking to enforce against the family property an invalid encumbrance. There is no ground of equity on which they can be compelled to do so. The question of personal obligation for the debt does not arise, as any claim for a simple money-decree in respect of the original debt was long since barred at the time of suit.

As regards the plea of putting the defendants on terms, the cases referred to are cases in which, as a condition of setting aside an alienation, the plaintiffs have been required to repay the amount which was validly borrowed for legal necessity or antecedent debt. Neither of which applies in this case.

At the conclusion of his argument the learned Counsel for the respondents suggested that as Rs. 108 of the consideration in the deed of further charge was borrowed to re-pay a previous mortgage this might amount to antecedent debt and the deed of further charge being held good. The previous mortgage was one executed on 8th October 1895 and is on the record. An examination of it shows that a usufructuary mortgage had been executed in 1894.

The deed of 1895 borrowed a further sum on the same property on condition that the amount of this further loan was to be repaid along with the amount borrowed under the usufructuary mortgage and that all the terms of the usufructuary mortgage were to be applicable to this deed also. There was no provision permitting the mortgagee to sell the property in case of non-payment and the learned Judge of the Trial Court was right in saying that no personal covenant can be found in the terms of the deed. This mortgage was, therefore, not an obligation incurred wholly apart from the security afforded by the joint property within the meaning of the Privy Council decision.

The result is that we allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below and restore the decree of the Court of first instance with costs both in the lower Appellate Court and in this Court.

N. H.

*Appeal allowed.
Decree set aside.*

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT NO. 875
OF 1923.

April 5, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA

—PLAINTIFF

versus

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY

—DEFENDANT.

Sea Customs Act (VIII of 1878)—Customs duty—G. I. P. Railway Company—Stores imported into British India—Line owned by Government but worked by Company—Liability of Company to pay customs duty.

As the G. I. P. Railway is owned by the Government and has been made over to the Company simply for management under contract, the stores purchased and imported by the G. I. P. Railway Company into India for the use of the undertaking are, at the time of importation, goods belonging to the Government for the purpose of the payment of customs duty. [p. 476, col. 1.]

Mr. Kanga, (Advocate-General), for the Plaintiff.

Sir Thomas Strangman and Mr. Campbell, for the Defendant Company.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. G. I. P. RAILWAY.

JUDGMENT.

Macleod, C. J.—This is a case stated by the agreement of the parties for the opinion of the Court under O. XXXVI, r. 1. The question is, whether stores purchased and imported by the defendant Company into India for the use of the undertaking are at the time of importation goods belonging to Government. If the answer is in the affirmative, it has been agreed that the plaintiff shall refrain from levying or seeking customs duty upon such stores. The defendant Company was incorporated by Statute 11 & 12 Vic., c. 83, intituled an Act for incorporating the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company and for other purposes contained therein.

Statute 63 & 64, Vic., c. 38, was passed to provide for the vesting of the Railways and other property of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company in the Secretary of State for India in Council and by section 4, it was provided that as and from June 30, 1900, the Railways, works and divers other property of the Company should be transferred to and vested in the Secretary of State.

Section 72 enabled the defendant Company to enter into and conclude with the Secretary of State any contract or contracts for the maintenance, management and working of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company. Accordingly, on December 21, 1900, the defendant Company entered into an agreement with the plaintiff a copy of which is annexed to the case stated. I will refer to the pertinent clauses, omitting any mention of the Indian Midland Railway system as unnecessary.

Under clause 5 the plaintiff was to hand over to the defendant Company for the purposes of the contract the Great Indian Peninsula Railway system together with the rolling stock, plant and machinery belonging thereto.

Under clause 6 the plaintiff was to deliver to the defendant Company for the purposes of the undertaking all stores belonging to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway system excepting such as on the representation of the Company the plaintiff might adjudge to be unserviceable and surplus stores.

Under clause 10 the Company was to keep the undertaking in good repair, in good working condition and fully supplied with rolling stock, plant and machinery to the satisfaction of the plaintiff, and on their failure to comply with any requirements of the plaintiff, the plaintiff might enter on the undertaking to execute such requirements.

Under clause 22 all stores required by the undertaking were to be conveyed by the Company at rates to be approved by the plaintiff, not being less than the actual cost of conveyance.

Under clause 22A all capital monies required for the undertaking were at the option of the plaintiff to be provided by him or were to be raised by the Company by the issue of debentures or debenture stock in such manner and on such terms as to interest or otherwise as the plaintiff might determine.

Under clause 23 all monies received by the Company in India in respect of the undertaking were to be paid without deduction into the Treasury and all monies received elsewhere than in India were to be paid into the Bank of England to the plaintiff's account.

Under clause 24 all monies required by the Company for the undertaking were to be supplied by the plaintiff.

Under clause 25 all monies expended by the Company on account of the undertaking were from time to time to be stated and submitted to the plaintiff for his sanction.

Clause 33 provided for accounts to be delivered of all stores in hand or in the course of delivery on July 1, 1900, and for the valuation thereof. Thereafter, half-yearly accounts were to be furnished of all stores in hand and of all stores used since the last accounts were made, the value of stores used to be charged to the general working expenses or to the capital account as the case might require in accordance with the provisions of the agreement in that behalf.

Clause 34 provided for the re-valuation from time to time of stores in hand.

By clause 37 the Company was prohibited during the continuance of the contract from acquiring any property in India without the sanction of the plaintiff.

Clause 39 provided for the application of the nett receipts of the undertaking.

By clause 60 the Company was to give possession to the plaintiff on June 30, 1925, of the undertaking, together with the rolling stock, plant and machinery belonging thereto, and all stores in hand or in course of delivery on that day. The plaintiff was to pay to the Company the amounts paid up or credited as paid up on all shares or stocks or stock then in existence in the Company's new capital which the Company might have issued for the purposes of the contract with the sanction of the plaintiff.

CHINTALAPUDI SANYASI v. CHINTALAPUDI VENKATA RAO:

It is sufficient for this case to say that the surplus arising from the excess of receipts over payments in any year commencing on July 1 and ending on June 30, were to belong as to 19-20ths to the plaintiff and as to 1-20th to the Company.

Now it will be seen that the whole of the undertaking became the property of the plaintiff on July 1, 1900, and was handed back to the defendant Company only for the management and working thereof according to the terms of the contract. On the termination of the contract everything had to be returned to the plaintiff. All receipts had to be paid into the Treasury in India, or into the plaintiff's account with the Bank of England. The Company, therefore, possessed no property of its own. All the monies required for the purpose of the undertaking had to be supplied by the plaintiff and no expenditure could be made without the plaintiff's sanction. It is difficult then to see how stores purchased in England or abroad became the property of the Company. There can be no distinction between stores, the cost of which could be debited to working expenses, and stores, the cost of which would be debited to capital account. If the plaintiff's contention were correct, new rolling stock imported is for the moment the property of the Company, but it belongs to the plaintiff as soon as it is taken into use, or even as soon as the customs duty has been paid. In other words, stores imported are to be considered as belonging to the Company for the purpose of paying customs duty and for that alone.

In my opinion, such a contention cannot be sustained.

I would answer the question propounded in the concise statement in the affirmative.

Crump, J.—I agree.

N. H.

Answered affirmatively.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 438 OF 1921.

October 11, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

CHINTALAPUDI SANYASI, MINOR, BY NEXT FRIEND VANAPALLI ACHAYYA—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

CHINTALAPUDI VENKATA RAO,

MINOR, BY GUARDIAN ad litem

CHINTALAPUDI CHINNA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, para. 15—Arbitration—Arbitrator acting on private information—Misconduct—Award, whether valid—Guardian and minor—Minor, whether bound by guardian's admission—Reference by guardian waiving right to object to award, whether binding on minor.

An arbitrator is not entitled to examine witnesses in the absence of parties or institute private enquiries behind their back and an award based on such information or knowledge is invalid, unless a power is expressly vested in the arbitrator by agreement of parties where they are sui juris. [p. 471, col. 2; p. 473, col. 1.]

In re Gregson and Armstrong, (1894) 70 L. T. 106; 10 R. 408; Harvey v. Shellon, (1844) 7 Beav. 455; 49 E. R. 1141; 13 L. J. Ch. 466; 64 R. R. 116, Dobson v. Groves, (1844) 6 Q. B. 637; 115 E. R. 239; 14 L. J. Q. B. 17; 9 Jur. 86; 66 R. R. 509, Daya Kishen v. Dharam Das, 4 A. L. J. 159; A. W. N. (1907) 75, Lakshmi Narain v. Sheo Nath Pandey, 54 Ind. Cas. 443; 42 A. 185; 18 A. L. J. 78; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 177; Ganesh Narain Singh v. Malida Koeer, 10 Ind. Cas. 450; 13 C. L. J. 399 and Hari Singh v. Kankinarah Co., Limited, 66 Ind. Cas. 389; 34 C. L. J. 39, relied on.

Where, on a reference to arbitration by a guardian on behalf of a minor agreeing to be bound by the decision of the arbitrator, either on his own information, or on examination of witnesses, and undertaking not to dispute the validity of the award on any ground, an award was passed based on private inquiries and information not accessible to the parties:

Held, that the guardian's conduct in waiving the minor's right to object to irregular procedure was grossly negligent and that the minor was not bound either by the reference or by the award. [p. 471, col. 2; p. 472, col. 1.]

Swamirao v. Collector of Dharwar, 17 B. 299; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 195, Rhoders v. Swithenbank, (1889) 22 Q. B. 577; 58 L. J. Q. B. 287; 60 L. T. 856; 37 W. R. 457, Lakshminarayana Tantri v. Ramachandra Tantri, 45 Ind. Cas. 763; 34 M. L. J. 71; 23 M. L. T. 89 and Chunduru Punnaiah v. Rajam Viranna, 70 Ind. Cas. 668; 42 M. L. J. 429; 15 L. W. 427; (1922) M. W. N. 213; 45 M. 425; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 273, followed.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—A statement in the nature of an admission by a guardian is not as such conclusive against a minor. [p. 473, col. 2.]

CHINTALAPUDI SANYASI V. CHINTALAPUDI VENKATA RAO.

If once it is found that evidence has been improperly admitted, the question whether such evidence had or had not an effect on the arbitrator's mind is immaterial and the award cannot be supported [p. 473, col. 2.].

Dobson v. Groves, (1844) 6 Q. B. 637; 115 E. R. 239, 14 L. J. Q. B. 17; 9 Jur. 86; 66 R. R. 509; Walker v. Forbisher, (1801) 6 Ves. 70 31 E. R. 943; 5 R. R. 223, relied on.

Appeal against an order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Vizagapatam, dated the 30th September 1921, in Original Suit No. 62 of 1919.

Mr. A. Krishnaswami Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. Satyanarayana, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Spencer, J.—The plaintiff, a minor, represented by his natural father, sued to establish that he was the adopted son of Chintalapudi Sanyasayya. The defendant, who is the minor aurasa son of Sanyasayya, represented by his mother, opposed the suit. There was a reference to arbitration without the intervention of the Court. The defendant's mother agreed to the dispute being referred to be settled by a single arbitrator and in the muchilika that was drawn up, she consented to be bound by and act up according to the decision the arbitrator might give either on his own information or upon other information known in the village or by examining the witnesses of both parties should he think necessary. The agreement to refer goes on: "We shall not before you give a decision regarding the said disputes between us, cancel this muchilika executed by us, alleging among others that you are doing injustice, or that you are partial and that your arbitration is not necessary and that you should not give decision. We shall agree to Your decision itself as the final decision. We shall not contend for any reason and in any manner either in Courts or in any other place that your decision is not proper and that it cannot bind us." The arbitrator admits that he enquired of witnesses behind the back of the parties and that he acquired and collected information and obtained an admission from the defendant's mother without noting them down in writing. The question, is whether the minor defendant is bound by such a surrender by his guardian of his legal rights that witnesses should be examined in the presence of the parties, and whether such procedure makes the award "otherwise invalid" within the meaning of section 15 of the Second Schedule, Civil Procedure Code.

The Subordinate Judge quotes Lakshmi Narain v. Sheo Nath Pandey (1) and observes: "If the parties agreed that there was no need for him to take any evidence, and that the arbitrator should decide the dispute between them on his own knowledge no misconduct could be implied if he decided accordingly."

That is a perfectly sound proposition provided that the parties are sui juris. But the question here is, whether it was a reasonable and prudent act on the part of the guardian of a minor thus to commit the interests of her ward into the absolute care of a single person whom she permits to follow a procedure opposed to natural justice. It is improper on the part of an arbitrator to get information from one side in the absence of the other or to utilise information not accessible to the other. In re Gregson and Armstrong (2), Harvey v. Shelton (2) and Dobson v. Groves (4). The arbitrator examined by the Court admits that he acted thus, and it also appears from the statement of plaintiff's guardian that the arbitrator acted on information obtained before the reference. I am of opinion that his procedure vitiated the award given in the present case and that the defendant's guardian could not waive her son's right to object to irregular procedure. Vide Swamitrao v. Collector of Dharwar (5), which follows Rhodes v. Swithenbank (6) I would go further and characterise her conduct as gross negligence on the part of a guardian; and it has been held by this Court in Lakshminarayana Tanti v. Rama-

(1) 54 Ind. Cas. 443; 42 A. 185; 18 A. L. J. 78; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 177.
(2) (1894) 70 L. T. 106; 10 R. 408.
(3) (1844) 7 Beav. 453; 49 E. R. 1141; 13 L. J. Ch. 466; 64 R. R. 116.
(4) (1844) 6 Q. B. 637; 115 E. R. 239; 14 L. J. Q. B. 17; 9 Jur. 86; 66 R. R. 509.
(5) 17 B. 299; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 195.
(6) (1889) 22 Q. B. 577; 58 L. J. Q. B. 287; 60 L. T. 856; 37 W. R. 457.

CHINTALAPUDI SANYASI V. CHINTALAPUDI VENKATA RAO.

Chandra Tantri (7) and Chunduru Punnaiah v. Rajam Viranna (8) that gross negligence on the part of a next friend or guardian entitles a minor to impeach an award or a judgment passed against him. The appeal is allowed and the suit is dismissed. No costs.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The appellant, attacks the judgment pronounced by the Subordinate Judge giving effect to an award made in favour of the plaintiff. The facts of the case may be briefly stated. One Sanyasayya died leaving the defendant his natural son and his widow Ammanna, the mother of the defendant. The plaintiff claimed that he was adopted by Sanyasayya and stated that the defendant was born subsequent to the adoption and that Ammanna denied the adoption and refused to maintain the plaintiff. The disputes were then referred to the arbitration of a gentleman by name Boddu Appanna Dhoragan and the submission was executed by the natural father of the plaintiff acting on behalf of the latter and by Ammanna acting on behalf of the defendant. The arbitrator was to decide whether the plaintiff was the adopted son of Sanyasayya and to what rights he was entitled. The arbitrator made an enquiry and passed an award declaring the plaintiff was the adopted son of the deceased Sanyasayya and awarded to him a fifth share of the estate. The plaintiff then made an application under paragraph 20 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code that the award be filed in Court and the application was numbered and registered as a suit and the Subordinate Judge ordered the award to be filed and pronounced judgment according to the award. The defendant contended that the award was not binding upon him for the reason inter alia that the arbitrator examined witnesses in the absence of parties and instituted private inquiries and passed his judgment upon information so obtained. The Sub-Judge refers to this contention in the following passage in his judgment: "The arbitrator does not pretend that he reduced the evidence of the witnesses he examined to writing nor did he examine them in the presence of the parties."

This conduct on the part of the arbitrator is justified by a reference to the terms of the submission. The part of the submission material for this purpose is as follows: "Therefore we have executed this Yoka Panchayat Muchilika agreeing to be bound by and act according to the decision you might give either on your own information or upon their information known in the village or by examining witnesses of us both parties should you think it necessary. We shall not, before you give a decision regarding the said disputes between us, cancel this muchilika executed by us alleging that you are doing injustice or that you are partial and that your arbitration is not necessary. We shall agree to your decision itself as the final decision."

The first question that arises is, apart from any covenants in the submission, is an arbitrator under the general law entitled to act on information received in the absence of the parties or on his own knowledge of the facts in regard to matters in issue between the parties?

The law is perfectly clear on the point, that an award based on such information or knowledge is invalid. In Harvey v. Shelton (3) an award was set aside on the ground that the arbitrator interviewed one party, in the absence of the other. Lord Langdale, M. R., says: "In every case in which matters are litigated, you must attend to the representations made on both sides, and you must not, in the administration of justice, in whatever form, whether in the regularly constituted Courts or in arbitrations, whether before lawyers or merchants, permit one side to use means of influencing the conduct and the decisions of the Judge, which means are not known to the other side." The Master of the Rolls also observes: "There is no proof, nor in such a case do I apprehend there could be proof that the result to which Mr. Wakefield came was in any way prejudicial to Mr. Harvey." Still the award was set aside on the ground that: "it is an ordinary principle in the administration of justice that no party can be allowed to use any means whatsoever to influence the mind of the Judge which means are not known and capable of being resisted by the other party." This view was acted upon in numerous other cases in England and was accepted in several decisions of the Indian High Courts. See Daya Kishen v. Dharam Das (9), Lachhmi Narain v. Sheo Nath Pandey (1), Ganesh Narain Singh v. Malida Koer (10) and Hari Sing v. Kankinarah Company Limited (11).

(7) 45 Ind. Cas. 763; 34 M. L. J. 71; 23 M. L. T. 89.

(8) 70 Ind. Cas. 668; 42 M. L. J. 429; 15 L. W. 427; (1922) M. W. N. 213; 45 M. 425; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 273.

CHINTALAPUDI SANYASI V. CHINTALAPUDI VENKATA RAO.

It is also settled that if the parties agree that the arbitrator shall decide the dispute on his own knowledge or that there is no need for him to take any evidence, no misconduct can be imputed. See Lachhmi Narain v. Sheo Nath Pandey (1). Lord Denman, C. J. observes in Dobson v. Groves (4) that no information ought to be received by the arbitrators in the absence of the parties unless the arbitrator has an express power reserved for that purpose or the parties agree that he shall exercise it. If the parties to this reference were sui juris, the arbitrator would have been justified in acting as he did and his award would not be liable to be set aside on the ground of misconduct. But on behalf of the defendant who is a minor his mother and natural guardian consented to the terms contained in the reference and it cannot be held that the act of the mother is beneficial to the defendant. Such covenants are sometimes found in submissions executed by parties who are sui juris. But when a guardian is acting on behalf of a minor I do not think it can be said that in any case it will be in the interests of the minor for the guardian to consent to the arbitrator possessing such wide powers. However, no special grounds have been shown to exist in this particular case which would justify the empowering of the arbitrator to depart from the usual rules of procedure indispensable to the impartial administration of justice.

There is one matter to which I must advert. It has been said that the arbitrator after making enquiries of other persons interviewed the defendant's mother herself and that she admitted the plaintiff's adoption. In regard to this, it is necessary to point out that the arbitrator in his award does not refer to this incident and does not profess to base his judgment upon this admission. What the actual statement made by the mother, if any, was there is no means of knowing because it has not been recorded. In what circumstances the admission was made we are not in a position to say. Whether the admission was qualified or absolute does not appear. Whether she admitted the factum of adoption or the validity of the adoption we have no means to find out. It must be remembered that the so-called admission is not a statement by one of the parties to the suit but only a statement made by a guardian of one of the parties. Such a statement could not be conclusive against the defendant as an admission. In any event, it is settled law that if evidence is improperly admitted the Courts will not consider the question whether such evidence had or had not an effect upon the arbitrator's mind, and in this case the arbitrator having made private enquiries and obtained information, his award is thereby vitiated. In Dobson v. Groves (4) Lord Denman, C. J., observes: "When once the case is brought within the general principle by a possibility that the arbitrator's mind may have been biased, there is a sufficient objection." In Walker v. Forbisher (12) the arbitrator swore that though he heard certain persons in the absence of one of the parties the information had no effect upon his award. Lord Chancellor Eldon said: "I believe him. He is a most respectable man. But I cannot from respect for any man do that, which I cannot reconcile to general principles. A Judge must not take upon himself to say, whether evidence improperly admitted had or had not an effect upon his mind. The award may have done perfect justice: but upon general principles it cannot be supported." I am constrained for these reasons to set aside the award and allow the appeal. From the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, it is clear that the arbitrator acted honestly and no prejudice or desire to do wrong can be imputed to him. But, nevertheless, the procedure adopted by him is illegal and his acts amount to (9) 4 A. L. J. 159; A. W. N. (1907) 75.

(10) 10 Ind. Cas. 450; 13 C. L. J. 399.

(11) 66 Ind. Cas. 389; 34 C. L. J. 39.

(12) (1801) 6 Ves. 701, 31 E. R. 943; 5 R. R. 223.

RATANCHAND DAYACHAND V. DAMJI DHARSEY.

legal misconduct and his award is, therefore, bad. I agree with the order proposed by my learned brother.

V. N. V.

Appeal allowed.

Z. K.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL, CIVIL JURISDICTION APPEAL,

NO. 22 OF 1921.

March 29, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

RATANCHAND DAYACHAND—

APPELLANTS

versus

DAMJI DHARSEY AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

*Letters Patent (Bom.), cl. 15—Appeal—
Security for costs—Principles applicable.*

In an appeal under clause 15 of the Bombay Letters Patent it is open to the High Court to demand such further security, beyond the Rs. 500 deposited by the appellant under High Court Rule 736, for the costs of the appeal as it may think fit.

In order to justify the exercise of the power to demand security for the costs of an appeal, there must be some evidence at least of facts which cast doubts on the honesty and bona fides of the appellant, such as obstruction to the execution of the decree in the lower Court, or the fact that the appellant is not the real litigant, or if in any way it can be shown that the appeal is vexatious.

Letters Patent Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Kajiji.

Mr. Lalkaka, for Mr. Jinnah, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bahadurji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Macleod, C. J.—This is an application by the respondents for an order directing the appellants to deposit such further security for the costs of the appeal as the Court may think fit, on the ground that the costs of the appeal will run into thousands of rupees beyond the 500 rupees deposited by the appellants under High Court Rule 736 when the appeal was filed.

A stay of execution of the decree of the lower Court was obtained on the appellants giving security to the extent of Rs. 35,000.

This is an appeal under clause 15 of the Letters Patent, and it has been contended that O. XLI, r. 10, does not apply to such appeals; and even if it did, that High Court Rule 736 is inconsistent with it and governs the case. The authority relied upon is Behram Jung v. Haji Sultanali Shustry (1). It does not seem to me to matter much whether we hold that O. XLI, r. 10, is not applicable, as the learned Chief Justice in the case just cited remarked that the Appellate Court had the power to demand security if it thought fit to do so in the interests of justice. I also think that High Court Rule 736 is not inconsistent with O. XLI, r. 10, as it merely prescribes the amount of security which an appellant shall deposit as a condition on which the appeal will be admitted. Although undoubtedly many of the rules in O. XLI cannot apply to appeals under the Letters Patent, I think it would be going too far to say that none of them are applicable. Certainly in Kessowji Issur v. Great Indian Peninsula Railway Co. (2) it appears to have been considered in what circumstances the Appeal Court in a Letters Patent Appeal may allow further evidence to be produced under section 568 of the Code of 1882 corresponding to O. XLI, r. 27.

But the powers to demand security for the costs of an appeal must in any event be exercised according to well-known principles. The mere fact that the appellant may lose and may not pay the costs of the appeal is not a sufficient ground for demanding security. There must be some evidence at least of facts which cast doubts on the honesty and bona fides of the appellant, such as obstruction to the execution of the decree in the lower Court, or the fact that the appellant is not the real litigant, or if in any way it can be shown that the appeal is vexatious. This application, I think, should be dismissed with costs.

Crump, J.—I agree.

W. C. A. Application dismissed.

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 739; 37 B. 572; 14 Bom. L. R. 1106.

(2) 34 I. A. 115; 9 Bom. L. R. 671; 11 C. W.N. 721; 6 C. L. J. 5; 4 A. L. J. 461; 31 B. 381; 17 M. L. J. 347; 2 M. L. T. 435 (F. C.).

SHUJA-UD-DIN KHAN V. SHER MUHAMMAD KHAN.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1472 OF 1919.

January, 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.SHUJA-UD-DIN KHAN AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHER MUHAMMAD KHAN AND OTHERS
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Adverse possession—Mortgage—Sale of equity of redemption to mortgagee, after sale to stranger, Mortgagee, whether can set up adverse possession.

The owner of the equity of redemption in certain property sold it to the plaintiffs. He subsequently purported to sell the same equity of redemption to the defendant who was an assignee of one-third of the mortgagee rights in the property. On the strength of this purchase of the equity of redemption the defendant redeemed the remaining two-thirds of the mortgage. In answer to a suit by the plaintiffs to redeem the property the defendant set up his adverse possession from the date of the sale of the equity of redemption in his favour:

Held, (1) that the sale of the equity of redemption in favour of the defendant which had already been sold to the plaintiffs was a mere nullity and did not operate to confer any title on the defendant; [p. 476, col. 1.]

(2) that the defendant's possession as co-mortgagee could not, as the result of the alleged sale of the equity of redemption in his favour, become adverse to the plaintiffs; [p. 476, col. 1.]

(3) that the redemption by the defendant of the shares of the other mortgagees was in his character of co-mortgagee and did not effect the character of his possession which was that of a mortgagee.

Mohan Lal v. Bhagu Shah, 14 Ind. Cas. 513; 252 P. W. R. 1912, Jiva Khan v. Lakhmi Chand, 11 Ind. Cas. 429; 146 P. W. R. 1911; 232 P. L. R. 1911 and Ariyaputhira Padayachi v. Muthukumarasawmy Padayachi, 15 Ind. Cas. 343; 37 M. 423; 12 M. L. T. 425; 23 M. L. J. 339; (1922) M. W. N. 854, relied on.

Lala Kanhoo Lal v. Musammal Manki Bibi, 9 C. W. N. 601; Pulappa v. Tummaji, 14 B. 176; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 576, Hubdar Khan v. Gajadhar Chaudh, 25 Ind. Cas. 600; 17 O. C. 294 and Ram Narayan Rai v. Ram Dent Rai, 63 Ind. Cas. 282; 6 P. L. J. 680, (1922) Pat. 129; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 98, distinguished.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 9th April 1919, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Jullundur, dated the 15th March 1918.

Pandit Sheo Narain, R. B., for the Appellants.

Bakshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal arises out of a redemption suit which was decreed by the Trial Court but dismissed by the lower Appellate Court on the finding that as against the plaintiffs, who are the sons and heirs of the purchaser of the equity of redemption, the defendant Sher Muhammad, who was the assignee of the rights of the original mortgagees and had himself purchased the equity of redemption from the mortgagor subsequent to the sale in favour of the plaintiffs' father, had been in adverse possession for over 12 years, i. e., from the date of the sale to him, and that, therefore, the suit was barred by time. The facts are briefly as below:—

Under the registered deed dated the 4th February 1887 Jia Khan and Fazal Muhammad were the mortgagees of the land with possession in the following shares.

Jia Khan..... $\frac{1}{3}$

Fazal Muhammad $\frac{1}{3}$

It is stated in the deed that the mortgage-money was received by the mortgagor through Sher Muhammad, defendant No. 3. Jia Khan died leaving two sons by one wife and two by another who naturally succeeded to his rights in equal shares. By the deed, dated the 28th July 1895, two of them, i. e., Sheikh Umar and Muhammad Amin, assigned their rights for value to Sher Muhammad, defendant, who thus became mortgagee of $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share in the land. Before this assignment to him, i. e., on the 7th April 1894, Ahmad Ali, the owner and mortgagor, had by a registered-deed sold the equity of redemption to Khalifa Fateh Din Khan, father of the plaintiffs, but no mutation of names followed on this sale. On the 10th July 1898 Ahmad Ali sold the equity of redemption afresh to Sher Muhammad and the latter obtained mutation of names. Subsequently to this, i. e., on the 24th May 1903 and 29th July 1912, Sher Muhammad redeemed the shares of Fazal Muhammad and the remaining two sons of Jia Khan respectively. Upon these facts the lower Appellate Court built the theory that Sher Muhammad's possession became adverse to the original purchaser of the equity of redemption from the date of the sale in his favour and the mutation of names in accordance therewith. The learned Counsel for the plaintiff-appellants contends that this view of the learned District Judge was erroneous because the second sale of the equity of redemption to Sher Muhammad was a nullity and could confer no title and that his possession could not have become adverse as he was already in possession as a mortgagee. The learned Counsel for Sher Muhammad, respondent, realising the weight of the authority on which this general proposition is based does not contest it and admits that Sher Muhammad's possession could not be adverse in respect of the $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share that had been transferred to him before the first sale of the equity of redemption, but contends that his possession with regard to the remaining $\frac{2}{3}$ ds was adverse from the date of the sale because an adverse title was set up by Sher Muhammad and was given effect to in the Revenue Records. This contention is quite untenable as will be shown presently after noticing the authorities cited on either side.

SHUJA-UD-DIN KHAN v. SHER MUHAMMAD KHAN.

Counsel for the appellants relies upon 1 Mohan Lal v. Bhagu Shah (1), 2 Jiwa Khan v. Lakhmi Chand (2) and 3 Ariyapulhira Padayachi v. Mulhukumarasawmy Padayachi (3) and has distinguished Ram Narayn Rai v. Ram Devi Rai (4).

No. 1 is a judgment of the Punjab Chief Court by Mr. Justice Rattigan who held that the sale of the equity of redemption which had been previously sold did not amount to adverse possession because the vendor had no rights left to him which he could sell subsequently and, therefore, the subsequent sale was a mere nullity in law.

No. 2 is a judgment of a Division Bench of the Punjab Chief Court in which it was held that, where a mortgagee has once got possession of the mortgaged property as mortgagee he cannot alter the nature of his possession by a mere assertion or by a wrongful decree or by getting himself recorded in the register of mutations, nor can the original character of the possession as mortgagee be changed by the assertion of an absolute purchase of the property unless the alleged purchase is valid and binding.

In No. 3 it was held that a mortgagee in possession as such cannot by merely asserting possession as owner under an invalid sale convert his possession into adverse possession so as to prescribe for a title under the Limitation Act.

According to these authorities, the plea of adverse possession advanced by Sher Muhammad was futile and in Lalla Kanhoo Lal v. Musammatt Manki Bibi (5) was distinguished in Mohan Lal v. Bhagu Shah (1) and 2 Putappa v. Timmaji (6) and 3 Hutdar Khan v. Gajadhar Chaube (7) cited by his Counsel are not to the point and can be of no avail to him.

As regards the specific plea that Sher Muhammad's possession was adverse with regard to the $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share of Fazal Muhammad and $\frac{1}{3}$ rd share of the two out of the four sons of Jia Khan, it is sufficient to state that the mortgage was an indivisible transaction according to its terms and, therefore, any one of the co-mortgagees could not obtain adverse possession of a particular share in it by lapse of time. The mortgagors could only redeem the whole of the mortgage by payment of the whole of the mortgage-money irrespective of the shares of the co-mortgagee inter se. The money contributed by each mortgagee was not stated in the mortgage-deed. Further, as Sher Muhammad took the place of each co-mortgagee whom he paid off, he did so as co-mortgagee and thus his possession in his place was that of a mortgagee only and not in any other capacity. Therefore, the plea fails and we hold that Sher Muhammad's possession was not adverse to the real purchaser of the equity of redemption.

Accordingly, we accept the appeal and set aside the order of the lower Appellate Court and remand the case for decision of the remaining points in dispute which were not disposed of by it. Stamps on the memorandum of appeal will be refunded and other costs in this Court of the plaintiffs-appellants will be paid by Sher Muhammad, respondent.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(5) 6 C. W. N. 601.

(6) 14 B. 176; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 576.

(7) 25 Ind. Cas. 600; 17 O. C. 294.

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 513; 252 P. W. R. 1912.

(2) 11 Ind. Cas. 429; 146 P. W. R. 1911; 232 P. L. R. 1911.

(3) 15 Ind. Cas. 343; 37 M. 423; 12 M. L. T. 425; 23 M. L. J. 339; (1912) M. W. N. 854.

(4) 63 Ind. Cas. 282; 6 P. L. J. 680; (1922) Pat. 429; (1923) A. L. R. (Pat.) 98.

BIDHI CHAND v. KACHHU MAL.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 261 OF 1922.

March 29, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and

Mr. Justice Daniels.

Choudhry BIDHI CHAND—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KACHHU MAL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 30—Wagering contract—Collateral contract, whether enforceable.

Section 30 of the Contract Act does not prevent a person who is employed as agent in connection with wagering contracts from recovering sums due to him by his principal.

Shibho Mal v. Lachman Das, 23 A. 165; A. W. N. (1901) 33 and Jagat Narain v. Sri Kishen Das, 8 Ind. Cas. 783; 33 A. 219; 7 A. L. J. 1146, followed.

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Aligarh, dated the 3rd December 1921.

Messrs. Gulzari Lal and G. Agarwala, for the Appellant.

Dr. S. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a claim brought by the plaintiff Bidhi Chand for certain sums paid by him for brokerage and commission in connection with certain forward contracts for the sale of cotton seeds, etc., which he entered into as commission agent on behalf of the defendants. His case was that the defendants were to deliver the goods to him for sale to third parties on forward dates; that the defendants failed to supply the goods, and that he had to compensate the buyers for the loss. The suit has been dismissed by both the Courts below on the ground that the contracts were wagering contracts which are illegal under section 30 of the Indian Contract Act. It is not disputed that the contracts were wagering contracts. The plaintiff appeals on the ground that section 30 does not prevent a person who is employed as agent in connection with wagering contract from recovering sums due to him by his principal. In support of this plea the rulings in Shibho Mal v. Lachman Das (1) and Jagat Narain v. Sri Kishen Das (2) have been cited. It is not disputed on behalf of the respondents that these rulings support the plea of the appellant and that the law is as laid down in those rulings. The respondents contend, however, that there is a finding of fact of the lower Appellate Court in their favour that the plaintiff has failed to prove that he sold the goods on the defendants' account but that, in the opinion of the Court below, he sold them on his own account. We are of opinion that this cannot be treated as a finding of fact fatal to the appeal for the short and simple reason that no issue on this point was ever framed and no such case was set up by the defendants when the case went to trial. No doubt, the defendants in their original written statement denied that the plaintiff ever acted as commission agent for them and denied that any of the transactions relied on were entered into by the plaintiff on their behalf. This position was, however, materially modified by statements made by the Pleaders of the parties under O. X, r. r, of the Code of Civil Procedure, at the time of settlement of issues. In those statements it was admitted by both parties that there were two transactions, which are the transactions in suit, which were entered into by the plaintiff on account of the defendants. One of them was for 1300 bags and there was a dispute as to the amount of the other, the plaintiff alleging that it was for 1300 bags and the defendant that it was for 600 bags only. This is clearly set out in the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge who says that it is admitted by both parties that there were only two contracts, one in Katik Sambat 1974 and the other in Oghan Sambat 1974 as to the amount of which there was a dispute. The issues framed by the learned Subordinate Judge were three in number. First, whether the contracts were of a wagering nature. Second, whether the first of the two contracts, was barred by time, and, third, whether the second contract was for 1300 bags or for 600 bags.

No issue was raised at all as to the position of the plaintiff as agent for the defendants. The learned District Judge states in his judgment that he had received very little assistance from the Bar in deciding the appeal and he evidently found some difficulty in appreciating the position of the parties. The sentence on which the respondents rely would seem to be based on a misunderstanding of a sentence of the Trial Court. The learned Subordinate Judge had said that, because it was a wagering transaction and no goods were to be delivered so the plaintiff did not enter into contracts in the defendants' name but on his own account, i.e., in his own name. It is clear on the admission of the parties that the plaintiff was not the principal in the disputed transactions but was acting as the agent of the defendants. The result is that, under the rulings already referred to, the decree of the Court below must be and it hereby is set aside and the case remanded under O. XII, r. 23 to the lower Appellate Court for decision of the remaining issues. Costs here and heretofore will abide the result. Costs in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

(1) 23 A. 165; A. W. N. (1901) 33.

(2) 8 Ind. Cas. 783; 33 A. 219; 7 A. L. J. 1146.

NATARAJA MUDALIAR v. RAMASWAMI MUDALIAR.

D. M.

*Appeal allowed.
Case remanded.*

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 62 1920.

April 21, 1922.

Present:—Sir Walter Schwabe, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter.

A. NATARAJA MUDALIAR—

DEFENDANT No. 6—APPELLANT

versus

D. P. RAMASWAMI MUDALIAR AND

OTHERS PLAINTIFFS AND

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 66—Auction-purchase by Hindu manager decree-holder with family funds—Properties benami in name of third person—Suit by other members if barred.

Section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not bar a suit by a member of a joint family for recovering property bought in Court-auction out of joint family money in the name of some third person benami by the managing member who was himself the decree-holder. Such a purchase is not a purchase made "on behalf of" all the members of the family within the meaning of section 66.

Bajjnath Das v. Bishen Devi, 63 Ind. Cas. 676; 19 A. L. J. 787; 3 U. P. L. R. (A) 147; 43 A. 711 dissented from.

Suraj Narain v. Ratan Lal, 40 Ind. Cas. 988; 40 A. 159; 21 C. W. N. 1065; 20 O. C. 211; 2 P. L. W. 160; 33 M. L. J. 180; 15 A. L. J. 685; 19 Bom. L. R. 737; 22 M. L. T. 121; 26 C. L. J. 267; 6 L. W. 509; (1917) M. W. N. 477; 4 O. L. J. 762; 44 I. A. 201 (P. C.), distinguished.

Bodh Singh Doodhooria v. Ganesh Chunder Sen, 12 B. L. R. 317 (P. C.); 19 W. R. 356; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 253, relied on.

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri, dated the 16th March 1920, passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court in Civil Suit No. 226 of 1918.

Mr. A. Viswanatha Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. Krishnamachariar, P. R. Ramakrishna Aiyar, V. Chellamiah and N. Viswanatha Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Schwabe, C. J.—The first plaintiff's father having a decree against the owners of some house property in Madras, brought that property to sale in execution. Without obtaining the leave of the Court to bid, he bought it himself using for that purpose the joint family money, and, in order to conceal this fraud on the Court, he bought it in the name of the 6th defendant. This is the case of the plaintiffs and of some of the defendants. That has been found by the learned Judge, who saw the witnesses and examined the facts obviously with the greatest care, to be the truth and I can find no ground for interfering with that finding of fact.

The first plaintiff with his sons, the second and the third plaintiffs, joining as defendants the other members of the joint family has brought this suit for partition, and he claims that part of the joint family property to be brought in and divided in the partition consists of this house property standing in the name of the 6th defendant, and he brings in the 6th defendant to, have that case decided. The 6th defendant resists that claim setting up, firstly, as a fact, that the plaintiff's case is not true at all, that he never was a benamidar or nominee of the first plaintiff's father which, as I have pointed out, has not been accepted as the fact, and, secondly, he says that in law, although he is not entitled to this property, it is not open to the plaintiffs in this case to recover it from him by reason of section 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908; and it is on the proper interpretation of that section, and that section only, that this case must turn.

NATARAJA MUDALIAR v. RAMASWAMI MUDALIAR.

Before the passing of that section, there was in existence section 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. The terms of that section were:—

"No suit shall be maintained against the certified purchaser (which means the certified purchaser who has purchased the property at Court-auction) on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of any other person, or on behalf of some one through whom such other person claims."

There was very soon a conflict of authorities as to the meaning of that section and I think it may be stated that the Madras view, established first of all in Natesa Ayyar v. Venkatramayyan (1) and followed in Krishna Aiyar v. Raghavaiyan (2) and Minakshi Ammal v. Kalianarama Rayer (3), was that there was nothing in that section to prevent a member of a joint family from recovering the property which has been bought out of the joint family money in the name of some person benami at a Court-auction by the managing member of the family, he himself being the decree-holder. A different view was taken in Allahabad, and the matter came before the Privy Council in Suraj Narain v. Ratan Lal (4); and in that case there is no doubt that the Privy Council supported the view contrary to the view taken in Madras, though it is worth observing that there seems to have been very little discussion on the matter and the Madras cases do not seem to have been cited. If, however, the matter stood there, I should find great difficulty in distinguishing that case as was done by the learned Judge below; but that case was tried when the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 was in operation and it is a decision under section 317 of that Code. After that case, or rather after the first hearing of that case, section 66 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 was introduced and that altered the law very materially, because now the only prohibition is contained in these words:—

"No suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of some one through whom the plaintiff claims."

The obvious alteration is that now the penal provision is confined to purchases on behalf of a plaintiff or persons through whom he claims, whereas before it was wide enough, on one interpretation of it, to cover purchases on behalf of any other person. I should think that that alteration was made because, on what I may call the Allahabad interpretation, there might be an injustice. For it would follow that infants, whose father using the infants' property entered into such a transaction would be deprived, though perfectly innocent themselves, of their family property, and that it would remain in the hands of a benami-dar. It was, therefore, desirable that the inability to enforce rights should be restricted to the person who was guilty of the act which was looked upon as an illegal act. It is argued in this case that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff and that the real meaning of that clause is that, if a managing member makes a purchase and for that purchase uses the money of the family, he is making that purchase on behalf of all the members of the family. Unless I were driven to an interpretation which would have the results which, as I have already stated, in my view it was the desire to prevent, I should be very loath to come to such a conclusion; but in my judgment it is quite unnecessary, because I do not think that a managing member buying property using family funds for that purpose can be properly said, within the meaning of that section, to buy on behalf of other members of the family. He is doing something wholly wrong. It cannot

(1) 6 M. 155; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373.

(2) 9 M. L. J. 298.

(3) 20 M. 349; 7 M. L. J. 213; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 248.

(4) 40 Ind. Cas. 988; 40 A. 159; 21 C. W. N. 1065; 20 O. C. 211; 2 P. L. W. 160; 33 M. L. J. 180; 15 A. L. J. 684; 19 Bom. L. R. 737; 22 M. L. T. 121; 26 C. L. J. 267; 6 L. W. 509; (1917) M. W. N. 4771; 4 O. L. J. 742; 44 I. A. 201 (P. C.).

NATARAJA MUDALIAR v. RAMASWAMI MUDALIAR.

be right for him to take the family money and put it into property in such circumstances that, if the man who lends his name chooses to behave in the way that this 6th defendant has behaved, the family would be deprived of the property. I can see no distinction between the case of a co-parcener and the case of a partner. Where partnership money is used for a benami transaction of that kind, it would follow, if the interpretation suggested of the section is right, that the innocent partner would lose his property. In my judgment, this is not the meaning of that section.

The learned Judge also relies on the proviso to that section and there is a great deal to be said in favour of his interpretation of the proviso, but in the view that I have expressed of the section itself, it is unnecessary to decide anything in respect of the proviso. I am aware that in coming to this conclusion I am taking a different view to that taken in Bajinath Dās v. Bishen Devi (5). It is enough to say that I do not agree with that decision or with the reasoning on which it is based. I think the Court in that case gave much too wide a meaning to the words in section 66 (1) "made on behalf of the plaintiff".

Therefore, in my judgment this appeal fails and must be dismissed with costs. This is a proper case for two sets of costs to be allowed, one for the plaintiffs and the other for the defendants Nos. 7 to 9. The reason being that the interests of some of the infant defendants might have been quite different to the interests of the plaintiffs and on one head of the argument which has been addressed to us was different.

Coutts Trotter, J.—I am of the same opinion. It was established by the case of Bodh Singh Doodhooia v. Ganesh Chunder Sen (6) that the sections of the Code which were designed to punish a person who puts his property in the name of the benamidar were not to be applied to the case where one member of a joint family gets property in his name and the rest of the family seek to enforce their rights against that property standing in his name. The words of the Privy Council at page 330 were these:—

"Their Lordships think that they cannot be taken to affect the rights of members of a joint Hindu family, who by the operation of law, and not by virtue of any private agreement or understanding, are entitled to treat as part of their common property an acquisition, howsoever made, by a member of the family in his sole name, if made by the use of the family funds."

It is obvious that under Hindu Law it is natural and appropriate to regard members of a family as being in possession on behalf of the family, so that possession would enure to the family as a whole rather than to him in the character of benamidar or nominee which is quite alien to the conception of the relation of one member of a Hindu family to another. Further, their Lordships held in that case that the section of the old Code did not apply to a case where the alleged benamidar was himself a member of the undivided family.

The next case is where the person put in as benamidar was not a member of the undivided family but a nominee chosen by the head of the family, and the question arose whether the Code prohibited the members of the undivided family not concerned in the transaction from asserting their rights in the property or whether they were precluded from doing so by the section. In this Presidency, the cases, in my opinion, with one possible exception, have shown a consistent course of decision. It began with the case of Natesa Ayyar v. Venkatramayyan (1) and Krishna Aiyar v. Ragha-vaiyan (2). There is a dictum, for it has been analysed by other Courts and, in my opinion, rightly pronounced to be nothing more in, Rama Kurup v. Sridevi (7) which seems to go the other way. But, on the whole, the current of decisions in this Court has been uniform that the proposition which the case in Bodh Singh Doodhooia v. Ganesh Chunder Sen (6) laid down where the property stood in the name of a member of the family, was equally applicable when the nominee

(5) 63 Ind. Cas. 676; 19 A. L. J. 787; 3 U. P. L. R. (A) 147; 43 A. 711.

(6) 12 B. L. R. 317; 19 W. R. 356; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 253 (P. C.).

(7) 16 M. 290; 2 M. L. J. 173; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 909.

NATARAJA MUDALIAR v. RAMASWAMI MUDALIAR.

was a stranger, provided that members of the family were merely seeking to enforce their claim to what they alleged to be the undivided family property or the proceedings of the money belonging to the undivided family. It cannot be denied that there is in the Allahabad Court a direct decision the other way, the case of Bajinath Das v. Bishen Devi (5) which has been referred to by my Lord. The reasoning is not difficult to follow. The property is put in the name of the benamidar, both in the Allahabad case and in the case before us, by the managing member of the family, and it is said that that is the act, under the Hindu Law, of the whole family and, therefore, the prohibition, which undoubtedly would extend to the managing member himself who carried out the transaction, must equally apply to the whole of the family on whose behalf he acts or purports to act. The answer appears to me to be that whatever the rule may have been under the section of the old Code, under the section of the present Code, section 66 (1), that result does not follow. In my opinion, the plaintiff in this suit and in similar suits is not seeking to enforce rights against the benamidar as his trustee, but he is following into the hands of the benamidar whose position as a trustee he ipso facto repudiates, a portion of the proceeds of what he alleges and has proved to be the ancestral estate in which he has a share and of which he is entitled to partition and severance of his own share. I am, therefore, of opinion that it cannot be said that the purchase at the sale of this property was a purchase made on behalf of the plaintiff. The managing member when he put in a benamidar knew that he was disobeying the Court, knew that he was putting a benamidar in a position to set up claims in derogation of the rights of his own family and of his co-parceners and, in such circumstances, it seems impossible to say that the purchase was made on behalf of this plaintiff within the meaning of section 66 (1) of the Code.

There only remains the difficulty created by a stray sentence in Suraj Narain v. Ratan Lal (4). It is suggested by my brother Kumaraswami Sastri, J., that it may be that the items of the property in question may have been in the same category as the other properties, namely, gifts made to the son-in-law not as a benefaction to be held for the donor but as an advancement in life by way of gift. However, that does not appear from the report and I think the simplest method of dealing with that is to say, as my Lord has said, that the Allahabad case is dealing with a situation governed by the words of the old Code and that differentiation in wording effected by the new Code is sufficient to distinguish the observation of their Lordships in that case and not to make it not applicable to the present case.

With regard to the two other points that were argued as to the complicity of the first plaintiff to the transaction itself, the material put forward in support of that, to my mind, is quite unsubstantial. It amounts to no more than that he recorded the transaction in the family account books and it does not in the least follow that he appreciated exactly what was done, much less that he took an active and consenting part in it.

Finally, it was argued that not only was the first plaintiff completely aware of what was done but that in truth the 6th defendant was not a benamidar at all and he was never intended to be, but he was the real purchaser and had an independent right to the properties put up at Court auction. With regard to that, the learned Judge, who heard all the witnesses and discussed and weighed their evidence very carefully, has come to the conclusion with which I entirely agree, that there is no evidence worth the name to support the suggestion that the 6th defendant had an independent right over these properties.

I agree that the appeal fails and that it must be dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

BEHARI LAL V. NASIMANNESSA BIBI.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No.

2151 OF 1920.

November 14, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee,
Kt., and Mr. Justice Rankin.

BEHARI LAL BISWAS—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NASIMANNESSA BIBI—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Tender of rent—Amount not including interest on arrears—Tender, refusal of—Tender and appropriation—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 55, effect of—Putni Regulation (VIII of 1819), s. 8 (2)—Proceedings for realization of arrears of rent, nature of—Service of notice on defaulter.

A landlord is not bound to accept the principal amount of rent when the interest due thereon is not tendered in full. As the principal and interest constitute one indivisible and entire claim, the landlord is entitled to refuse a tender by which what is due as rent is transmitted but what is remitted as the entire amount due on account of interest on rent, cesses and interest on cesses is less than what is legally due. [p. 487, cols. 1 & 2.]

A creditor is not bound to accept less than his whole debt, and there can be no valid tender of a part of an entire and indivisible debt. But, though a tender of a smaller amount than that of which an indivisible and entire claim consists will be invalid as a tender there is nothing to prevent the creditor from accepting the amount tendered in part payment, and his doing so will not preclude him from afterwards claiming the residue of his account, always provided that the debtor did not make it a condition of his tender that it be accepted in discharge of the whole. [p. 486, col. 2.]

The cause of action where principal and interest thereon are both due, is only one, so that if the creditor sued to recover only the interest he could not sue to recover the principal and subsequent interest in a second suit. [p. 487, col. 2.]

A tender must be unconditional, or, at all events, free from any condition to which the creditor may rightfully object. [p. 487, col. 2.]

Section 55 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was not intended to abrogate the ordinary rule that a creditor cannot be compelled to accept any sum in part satisfaction of his dues. Section 55 refers not to the right of a debtor to make a part-payment, but to the appropriation of a payment when accepted by the landlord; in other words, section 55 treats, not of tender but of appropriation. [p. 488, col. 1.]

Proceedings under the Putni Regulation, taken for the realisation of arrears of putni rent, are not taken against persons at all, but against the tenure; and the Zemindar is quite right in setting out in his petition and notices the name of the putni and the name of the putnidar as recorded in his books. The Regulation does not contemplate service of notice upon the defaulters personally. The proceeding is thus throughout against the tenure, and the mere fact that in the application to the Collector, the Zemindar mentions the names of one or two of the parties in possession, though not registered in his books, and omits to mention the names of others, does not in any way vitiate the sale or render the proceedings invalid. [p. 489, col. 1.]

It is incumbent on persons who acquire an interest in a putni tenure by succession to get themselves registered in the books of the landlord. If they fail to take the necessary steps and at the same time make default in the payment of rent, they cannot very well be heard to assail the legality of a sale under the Putni Regulation on the ground that their names were not mentioned in the application to the Collector. [p. 489, col. 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Nadia, dated the 20th July 1920, affirming that of the Munsif, First Court, at Krishnagar, dated the 13th June 1919.

Babu Tarakeswar Pal Choudhury (with him Babus Atul Chandra Gupta and Nirmal Chandra Chatterjee), for the Appellant.—The plaintiff is the appellant. The appeal arises out of a suit to set aside a putni sale on the ground that the arrears were not due. The plaintiff was the owner of a subordinate tenure under the putnidar, named Majidunnessa. In 1909 the putni was sold to the present defendant. It appears that the dar-putnidar is trying his best to pay the rents. In 1321 again the putni was put up for sale. The plaintiff paid the rent by depositing it under section 62 of the Putni Regulation. The putni was ultimately sold in 1916. The present suit was brought on the 27th of May 1916. Both the Courts below have dismissed the suit on the ground that the amount of tender and deposit was insufficient. There were the putni rent, interest and cesses. We sent them by separate money orders through the Post Office. The Courts below held that the interests were insufficient. The interest was at the rate of 12 per cent. The Court held that under section 67, Bengal Tenancy Act, I ought to have paid interest at the rate of 12½ per cent. In the kabuliyat the provision was that the interest was to be paid in accordance with law at the end of each month. I submit if I am to pay interest according to law then I am entitled to pay interest at the end of each quarter. I submit the sale was illegal. The tender of rent and interest thereon was quite sufficient. The insufficiency of the cesses does not affect the sale. My next point is that the Court-fee paid on the plaint was Rs. 10. The suit was for a declaration that the sale was illegal. The Court below held that it ought to be treated as a suit for setting aside sale. We are ready to pay ad valorem Court-fees. As regards the insufficiency of the cess see section 47 of the Cess Act; Gujraj Sahai v. Secretary of State for India in Council (1). In that case it has been held that a putni cannot be sold for arrears of cesses. Nothing is rent which does not satisfy the definition of rent. See section 3 (5), Bengal Tenancy Act; Jotindra Mohun Tagore v. Jarao Kumari (2). I sent two postal money orders on the 1st Kartic 1322 (1) for Rs. 600 as rent of the putni from Baisakh to Aswin and (2) for Rs. 47-0-9. See Dixon v. Clark (3); James v. Vane (4). For on Landlord and Tenant (5th Edition) 547. The first deposit was made on 4th Agrahayan 1322 and the second in Baisakh. These deposits were made in respect of the money orders which were refused. See Jotindra Mohun Tagore v. Jarao Kumari (2), Bhagabati Debya v. Basanta Kumari Debi (5), section 14, Regulation VIII of 1819. The Regulation does not mention interest. See Gulam Sattar v. Prodyat Kumar Tagore (6), Narendra Kumar Ghose v. Gora Chand Poddar (7), Manahar Mukherjee v. Khetra Nath Sabui (8).

BEHARI LAL V. NASIMANNESSA BIBI.

Babu Ramchandra Majumdar (with him Babu Bijan Kumar Mukerjee), for the Respondent—So far as the second money order goes the landlord is not bound to accept it. The amount of cess paid was less than what was due. The tender must be of such a character as to enable the person to whom it is made, to appropriate it for the purpose. As regards interest, admittedly it was due on that date according to the terms of the kabuliyat. The question is whether it was proper tender. I submit it was not. See Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narain Bagchi (9). At the close of the year they sent another money order. Refers to section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819. I submit, therefore, no question of law would arise. Refers to Assanulla Khan v. Tirthabashini (10). As to the next point as to the validity of tender I submit there was no valid tender at all.

[Mookerjee, J.—How does section 55 of the Bengal Tenancy Act modify the ordinary law?]

Of course the landlord is not bound to accept the rent in acquittance of the entire rent. He is bound to accept part payment. In the present case there was no part payment at all.

[Mookerjee, J.—Is the landlord bound to accept rent only excluding interest thereon to be taken thereafter?]

I submit no. Rent includes interest. The landlord is bound to accept payment in part. Section 55 applies only where he accepts payment.

[Mookerjee, J.—But is he bound to accept?]

No. Section 55 does not entitle the tenant to make a part payment. Leaving aside the question of cesses, I submit there being no valid tender, the sale cannot be set aside. As regards rate of interest section 67 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply inasmuch as there are monthly kists in the present case. Here the contract was before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act. See Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Jagadindra Nath Roy (11).

[Mookerjee, J.—If you exclude section 67 how can you claim interest?]

The lease provides for payment of interest according to law. The Legislature intended that in such cases the interest should be

(1) 17 C. 414; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 815.
 (2) 33 C. 140; 3 C. L. J. 7; 10 C. W. N. 201; 1 M. L. T. 8; 33 I. A. 30 (P. C.).
 (3) (1847) 5 C. B. 365; 75 R. R. 747; 5 D. & L. 155; 16 L. J. C. P. 237; 136 E. R. 919.
 (4) (1860) 2 El. & El. 883; 119 R. R. 988; 29 L. J. Q. B. 169; 6 Jur. (N. S.) 731; 2 L. T. (N. S.) 281; 8 W. R. 446; 121 E. R. 330.
 (5) 11 C. W. N. 110; 5 C. L. J. 69.
 (6) 51 Ind. Cas. 933; 29 C. L. J. 481.
 (7) 33 C. 683; 3 C. L. J. 391.
 (8) 19 Ind. Cas. 625; 17 C. W. N. 820; 18 C. L. J.
 175.

(9) 21 Ind. Cas. 750; 41 C. 493 at p. 513; 40 I. A. 223; 19 C. L. J. 95; 18 C. W. N. 66; (1914) M. W. N. 1; 15 M. L. T. 68; 26 M. L. J. 25; 16 Blm. L. R. 42 (P. C.).

(10) 22 C. 680; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 453.
 (11) 22 C. 214 at p. 221; 21 I. A. 131; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 473; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 144 (P. C.).

BEHARI LAL V. NASIMANNESSA BIBI.

paid at 12½ per cent. My next point is that there is no prayer to set aside the sale in the plaint. The suit is not maintainable under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. The learned Judge also comes to a clear finding on the point.

Babu Tarakeshwar Pal Choudhury in reply.—It is not a plain suit for a declaratory decree. The plaint is headed as a suit for setting aside a sale under section 14 of Regulation VIII of 1819. The plaint, no doubt, was inartistically drawn up. In substance the suit was really one for setting aside a sale. The Court-fee was, no doubt, insufficient. As regards payment under section 55 I submit the landlord is bound to receive it. Refers to section 56, Bengal Tenancy Act. As regards payment of interest according to law there was no law for the time being in force. See Ahsanulla Khan Bahadur v. Haricharan Mozumdar (12).

JUDGMENT.—The subject-matter of this litigation is a putni taluk created on the 31st December 1844 by Maharaja Srish Chandra Deb of Nadia in favour of Kaligatee Mookerjee. The interest of the Zemindar is now held by Nasimannessa Bibi, the defendant in this suit, while the interest of the putnidar has, by devolution, vested in Majidannessa Bibi. The plaintiff Behari Lal Biswas is a dar-putnidar who obtained possession of the putni in 1909, under the provisions of section 13 of the Putni Regulation, on payment of the dues of the then Zemindar, and he has since then been in occupation in order to recover the amount advanced by him. On the 15th May 1916 the putni taluk was brought to sale by the Zemindar for realisation of arrears due and was purchased by the Zemindar herself. On the 27th May 1916, the plaintiff instituted the present suit for declaration that the sale was null and void, inasmuch as no arrears were due at that time. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that rent was in arrears, and that decision has been affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. On the present appeal, the plaintiff has urged that there had been a valid tender of the sums due, which had been improperly refused by the landlord. The facts material for the determination of the question of law thus raised are really not in controversy and may be briefly recited at this stage.

On the 18th October 1915, the plaintiff sent to the defendant a sum of Rs. 647-0-9 through the Post Office, by what is known as rent-money order. As under the rules of the Postal Department the maximum amount which can be remitted by a single money order is Rs. 600, the amount mentioned was included in two money orders one for Rs. 600, the other for Rs. 47-0-9. The money order for Rs. 600 stated that the amount was remitted as rent due on the putni for the six months from Baisakh to Aswin 1322. The money order for Rs. 47-0-9 stated that Rs. 10-8-0 was interest on rent in arrears, Rs. 35-13-9 was road and public works cesses, and annas 11 was interest due on cesses. The money orders were tendered to the defendant by the Postal peon and were refused. On the 22nd November 1915, the plaintiff deposited the amount in Court under section 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. On the 6th April 1916, the plaintiff sent to the defendant Rs. 654-2-0 by rent-money order. There were two money orders as on the previous occasion, namely, one for Rs. 600 and the other for Rs. 54-2-0. The money order for Rs. 600 stated that the amount remitted was rent due for the six months from Kartik to Chait 1322. The money order for Rs. 54-2-0 stated that Rs. 17-4-3 was interest in rent in arrears, Rs. 35-13-9 was road and public works cesses, and annas 6 was interest on cesses. The money orders were taken to the defendant by the Postal peon but were refused. On the 18th April 1916, the plaintiff deposited the sum in Court under section 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The question in controversy is, whether there was a valid tender on either or both of the occasions mentioned. The defendant urges that what was tendered on each occasion was really less than the amount actually due and did not constitute a valid tender.

The putni lease fixed the annual rent at Rs. 1,200, payable in twelve monthly instalments, namely, Rs. 50 in Baisakh, Rs. 50 in Jaistha, Rs. 50 in Assar, Rs. 100 in Saravan (12) 20 C. 86; 19 I. A. 191; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 252; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 58 (P. C.).

BEHARI LAL V. NASIMANNESSA BIBI.

Rs. 250 in Bhadra, Rs. 100 in Aswin, Rs. 100 in Kartik, Rs. 100 in Aghrayan, Rs. 200 in Pous, Rs. 100 in Magh, Rs. 60 in Falgun and Rs. 40 in Chaitra. The lease contained a covenant that on default of payment of the instalments, the lessee would pay interest according to law. It was further provided that on default, the rights and interests of the lessee would be sold under Regulation VIII of 1819 in order that the arrears of rent with interest might be realised. It is plain from the terms of the lease that Rs. 600 was the aggregate amount of rent in arrears for the first half of the year ending in Aswin and another sum of Rs. 600 the aggregate amount of rent in arrears for the second half of the year ending in Chait. Consequently, when on the 18th October 1915, the plaintiff sent to the defendant the sum of Rs. 647-0-9 by rent-money order the rent in arrears was Rs. 600 as correctly stated in the first money order, the question in controversy is, whether Rs. 10-8-0 was the amount of interest due on rent in arrears; Rs. 35-13-9 the amount due on account of cesses, and annas eleven the amount due as interest on cesses in arrears. The Courts below have answered this question against the plaintiff. The three items require separate examination.

The putni lease, as already stated, provided that in the event of default in the payment of rent according to the prescribed instalments, the lessee would pay interest according to law. This clearly refers to the law that might prevail at the time when the default should be made and the liability to pay interest might accrue. Regulation XV of 1793, which was repealed by Act VIII of 1868, fixed the maximum rate of interest on money due at twelve per cent. per annum subject to the reservation that interest would be decreed at a lower rate if so stipulated between the parties. The Regulation further provided that the amount decreed as interest would not exceed the principal sum, and that compound interest would not be allowed on intermediate adjustments of accounts. These provisions were reproduced in Regulation XXXIV of 1803 which was repealed by Act XV of 1874. Regulation VIII of 1805, which was repealed by Act XIX of 1873, and Regulation XIV of 1805 which was repealed by Act XII of 1876, contained similar provisions, and their application was extended by Regulation XVII of 1806 which was repealed by Act IV of 1882. These were followed by Act XXXII of 1839 which authorised the Courts to allow interest, in certain specified cases, at a rate not exceeding the current rate of interest. Next came Act XXVIII of 1855 which repealed the Usury Laws. Under section 21 of Act X of 1859 (Bengal Rent Act), interest was made payable on arrears of rent at 12 per cent. per annum from the date of each instalment, to a similar effect was the provision in section 21 of Act VIII of 1869 B. C. and this was reproduced in section 67 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885. The law was altered, however, by Act I of 1907 (B. C.) and Act I of 1908 (B. B. & A. C.) and interest was made payable on arrears of rent at twelve-and-a-half per centum per annum. Section 67 thus modified stands as follows:

"An arrear of rent shall bear simple interest at the rate of twelve-and-a-half per centum per annum from the expiration of that quarter of the agricultural year in which the instalment falls due, to the date of payment or of the institution of the suit, whichever date is earlier." This has to be read with section 53 which provides that "subject to agreement or established usage, a money rent payable by a tenant shall be paid in four equal instalments, falling due on the last day of each quarter of the agricultural year. The introductory words of the section indicate that there may be an agreement in modification of the provision for four instalments; Manahar Mukherjee v. Khetra Nath Sabui (8). The agreement for payment of rent in monthly instalments in the case before us, would, consequently be operative, even if section 53 had been in force when the lease was granted. The appellant has contended that this raises the question, how is section 67 affected by section 53; in other words, how has interest to be calculated under section 67 when the instalments are not quarterly but monthly; and we have been pressed to hold that even when the rent is payable in monthly instalments, interest should be calculated on each instalment, not from the date when it falls due, but from the last day of the quarter

BEHARI LAL V. NASIMANNESSA BIBI.

in which it falls due. In support of this proposition, reliance has been placed upon the decision of the Judicial Committee in Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Jagadindra Nath Roy (11) which was explained in Narendra Kumar Ghose v. Gora Chand Poddar (7) and Manohar Mukherjee v. Khetra Nath Sabui (8). We are of opinion that the contention thus broadly raised need not be examined for the purposes of this case. Here the contract was made before the sections 53 and 67 of the Bengal Tenancy Act were enacted. The agreement to pay rent in monthly instalments was valid when made, and its validity has not been affected by the retrospective operation of a subsequent Legislative enactment. The contract further provided that, in default of payment of rent according to monthly instalments, interest would be paid according to law. The law has fixed the rate of interest at twelve-and-a-half per centum per annum prima facie interest had to be calculated at this rate from the date of default and this is what was ruled by the Judicial Committee in Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Jagadindra Nath Roy (11). The decision of the Judicial Committee was in fact so interpreted in Narendra Kumar Ghose v. Gora Chand Poddar (7) and Manohar Mukherjee v. Khetra Nath Sabui (8). We are accordingly of opinion that interest in the present case was payable on rent in arrear, calculated from the date of each instalment; and there is no controversy that the amount remitted on account of interest on rent in arrears was less than what was due according to this method of calculation. As regards the amount of cesses, there is no controversy that what was remitted was less than what was due. The valuation roll dated 28th June 1914, makes it abundantly clear that the amount of cesses annually leviable had been enhanced by the Revenue Authorities. The amount remitted as interest on cesses was consequently also smaller than what was due. The position thus is that what was due as rent was transmitted, but what was remitted as the entire amount due on account of interest on rent, cesses, and interest on cesses was less than what was legally due. This raises the question whether there was a valid tender. The concurrent answer of the Courts below in favour of the respondent has been challenged before us as based on principles erroneous in law.

It is well settled that a creditor is not bound to accept less than his whole debt, and there can be no valid tender of part of an entire and indivisible debt; Dixon v. Clark (3); James v. Vane (4). But, though a tender of smaller amount than that of which an indivisible and entire claim consists, will be invalid as a tender, there is nothing to prevent the creditor from accepting the amount tendered in part payment, and his doing so will not preclude him from afterwards claiming the residue of his account, always provided that the debtor did not make it a condition of his tender that it be accepted in discharge of the whole; Bowen v. Owen (13). The import of the term "indivisible and entire claim which is used in this connexion, will be fully appreciated, when it is said that though there can be no valid tender of part if such a debt, yet where the debt is of a conglomerate nature, that is to say, where the components exhibit the character of distinct debts in themselves, a debtor may make a valid tender of any one of such several distinct debts. If at the time he makes the tender, he takes care to indicate the debt on account of which he makes the tender; but if, in making the tender, he fails to specify the particular one of the several debts to which he wishes the tender to apply, and the amount tendered by him is insufficient to cover all, it will not be good for any. Thus tender of enough to pay one of several distinct items in a bill, if offered in satisfaction of the whole, will not be a good tender in respect of either, though if it were specifically applied by the debtor to that one item at the time of payment, it would be a good tender in regard to that item, in spite of its being a unit. With reference to this, Coltman, J., observed in Hardingham v. Allen (14) "In order that a tender of one portion of a combined claim may be effective as regards that one portion, it must be specifically applied to that portion of it, or it does not sustain the tender." In the case before us, the amount due as arrears of rent was tendered in full, but what was tendered as the full amount due on account of interest on rent, cesses, and interest on cesses, was inadequate. We feel no doubt that the landlord was competent to refuse the tender so made.

(13) (1847) 11 Q. B. 130; 75 R. R. 306; 17 L. J. Q. B. 5; 11 Jur. 972; 116 E. R. 425.

(14) (1848) 5 C. B. 793; 75 R. R. 839; 17 L. J. C. P. 198; 12 Jur. 584; 136 E. R. 1091.

BEHARI LAL V. MASIMANNESHA BIBI.

The landlord was not bound to accept even the principal amount of rent, when the interest due thereon was not tendered in full. This is supported by the decision of the Judicial Committee in Bamundoss Mookerjee v. Omesh Chunder Ræe (15) where it was ruled that if principal as well as interest thereon is due, all payments should be applied in the first instance to interest, and thereafter to principal only in so far as those payments exceed the interest due. This was the rule recognised since 1809, in a long series of decisions of the Sadar Court, mentioned in the judgment of Bayley and Jackson, JJ., in Lootf Ally v. Guneshur (16) which was ultimately affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Luchmeswar Singh Bahadur v. Syud Lutf Ali Khan (17). See also Syed Lutf Ali Khan v. Afzuloonnissa Begum (18) which was reversed by the Judicial Committee in Syud Lootf Ali Khan v. Afzuloonnissa Begum (19). Again, in Meka Venkataradi Appa Row v. Raja Parthasarathy Appa Row (20), Lord Buckmaster reiterated the same view and relied upon the statement by Rigby, L. J., in Parr's Banking Company v. Yates (21) "where both principal and interest are due, the sums paid on account must be applied first to interest. That rule, where it is applicable, is only common justice. To apply the sums paid to principal where interest has accrued upon the debt, and is not paid, would be depriving the creditor of the benefit to which he is entitled under the contract." The substance of the matter is that, as pointed out by Lord Buckmaster in Muhammad Hafiz v. Mirza Muhammad Zakariya (22), the cause of action where principal and interest thereon are both due, is only one, so that if the creditor sues to recover only the interest, he cannot sue to recover the principal and subsequent interest in a second suit. The inference follows that in the present case the landlord was entitled to refuse the tender, because the principal and interest constituted one indivisible and entire claim, and the sum tendered was smaller than the amount really due. This is supported by the decision of the Judicial Committee in Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narain Bagchi (9). In that case, there were tenders in respect of rent and interest upon arrear of rent, based on an erroneous assumption as to the amount of rent payable. The amount really payable turned out to be larger than the assumed figure. It was ruled that the amounts tendered were not good tenders, either as tender of rent or of interest on arrears of rent, and were consequently ineffective.

We must further observe that the plaintiff not only tendered less than what was due, but tendered the insufficient amount for acceptance in full satisfaction of the claim of the landlord. A tender, however, must be unconditional, or at all events, free from any condition to which the creditor may rightfully object. The condition which the debtor is the most apt to impose is precisely the one which the law does not permit; the debtor has no right to insist that the creditor shall admit that no more is due than the sum tendered; Bowen v. Owen (13), see also Huxham v. Smith (23), Evans v. Judkins (24), Griffiths v. Hodges (25), Cheminant v. Thornton (26), Strong v. Harvey

(15) 6 M. L. A. 289; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 542; 19 E. R. 108.

(16) (1863) Sevestre 834a.

(17) 8 B. L. R. 110; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 700; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 461 (P. C.).

(18) 3 W. R. 113.

(19) 9 B. L. R. 348; 16 W. R. 20; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 701 (P. C.).

(20) 61 Ind. Cas. 31; 48 I. A. 150; 44 M. 570; 19 A. L. J. 465; 33 C. L. J. 447; 40 M. L. J. 549; 23 Bom. L. R. 644; (1921) M. W. N. 347; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 27; 14 L. W. 25; 26 C. W. N. 33; 30 M. L. T. 36; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 233 (P. C.).

(21) (1898) 2 Q. B. 460; 67 L. J. Q. B. 851; 47 W. R. 42; 79 L. T. 321.

(22) 65 Ind. Cas. 79; 49 I. A. 9135 C. L. J. 126; 20 A. L. J. 17; 26 C. W. N. 297; (1922) M. W. N. 89; 42 M. L. J. 248; 15 L. W. 377; 24 Bom. L. R. 341; 30 M. L. T. 224; 3 P. L. T. 279; 1 P. W. R. 1922; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 23; 44 A. 121 (P. C.).

(23) (1809) 2 Camp. 19; 11 R. R. 651.

(24) (1815) 4 Camp. 156.

(25) (1824) 1 Car. & P. 419.

(26) (1825) 2 Car. & P. 50.

BEHARI LAI, V. NASIMANNESSA BIBI.

(27); Finch v. Miller (28), whether a tender is in fact intended to be conditional or not may give rise to refined controversies, as is clear from numerous cases in the books; Mitchell v. King (29), Hough v. May (30), Sutton v. Hawkins (31), Hastings v. Thorley (32), Henwood v. Oliver (33), Bull v. Parker (34), Bowen v. Owen (13), Jones v. Bridgman (35). No such question, however, arises here, as it is not disputed that what was tendered was tendered as the full amount due and was intended to be accepted only in full satisfaction of the claim; from whatever point of view the question is approached, it thus follows that the tender was bad.

As the money tendered was not on account, but was in full satisfaction of the dues it is not necessary to consider, whether, even if the tender were expressly in part satisfaction of the claim, the landlord would be bound to accept it. We may add, however, that we did not feel impressed by the argument that section 55 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was intended to abrogate the ordinary rule, recognised in a long line of cases such as Cotton v. Godwin (36), Dixon v. Clark (3), Chunder Caunt v. Jodoonath Khan (37), Ram Kamlessuri Pershad Singh v. Sukhan Singh (38) and Bechu Singh v. Bichharam Sahu (39), namely, that a creditor cannot be compelled to accept any sum in part satisfaction of his dues. Section 55 appears to refer not to the right of a debtor to make a part payment, but to the appropriation of a payment when accepted by the landlord; in other words, section 55 treats, not of tender but of appropriation. We must accordingly hold, in concurrence with the Courts below, that there was no valid tender on the first occasion and the subsequent deposit under section 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was equally ineffectual. The tender on the second occasion followed by a deposit in Court is, for similar reasons, of no avail.

As a last resort, a faint attempt was made to invoke the aid of principle, recognised in some judicial decisions, namely, that an unconditional tender of a sum which turns out in the end to be less than what is really due may be valid pro tanto, if there is a genuine dispute as to the amount due; Bowen v. Owen (13), Read v. Goldring (40), Eckstein v. Reynolds (41), Henwood v. Oliver (33), Bull v. Parker (34), Greenwood v. Sutcliffe (42), Haji Abdul Rahman v. Haji Noor Mahomed (43) and Digambar Das v. Harendra Narain (44). This doctrine, even if it be assumed to have been left unaffected by the decision of the Judicial Committee in Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narain Bagchi (9), is of no assistance to the appellant. In the first place, the tender was not unconditional; in the second place, there was no substantial ground for dispute; the amount had been miscalculated because it overlooked that interest was payable at twelve-and-a-half instead of twelve per cent. and that the amount of cess leviable had been enhanced by the Revenue Authorities. The inference is thus irresistible that arrears were due and that the landlord was within her rights when she took recourse to the provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819.

It has finally been urged that the sale was bad, because the proceedings under the Regulation were carried on against the previous putnidar who was dead and whose name still stood on the books of the landlord. In our opinion, there is no substance

(27) (1825) 3 Bing. 304; 11 Moore 72; 4 L. J. (O. S.) C. P. 57; 130 E. R. 530.

(28) (1848) 5 C. B. 428; 75 R. R. 774; 136 E. R. 945.

(29) (1833) 6 Car. & P. 237; 40 R. R. 810.

(30) (1826) 4 A. & E. 954; 43 R. E. 530; 6 N. & M. 535; 2 H. & W. 33; 5 L. J. (N.S.) K. B. 186; 111 E. R. 1042.

(31) (1838) 8 Car. & P. 259.

(32) (1838) 8 Car. & P. 573.

(33) (1841) 1 Q. B. 409; 1 G. & D. 25; 10 L. J. Q. B. 158; 113 E. R. 1189; 55 R. R. 290.

(34) (1842) 2 Dow. (N. S.) 345; 12 L. J. Q. B. 93; 7 Jur. 282.

(35) (1878) 39 L. T. 500.

(36) (1840) 7 M. & W. 147; 9 D. P. C. 763; 10 L. J. Ex. 243; 151 E. R. 715.

(37) 3 C. 468; 1 C. L. R. 470; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 883.

(38) 7 C. W. N. 172.

(39) 1 Ind. Cas. 677; 10 C. L. J. 91 at p. 98.

(40) (1813) 2 M. & S. 86; 14 R. R. 594; 105 E. R. 314.

(41) (1837) 7 A. & E. 80; 2 N. & P. 256; 6 L. J. (N.S.) K. B. 198; 112 E. R. 401; 45 R. R. 676.

(42) (1892) 1 Ch. 1; 61 L. J. Ch. 59; 65 L. T. 797; 40 W. R. 214.

(43) 16 B. 141; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 570.

(44) 5 Ind. Cas. 165; 11 C. L. J. 226 at p. 234; 14 C. W. N. 617.

BELA SINGH v. BALI RAM.

in this contention. As was pointed out by Tottenham, J., in Rajnarain Mitra v. Ananta Lal Mondul (45) "proceedings under the Putni Regulation, taken for the realisation of arrears of putni rent, are not taken against persons at all, but against the tenure; and the Zemindar is quite right in setting out in his petition and notices the name of the putni and the names of the putnidars as recorded in his books." This view was not dissented from by Petheram, C. J., and Ghose, J., indeed, if a different view had been taken by them on this point, it would not have been necessary for them to examine the point which led to difference of opinion and consequent reference to a third Judge. We are not unmindful that in Golan Saitar v. Prodyat Kumar Tagore (6) Chatterjea, J., although conceding that the proceedings under the Regulation were taken against the putni tenure, did not feel inclined to hold that the tenure could be sold by taking proceedings against wrong persons. The question, however, did not actually arise for decision in the case. It may be noted that the Regulation does not contemplate service of notice upon the defaulter personally. The petition and notice mentioned in section 8 (2) are stuck up in some conspicuous part of the Kacheri of the Collector. A similar notice is stuck up at the Sadar Kacheri of the Zemindar himself, and a copy of extract of such part of the notice as may apply to the individual case, is sent to be similarly published at the Kacheri or at the principal town or village upon the land of the defaulter. The proceeding is thus throughout against the tenure, and the mere fact that in the application to the Collector, the Zemindar mentions the names of one or two of the parties in possession, though not registered in his books, and omits to mention the names of others, does not in any way vitiate the sale or render the proceedings invalid; Raghub Chunder Banerjee v. Brojonath Koondoo Chowdhry (46), Gyanada Kantho Roy Bahadur v. Bro momoyi Dassi (47), Saibesh Chandra v. Bono wari Mukunda (48). Putni taluks are made heritable by section 3 of Regulation

VIII of 1819 and it is incumbent on persons, who acquire an interest in a putni tenure by succession to get themselves registered in the books of the landlord under section 15 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. If they fail to take the necessary steps and at the same time make default in the payment of rent, they cannot very well be heard to assail the legality of a sale under the Regulation on the ground that their names were not mentioned in the application to the Collector; Durga Prosad Bundoopadhyaya v. Brindaban Roy (49), Khetter Mohan Pal v. Pran Kristo Kabiraj (50).

We are of opinion that the Courts below have rightly dismissed the suit and that this appeal must be dismissed with costs. The cross-objection has not been pressed by the respondent and is dismissed without costs.

Appeal dismissed.

B. N. Cross-objection dismissed.

(49) 19 C. 504; 9 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 780.

(50) 3 C. W. N. 371.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 408 OF 1922.

July 28, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Campbell.

BELA SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

BALI RAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Easement—Water, right to—Artificial water-course.

The right to water flowing through artificial water-courses is a right of easement and must rest on some grant or arrangement, either proved or presumed, from, or with the owners of the land from which the water is artificially brought, or on some legal origin. It is quite distinct from the natural right, which as a natural incident to the ownership of land, entitles prima facie each successive riparian proprietor to the unimpeded flow of water of a natural channel in its natural course, and to its reasonable enjoyment as it passes through his land." [P. 490, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ambala, dated 21st October 1921, affirming that of the Additional Munsif, Ambala, dated the 11th April 1921.

Mr. Rama Nand, for the Appellant.

Mr. Gullu Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts as found by the learned District Judge which have led to the present second appeal are these. The (45) 19 C. 703 at p. 717; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 911.

(46) 14 W. R. 489; 9 B. L. R. 91 n.

(47) 17 C. 162; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 647.

(48) 4 Ind. Cas. 371; 10 C. L. J. 453.

DELA SINGH V. BALI RAM.

plaintiff has been shown in the Revenue Records since 1888 as irrigating his fields from a certain kul or artificial water channel which runs through the defendant's lands. Shortly before suit, the defendants dammed the kul and proceeded to irrigate their own fields for the first time thereby decreasing materially the plaintiff's supply of water. The plaintiff sued for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from using the water of the kul and enjoining them to remove their dam and obtained a decree which was upheld on appeal by the District Judge.

The defendants have come to this Court on second appeal.

It was argued before the learned District Judge on behalf of the appellant that the plaintiff had failed to show that he had a right to control his actions. The learned District Judge found that though there might be customs regulating the use of water carried by this kul, neither their existence nor their nature had been proved or even pleaded, but he held that on principles of justice and equity the plaintiff's decree granted by the Trial Court should be affirmed. He cited Mangal Singh v. Hazara Singh (1) in support of this view and also a discussion on the rights of the use of water in Goddard's Law of Easements and two English cases referred to therein.

These authorities are distinguishable. In Mangal Singh v. Hazara Singh (1) which was an order passed on revision, a prominent reason for non-interference with the decree of the lower Appellate Court was a finding that a custom had been made out. The rights dealt with in the passages cited from Goddard's book were those of riparian proprietors in the water of natural streams. The essential difference between rights in the flow of water in natural stream and those in water carried by artificial water-course has been pointed out in Ram Kirpal Singh v. Hanuman Singh (2) and again by this Court in Nagina Singh v. Malhi (3) and is expressed lucidly as follows in Peacock's Law relating to Easements in British India, 2nd Edition, at page 112.

"The right to water flowing through artificial water-courses is a right of easement and must rest on some grant or arrangement, either proved or presumed, from, or with the owners of the land from which the water is artificially brought, or on some legal origin. It is quite distinct from the natural right, which is a natural incident to the ownership of land, entitles prima facie each successive riparian proprietor to the unimpeded flow of water of a natural channel in its natural course, and to its reasonable enjoyment as it passes through his land."

In the present instance the kul has been found to be an artificial water-course, and it has also been found that no easement or customary right enjoyed by the plaintiff has been proved. The plaintiff alleges only diminution of supply and not complete stoppage, so the entry in the Revenue Records since 1888 that the plaintiff's fields are irrigated by a kul does not help him.

The statement of the Patwari that the lands now irrigated by the defendants are not recorded in the revenue papers as irrigated and the facts that the defendants pleaded that they have commenced to irrigate by a panchayat decision and that they have been held to have failed to establish this plea do not help the plaintiff either. He has not proved that he has used the whole water of the kul as of right and he merely pleaded that he had used it for a very long time. Hence section 26 of the Limitation Act, on which his Counsel relies, does not avail him.

He has failed, in my opinion, to establish that he is legally entitled to the injunction sought and I, therefore, accept the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Courts and order that the suit be dismissed with costs throughout.

N. H.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 1015; 101 P. L. R. 1909; 153 P. W. R. 1909.

(2) 59 Ind. Cas. 929; 6 P. L. J. 6; 2 P. L. T. 122.

(3) 64 Ind. Cas. 158; 3 L. L. J. 555.

SANKARAN NAMBI V. DEVAKI ANTHERJENAM.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL, No. 353 OF 1920.

January 10, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Spencer and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

KOTASSERI EZHUTHASSAN VEETIL
SANKARAN NAMBI AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 24—APPELLANTS *versus*KANHOLIILLATHIL DEVAKI ANTHER-JENAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—PLAINTIFFS NOS. 2 TO 14 16, 17

AND 25 TO 31—RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11 O. XXXII, r. 2—Non-joinder of parties—Dismissal of suit—Res judicata—Malabar Law—Tarwad—Trusteeship—Minor, competency of—Uraima right, transfer of—Trust—Fraudulent introduction of stranger—Breach of trust.*Dismissal of a suit for non-joinder of parties does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties. [p. 493, col. 2.]

Explanation IV of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, deals with a case tried on the merits and does not apply to cases of dismissal for want of parties, non-payment of Court-fees or the like. [p. 493, col. 2.]

Where by mere inadvertence, no next friend is put in for one of the plaintiffs, who is a minor, but the defect is cured in the Appellate Court, there is no legal objection to the maintainability of the suit under O. XXXII, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 493, col. 2.]

A minor is not incompetent to be an Uralan of a Malabar Illom or Tarwad when the trusteeship belongs to it and the duties of the minor trustee may be performed by a properly constituted guardian. [p. 493, col. 2.]

Somasundara Mudaliar v. Vythilinga Mudaliar, 19 M. 285; 6 M. L. J. 92; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 904, Muthu Kumara Mudaliar v. Palaniappa Chettiar, 10 Ind. Cas 300; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 303; 9 M. L. T. 495, distinguished.

A renewal of a Kanom by some only of the Uralars of a Devaswom without consulting the rest is invalid. [p. 494, col. 1.]

Koyittal Parambil Parakum v. Attimana Illeil Narayanan, 50 Ind. Cas. 371; 42 M. 335; 9 L. W. 413; 25 M. L. T. 272; 36 M. L. J. 295; (1919) M. W. N. 27, referred to.

It is incompetent for the last male member of a Malabar Illom to alienate the trusteeship of a temple by vesting the Uraima right by a Will in his sons. [p. 494, col. 1.]

The fraudulent introduction by some of the trustees of a stranger into the body of trustees amounts in law to a breach of the trust. [p. 494, col. 1.]

Second appeal against a decree of the District Court, South Malabar, in Appeal Suit No. 354 of 1918, preferred against a decree of the Court of the Principal District Munsif, Calicut, in Original Suit No. 97 of 1912.

Mr. C. Madhavan Nair, for the Appellants.

Mr. K. P. M. Menon, for Respondent No. 4.

JUDGMENT.Spencer, J.—This suit was brought for redemption of a Kanom and for setting aside a prior renewal granted by the 19th and 24th defendants. The suit was decreed in the District Court, and in second appeal several objections have been taken.

The fourth plaintiff is a minor and the fifth plaintiff was put forward in the District Munsif's Court as his agent. But in the District Court he was brought on record as the next friend of the fourth plaintiff and allowed to prosecute the suit. It is objected that this procedure was not legal on the ground that the property in suit was that belonging to a Devaswom belonging to an Illom and that the fourth plaintiff as a minor was not competent to represent the Illom. O. XXXII, r. 2 provides that "where a suit is instituted by, or on behalf of, a minor without a next friend, the defendant may apply to have the plaint taken off the file." But there is no legal objection for impleading the fifth plaintiff as the next friend of the fourth plaintiff and allowing him to continue the suit.

The frame of the suit as finally constituted is not open to objection. We have not been shown any authority for holding that a minor is competent to be an Uralan of a Dewaswom.

The second point argued is, that the present suit should have been dismissed as barred by res judicata on account of the prior suit in Original Suit No. 8 of 1901 filed for the same purpose having been dismissed for non-joinder and that decree having become final on account of the failure of the plaintiffs to appeal to this Court. But it cannot be said that the questions decided in the present suit were directly and substantially in issue in the former suit and decided between the parties.

The defendants' (appellants') Counsel wished to raise another point regarding the failure of the plaintiffs to join the Attaladakam heirs in this suit. But as this was not raised in first appeal we cannot allow it to be taken here.

SANKARAN NAMBI v. DEVAKI ANTHEERJENAM.

The last and substantial point in the case is, whether the renewal of 1911 was invalid. The District Judge found that it was so because the 24th defendant had introduced a stranger (19th defendant) who was not an Uralan in the deed of renewal. So far as the inclusion of this stranger tended to support pretensions on his part to have a right to deal with the properties of the Dewaswom, the action of the 24th defendant was a breach of trust, and the lower Court's decision can also be supported on the ground that the renewal was manifestly bad for want of consultation with the other members of the Illom. In my opinion, the lower Appellate Court was right, and the second appeal should be dismissed with costs. Time for redemption is extended for four months. The memorandum of objections is dismissed with costs.

Krishnan, J.—This second appeal is against the decision of the District Judge of South Malabar in Original Suit No. 97 of 1912 brought before the Principal District Munsif of Calicut, for the redemption of a Kanom granted by the then Uralars of the Cheruvannore Dewaswom in the year 1856. The District Judge has granted the redemption as prayed for, and the appeal is against that decree.

The appellants are the first defendant, who represents the mortgagee's interest at present, and the 24th defendant, who is one of the Uralars of the Dewaswom. The suit was originally brought by five plaintiffs, the first four plaintiffs being the members of Kanholi Illom, and the fifth plaintiff, their agent or Mukhtear. The plaint had been signed by this fifth plaintiff and not by any others. There was also another defect in the plaint that the fourth plaintiff, who was admittedly a minor, was not represented by his next friend on record. The case as it was originally before the District Munsif was, however, dismissed not on any of these technical grounds but on another technical ground that all the Uralars of the plaint temple were not parties to the suit. That decree having been affirmed by the District Judge, we had to interfere in Second Appeal No. 847 of 1914 where we pointed out that the dismissal for non-joinder was not a proper disposal of the case and directed the necessary parties to be added, and a decree passed in the case on the merits.

The case went back again to the District Munsif and before him several technical pleas were again taken and some of them found favour with him. As they are also pressed before us I shall deal with them now.

The first point taken is, that the plaint had not been signed by the Nos. 1 to 4 plaintiffs and that the fifth plaintiff was not the properly constituted agent of the plaintiffs,—that the plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 3 had no interest in the Dewaswom, but that the fourth plaintiff was the only Uralan of the Dewaswom, as representing his Illom and as he was on record only in his own name without there being a next friend, as required by O. XXXII, r. 1, he being admittedly a minor, the suit should have been dismissed on that ground alone. The District Munsif upheld this plea. But I agree with the District Judge in thinking that he was wrong. There is no reason for holding that the omission to put in the next friend was due to any design or in any way malâ fide, but it was a case of mere inadvertence. The District Judge was, therefore, right in holding that an opportunity should have been given to cure this defect. The defect has now been cured by the fifth plaintiff being brought on record as the next friend of the minor and the plaint, as it is before us and as it was before the District Judge at the final hearing, is free from any defect on this score.

The next point argued before us is again one of non-joinder of certain Attaladakkam heirs of Erampampalli Illom who owned Uraima rights in this plaint temple. The finding of the District Munsif is, and that was supported by that of the District Judge, that this Illom had become extinct, and that, though the last male member of the Illom attempted to vest Uraima right by a will in his sons, that had no effect, as the trusteeship of a temple could not be alienated in that manner. That has been laid down very long ago.

Then it was said that there were some Attaladakkam heirs of his family and that they must be treated as the representatives of the Erampampalli Illom's Uraima right and as Uralars of this temple. I am inclined to agree with the District Munsif that it is doubtful if such a right will pass by Attaladakkam as it is confined to a particular Illom or family and will not pass to any other Illom by inheritance or otherwise; it is not, however, necessary to decide this point in this case, as the appellants before us made no attempt whatever to raise the question before the District Judge. Having apparently abandoned the point in the lower Court, they cannot be allowed to raise the point before us again.

SANKARAN NAMBI v. DEVAKI ANTHERJENAM.

The next point urged before us was that even assuming that the plaint could be put right by allowing the fifth plaintiff to sue on behalf of the fourth plaintiff as his next friend, the suit must fail because the fourth plaintiff was a minor and as such could not be a trustee at all, and not being a trustee could not sue on behalf of the temple. The whole point depends upon whether a minor in Illom or Tarwad can be considered to be the proper trustee of the temple when the trusteeship belongs to his Illom or Tarwad. So far as I am aware, there is nothing to prevent a minor from being a trustee. He may not be in a position to look after the trust. He may not also be in a position to execute or carry out the trust. Nevertheless, there is nothing to prevent the minor trustee's work being done for him by a properly constituted guardian. At any rate, no authority has been cited before us to show that a minor cannot be a trustee. Two cases have been referred to us by the learned Counsel for the appellants, namely, Somasundara Mudaliar v. Vythilinga Mudaliar (1) and Muthu Kumara Mudaliar v. Palaniappa Chettiar (2), but they are very different cases which arose under the Religious Endowments Act. In the former case their Lordships held that as the case fell under section 4 of the Religious Endowments Act and as there was a dispute as to the trusteeship after the death of the then holder of the office it was open to the Court acting under section 5 to appoint a trustee till the question was decided by a properly instituted suit. In Muthu Kumara Mudaliar v. Palaniappa Chettiar (2) another Bench of this Court followed the previous ruling and in upholding the removal of the trustees, also under the Religious Endowments Act, thought that, as the other claimants, third to fifth plaintiffs, were minors, it was suitable to put somebody else as a trustee, at least till one of them attained majority. There is nothing in this case to show that a minor could not be a trustee, although it may be inconvenient, if the Court were appointing a trustee, to appoint a person who is a minor as he must necessarily act through another person as his guardian; and the Courts would certainly avoid appointing any minor as a trustee. But so far as the present case is concerned, it has not been shown that this is a temple to which the Religious Endowments Act applies or that there is anything to prevent the fourth plaintiff from continuing as trustee of this temple, representing as he does, the Karnavanship of the Illom to which the trusteeship belongs. This point also, therefore, fails.

A plea was next taken on the ground of res judicata on account of a previous decision in Original Suit No. 8 of 1901 brought to redeem this very Kanom by one of the predecessors-in-title of the present fourth plaintiff. That suit, however, did not proceed to a decision at all but was dismissed on the ground of non-joinder of parties. It has not been shown to us how a decision of that sort made without going into the merits of the case can be treated as one in which the questions now raised were heard and finally decided by the Court. The questions here were not heard and decided then, and no question, therefore, of res judicata could arise on the basis of that decision. It was suggested that Explanation IV ought to be read with section 2 and, for some reason or other, the dismissal of the former suit should be treated as involving a decision on all the points that could possibly arise in the case. I am unable to follow this argument. Explanation IV deals with a case which has been tried on the merits but not with a case which has been rejected on the objection like the want of parties, or failure to pay Court-fees, or something of that sort. No authority has been cited to support this contention of res judicata. I think, therefore, that this contention also fails.

(1) 19 M. 285; 6 M. L. J. 92; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 904.

(2) 10 Ind. Cas. 300; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 303; 9 M. L. T. 495.

MAHADEO V. KALLOO.

Finally, coming to the merits the defence is this. The first defendant managed to obtain a renewal of the Kanom now sought to be redeemed in 1911 from the 24th defendant and the 19th defendant and he pleads that that renewal is valid as against the Devaswom and, therefore, this suit to redeem is premature as the 12 years' time has not expired. The validity of this plea depends upon the validity of the renewal. The District Judge has held that it is not valid for two reasons, firstly, because in granting this renewal no attempt was made to consult the fourth plaintiff who is the Karnavan of the Illom in whom the Uraima is vested or his guardian. That itself is a sufficient ground for holding the renewal to be invalid. See Koylital Parambil Parkum v. Attimana Illeth Narayanan (3).

There is the further point taken by the District Judge, namely, that by this renewal an attempt has been made to introduce as stranger, 19th defendant, into the Uraima right in the temple by joining him as one of the persons granting the renewal. It was contended before us that this was done bona fide, that the 24th defendant had no idea that there was anything unreasonable in doing so as he thought that the Will executed by the last male member of the Erampannapalli Tarwad in favour of the 19th defendant and others was a valid document. The appellants' Counsel also pointed out that in the renewal deed itself this right of the 19th defendant under the Will was recited. It is possible that the 24th defendant acted dishonestly and the District Judge was right in thinking that it was so. However, we need not rely upon this ground for setting aside the renewal. The other ground is sufficient for its being set aside. The renewal failing, there is no obstacle in the way of granting a redemption in favour of the fourth plaintiff as the District Judge has done.

As a last resort, the Counsel for the appellants suggested in his reply that the decree should be given in favour of the fourth plaintiff and the 24th defendant; but this point was not taken in the opening here or in his grounds of appeal to the lower Appellate Court. When possession is given under the decree to the fourth plaintiff it would be on behalf of the trust and any trustee who is entitled to have joint management of the property can get it. It is not necessary to interfere with the decree on that ground.

I, therefore, agree with my learned brother that this second appeal fails and must be dismissed with costs.

Time for redemption is extended by four months from this date.

The memorandum of cross-objections is dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 17 OF 1923.

April 9, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Daniels.

MAHADEO—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

KALLOO AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151—Inherent powers of Court—Decree, setting aside of.

A Court has no jurisdiction under section 151, Civil Procedure Code, on its motion to set aside its own decree, to set aside which the plaintiff, if he so desired, could move the Court. Section 151 is intended only for exceptional cases for which there is no other remedy except the use of the Court's inherent powers.

Civil revision from an order of the Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Allahabad, dated the 19th January 1923.

Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order passed by the learned Judge of the Small Cause Court, Allahabad, under the following circumstances:—

In Small Cause Court Suit No. 2891 of 1922 on the case coming on for hearing the plaintiff himself was in attendance but had no witness present. The Pleader for the defendant was also present. The learned Judge dismissed the suit for want

(3) 50 Ind. Cas. 371; 42 M. 335; 9 L. W. 413; 25 M. L. T. 272; 36 M. L. J. 295; (1919) M. W. N. 247.

ABDUR RAOOF v. BACHCHOO.

of proof. The learned Judge afterwards discovered, or it was brought to his notice, that there was some documentary evidence on the record in support of the plaintiff's claim. He, thereupon, of his own motion and without any application set aside his own decree and fixed a fresh date for final hearing. If the learned Judge had made a mistake in overlooking evidence, the plaintiff had a remedy open to him by application for review under O. XLVII of the Code. When that remedy was open, it appears to me that the learned Judge had no jurisdiction under section 151 of the Code to set aside what, subject to review, was a final decree. Section 151 is intended for exceptional cases for which there is no remedy except the use of the Court's inherent powers. It is not intended to enable Courts to evade or ignore the provisions of law which govern their procedure. I, therefore, allow the revision and set aside the order complained of. The respondent is unrepresented and the applicant does not press for his costs.

M. A. A.

*Application allowed.SAHU NAND RAM v. HIRA DEVI.

JUDGMENT.—The question in this appeal is whether it is within the competence of a Lambardar to give permission to a tenant to erect a kucha house on land belonging to the joint patti. The Court below has held that he can do so and has pointed out that there are no less than 30 co-sharers in the patti and that unless such authority is recognised in the lambardar it would be practically impossible for a valid permission ever to be given at all. The learned Counsel for the appellant has drawn my attention to the enumeration of the duties of a Lambardar contained in the Board's Circular No. 8-III, reproduced at page 141 of Mr. Agarwala's Commentary on the Land Revenue Act. An enumeration of the duties of the lambardar cannot, however, be considered decisive on a question of the powers which the Lambardar can exercise as the implied agent of the co-sharers under section 194 of the Tenancy Act. There is admittedly no direct authority on the question at issue but the decision of the Court below appears to me to be sound common sense and I decline to interfere with it. The result is that the appeal is dismissed with costs.

M. A. A.

*Appeal dismissed.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1570 OF 1921.

April 5, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Daniels.

Shaikh ABDUR RAOOF — PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

BACHCHOO AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 194—Joint patti—Lambardar's powers.

It is within the competence of a Lambardar to give permission to a tenant to erect a kucha house on land belonging to the joint patti.

Second appeal against the decree of the Judge of the Court, Small Causes, exercising the powers of the Subordinate Judge, Allahabad, dated the 6th August 1921.

Mr. S. P. Sinha for Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. N. Gupta, for the Respondents.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 132 OF 1922.

December 13, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

SAHU NAND RAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât HIRA DEVI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 24—Plaint returned after recording evidence and hearing arguments—High Court's power of transfer.

Where a Court after recording all the evidence of the parties and hearing arguments on all the issues comes to the conclusion that the land in suit forms part of another district over which it has no jurisdiction and returns the plaint for presentation to some Court in that district, the High Court ought to exercise its powers of transfer and order the case to be sent back to the self same Court to hear and determine the same. The jurisdiction of the High Court is wide enough to enable it to dispense with the formality of directing the plaintiff first to take his plaint and file it in one of the Courts having jurisdiction, preliminary to an application to the High Court to transfer it back to the file of the first Court.

SAHU NAND RAM v. HIRA DEVI.

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Bijnore, dated the 21st July 1922.

Messrs. Jang Bahadur Lal and S. P. Sinha, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. N. Gupta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit about certain alluvial land situated on the river Ganges where that river forms the boundary between the Revenue Districts of Moradabad and Meerut. The plaintiff is a land-holder of a village called Bisoali in the Moradabad District. The contesting defendants are land-holders of a village known as Mauza Raiba Nad Alipur, in the Meerut District. The river Ganges admittedly flows between the two villages. The plaintiff's case is that certain proceedings in the Revenue Courts resulted in a considerable area of land, which belonged to him and was in his possession as proprietor of village Bisoali, being recorded in the revenue papers as appertaining to Mauza Raiba Nad Alipur. A consequence of this was that the plaintiff was dispossessed by the defendants, who are proprietors of that village. The suit was contested on a variety of grounds and it must be conceded that the defendants did, at the very outset, impeach the jurisdiction of the Moradabad Court to try the suit. The learned Subordinate Judge fixed a number of issues and took a considerable body of evidence. At a very late stage, however, he came to the conclusion that the order by which the Settlement Officer had caused this land to be recorded as forming part of village Raiba Nad Alipore, had effected its transfer to the Revenue District of Meerut and had, therefore, placed it in an area over which the Moradabad Courts possessed no territorial jurisdiction. He returned the plaint to the plaintiff for presentation to some Court at Meerut. If this action had been taken directly the learned Subordinate Judge of Moradabad inspected the plaint, or after a brief and summary enquiry directed only to the question whether the Revenue Authorities had in fact taken action the result of which was to make the land in suit, whoever may be its proprietor in law, a part of the revenue paying district of Meerut, we might have felt disposed to affirm his order as it stands. We are, however, much impressed with the fourth plea taken in the memorandum of appeal to this Court, which calls attention to the practical inconvenience of the order under appeal, in view of the fact that the parties had produced all their evidence and the Court had heard arguments on all the issues, before it passed the order now under appeal. We think that this is a case in which this Court ought to exercise its powers of transfer. We intimated this fact to the opposite party at an early stage of the argument and we have, as a matter of fact, heard both parties on the question whether this suit, as it now stands, can most conveniently and properly be disposed of by the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, or by some Court possessing territorial jurisdiction over the Meerut District, which would have to commence the entire trial of the suit over again. We have, therefore, in substance complied with the provisions of section 24 Civil Procedure Code as to the notice necessary before an order of transfer is made. It may be suggested that, as a matter of form, we ought to direct the plaintiff first to comply with the order under appeal and to take this plaint and file it in one of the Meerut Courts, preliminary to an application to this Court to transfer it back to the file of the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad. We think that our jurisdiction is wide enough to enable us to dispense with this formality. Our order on this appeal is that, without determining any of the other pleas raised in the memorandum of appeal, or pronouncing any opinion affecting the merits of the suit in any way, we, in the exercise of our power of transfer, order that the entire record, including the plaint, be sent back to the Trial Court with directions to hear and determine the same. Costs of this appeal, which will include fees on the higher scale, will be costs in cause.

N. K.

Appeal allowed.

SUKHIA V. EMPEROR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 241 OF 1922.

April 20, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Piggott and
Mr. Justice Walsh.Musammât SUKHIA AND ANOTHER—
APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss.
164, 286, 342—Sessions trial—Confession retracted
—Plea of not guilty—Procedure.*

Accused, in a murder case, made a confession which was duly recorded under section 164, Criminal Procedure Code. Before the Committing Magistrate also they pleaded "guilty," but in the Court of Session they pleaded "not guilty." Upon this the Sessions Judge proceeded to take in evidence, before the examination of any witness, the previous statements made by the accused, not only before the Committing Magistrate but prior to the commencement of proceedings in the Magistrate's Court. He then examined, and almost cross-examined the accused upon their confessions, and thereafter recorded the prosecution evidence:

Held, that the Sessions Judge had acted in contravention of the provisions of section 286, Criminal Procedure Code; that, although under section 342 of that Code the power given to the Court to examine an accused person is one which may be exercised at any stage of the trial in the discretion of the Court, this provision does not in any way supersede the clear directions contained in section 286 as to the manner in which a Sessions trial should be commenced. [p. 497, col. 2; p. 498, col. 1.]

When an accused is on his trial on a capital charge, it is not expedient that the Sessions Court should convict him even upon a plea of guilty entered before the Trial Court itself. As a matter of practice, the Court should, in its discretion, put such a plea on one side and proceed to record and consider the evidence, in order to satisfy itself, not merely of the guilt of the accused, but of the precise nature of the offence committed and the appropriate punishment for the same. [p. 498, col. 1.]

Where a confession of guilt is retracted, the proper time for taking into consideration such confession is after the Court is in possession of the entire prosecution evidence and can estimate what the effect of that evidence would be, considered apart from any statement which the accused person may from time to time have made. [p. 498, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Banda.

Mr. Damodar Das, for the Appellants.

Mr. Lalit Mohan Banerji, Government
Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case two women, Musammât Sukhia and Musammât Halki related to one another in this way, that Sukhia is the own sister of Halki's husband, Brahmins by caste, residents of a village, in the Mahoba sub-division of the Hamirpur District, were tried before the Court of Session on the charge of having murdered two little girls, the daughters of their own neighbour and caste-fellow, Madho. They have been found guilty and the case has been referred to us for confirmation of the sentence of death passed by the Sessions Court. The women have submitted to us petitions of appeal, in which they vehemently protest their innocence and we have had the advantage of hearing the case argued by Counsel on their behalf. We may say at once that we have come to the conclusion that the conviction cannot be sustained. The learned Sessions Judge has written a well-considered judgment, in many respects admirably thought out; but having said this, we feel it incumbent upon us to comment at the very outset on the procedure which he adopted at the trial and on his attitude towards certain statements by the accused women which constituted the principal (or we might rather say almost the sole) evidence against them. The two women had admitted their guilt in the Court of the Committing Magistrate and it would almost seem from the record as if their plea of "not guilty" in the Sessions Court took the learned Sessions Judge by surprise. At any rate, he proceeded at once to take in evidence, before a single witness had been examined, the previous statements made by the two women, not only before the Committing Magistrate, but prior to the commencement of the proceedings in the Magistrate's Court when they were examined under section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. He then examined, and almost cross-examined, the two accused upon these confessions and having done this began to record the prosecution evidence. The Trial Court was certainly contravening the provisions of section 286 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and, although under section 342 of the same Code the power given to the Court to examine an accused person is one which may be exercised at any stage of the trial in the discretion of the Court, this provision must not be regarded as in any way superseding the clear directions contained in section 286 as to the manner in which a trial at Sessions should be commenced. We must point out further that, in our opinion, what is involved in this matter is something more than a mere error of procedure. It indicates a mistaken attitude on the part of the Trial Court towards the entire question of the value to be attached to a retracted confession. It is only very recently, in the case of Dalli v. Emperor (1), that his Court has found it necessary to re-affirm a rule of practice upon which it has long insisted. That rule is that, when an accused is on his trial on a capital charge, it is not expedient that the Court should convict him even upon a plea of guilty entered before the Trial Court itself. As a matter of practice, the Court should, in its discretion, put such a plea on one side and proceed to record and consider the evidence, in order to satisfy itself, not merely of the guilt of the accused, but of the precise nature of the offence committed and the appropriate punishment for the same. Now, if this be the proper attitude to take up towards a plea of "guilty", it is clear enough what the duty of the Court should be when a plea of "not guilty" is entered by an accused person (and particularly by an accused person in a capital case) after the said accused has admitted his guilt before the Magistrate. It becomes particularly incumbent on the Trial Court to proceed with the hearing of the evidence, to enquire very carefully into the conduct of the Police investigation and the whole circumstances under which the confession of guilt now retracted was obtained. The proper time for taking into consideration such a confession comes after the Court is in possession of the entire prosecution evidence and can estimate what the effect of that evidence would be, considered apart from any statement which the accused person or persons may from time to time have made. In this particular case, indeed, we feel we cannot leave the subject without adding a word or two regarding one aspect of the matter which has struck us very strongly. We should like the Sessions

SUKHIA V. EMPEROR.

Judge to realise that, in adopting the irregular procedure on which we are commenting he ran what we can only describe as a terrible risk. It is easily conceivable that these two ignorant peasant women, finding themselves confronted immediately upon their plea of "not guilty" with the record of confessions previously made by them, might have been seized with a fit of unreasoning terror at the apparently hostile attitude of the Court and might have fallen back hopelessly upon a re-affirmation of the confessions which they desired to re-tract and an appeal to the mercy of the Court. If this had happened in the present case, we are satisfied that the result would have been a really disastrous miscarriage of justice.

We propose now to reverse the procedure adopted at the trial and to take into consideration at once the statements of the prosecution witnesses. The following recital of facts will make the evidence (what there is of it) easily intelligible. The two little girls named, Binia and Sumetra, aged, respectively, about eleven years and six or seven years, disappeared from their home sometime in the course of the afternoon or evening of the 12th of October 1921. So far as the evidence goes, their father, Madho, seems to have taken singularly little interest in the matter; but their mother Musammatt Ladli spent the following day in fruitless search for her missing daughters. The only information, if it can be called information, which she succeeded in obtaining was from the witness Kamta, to whom we shall refer presently; but on the 14th of October, in the morning, she presented herself at the Police Station, four miles distant from her village, and reported the disappearance of the two girls, saying that she knew nothing whatever as to what had become of them. The investigating Sub-Inspector, Munshi Sheo Ratan Lal, reached the village of Billbai on the morning of the 15th October. He was led astray at first by a false clue which suggested that the missing girls might have wandered off on their own account to attend a certain mela; but by 7 o'clock on the evening of October the 15th the Police, searching certain rocks in the neighbourhood of the village, discovered the corpses of the unfortunate girls roughly hidden under the brushwood. By the time those corpses were produced before the medical expert, Dr. Mauik Chaud, they were in an advanced stage of decomposition. The medical evidence is to the effect that no marks of violence could be traced and certainly no bones were broken. The Medical Officer, therefore, could form no conclusion whatever as to the probable cause of death and, so far as the medical evidence goes, we have no assurance that a murder had been committed at all. It is perhaps not particularly probable, but it is at least conceivable, that the little girls straying too far from the village may have been killed by some wild animal. Against this, however, there is the undoubted fact that the corpses when found had been more or less hidden and that the silver ornaments which the girls were wearing when they left their home had disappeared. On the other hand, again, it is possible that the corpses might have been found and plundered and hidden away after the girls had met with their death by some accident. The investigation dragged on for a full week and more, the Police Officer finding it exceedingly difficult to arrive at any clue. He seems to have had nothing to go upon at the outset beyond certain information which pointed to the witness, Kamta, as a person who possibly knew something about the matter. We do not wish to be in any way unjust to the Sub-Inspector, who had a very difficult and almost hopeless task before him; but we feel bound to say that his own admissions regarding his methods of investigation are not such as to inspire us with very much confidence. At one time or another he seems to have arrested quite a number of residents of the village, in each instance acting upon the vaguest possible suspicion. He has himself admitted that he did not feel it to be in any way inconsistent with his duty to threaten an apparently recalcitrant witness with personal violence in order to extract information from him. We will do him the justice to suppose that he wished the Court to understand that the threats used by him towards the witness, Kamta, were mere bluff, and not intended to be carried into execution; but even then such a method of investigation cannot be passed over without unfavourable remark. Finally, certain information was obtained from Kamta and corroboration of the same, to a certain limited extent, was forthcoming. The ornaments which had been taken from the persons of the girls were eventually recovered, tied up in a dirty rag and more or less hidden in the ground, in a field belonging to this witness, Kamta, in the neighbourhood of a ruined shed which he had at one time used in the said field. The Police, however, believed that the presence of these ornaments in Kamta's field could be connected by evidence with their having at one time been in the possession of the two accused women, Sukhia and Halki. These accused were, therefore, finally arrested and the Investigating Police Officer set out to produce them before a Magistrate, in order that the confessions which he understood they were prepared to make might be duly recorded. It would seem that in the Hamirpur District it has not been found possible to enforce what is undoubtedly a very salutary rule observed in many districts, namely, that the duty of recording all confessions under section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is laid upon the Magistrate working at head-quarters. The advantage of this rule is that the confessing accused can be at once released from Police custody and placed in the security of the jail lock-up. In this instance we know that the accused women had to be taken a very considerable journey, first by rail and then by road, before they were produced in the Court of the Parganah Officer, then sitting at a village 15 miles from the nearest railway station. Certain statement made by them under these circumstances on the 26th of October, that is to say, 14 days after the death of the two girls, were recorded by the Magistrate and the accused women, necessarily, remanded to Police custody, were taken away.

(1) 66 Ind. Cas. 427; 20 A. I. J. 326; 23 Cr. L. J. 283; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 233.

SUKHIA v. EMPEROR.

A great deal of the evidence at the trial is directed towards proving facts and circumstances which have no particular bearing on the question of the guilt or innocence of these two women. Putting their own statements on one side there are only three items of evidence to be considered against them.

(i) Kamta deposes that on Wednesday, the 12th October, the day on which the girls disappeared (he does not say at what hour of the day), he happened to be at the shop of one Ramadhin and, while there, heard a scream as of a child proceeding from a house which the witness spoke of as the house of the accused Sukhia, though he immediately admitted that it was not really Sukhia's house at all but that of her brother, Jagannath. According to the evidence of Kamta, of Ramadhin and of Ramadhin's mother, Piari Bahu, this screaming or crying of a child was heard more than once and Kamta and Piari Bahu actually went up to the house and entered the courtyard. They found themselves against an inner door which was closed. Piari Bahu says that she heard nothing inside the house. Kamta says that he heard the voices of some persons whispering inside. However this may be, none of the witnesses made any attempt to pass beyond the closed door or to attract the attention of the persons, whoever they may have been, who were behind that door. We have to consider, first of all, whether these statements can be relied upon at all. The witness, Kamta, has played a very curious part in this case. It seems that he has a local reputation as a medium or clairvoyant. He is apparently able to throw himself into a real or apparent trance and his utterances while in this trance state are supposed by the villagers to be inspired by the goddess Bhawani. Musammāt Ladli, the mother of the missing girls, obviously in good faith believes in the possession of these supernatural endowments on the part of Kamta. Her evidence shows that she went to him on the evening of October the 13th and that at her request he managed to throw himself into a trance and gave her certain information about the missing girls. According to Musammāt Ladli his statements were quite inconsistent with themselves. He told her that the girls were dead and had been robbed of their ornaments, but afterwards told her that if she would go quietly home the girls would return the same night. Kamta himself, with a naivete which is perhaps not surprising in a witness of his class, seems to take it as a matter of course that he is perfectly aware in his waking moments of what he had been saying while in a state of trance. His own account of what he told Musammāt Ladli is not quite the same. If we could be certain that Kamta said what Musam-

SUKHIA V. EMPEROR.

mat Ladli puts into his mouth, we should find it very difficult to avoid the suspicion that he knew a great deal more about the disappearance of these two girls than he has ever admitted. It is possible, however, that the man is a mere charlatan and that he was talking at random with a view to impress the woman and keep up his reputation. The Investigating Police Officer, having nothing else to go upon, made an attempt to extract more information from Kamta by getting the man to throw himself once more into the trance state. This time Kamta came out with specific accusations against two residents of the village with whom we are not further concerned. The search of their house led to nothing and there is no reason whatever to suppose that Kamta's trance utterances against them had any foundation in fact. It was after this failure that the Sub-Inspector, losing all patience, took it upon himself to threaten Kamta definitely with personal ill-usage unless he would say something more, and under these circumstances the witness, more than a week after the commencement of the Police investigation, came out with this story about the screams heard in Jagannath's house. We have certainly formed a very low opinion of the veracity of Kamta and we should not be prepared to accept any fact as proved upon his bare evidence. The question is whether his evidence, taken in connection with that of Ramadhin and Musammāt Piari Bahu, has any substratum of fact. We find it difficult to believe that, if that evidence were in any degree true, the circumstance of screams having been heard inside Jagannath's house on the evening of October the 12th (for the witnesses Ramadhin and Piari Bahu place the occurrence very shortly before sunset on that day) would not have been mentioned to Musammāt Ladli in the first instance, while she was wandering about the village making enquiries, or, at any rate, to the Sub-Inspector at any early stage of his investigation. There are, moreover, details in the story told by Piari Bahu and Kamta which the learned Sessions Judge himself has distrusted and which certainly look to us very like what a learned Judge of this Court used to describe as "padding." The only explanation which we can think of, consistent with a possible substratum of truth in this story, is one which Kamta himself offered at the close of his examination-in-chief. His explanation was that he had been terrorised into silence by Jagannath and his two brothers.

SUKHIA v. EMPEROR.

Now, the accused Musammal Halki is the wife of Bharosa, whose two brothers are Jagannath and Mullua. Bharosa is the only one of the three who is married. Musammal Sukhia is a widowed sister of these three men. She does not ordinarily live at Bilbai at all, but comes there from time to time to look after certain fields of which she seems to hold the tenancy. She was undoubtedly in Bilbai in the month of October last, but the fact she does not ordinarily reside there is of some significance when we come to consider the suggested motive for the crime. For the present, however, the point we have to make is this; that if Kamta was really being terrorised into silence by Jagannath, Bharosa and Mullua, then these three men knew something from the very beginning about the disappearance of the two little girls and were bestirring themselves to stifle enquiry into that disappearance. The conclusion which seems to follow inevitably is that, either this story of the screams heard in Jagannath's house is a pure invention, which has cropped up somehow or other amongst villagers rendered uncomfortable and almost desperate by the discomforts of a prolonged Police investigation in their midst; or, if there be any substratum of truth, it is evidence pointing towards the guilt, not of these two women whose cases are before us, but of one or more of the male members of that family. This is all we need say about this portion of the prosecution evidence.

(2) The next point against the accused is the solitary statement of a barber woman of the name of Dulari. She says that on the fatal Wednesday evening, October the 12th, shortly before sunset, the accused Sukhia had come to her to have her hair dressed. At that time the two girls Binia and Sumetra were playing in the lane in front of the barber woman's house. As Sukhia went away the two girls followed her up to Jagannath's house, at the door of which the accused Halki was standing. The two women and the two girls then entered the house together. If we could believe this evidence it would certainly be of considerable importance, but we are unable to do so. The learned Sessions Judge himself has practically rejected it, that is to say, he has rejected the only part of it which is of any importance, namely, that part which brings the missing girls inside Jagannath's house. He has done this mainly on the ground that an examination of the map proved by the Investigating Police Officer has satisfied him that Dulari could not from her own house door have seen what she professes to have done. We might add to this that Dulari, while under cross-examination, admitted herself to be quite painfully short-sighted. She was unable to recognize the faces of the two accused women, where they stood in the dock in front of her. Finally, there is in the case of this evidence, as in the case of that of the group of witnesses of whom we have already spoken, the fact that Dulari made no mention of what she is supposed to have seen until a late stage of the investigation. We feel confident that her evidence, whatever may be the correct explanation of the fact of her having given it, must be put aside as wholly untrustworthy.

(3) There is the evidence regarding the recovery of the missing ornaments. A learned Judge of this Court of great experience in criminal matters took occasion, as long ago as the year 1895, to express a very decided opinion as to the small evidential value to be attached to the mere recovery of stolen property from a hiding place pointed out by an accused person, when the hiding place is not in itself such as to involve possession over the articles in question on the part of the person who is supposed to have made the disclosure. We refer to the case of Queen Empress v. Narpat (2). In the present case, however, the discovery of these ornaments is in itself no evidence whatever against the two women. They were not pointed out by any body; they were found by the Police on searching Kamta's field in the neighbourhood of his ruined hut. If their discovery is in itself evidence against any one it is evidence against Kamta. The way in which it is sought to make it evidence against the accused is this:—The search in Kamta's field was conducted upon information given by a cultivator named Antoo. Antoo deposes that he received information as to the probable whereabouts of the ornaments from Mullua, the brother of one accused and brother-in-law of the other. Mullua says that his sister, Sukhia, came to him, confessed herself guilty of the murder of the girls, told him that the missing ornaments were in a certain well and got him to take them out of the well and to hide them in Kamta's field. He then proceeded, in the most unscrupulous manner, to set to work through Antoo to get the Police to discover the ornaments where he had put them, presumably in order that they might constitute a serious item of evidence against Kamta. These facts are sufficient in themselves to show that Mullua is an utterly untrustworthy witness and that no importance whatever attaches to the statement he makes against his own sister. As a matter of fact, Mullua broke down in the witness-box in the most conclusive manner possible. He contradicted himself over and over again and finally told the Court in so many words that what he had said against Sukhia was a lie which had been put into his mouth by the Police constables who were attending on the Sub-Inspector at the investigation. We have said enough to show that this item of evidence is almost worse than useless as against the accused women.

SUKHIA V. EMPEROR.

There remains, therefore, only for us to consider the statements which the two women made on the 26th of October and the fact that they adhered to those statements when they were questioned by the Committing Magistrate on the 5th of November. This latter circumstance does at first blush appear to add very considerably to the weight to be attached to the confessions recorded under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. We greatly fear, however, that the Committing Magistrate has fallen into an error precisely analogous to that on which we have commented in case of the Sessions Judge. He would have been well-advised in a matter of this sort to have entered upon the examination of the accused women with a peculiarly strict and scrupulous observance of the directions in the Code of Criminal Procedure regarding the examination of accused persons. He should have asked the two women in the first instance regarding the statements made against them by prosecution witnesses and have been careful to ascertain whether they admitted those statements to be true in fact and what explanation, if any, they had to offer of those statements if they admitted them to be true. Instead of doing this, he confronted the two women at once, each in her turn, with the confessions of the 26th October and simply demanded to know whether those statements had been made by them and whether they were true. Under such circumstances it is scarcely surprising that the two women simply replied in a hopeless spirit that they had made the statements read over to them and that those statements were true. The fact of their doing so does not, under the circumstances, add appreciably to the evidential value of the statements themselves. We now come back to those statements. They seem to us unreal and unconvincing in a very high degree. Take, for instance, the question of motive. Both the women repudiate the suggestion that they had killed the girls for the sake of the ornaments. Musammât Sukhia starts off with a story, of which there is no corroboration to be found anywhere, as to a quarrel between the girls Binia and Sumetra and another little girl the daughter of Bhorasa and Musammât Halki. She really asks the Court to believe that she and Halki strangled the two girls in a fit of anger brought about by a quarrel of the most trumpery description. She adds certain details which practically give the lie to her own version as to the quarrel. Musammât Halki has something, at any rate, a little more plausible to suggest. She says that her own husband Bhorasa had for years been living in adultery with Ladli, the mother of Binia and Sumetra. She suggests that the motive for the murder was revenge on account of this long-standing unfaithfulness. The suggestion is in itself rather thin, in view of the allegation that the intrigue had been going on for years. But in any case the motive is one which would not touch Musammât Sukhia at all, and according to the story told in the confessions, it is Musammât Sukhia who takes the leading part in the commission of the crime. We have already commented upon the circumstances under which the confessions were made.

MAM CHAND V. EMPEROR.

We think that the story told in the confessions is in all probability untrue. In saying this, it is not necessary for us to believe all the allegations against the Investigating Police Officer which the two women have put forward to account for their having made those confessions. It is far easier to believe that after this prolonged enquiry the two women were induced to sacrifice themselves in order to avoid the arrest and prosecution of one or more of the male members of the family. At any rate, it seems to us quite beyond question that these two retracted confessions, practically uncorroborated as they are by anything in the prosecution evidence, do not afford anything like a satisfactory basis for the conviction of the accused.

The result is that we allow this appeal, set aside the conviction and sentences, acquit Musammatt Sukhia and Musammatt Halki of the offence charged and direct that they be released.

W. C. A.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 258 OF 1923.

April 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

MAM CHAND AND OTHERS—

ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 133, 137—Nuisance—Inquiry—Procedure—Order based on oral inquiry, legality of.

The procedure to be followed in an inquiry under Chapter XI of the Criminal Procedure Code is that provided for a summons-case, and the Magistrate is bound to record the evidence produced by the parties.

Sita Ram v. Emperor, 41 Ind. Cas. 1000; 32 P. R., 1917 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 888; 43 P. W. R. 1917 Cr., Hingu v. Emperor, 3 Ind. Cas. 482; 31 A. 453; 6 A. L. J. 685; 10 Cr. L. J. 297, Srinath Roy v. Atanaddi Halder, 24 C. 395; 1 C. W. N. 217; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 930, relied on.

An order under that Chapter based on an oral inquiry is illegal and liable to be set aside.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Karnal, with his No. 247, dated the 30th January 1923.

FACTS appear from the following order of the Sessions Judge:

"A Magistrate of the First Class has under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code ordered two carpenters to remove a chhan which they had erected on the Gorah Deh of Mauza Dhola, Tehsil Kaithal, 17 persons, biswadars of the village have applied for revision.

The Magistrate passed the order at the instance of four petitioners who claimed that the place where the shed had been erected was a public way along which women used to pass to draw water and that cattle also lay there.

The Magistrate states that the complainant produced two witnesses while the respondents produced none. He ordered the removal of the chhan.

I can discover no evidence on the record and the index also does not refer to evidence. The respondents stated that the witnesses appeared but were not certain whether their statements were recorded. Apparently, the Magistrate made an oral enquiry.

The Magistrate originally intended to inspect the spot but was prevented from carrying out his intention.

I recommend that the order be set aside on the ground that it is not supported by any evidence. A minor point is that in the first instance the Magistrate passed no conditional order under section 133, Criminal Procedure Code.

Though it is not strictly within the terms of the reference, I think the respondents had better go to a Civil Court straight away as the matter will ultimately have to come before a Civil Court. The respondents strongly object to the chhan on various grounds, while the 17 petitioners claim that they have been in possession of this bit of the Gora Deh for a very long period."

Messrs. Shamair Chand and N. C. Pandit, for the Petitioners.

ORDER.—This case has been reported to this Court under section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code by the Sessions Judge of Karnal. It appears that the accused constructed a certain shed on a public thoroughfare without the permission of the proprietors of the village. A complaint was filed before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate who ordered that a notice should be issued to the accused under section 133, Criminal Procedure Code, for the removal of the shed. The accused appeared in Court and filed certain objections. The Magistrate, without recording any evidence for the prosecution, made the order absolute and directed the shed to be removed.

EMPEROR V. BALWANT SINGH.

It is clear that the order is illegal and must be set aside. There is abundant authority for holding that the procedure to be followed in such cases is as in a summons-case and that evidence must be recorded. Sita Ram v. Emperor (1), Hingu v. Emperor (2) and Srinath Roy v. Anaddi Halder (3).

I allow the revision and set aside the order passed by the Trial Magistrate as recommended by the learned Sessions Judge.

Z. K.

Revision allowed.

(1) 41 Ind. Cas. 1000; 32 P. R. 1917 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 888; 43 P. W. R. 1917 Cr.

(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 482; 31 A. 453; 6 A. L. J. 685; 10 Cr. L. J. 297.

(3) 24 C. 395; 1 C. W. N. 217; 12 Ind. Dec. N. S. 930.

OUDE JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 6 OF 1923.

March 15, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT

versus

BALWANT SINGH AND OTHERS—

ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 107, 125, 435 (4)—Jurisdiction of District Magistrate under s. 125, nature of—Proceeding under s. 107—District Magistrate not moved—Jurisdiction of Sessions Judge to refer to High Court—District Magistrate's Court, whether subordinate to that of Sessions Judge.

The jurisdiction of a District Magistrate under section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code is neither appellate nor revisional, it is merely confined to examining the record to satisfy himself whether it is no longer necessary to keep the parties under the bond. [p. 505, col. 1.]

Panarsi Das v. Partab Singh, 18 Ind. Cas. 351; 35 A. 103; 11 A. L. J. 16; 14 Cr. L. J. 63 and Sheo Singh v. Emperor, 26 Ind. Cas. 169; 1 O. L. J. 541; 15 Cr. L. J. 721, relied on.

A Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to refer a proceeding under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code to the High Court even where no application has first been made to the District Magistrate under section 125 of the Code. [p. 505, col. 2.]

Sita Ram v. Emperor, 39 Ind. Cas. 998; 39 A. 466; 15 A. L. J. 469; 18 Cr. L. J. 630, relied on. Lalji v. Emperor, 43 Ind. Cas. 604; 16 A. L. J. 39; 40 A. 140; 19 Cr. L. J. 188, dissented from.

As a Court of revision, the Court of District Magistrate is not inferior to that of the Sessions Judge. But when a District Magistrate passes an order as a Court of original jurisdiction, that Court is subordinate to the Court of Sessions Judge which can exercise revisional powers. [p. 505, col. 2.]

Criminal reference made by the Sessions Judge, Hardoi, under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

Mr. Raj Bahadur, for Accused Nos. 1, 3, 4 and 6.

JUDGMENT.—This is a reference made by the learned Sessions Judge of Hardoi in proceedings under section 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure with a recommendation that the order binding over the eight applicants to keep the peace may be cancelled. A learned Pleader Mr. Raj Bahadur appeared on behalf of four of the applicants and put forward all the relevant arguments with much ability. The first point raised by the Deputy Magistrate in his explanation, dated 23rd January, questions the jurisdiction of the Sessions Judge to interfere in a matter of this nature before the applicants have submitted the proceedings to the District Magistrate under section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. This view is supported by the view held in the matter by Mr. Justice Knox of the Allahabad High Court. In 1905 and 1917 he gave it as his opinion that the High Court would decline to consider the merits of an application to set aside an order calling upon certain persons to furnish security to keep the peace, when the applicant had not moved the District Magistrate under the provision of section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to cancel the security bonds. With all respect, this opinion does not appear to be justified by the provisions of the Code. The discussion at present will be academic in view of the pending changes in the Code of Criminal Procedure, but this Court must give a decision as the jurisdiction has been questioned by the Deputy Magistrate. When the learned Judge, Mr. Justice Knox, delivered his judgment in 1917 [Lalji v. Emperor (1)] following his previous ruling [Emperor v. Abdul Rahim (2)] reported in Weekly Notes 1905, page 143] his attention does not appear to have been called to a Bench decision of his own Court, Sita Ram v. Emperor (3). A learned Judge of that Court referred the matter to a Bench because of the conflict between the opinion of Mr. Justice Knox expressed in 1905 and that of Mr. Justice Tudball in the case of Banarsi Das v. Partab Singh (4). The Bench approved of the opinion of Mr. Justice Tudball and held that the jurisdiction of the District Magistrate under section 125 of the Code is neither appellate nor revisional. The learned Judges pointed out that the Code had allowed an appeal expressly under section 406, Code of Criminal Procedure, to the District Magistrate against an order of a Subordinate Magistrate directing a party to give security for good behaviour. As no such appeal is allowed in a case where security is ordered for keeping the peace, the learned Judges drew the conclusion that the District Magistrate's power was merely confined to examining the record to satisfy himself whether it was any longer necessary to keep the parties under the bond. The act is not a judicial act which the District Magistrate is called upon to exercise.³ The same view was taken by the learned Judicial Commissioner of this Court in Sheo Singh v. Emperor (5). The judgment of this Court referred to in the explanation of the Deputy Magistrate, Harkaran Singh v. Harnam Singh (6) has no reference to the appellate or the revisional power of the District Magistrate.

EMPEROR V. BALWANT SINGH.

(1) 43 Ind. Cas. 604; 16 A. L. J. 39 140 A. 140; 19 Cr. L. J. 188.

(2) A. W. N. (1905) 1431 2 Cr. L. J. 335.

(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 998; 39 A. 466; 15 A. L. J. 469; 18 Cr. L. J. 630.

(4) 18 Ind. Cas. 351; 35 A. 103; 11 A. L. J. 16; 14 Cr. L. J. 63.

(5) 26 Ind. Cas. 169; 1 O. L. J. 541; 15 Cr. L. J. 721.

(6) 34 Ind. Cas. 335; 19 O. C. 108; 3 O. L. J. 38; 17 Cr. L. J. 223.

As a Court of revision the Court of the District Magistrate is not inferior to that of the Sessions Judge as is clear from the provisions of section 435 (4) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. What was decided in the ruling quoted was that, when a District Magistrate passes an order as a Court of original jurisdiction that Court is subordinate to the Court of the Sessions Judge, which can exercise revisional power. The correct opinion is that the Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to make this reference.

Coming to the facts, I see no reason to interfere with the order of the Deputy Magistrate. On 18th July 1922 Ragha Singh lodged a petition to the District Superintendent of Hardoi complaining that his enemies Balwant Singh and about 50 others had surrounded his house that day; that information was brought over from his village Sandiawan by one Loney Singh, and that he was afraid of considerable harm being caused to his family unless prompt steps were taken by the Police. He also represented in the petition that Balwant Singh and others were on the lookout to assault him in Hardoi. In pursuance of this petition, proceedings were taken against Balwant Singh and others under section 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. After these proceedings were started, it appears that the party of Balwant Singh complained against Ragha Singh and others and prayed that Ragha Singh and others may be bound over to keep the peace. The other file is not before me so the exact date of the application cannot be ascertained. When Ragha Singh feared the probability of his being bound over also, he changed his tactics and on 15th September 1922 asked for the withdrawal of proceedings for keeping the peace and definitely charged the opposite party with committing offences of forming an unlawful assembly and of wrongful confinement on 18th July 1922. The Deputy Magistrate very rightly, I think, did not drop the proceedings under section 107 and continued to investigate the three cases separately. On 2nd November 1922 he ordered Balwant Singh and others to give security and on 8th November acquitted them of the offences with which they were charged.

It may be noted that Ragha Singh and others have also been bound over and that their petition to the District Magistrate under section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure has been dismissed.

JEHANA V. EMPEROR.

The learned Sessions Judge is of opinion that Balwant Singh and others ought not to have been bound over because the order for security is based on exactly the same evidence which the Deputy Magistrate has disbelieved during the trial of these applicants on substantive charges. In my opinion the evidence under section 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure goes far beyond the evidence in support of the substantive charges. When Ragha Singh saw the great probability of both parties being bound over he aimed only at proving the collection of his opponents outside his house on 18th July 1922.

The Deputy Magistrate, no doubt, disbelieved this story. There is, however, very valuable evidence to prove the probability of a breach of the peace. The first witness was Badar Ali, Sub-Inspector of Thana Bilgram, within which circle the applicants live. He has stated that the occurrence of 18th July 1922 did not stand by itself. According to his evidence both parties had made complaints of assaults on 10th April and on 6th June. The reports made by them are exhibited on the record. The second witness Ahmad Ali Khan, is a Constable of the beat. He disposed: "Neither party allows the cattle of other party to pass their way. There is great danger of the breach of the peace being committed by either party. . . . There has been exchange of abuse between Ragha Singh and Balwant Singh in my presence on several occasions." There has been the usual preliminary to a lathi fight—litigation in Revenue and Civil Courts. As pointed out by the Deputy Magistrate, he was in a position to judge from the demeanour of the parties what their feelings were against each other. So far, an appellate jurisdiction has not been granted to this Court in a matter of this nature and there is abundant evidence on which the Deputy Magistrate could come to the conclusion to which he did. There is, therefore, not the slightest reason to interfere by way of revision.

Let the record be returned.

N. K.

Record returned: Interference declined.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 34 OF 1923.

February 17, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Justice LeRossignol and
Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

JEHANA—CONVICT—APPELLANT
versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 164 (3), 533—Confession, mode of recording—Certificate of voluntariness, absence of—Enquiry failure to make, effect of.

The failure of a Magistrate recording a confession to append the certificate prescribed by section 164 (3) of the Criminal Procedure Code to the statement recorded by him can be cured by the evidence of the Magistrate, but his failure to make any enquiry as to the state of mind of the confessor at the time the confession was recorded is fatal and renders the confession inadmissible in evidence. [p. 507, col. 2.]

Appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Attock, at Campbelpur, dated the 14th December 1922.

Mr. M. M. Tufail, for the Appellant.

Kanwar Dalip Singh, Assistant Legal Remembrancer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Jehana, has been convicted and sentenced to death for the murder, on the 1st of July 1922, of his brother-in-law, Ghulam Muhammad. The sentence is before us for confirmation and the appellant has preferred an appeal to this Court.

The alleged motive for the offence is the appellant's resentment at the marriage of his sister with the deceased. The marriage took place three years before the offence and in the interval Musammât Jahan Begam the sister of the appellant had been to her husband's house on two or three occasions and had stayed there a few days each time. Three or four days before the 1st of July the deceased had gone to Dhulial, the village of his bride, and had brought her home and some two days later had left for Dhulial, saying that he was going to see his parents-in-law. He left his own village with one Musammât Khatun, and accompanied her as far as village Tatral where he helped her to load some grain on a donkey, then parted from her saying that he was going towards Dhulial. He never returned home and on the 11th of July his brother Mehra made a report of the foregoing circumstances to the thana and suggested that a search should be made for him. A constable was sent to the deceased's village of Gangal and after making enquiries there proceeded to Dhulial which he reached on the 13th of July. On the 14th Jehana, appellant, made a statement and is said to have led the investigating party to the river Sil which is near by. Nothing was found there, but some distance away a pole P-10, some human hair P-11, a pair of shoes P-1 and a kurta P-8, were discovered. On the 16th the Investigating Constable was told that the body of the deceased had been found and on proceeding to another spot in the Sil stream, a considerable distance from the spot alleged to have been indicated by the appellant, a sack was found and on being opened was seen to contain a human skull and some bones. A few more human bones were found at the place where Jehana had taken the investigating party on the 14th. It is suggested that these bones are the remains of the body of the deceased. A turban also was found on the indication of the appellant and that has been found by the Chemical Examiner to be stained with human blood and there is evidence that it is the turban of Ghulam Muhammad.

JEHANA V. EMPEROR.

The learned Sessions Judge has convicted the appellant on the finding that the bones recovered in the sack are the bones of Ghulam Muhammad and on the statements of Nizam Din, P. W. No. 2, and Mehra, P. W. No. 3, that the appellant told them he had killed Ghulam Muhammad and asked their aid in disposing of the body whereupon they helped him to cut it up, put it into a sack and sank it in the Sil at the place first indicated by the appellant whence, on the arrival of the Police in the village, they removed it to the place where the sack was found on the 16th. The learned Judge relies also on the evidence of Fateh Sher, P. W. No. 10, who states that he saw the deceased sitting near Jehana on his last visit to Dhulial. Finally, reliance is placed on a statement amounting to a confession made by the accused on the 24th of July.

In our opinion, the evidence is insufficient to support the conviction. The confession of the accused was recorded by an Honorary Magistrate who has ignored all the essential provisions of the Code with regard to the recording of confessions. He made no enquiry from the confessant whether he was making a voluntary confession nor did he append any certificate to the recorded statement to certify that, in his opinion, the confession was a voluntary one. The absence of the certificate might be cured by the evidence of the Magistrate but the failure to make any enquiry as to the state of mind of the confessant at the time the confession was recorded is fatal and we must rule out the confession as inadmissible. The next question is, whether the bones recovered are those of Ghulam Muhammad. They do not by any means constitute a complete human skeleton. Most of the vertebrae, all the ribs, both thighs and nearly all the other bones of the legs are missing and not a scrap of the fleshy parts of the body was found. Even if the bag was broken, and it was removed when broken by P. W. No. 2 and P. W. No. 3 from the place where it was first deposited, we fail to see why so many portions of the body should have been missing. We note that close to the place where the sack was found there is a burying ground and it would not surprise us to learn that the relics produced had come from that burying ground. In short, we are not at all satisfied that the bones produced are the bones of Ghulam Muhammad. With regard to the evidence of Nizam Din and Mehra we are unable to agree with the learned Judge in describing it as the evidence of accomplices. According to their statements they took no part in the murder and had no knowledge of it till after its commission and they cannot, therefore, be described as accomplices. Their story appears to us to be very improbable for we fail to see why the appellant, who had relatives in the village, found it necessary to call in outsiders like Nizam Din and Mehra to aid him in concealing the dead body and it is remarkable that they should have removed the body from its first position to the second without communication with the actual murderer.

Then there is evidence of the recovery on the indication of the accused of a chadar, a kurta, and a safa which are alleged to have been in the possession of the deceased wher

CADD v. EMPEROR.

he left his home. These articles of clothing are stated to have been found not in one but in several places and the kurta at a place far distant from the alleged scene of the murder, and it is a remarkable circumstance that only the turban was found to be blood stained. If, however, the story given by the accused were true we should have expected both the chadar and the kurta to have been drenched with blood for the appellant in his confession stated that he killed Ghulam Muhammad by giving him two blows with the hatchet on the back of the neck. The absence of blood-stains on these two garments, in our opinion, is incompatible with the theory that they belonged to the deceased and were being worn by him at the time of his death.

Finally, there is evidence of persons who state that they saw deceased going towards appellant or sitting near him on the day of his disappearance. Such witnesses are Abdullah (P. W. No. 9) Fateh Sher (P. W. 10) and Nazra Khan (P. W. 8). But these witnesses made very belated statements to the Police and came forward with their deposition only after the Police had been several days engaged in the investigation in the village.

Before the Committing Magistrate and in the Sessions Court the appellant denied any knowledge of the murder and repudiated the discovery of the various articles alleged to have been found on his indication. He also alleged that the statement he made before the Honorary Magistrate was made at the suggestion of the Police and through fear of ill treatment.

In our opinion the evidence on which the appellant has been convicted is inadequate and unreliable. We accept his appeal and acquit him.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 182 OF 1923.

May 2, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Walsh.

C. J. CADD—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPONENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 406—Criminal breach of trust—Hire-purchase agreement—Purchaser, rights of—Transfer of article during currency of agreement—Offence, nature of.

The purchaser of an article under a hire-purchase agreement has no title to the article other than that of a hirer with a right to become the owner if he choose to pay the last instalment, and if he transfers the article to a third person before all the instalments have been paid, his act amounts to the offence of criminal breach of trust under section 406 of the Penal Code. [p. 509, col. 2.]

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Allahabad, dated the 14th March 1923.

Mr. I. B. Banerji, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision to review an order of the Sessions Judge of Allahabad, confirming a conviction by the Magistrate for breach of trust. The charge is one which is only too familiar to lawyers, namely, a charge against the hirer of an article under a hire-purchase agreement for having sold it as his own before he had paid up all the instalments. The case is a perfectly clear one and there is really very little to be said about the very clear and interesting judgment of the Sessions Judge. On one point, with regard to the civil aspect of the matter, I do not quite agree with him, but he guarded himself against giving a confident opinion. When one is considering the decisions so well-known in England of Lee v. Butler (1) and Hulby v. Matthews (2) which latter case (decided by the House of Lords) practically settled all legal controversy about these agreements, one must remember that in those cases the Courts were deciding whether the hirer could confer a good title upon a purchaser. That is a totally different question from the question whether he had any legal right to sell, or any honest belief that he had a legal right to sell. It turns entirely upon section 9 of the Factors Act in England which, corresponding to section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act, gives a kind of statutory title to a purchaser in good faith who has bought from a commercial factor who has been left in possession of the goods with the consent of the true owner under the conditions laid down by that section which include a person "who has agreed to buy," and the question in these two cases was whether the agreement made him a person who had agreed to buy, and what the House of Lords held was that a person who has an option to return the goods and not complete the purchase, cannot be held in the eyes of the law to be a person who "has agreed to buy." It was never suggested in either of these cases that the hirer was in fact the owner. Nor was it doubted that the agreement was a hire-purchase agreement in the colloquial sense of the term. But this question of civil law has no bearing at all upon the relationship between the owner and the hirer and upon the state of mind of the hirer when he sells. Mr. Cadd, when he signed this agreement, knew perfectly well that he was hiring the lorry, and that he could never become the owner unless he paid the whole sum due, and that he had no right to sell it as though it were his. As the learned Sessions Judge says: "the agreement is straightforward and clear." There are four features in it which are conclusive against the honest belief of any commercial man signing this agreement that the car was his to sell:

(1) (1893) 2 Q. B. 318; 62 L. J. Q. B. 591; R. 563; 69 L. T. 370; 42 W. R. 88.

(2) (1895) A. C. 471; 64 L. J. Q. B. 465; 11 R. 232; 72 L. T. 841; 43 W. R. 561; 60 J. P. 20.

CADD V. EMPEROR.

1. He calls himself the hirer.
2. He binds himself by a legal obligation to insure the car, a thing which no owner ever did or could do.
3. He agrees not to deal with the car, and to allow the owner to recover possession in case of default.

4. On the very page where his signature appears, he agrees that it shall remain the property of the owner.

He clearly had no title other than that of a hirer with a right to become the owner if he chose to pay the last instalment, and it is idle to read a section from the Contract Act providing that the property shall pass on certain conditions, when the parties by their solemn agreement have stated that it shall not pass except on the performance of one condition only. It is difficult to see how Mr. Cadd could possibly get a title to this car. I am not concerned to discuss this question, but, unless there is something in the law of India corresponding to section 9 of the Factors Act, the title always remained in the Motor Traders Limited and could not be transferred by Mr. Cadd in any way upon a third person, so that the person really defrauded is the purchaser. This brings me to the question of sentence. That question was not pressed upon the Sessions Judge but it has been pressed upon me and rightly pressed, because it appears to me that there are grounds for interfering with the sentence. I guard myself against saying one word in justification or palliation of a dishonest act of this kind, Mr. Cadd knew quite well that it was wrong to sell. He could have tested that question by sending a reply paid telegram to the Motor Traders Limited, asking their permission to sell. I know, and he knew quite well, what the answer to that telegram would have been. But it does appear that he made an honest attempt to carry out his agreement. He paid the insurance, he paid the expenses of the Motor Traders Limited representative, and he paid in the uncertain way in which these people always pay, instalments from time to time, and he went on paying even after he had sold. If these payments were made voluntarily, they show that his dishonest intention was very much qualified by a desire to do what was right and to avoid loss to the owner. If the payments were made and accepted to prevent criminal proceedings this is a vindictive prosecution by the Motor Traders Limited because they have failed to get their money. The Sessions Judge further says that the Bhagwan Ice Factory whose disposition to do well seems to be larger than their banking account, because their cheques were dishonoured, undertook to pay instalments out of Mr. Cadd's salary, and I rather assume that that undertaking was given to the Motor Traders Limited, so that, everything points to the latter having put pressure upon the accused and his employers to get their money. In addition to that, they are secured by a surety, who, if he is worth the money, will indemnify the Motor Traders Limited, against loss. He has given assurance of his desire to pay, but he has not followed them up by a payment in cash which would be the most satisfactory proof of his good intentions, and so far he has only filed an offer before the one Court which had no jurisdiction to enforce it. But, further still, in my opinion, the Motor Traders Limited, have a claim against the purchaser for the return of the car, and if they succeed in establishing that claim they will have done rather well except the inconvenience of having to prosecute one of their hirers. But, even further still, it appears that the accused has been made an insolvent, and what the value of a fine may be when inflicted upon a man who has got no assets to pay it with, I do not know. As it was inflicted after the adjudication, I presume the Receiver is not bound to pay, and it will, therefore, result in the accused having to serve another three months' imprisonment. Under all the circumstances, although the nature of the offence is not one to be condoned, the degree of guilt varies in different cases, and I am inclined to think that Mr. Cadd who undoubtedly has been unfortunate, made an honest attempt to meet the foolish and wrongful course of conduct into which he had drifted. On these grounds I should certainly, if there had been an appeal to me, have cancelled the fine and the imprisonment awarded in lieu thereof. I, therefore, alter the sentence to one of three months' simple imprisonment only and direct him to surrender to his bail and serve out under simple imprisonment the balance of the three months' imprisonment to which he was sentenced. The fine, if paid, will have to be re-paid to the receiver of his estate.

BAHADUR ALI v. EMPEROR.

W. C. A

Sentence reduced.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL, NO. 490 OF 1922.

August 9, 1922.

Presnt.—Mr. Justice Broadway.BAHADUR ALI—CONVICT—APPELLANT
versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 437, 503—Further inquiry—Notice to accused, necessity of—Additional District Magistrate, power of, to issue commission for examination of witness within jurisdiction—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 362, 365—Abduction, what constitutes—Woman, confinement of, pending negotiations for her release—Offence.

An order under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code for further inquiry should not be passed without notice to the person accused, and then only if the order of discharge was manifestly perverse or occasioned a grave miscarriage of justice. But an order for further inquiry passed without such notice is not illegal. [p. 511, col. 2.]

An officer appointed as Additional District Magistrate and authorised to exercise all the powers of a District Magistrate as contained in Sch. III, part V (18) of the Criminal Procedure Code is empowered to issue a commission under section 503 of the Code for the examination of a witness within his own jurisdiction. [p. 512, col. 1.]

R. J., a young woman, was abducted and taken to D. K. from where she, after a few days, made her escape, and was proceeding to a Police Station; on her way she met accused who represented himself to be a Police constable and offered to take her to the Police Station, but instead of doing this he took her to his house where he confined her and negotiated with her relatives who agreed to pay him for her release :

Held, that the action of the accused in falsely representing himself to be a Police constable and the inducement held out by him that he would take the woman to the Police Station amounted to abduction as defined in section 362 of the Penal Code. [p. 512, col. 2.]

Held, further, that in wrongfully confining the woman while he negotiated with her relative for the payment of a sum of money which was practically her ransom, his act fell under section 365 of the Penal Code. [p. 512, col. 2.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the First Class Magistrate, Rawalpindi, dated the 16th May 1922.

Mr. Kishen Chand, for the Appellant.

The Government Advocate, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Somewhere about the middle of December 1920 a young woman named Rakhmat Jan, wife of Fazal of Khurram Paracha, was kidnapped by Alaf Din and others and taken to Dhok Kureshi. Her abductors have been convicted and punished according to law. After Rakhmat Jan had been in Dhok Kureshi for a week or so she managed to effect her escape one afternoon and was going to Gobia Police Station where she met one Bahadur Ali who asked her who she was and where she was going. She told him she had been kidnapped and had escaped and was on her way to her friend. Bahadur Ali persuaded her to go home with him saying he was a Police Constable and would escort her to the thana. He took her to his house at Mera Ako where they arrived at sunset and at khustanwela she was locked into a kotha being threatened with being sent back to Dhok Kureshi if she created any trouble. Next morning he removed an earring from her person saying he would take it to her mother and in due course return her to her friends. He returned the following evening with some men to whom she was shown and a few nights later she was taken to Gobia to the Pir Sahib and made over to her mother.

BAHADUR ALI v. EMPEROR.

The mother's story was that Bahadur Ali had come to her with the earring and promised to return the girl on payment of Rs. 600. Rs. 300 were raised and sent by the band of Gaba and others—but Bahadur Ali held out for the Rs. 600. A further sum of Rs. 200 was raised and paid but as the girl was not made over, the mother appealed to the Pir Sahib of Gobia who sent for Bahadur Ali and on the payment of another Rs. 100 the girl was handed back.

She was taken to the thana and examined on the following day (30th December 1920) by the Police to whom she detailed what had occurred. She mentioned the meeting with Bahadur Ali and going to his house but nothing was said of any ill-treatment or wrongful confinement. It appears that her relatives also refrained from saying anything about the payment of Rs. 600.

On the 19th April 1921 Bahadur Ali was sent up by the Police for trial under section 368, Indian Penal Code. Lala Chuni Lal examined all the witnesses produced by the prosecution and discharged the accused holding the offence not only not proved but without foundation. He was apparently influenced greatly by the fact that the Pir Sahib of Gobia was not produced as a witness. This was on the 23rd May 1921. The Court Inspector then put up a note to the Superintendent of Police suggesting a revision, and this note was forwarded to the District Magistrate recommending a re-trial.

The District Magistrate took action on this informal reference and, without issuing notice to Bahadur Ali, directed a re-trial before the Court of another Magistrate.

Bahadur Ali having been discharged had gone away and for some time could not be found. He was, therefore, treated as an absconder and proceedings were commenced under section 512, Criminal Procedure Code in November 1921.

On the 17th March 1922 Bahadur Ali surrendered and was tried by the Additional District Magistrate who found the case proved, and sentenced him to rigorous imprisonment for five years including solitary confinement for three months.

On the 15th May 1922 Bahadur Ali moved this Court under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, against the order of the District Magistrate ordering a re-trial and Campbell, J., issued notice and stayed proceedings on the 18th May 1922. The order had, however, been passed on the 16th May 1922, and Bahadur Ali has, therefore, appealed against his conviction and sentence through Mr. Kishen Chand. I have heard the learned Government Advocate for the Crown.

It has been contended that the order of re-trial was illegal and that all subsequent proceedings must, therefore, be regarded as worthless. I am, however, unable to concede this point. The order was, strictly speaking, not illegal having regard to the wording of section 437, Criminal Procedure Code. At the same time it was passed in complete disregard or ignorance of the many decisions of this and other High Courts in which it has been repeatedly pointed out that an order for a further enquiry should not be passed without notice to the person accused, and then only if the order of discharge was manifestly perverse or occasioned a grave miscarriage of justice. The attention of the District Magistrate is drawn to these authorities for future guidance.

As the order was not illegal and as proceedings had terminated before the order staying them were issued I must dismiss the petition of revision.

BAHADUR ALI V. EMPEROR.

In the appeal it was contended that the evidence of the Pir Sahib of Gobia was not admissible in evidence and that as this was the only additional evidence produced at the second trial the appellants should be acquitted. Were the evidence of the Pir Sahib inadmissible I would have no hesitation in agreeing with the contention. Lala Chuni Lal's order of discharge was a considered one and cannot be described as perverse on the record before him. The Pir Sahib was examined on commission apparently under section 503, Criminal Procedure Code and it was contended that the Additional District Magistrate had no power to issue any such commission. This officer was, however, appointed an Additional District Magistrate and was authorised to exercise all the powers of a District Magistrate as contained in Sch. III, part V (18) and was thus empowered to issue a commission under section 503, Criminal Procedure Code. It was contended that this power did not entitle him to issue a commission for the examination of a witness within his own jurisdiction but I am unable to read any such limitation into the section and hold that the commission was not illegal. At the same time, I would note that it would have been better had the Additional District Magistrate proceeded to Gobia and examined this witness himself. The Pir Sahib's evidence is very damning to the appellant. There is no reason to doubt the truth of his testimony and he has sworn that the appellant admitted the woman to be in his possession and that her relatives had agreed to pay him for her release. This testimony considerably strengthens the evidence of the girl as to her detention by the appellant, and the statement of her mother and other prosecution witnesses relating to the negotiations between them and the appellant for the recovery of the girl.

It was contended that, even if the appellant did act as alleged, his action did not bring him within the purview of section 368, Indian Penal Code, inasmuch as there was no connection between him and the girl's original abductors. The learned Government Advocate was prepared to concede this but contended that in any event section 365, Indian Penal Code, was applicable.

Now, when the appellant met the girl she had ceased to be a kidnapped woman in the strict sense. She was then a free agent but she would not have gone with the appellant but for his false representations to her as to his being a Police Constable and the inducement held out by him that he would take her to the Police Station. His action, therefore, amounted to abduction as defined in section 362, Indian Penal Code.

His intention can best be judged by his conduct and the evidence leaves no room to doubt, that he intended to, and actually did confine her wrongfully while he negotiated with her relatives for the payment of a sum of Rs. 600 which was practically her ransom. His act, therefore, falls under section 365, Indian Penal Code vide Po Lan v. Emperor (1).

There remains the question of sentence. The Magistrate seems to have believed the woman's statement that the appellant ravished her—but this view I am unable to accept. The appellant had his wife with him in the house and this charge is a development of the girl's story for, as far as I have been able to ascertain, she did not mention this matter till she was giving her evidence at the second trial. The offence is undoubtedly a serious one and the action of the appellant reprehensible, but I do not think it warrants the sentence that has been passed. I do not believe that he ill-treated the girl beyond keeping her confined while he was negotiating for her ransom and having regard to the time this charge has been hanging over his head, I reduce the sentence to two years' rigorous imprisonment including three months' solitary confinement.

W. C. A. & N. H.

Sentence reduced:

(1) 19 Ind. Cas. 167; 6 L. B. R. 160; 6 Bur. L. T. 77; 14 Cr. L. J. 167;

SADHU SINGH v. EMPEROR.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 530 OF 1922.

July 31, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Abdul Qadir.

SADHU SINGH—CONVICT—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Evidence, record of—Vernacular record not in agreement with English record—Procedure—Doubt, benefit of.

Ordinarily, where evidence is given by a witness in his own language, the vernacular record of the case is more reliable and entitled to greater weight. But where the Magistrate recording the evidence in English is an Indian gentleman of considerable experience as a Magistrate, his record should be preferred. Where, however, the record of such a Magistrate and the vernacular record are at variance, the accused is entitled to the benefit of any omissions from the latter and the doubts created thereby. [p. 514, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the First Class, Magistrate, Ludhiana, dated the 31st May 1922.

Mr. B. R. Puri, for the Appellant.

Mr. Des Raj Sawhney, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Sadhu Singh, has been convicted of an offence under section 376, Indian Penal Code, for committing rape on Musammât Ram Moorti, a girl of about 8 or 9 years, on the 15th March 1922, and has been sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 500 or six months' further rigorous imprisonment in default. He has appealed to this Court through Mr. B. R. Puri, whom I have heard.

The story for the prosecution is, that the appellant caught hold of the little girl, whom he found alone in a field, when she was returning to her house, after giving her buffalo to a cowherd. He threw her down, broke open her azarband (the string with which her pajama was fastened) and forcibly committed sexual intercourse with her and left her unconscious. When she came to her senses, she got up, put on her pajama and went to her house. In the way she met Indar Singh and Jagat Singh and told them her story. Then she went and informed her mother. There were marks of blood on her private parts and on her pajama. Musammât Lilawati (P. W. No. 2), her mother, went and spoke to the appellant, who picked up a spade lying near him and ran after her to assault her. She then came and informed one Ujagar Singh about the occurrence. In the afternoon she went to the Thana to make a report, but the Head Constable refused to record it. She then collected a panchayat of the village people and laid her grievances before them. They sent for the appellant, who is said to have confessed to them, and it was ordered by the panchayat that he should pay a fine of Rs. 100 and agree to be taken round the village on a donkey with his face blackened and with a garland of shoes round his neck. He and his uncles apparently consented to the proposed punishment, but next morning the accused declined to undergo the same. Thereupon Maghi Ram, an uncle of the aggrieved girl, went to the Thana and made a report. The evidence of Major D. H. Rai, Civil Surgeon, shows that he found the following injuries on the person of Musammât Ram Moorti on the 18th March 1922:

- (1) Stains of blood on her private parts,
- (2) Slight swelling of the external parts,
- (3) Rupture of her hymen,
- (4) Three small abrasions on her back.

The Doctor was of opinion that penetration had been completed and the abrasions could be caused by the back rubbing against hard ground. He also stated that the injuries were three or four days old. He examined the appellant but found no injuries on his private parts and added that it was not necessary that there should be any marks there. He was also of opinion that the appellant was capable of having sexual intercourse and was about 15 years old.

The prosecution evidence in this case consists of the statement of Musammât Ram Moorti, supported by that of her mother and Indar Singh, P. W. No. 6, as to her narrating the occurrence to them soon after the event. Three respectable and disinterested witnesses, namely, Balak Singh (P. W. No. 3), Gurdit Singh (P. W. No. 4) and Narinjan Singh (P. W. No. 5), prove the story as to the holding of a panchayat and, as to the confession of his guilt by the appellant. Abdul Salam, Head Constable, (P. W. No. 9), proves the fact that Musammât Lilawati did go to make a report on the 15th March, but her report was not recorded. Thus, so far as the facts of the case are concerned, they are very clearly established and there is not the slightest doubt about them. Mr.

SADHU SINGH v. EMPEROR.

Puri has not disputed them before me and suggested no possibility of a false case. He has, however, urged two points for purposes of mitigation of the sentence.

Counsel urges that there is no direct evidence on the record to show that rape was completed and that penetration did take place. He refers to the statement of Musammam Ram Moorti (P.W. No. 1) as recorded in the vernacular where she states that after the appellant had broken the string of her pajama and had exposed his private parts, he thrust his finger inside her private parts and she felt such a pain thereby that she lost consciousness. It may be noted that this statement in the vernacular record is different to what the learned Magistrate has put down in the English record, where the girl says that the appellant "penetrated his private part into my private part and pushed forward." This part of the sentence does not find a place in the vernacular record at all, which is very unfortunate for the case for the prosecution. Mr. Puri urges that in cases where evidence is given by a witness in his own language, the vernacular record is always treated as more reliable and entitled to greater weight. That is true, but I am not sure if this maxim could always be safely applied in cases where a Magistrate who is taking down the evidence simultaneously in English, understands the language as well as his reader. In the present case the Magistrate who recorded the statement, is an Indian gentleman of long experience as a Magistrate, exercising section 30 powers. If it was simply a question of choosing between the two versions, I would certainly choose the version given in the record of the learned Magistrate in the present case, but I think after all there is considerable force in the contention of Mr. Puri, when he says that, even assuming that the Court Reader who took down the statement in the vernacular, inadvertently omitted the all important words or intentionally did so, the fact remains that these words are not there, and the appellant is entitled to the benefit of this omission and the doubts created thereby. He points out that the statement is supposed to have been read out to the witness and if the witness had made use of the words which have gone down on the English record, surely either the witness would have pointed out, when hearing her statement, that the words had been omitted, or the learned Magistrate could have detected this mistake and got it rectified. But nothing of the kind was done. In fact, the learned Magistrate has signed the vernacular statement as correct. Under such circumstances, I think the appellant is entitled to the benefit of this omission. I am aware of the fact that the medical opinion favours the view that penetration had taken place, but Mr. Puri argues that in the case of a girl of such tender years, a rupture of the hymen might possibly take place by a forcible penetration of the finger of the appellant and blood may come out. In this connection he draws my attention to the fact that the pajama of the girl, which was sent to the Chemical Examiner, was found to be blood-stained, but no semen was found on it, which might indicate that possibly the appellant, after seeing the girl fainting or becoming unconscious, might have got afraid and might have desisted from completing his offence. He adds that this view is further strengthened by the absence of any marks on the male organ of the appellant. He concedes that it is not necessary that the marks should be there in every case of rape, but he says that it is not likely that there would have been an entire absence of all marks if the appellant had tried penetration of his male organ when raping a girl of such tender years. It is argued on the strength of the circumstances referred to above that this should be treated as an attempt at rape and not a completed offence. As indicated above, I would have been inclined to agree with the learned Magistrate's view that rape was committed, but for the unfortunate discrepancy created between the English and the vernacular record in the statement of the principal witness in the case. This does raise a doubt and, coupled with the absence of semen on the pajama and the absence of marks on the male organ of the appellant, I think a situation is created in which it would be safer to convict the appellant of an attempt, rather than of a completed offence. I, therefore, alter his conviction to one under section 376-511, Indian Penal Code. With this modification in the conviction, the maximum imprisonment that could be awarded to him would be five years. But I think he is entitled to a further reduction of the sentence on account of his extreme youth. He is said by the medical witness to be 15. He has placed his birth certificate on the record, which would make him out to be 14½. Though the learned Magistrate is of opinion, judging by his looks, that he is 17, yet I think, in view of the medical opinion, it must be taken that he is not more than 15. Though his offence is a very serious one, considering the tender age of the girl against whom the offence was attempted, yet the effect of his own youth cannot be lost sight of altogether. I think a sentence of four years' rigorous imprisonment would meet the ends of justice in this case, and his appeal is accepted to that extent and his sentence reduced accordingly. The sentence of fine, however, will stand, in default of which he would undergo six months' further rigorous imprisonment as ordered by the Magistrate.

MONMOHAN DASS v. BABU LALL.

In conclusion, I may add that it is not without some reluctance that I have altered the conviction in this case, from one under section 376, Indian Penal Code, to one under section 376-511. This has been occasioned mainly by the sad mistake pointed out above in the vernacular record. The attention of the learned Magistrate is drawn to this fact, who, if necessary, will call upon the reader, who recorded the statement to explain the circumstances in which he came to make the omission. The learned Magistrate, too, if he had carefully watched the reading of the vernacular statement to the witness as he is expected to do, would have found out this mistake and got it corrected there and then. Any repetition of such mistakes should be guarded against in future especially with regard to points which relate to the most material particulars affecting the fate of a case.

W. C. A.

Sentence reduced.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 301 OF 1922.

June 20, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Adami.

MONMOHAN DASS—PETITIONER

versus

BABU LALL AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 107, 125—Security for keeping peace—Appeal, right of—Jurisdiction of District Magistrate to take executive action.

No appeal lies from an order under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code, but where a person bound down under that section applies to the District Magistrate to consider the case under section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code and cancel the bond, the latter is within his jurisdiction to take executive action for the settlement of the dispute and direct the applicant to be discharged from his security, that is, cancel the bond, if he comes to a finding that there was no real danger of a breach of the peace. [p. 516, col. 2].

Daya Nath Thakur v. Emperor, 5 Ind. Cas. 555; 37 C. 72; 14 C. W. N. 306; 11 C. L. J. 147, referred to.

Durga Singh v. Amar Dayal Singh, 66 Ind. Cas. 425; 3 P. L. T. 103; 23 C. L. J. 281; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 334, distinguished.

Mr. G. C. Pal, for the Petitioner.

Mr. S. P. Varma, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner seeks in this application to have the order of the District Magistrate of Monghyr discharging the opposite party from the necessity to execute bonds under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, set aside.

It appears that the Zemindar of Ulaa demanded enhanced rents from the tenants of village of Rani Shankarpura and, on their refusal to pay, instituted suits for enhancement, and this caused great discontent among the villagers, who determined to resist. They decided to refuse payment of rent to the landlord and to boycott his amla and servants; great friction arose and there were acts, and threats of violence which eventually led to an order being passed against the tenants, the five leaders of the opposite party, under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, binding them down to keep the peace.

The opposite party then made an application to the District Magistrate to consider the case under section 125 and cancel the bonds.

MONMOHAN DASS V. BARU LALL.

On the 25th October 1921, the District Magistrate passed the order:

"Admit appeal, send for record. Notice other party. As I shall be out on tour almost continuously for the next few months, I must hear the appeal in Camp. Beguserai will suit both parties. I will hear it on 11th November."

The District Magistrate accordingly started hearing the case on November 11th but came to the conclusion that it would be better if the parties came to terms, and gave time for this purpose. On January 12th he noted that the parties agreed to an enhancement of 3 annas 3 pies in the rupee instead of the admissible enhancement of 5 annas in the rupee. He then settled that time should be given for the deposit of rents by the tenants.

On the 6th of March he recorded that the parties had more or less settled their dispute and that 232 tenants had agreed to the figures of the rent settled and some 80 others were likely to settle their differences with the landlord. It was also agreed to settle the rent suits. On the 21st March after distribution of the rent receipts, the District Magistrate noted that though the five present petitioners had not settled their dispute direct with the landlord, there was no sufficient reason for postponing the disposal of the case. He remarked that the landlord had been almost as much to blame for the trouble as the tenants and then he wrote in the order-sheet:

"I do not consider that after the present settlement there is any danger of a breach of the peace. I accordingly allow the appeal and discharge the appellants from the necessity of giving security for their future behaviour, setting aside the order of the lower Court."

A patwari of the landlord has moved this Court against the said order. Mr. Gour Chandra Pal, on his behalf, argues that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal against an order in proceedings under section 107, and that the only order he could pass under section 125 was an order cancelling the bond. He relies on the decision in Daya Nath Thakur v. Emperor (1) and on a judgment of mine in the case of Durga Singh v. Amar Dayal Singh (2).

There is no doubt as to the correctness of the contention that no right of appeal lies against an order under section 107, and that the order to be passed under section 125 is an order cancelling the bond. In the present case we find, however, that there was no appeal by the opposite party, in their petition they asked the Magistrate to consider their case under section 125, to set aside the order of the Court below and direct cancellation of the bonds. It is true that the Magistrate in the order-sheet described the petition as an appeal and proceeded to hear the parties, but he subsequently took purely executive action in bringing about a settlement between the landlord and tenants, and in his final order, though he states that he allowed the appeal, he also stated that in his opinion there was no real danger of a breach of the peace, and discharged the petitioners from the necessity of giving security, and this was equivalent to a cancellation of the bonds. The case of Durga Singh v. Amar Dayal Singh (2), mentioned above, was of a very different nature. There the Deputy Commissioner discussed the propriety and validity of the Deputy Magistrate's procedure and came to a finding that the proceedings were void as being without jurisdiction. He said nothing about cancellation of the bonds or discharge of the men bound down for their security.

I can find no reason to hold that in the present case the District Magistrate acted without jurisdiction. He took executive action for the settlement of the dispute and then came to a finding that there was no real danger of a breach of the peace and directed the opposite party to be discharged from their security, which meant cancellation of the bonds. That the District Magistrate wrongly described the proceeding as an appeal makes no difference.

It is complained that the petitioner was not given a hearing before the order was passed; the order-sheet shows that notice was issued to the landlord's party and that throughout the landlord was represented. Furthermore, the petitioner cannot contend that the proceeding before the District Magistrate was an appeal, and at the same time demand that he should have the rights of a respondent to an appeal.

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 555; 37 C. 72; 14 C. W. N. 306; 11 Cr. L. J. 147.

(2) 66 Ind. Cas. 425; 3 P. L. T. 103; 23 Cr. L. J. 281; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 334.

BISHNA V. EMPEROR.

It is lastly argued that though other tenants settled their dispute, the five members of the opposite party did not do so. The finding of the District Magistrate that there was no further danger of a breach of the peace was sufficient for an order for cancelment of the bonds.

I can see no good reason to interfere; the application is rejected.

N. K.

Application rejected.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 578 OF 1922.

July 15, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.BISHNA AND OTHERS—CONVICTS—PETITIONERS
versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 147, 325—Unlawful assembly—Rioting and grievous hurt—Rioting not complete without hurt—Separate sentences whether can be inflicted.

Separate sentences for the offences of rioting and grievous hurt cannot legally be imposed upon a member of an unlawful assembly where the offence of rioting is not itself complete until the grievous hurt is actually inflicted, that is to say, where the causing of the hurt is itself the form of force or violence which constitutes the offence of rioting.

Bhagwan Singh v. Empress of India, 4 P. R. 1901 Cr.; 59 P. L. R. 1901, relied on.

Petition for revision against the order of the District Magistrate, Ferozepore, dated the 15th March 1922.

Mr. D. M. Chand, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.—In the case from which this petition for revision has arisen eight persons have been convicted, all under section 147 and three of them under sections 325 and 324, Indian Penal Code. The convicts with whom I am concerned are Chanan Singh, Jamiat Singh and Amrik Singh. The finding of the Magistrate which was upheld on appeal by the learned District Magistrate, is that the eight convicts formed an unlawful assembly with the common object of attacking Dalip Singh and others; that they did so, and that they inflicted more or less severe injuries upon Dalip Singh, Baggu and Natha Singh including grievous hurt to Dalip Singh. The learned District Magistrate in maintaining the convictions found that the offence was deliberately premeditated.

In addition to sentence imposed under section 147, Indian Penal Code, of three months rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 30 each, Chanan Singh, Jamiat Singh and Amrik Singh were separately sentenced as follows on account of individual acts held to have been committed by each:—

(1) Chanan Singh to two months rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 50 for an offence under section 325 against the person of Dalip Singh.

(2) Jamiat Singh to three months rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 50 under section 324, Indian Penal Code, for hurt inflicted on Dalip Singh with an edged weapon; and

(3) Amrik Singh to a similar sentence for a like offence committed against Baggu.

Notice issued for consideration of the legality of the two separate sentences awarded to each of these three persons in view of what was laid down in Bhagwan Singh v. Empress of India (1) that separate sentences for the offences of rioting and grievous hurt cannot legally be imposed upon a member of an unlawful assembly where the offence of rioting was not itself complete until the grievous hurt was actually inflicted, that is to say, where the causing of the hurt was itself the form of force or violence which constituted the offence of rioting.

I have examined the evidence and I find that the injured persons Dalip Singh, Baggu and Natha Singh and three other professed eye-witnesses declare, that the first violence was an attack upon Dalip Singh who was struck three blows, one by Jamiat Singh with a talwa, another by Chanan Singh which broke his arm and a third by one of the other convicts Kartara. It appears, therefore, that the double sentences of Jamiat Singh and Chanan Singh cannot be maintained, since the unlawful assembly was converted into a riot by the acts which are the basis of their convictions under sections 324 and 325, Indian Penal Code.

(1) 4 P. R. 1901 Cr; 52 P. L. R. 1901.

JAMNA PRASAD V. EMPEROR.

As regards Amrik Singh, the evidence which has been believed by the two Courts below and which apparently has been accepted as substantially correct by the learned Judge who issued notice on this petition, is that he was a member of the unlawful assembly and that the blow administered by him on Baggu was not inflicted until after the unlawful assembly had become a riot by the attack on Dalip Singh.

So far, therefore, as Amrik Singh is concerned, the petition is rejected. In regard to Jamiat Singh and Chanan Singh, it is accepted to this extent that the sentence of three months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 3 under section 147, Indian Penal Code, imposed upon Jamiat Singh is set aside; and the sentence of two months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 50 imposed on Chanan Singh under section 325 is also set aside. Their respective sentences under sections 324 and 147, Indian Penal Code, will be maintained.

N. K.

Sentences reduced.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 178 OF 1923.

May 16, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.

JAMNA PRASAD AND OTHERS—

APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), ss. 5, 6—Warrant under s. 5—Boundaries of house not given—Warrant not addressed to definite Police Officer—Warrant, whether legal.

A warrant issued under section 5 of the Public Gambling Act, which omits to describe the boundaries of the house to be searched and which is not addressed to any definite Police Officer, is not a legal warrant, and the presumption authorised by section 6 of that Act cannot be raised. [p. 519, col. 1.]

Reference made by the Sessions Judge, Mainpuri, dated 16th March 1923.

Mr. Kumuda Prasad, for Applicant No. 1.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is a reference by the Sessions Judge of Mainpuri in a case in which certain persons have been convicted of an offence under section 4 of Act No. III of 1867, and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 10 each. It appears that on the 18th of October 1922 the Superintendent of Police received credible information that a common gaming house was maintained by Puttu Lal, son of Changi Mal, by caste Brahmin, resident of Mainpuri. Puttu Lal was employed as a miscellaneous clerk in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, but at that time he was on leave. The Superintendent of Police issued a warrant for the search of the house of Puttu Lal but omitted to get the boundaries of that house noted in the warrant or to enter to whom it was addressed. The caste of Puttu Lal was also misdescribed. The Sub-Inspector to whom the warrant in question was handed over waited for a suitable opportunity to make the search. On the 2nd of December 1922 he is said to have received information from Sannu, an ekka driver, that gambling was going on in the house of Puttu Lal. He corrected the caste of Puttu Lal in the warrant with his own hand and went to the house of Puttu Lal and made a search with the result that certain instruments of gaming were found in the house and certain persons were arrested with money in their possession. The main question for consideration in the case was, whether the warrant of search was legal. There was a further question as to how far a presumption could be raised that the house in question was used as a common gaming house. The learned Sessions Judge finds that the warrant was illegal, inasmuch as the boundaries of the house to be searched were not given therein, and it was not addressed to any definite Police Officer. He further finds that the caste of Puttu Lal as originally entered in the warrant was misdescribed and that the Sub-Inspector who executed the warrant was not authorized to correct it on his own initiative. Section 5 of the Public Gambling Act, No. III of 1867, provides that if the Superintendent of Police has reason to believe that any house is used as a common gaming house he may either himself enter, or by warrant authorise any officer of Police not below such rank as the Local Government shall appoint in this behalf to enter, such a house and to take into custody all persons who may be found therein and seize all instruments of gaming, moneys and securities reasonably suspected to have been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming, which are found therein. Where such a warrant is issued, the law raises a presumption, until the contrary is made to appear, that such house is used as a common gaming house and that the persons found therein are there present for the purpose of gaming.

GANGA RAM V. MURAD SHAH:

The house in question was the residential house of Puttu Lal and his brother. The erroneous description of the caste in the original warrant may not be very material, but the omission to address it to a definite Police Officer and to describe the house by its boundaries or number renders the warrant vague and indefinite, and it cannot be said that under that warrant the Officer making the search was authorised to make it. The Superintendent of Police says, that he does not remember who took the warrant to him for signature or to whom it was handed over by him. The warrant in question cannot, therefore, be regarded as legal and the presumption authorised by section 6 of the Public Gambling Act, No. III of 1867, cannot be raised. In fact Puttu Lal who was convicted by the Trying Magistrate on a charge of keeping a common gaming house has already been acquitted by the learned Sessions Judge. The conviction of the other persons cannot, therefore, be upheld. The reference is accepted and the convictions and sentences passed on the applicants are set aside. The fines, if realised, will be refunded.

W. C. A.

*Reference accepted.
Sentences set aside.*

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 588 OF 1922.

August 3, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Qadir.

GANGA RAM—PETITIONER

versus

MURAD SHAH—RESPONDENT.

*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145—
Final order—Finding of apprehension of breach of peace, whether necessary.*

In making a final order under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is not necessary for the Magistrate to record a finding that there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace, such a finding is necessary only for the purpose of the preliminary order when the Magistrate assumes jurisdiction under that section.

Petition under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of the order of the Magistrate, Jhang, dated the 31st March 1922.

Lala Harbhajan Das, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Shah Nawaz, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Sardar Sewa Singh, Magistrate, First Class, Jhang, passed an order on the 31st March 1922, purporting to act under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, attaching a house, about which a dispute existed between Ganga Ram and Murad Shah, in connection with which a breach of peace was apprehended. He found that the house was not in the effective possession of either party at the time of the dispute, and that he was unable to determine as to who was in possession when he passed his preliminary order or two months before it. He referred both the parties to seek their respective remedies in Civil Courts.

Ganga Ram, who professes to have been in possession has applied to this Court for a revision of the said order on the ground that there being no finding as to any apprehension of the breach of the peace, the Court had no jurisdiction to take action under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code. There is a counter-application for revision on behalf of Murad Shah, who alleges that he was in possession at the time of the passing of the preliminary order and should have been retained in possession. I have heard Lala Harbhajan Das on behalf of Ganga Ram and Mr. Shah Nawaz on behalf of the Muṛād Shāh; and think the order must stand.

SHEO CHARAN V. EMPEROR.

Lala Harbhajan Das has pressed before me the ground as to the absence of a finding about there being a danger of a breach of the peace, but it is pointed out by Mr. Shah Nawaz that the finding is necessary for the purpose of the preliminary order, when a Magistrate assumes jurisdiction under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, but once he is satisfied that there is an apprehension that peace will be broken, it is unnecessary that he should record a finding to that effect again when passing his final order. He refers to Kamāl Kuitiy v. Udayavarma Raja (1) and several other authorities in support of this contention, which is, I think, correct. The Magistrate was, therefore, justified in taking action. As the Magistrate finds that none of the parties seems to be effectively in possession of the house, there seems to be no reason to interfere with his order attaching the house, and leaving either party to go to a Civil Court, though I am not satisfied that the action taken by him is, strictly speaking, correct according to the provisions of section 145. The proviso to sub-section (4) to section 145 enacts that if the Magistrate considers a case one of emergency, he may, at any time, attach the subject of dispute pending his decision under this section, but he has not said anything as to the emergency. This point was raised by Lala Harbhajan Das in his grounds of revision, but has not been pressed before me by any of the parties. It seems to me, however, that what the section really contemplates is that the Magistrate should decide which of the parties was actually in possession before the dispute. According to the learned Magistrate, the material before him was not sufficient to enable him to come to a decision on the question of possession and, therefore, he has tried to avert a possible breach of the peace by attaching the property, and referring the parties to a civil suit.

Under the circumstances, I do not see any reason for interfering with this order in revision and allow it to stand.

W. C. A. & N. H.

Interference declined.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 139 OF 1923.

March 22, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Ryves and Mr. Justice Daniels.

SHEO CHARAN—APPELLANT.

versus.

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 412—Retention of property obtained in dacoity—Property belonging to different owners—Separate convictions.

A person found in possession of property which he knew or had reason to believe was stolen in a dacoity, and which property is identified as belonging to different owners, cannot be convicted separately in respect of the property identified by each owner unless there is evidence to prove that it was received by him at different times or from different persons.

Queen-Empress v. Mahan, 15 A. 317; A. W. N. (1893) 101; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 919; Ishan Muchi v. Queen-Empress, 15 C. 511; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 925, followed.

Criminal appeal from an order of the Second Additional Sessions Judge, Gorakhpur, dated the 20th January 1923.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Sheo Charan appeals from his conviction under section 412 of the Indian Penal Code. The facts found against him are as follows:—

On the 14th April 1922 a Sub-Inspector of Police had occasion to search his house with reference to another criminal charge. His suspicions were aroused by the condition of a small platform behind an oven in the kitchen and he dug up the place. He unearthed a bundle in which were a number of ornaments, some broken up and some intact. It was subsequently ascertained that one of these articles on which this charge is based, was stolen in a dacoity which took place at the house of Musammāt Dhanpatia in the village of Marwatia on the 30th December 1921. There is further evidence that this dacoity in Marwatia was committed by the same gang that committed another dacoity at about the same time in the village of Ganwaria; and it has been satisfactorily proved that some of the ornaments found in the same bundle were taken in that dacoity. Sheo Charan has already been put on his trial and convicted under section 412 of the Indian Penal Code in connection with the articles stolen at the Ganwaria dacoity and was sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment.

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 65; 36 M. 275; 12 M. L. T. 439; 23 M. J. J. 499; (1912) M. W. N. 1154; 13 Cr. L. 753.

RAJA RAM V. EMPEROR.

He has now been put on his trial for being in dishonest possession of this particular ornament knowing or having reason to believe that it was stolen in a dacoity. In our opinion, Sheo Charan cannot on the evidence adduced in this case be convicted separately with regard to this particular ornament. There is no evidence that it was received by him on a different occasion to the ornaments which were stolen in the Ganwaria dacoity. Both the ornaments were found in the same bundle hidden at the same place. The case of Queen-Empress v. Makhan (1) [which followed an earlier Calcutta decision Ishan Muchi v. Queen-Empress (2)] is authority for the proposition that a person found in possession of stolen property identified as belonging to different owners cannot be convicted separately in respect of property identified by each owner unless there is evidence to prove that they were received by him at different times.

We have been asked by the learned Assistant Government Advocate to dissent from this case but we are not prepared to do so. It has stood unchallenged for nearly thirty years and has been treated as laying down the law by which the Courts should be guided. On principle also we consider that the ruling is correct. The essence of an offence under section 411 or 412 is the act of receiving or retaining stolen property. If a thief hands over to the accused a bundle containing a number of articles; the offence committed by the accused in receiving those articles is a single offence and not a number of offences and it makes no difference whether the articles belonged to a single owner or to different owners. If there were evidence that the accused received the articles at different times or from different persons the case would be different but the Court cannot presume this against the accused in the absence of any evidence.

W. C. A. & N. H. Order accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 1568 OF 1922.

January 15, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

RAJA RAM—CONVICT—PETITIONER
versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Public Gambling Act (I I I of 1867), ss. 3, 4—Search warrant, not specifying place to be searched, legality of—Magistrate issuing warrant, whether competent to try case—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 32—Co-accused in separate case, whether can be called as defence witness.

A Magistrate signed the printed form of a warrant for the search of a house under the Gambling Act and gave it to a Sub-Inspector of Police. The place to be searched was not specified in the body of the warrant when the Magistrate signed it, but the Sub-Inspector subsequently noted down at the bottom of the warrant the boundaries of the house to be searched.

Held, that as the warrant when signed by the Magistrate was not for the search of any particular place it was illegal. [p. 522, col. 1.]

Hargobind v. Emperor, 17 Ind. Cas. 576; 35 A. 1; 10 A. L. J. 355; 13 Cr. L. J. 832 and Benwari v. Queen-Empress, 11 P. R. 1895 Cr., relied on.

A Magistrate issuing a search warrant under the Gambling Act should not himself try any case which results from the search as the accused persons have the right to examine the Magistrate as a witness as to the circumstances under which the warrant was issued. [p. 522, col. 2.]

Petitioner who was being tried in separate trials for offences under sections 3 and 4 of the Public Gambling Act wished to examine a co-accused in the case under section 4 as his defence witness in the case under section 3. The Magistrate refused to permit this.

(1) 15 A. 317; A. W. N. (1893) 101; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 919.

(2) 15 C. 511; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 925.

RAJA RAM V. EMPEROR.

Held, that section 132 of the Evidence Act provided sufficient protection for the witness in such a case, and he could not be excused from appearing in the witness-box. [p. 522, col. 2.]

Petition, under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of an order of the Sessions Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 28th August 1922, affirming that of the Magistrate, First Class, Ludhiana, dated the 30th June 1922.

Lala Nanwa Mal, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—Petition in Revisions Nos. 1568, 1627 and 1628 of 1922 arise out of two connected cases, one under section 4 and the other under section 3 of the Gambling Act (III of 1867), and will, therefore, be disposed of together.

The grounds for revision pressed before me are:—

(1) that the warrant authorising search of the house was illegal;

(2) that the Magistrate who issued the warrant should not have tried the case himself because the petitioners wanted to examine him as a witness in respect of the circumstances under which he issued the warrant, and

(3) that Mukandi Lal, petitioner, was prejudiced in his defence in the case under section 3, because the Magistrate refused to call and examine as a defence witness one Gora, who was a co-accused with him in the other case under section 4.

It is in evidence that Syed Ali Shah, Sub-Inspector of Police, gave information to the Magistrate on which the latter signed the printed form of the warrant and that Syed Ali Shah himself subsequently noted down at the bottom of it the boundaries of the house to be searched. It is, therefore, contended that it was not a legal warrant inasmuch as the house to be searched was not specified therein when the Magistrate signed it. I am of opinion that this contention must prevail. In the body of the warrant the place used as public gaming house was not stated at all and, therefore, the warrant when signed by the Magistrate was not for the search of any particular place and was illegal. See on this point Hargobind v. Emperor (1), Benwari v. Queen-Empress (2).

As regards the second point the accused had the right to examine the Magistrate issuing the warrant as a witness to enquire from him what was the information received by him and how the warrant was filled up by the Sub-Inspector. Therefore, he was materially prejudiced by the trial of the case by the very Magistrate who had issued the warrant.

As regards the third point, the Magistrate's reasons for refusing to call Gora as a defence witness in Mukandi Lal's case are quite unsatisfactory. According to section 132 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), "a witness shall not be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue in any....criminal proceedings upon the ground that the answers to such questions will criminate, or may tend directly or indirectly to criminate such witness, or that it will expose, or tend directly or indirectly to expose, such witness to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind provided that no such answer, which a witness shall be compelled to give shall be proved against him in any criminal proceeding." This section provides sufficient protection for a witness compelled to give evidence in a case like the present and he could not, therefore, be excused as laid down in the section from appearing in the witness-box.

The irregularities stated above vitiated the trials and, therefore, I accept the revision and set aside the convictions and acquit the petitioners. The fines, if already received, will be refunded.

Z. K.

Revision accepted.

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 576; 35 A 1; 10 A. L. J. 355; 13 Cr. L. J. 832.

(2) 1 P. R. 1895 Cr.

RADHIKA NATHA SAHA v. JOTISH CHANDRA SADHU.

BHAGWAN DAS v. EMPEROR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION

NO. 72 OF 1923.

May 21, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh.

RADHIKA NATHA SAHA—APPLICANT

versus

JOTISH CHANDRA SADHU—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Jurisdiction—Criminal case pending in another Province, stay of—High Court, jurisdiction of.

A High Court has no jurisdiction to declare that a criminal case pending in a Court not subject to its jurisdiction is triable exclusively in another Court; nor has it jurisdiction to stay all further proceedings in a criminal case which is in course of hearing in a Court not subject to its jurisdiction.

Charu Chandra Majumdar v. Emperor, 37 Ind. Cas. 145; 44 C. 595; 21 C. W. N. 320; 25 C. L. J. 165; 18 Cr. L. J. 81 (F. B.), not followed.

Criminal Miscellaneous application for transfer.

Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—This is, in my opinion, in substance an application for transfer. It is apparently proposed to do it by indirect means; first, getting a letter of request from Allahabad to Calcutta, then an order of stay or postponement out of the Magistrate at Calcutta, and then a declaration out of Allahabad that the case is exclusively triable in Benares. Nobody can doubt that all that complicated machinery is really an application for transfer. As an application for transfer it is bound to fail. This Court has no jurisdiction to transfer criminal cases which are in the course of hearing in another Province. Apparently Calcutta thought otherwise in the case of Charu Chandra Majumdar v. Emperor (1). But the Madras High Court did not agree and I prefer the Madras view. All that will be wiped out and irrelevant, by the new section 185 as amended by the Criminal Procedure Code of 1923 when it becomes law. Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji quite naturally objected to my describing the application as one for transfer, because as an application for transfer it was bound to fail, and I will, therefore, deal with it in the language in which this application is presented to this Court. This Court is asked to declare that this case is triable exclusively in Benares and not in Calcutta. This Court has no jurisdiction to make any such declaration, and I should not, in any event, even if there were jurisdiction, make a declaration which was a nullity. Secondly, this Court is asked to stay all further proceedings in the Second Presidency Magistrate's Court at Calcutta. This Court has no jurisdiction over the Second Presidency Magistrate's Court at Calcutta. The application is dismissed. The certified copies of the Calcutta proceedings are to be returned forthwith to Mr. S. N. Mukerji.

W. A. C. & N. H. Application dismissed.

OUDE JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 116 OF 1922.

November 9, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

BHAGWAN DAS—ACCUSED

versus

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 137—Title, dispute as to—Conditional order, propriety of.

Where there is a genuine dispute as to title suitable for decision by the Civil Court, that is a sufficient ground within [the meaning of section 137 of the Criminal Procedure Code for holding that a conditional order under section 137 is not reasonable and proper.

Appeal against the order of the District Magistrate, Sultanpur, dated the 22nd September 1922, upholding the order of the Magistrate, First Class, Amethi, dated the 31st August 1922, ordering the demolition of applicant's house under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Mr. Hardhwan Chandra, for the Applicant.
The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order passed under section 137 of the Code of Criminal Procedure directing the applicant to demolish a portion of his house which is alleged by the District Board to encroach on a public road.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 145; 44 C. 595; 21 C. W. N. 320; 25 C. L. J. 165; 18 Cr. L. J. 81 (F. B.)

NADAR v. EMPEROR

There is no evidence on record to induce any Court to come to the conclusion that the order of the Magistrate was reasonable and proper. Only a Sub-Overseer was examined on behalf of the prosecution and his testimony is very vague. He had no personal knowledge and he conjectured from some map produced by him that the applicant had encroached upon the public way. He stated that the breadth of the road varied and did not definitely state what the breadth of the road was exactly opposite the applicant's house and at the place where the encroachment is alleged to have been made. It took the Court of the Magistrate nearly four months to obtain the presence of this Overseer in Court. The applicant was never examined by the Magistrate. He had appeared on every one of the 20 hearings in the case but was never ordered definitely to produce his witnesses. It would be hard to expect him to attend the Court with his witnesses 20 times during four months to be ready whenever it may please the Sub-Overseer to appear in Court and give evidence. On 29th of August after the Sub-Overseer's evidence was recorded sufficient time ought to have been granted to the applicant to produce his witnesses. Apart from this want of opportunity to the applicant to prove his defence, the order of the Magistrate cannot stand because the testimony of the Overseer is not sufficient to support it. In this connection the attention of the Subordinate Courts taking action under Chapter X of the Code of Criminal Procedure may be usefully drawn to the observations of the learned Judicial Commissioner, Mr. Daniels, in his order, dated the 5th October 1922 in Criminal Application No. 101 of 1922 (Ram Lakham v. Emperor, (1)). He observed that the existence of a genuine dispute as to title suitable for decision by the Civil Court is a sufficient ground within the meaning of section 137 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for holding that the conditional order is not reasonable and proper. The present appears to me to be such a case where the dispute ought to be decided by the Civil Court.

In the result I set aside the Magistrate's order dated the 31st August 1922.

W. C. A.

Order set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 74 OF 1920.

March 31, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wilberforce.

NADAR—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 498—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 403—Detaining married women—Offence, nature of—Previous acquittal, whether bars prosecution for subsequent act of detention.

The detention of a married woman is a continuing offence, and the fact that a person has been acquitted of such an offence on one occasion, does not operate as a bar to his prosecution for any subsequent act of detention. To such subsequent prosecution the provisions of section 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code do not apply. [p. 594, col. 2.]

Emperor v. Harnam Singh, 6 Ind. Cas. 497; 22 P. L. R. 1910; 11 Cr. L. J. 366; 53 P. W. R. 1910 Cr., distinguished.

Case reported by the District Magistrate, Jhelum, with his No. 91 F. of 8th January 1920.

FACTS.—Jumma, the complainant, brought a complaint under section 498, Indian Penal Code, against Nadar, accused, on the 7th May 1917, urging that his wife, Musamat Begaman, was enticed away at night, when he was on the well outside the village. The Magistrate after taking defence evidence acquitted the accused on the 20th November 1917 on the ground that the evidence was too weak to base a conviction.

Again, on the 12th August 1918 Jumma, the complainant, brought the complaint under section 498/109, Indian Penal Code, against Nadar, accused, with four others on a charge of retaining his wife. The case was compromised and the accused acquitted on the 5th October 1918.

Again, on 29th October 1918 Jumma, the complainant, lodged the complaint under section 498/109, Indian Penal Code, against Nadar and three others urging that accused had abducted his wife a long time ago, but on the requests of some reliable persons he compromised and the accused were let off, but according to the verbal promise, the woman was not returned to him and he is living with her.

NADAR v. EMPEROR.

The accused, by Hakim Fazal Hussain exercising the powers of a Magistrate of the Second Class in the Jhelum District, was charged by order dated the 11th November 1919 under section 498 of the Indian Penal Code.

GROUND.—This is an extraordinary case. It would appear that a case on these facts under section 498, Indian Penal Code, was brought against accused on the 7th May 1917. Accused was acquitted. Again on the 12th August 1918 a further charge was made on the same facts under section 498, Indian Penal Code. This was compromised. Now a third case is in progress on the same facts. In view of section 403, Criminal Procedure Code, it would appear that even the second case was illegal on the principal of "res judicata." But, under any circumstances, as the second case was compromised and the compromise is on the file and not questioned, the ruling Emperor v. Harnam Singh (1) makes it clear that the Magistrate in the third case is acting "ultra vires."

I accept the petition and forward the proceedings to the High Court with the recommendation that the proceedings be quashed.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—Jumma, the present complainant, brought a complaint under section 498 against Nadar, on 7th May 1917, for enticing away his wife. Nadar was acquitted on 20th November 1917. In the following year on 12th August 1918 Jumma returned to the attack and brought a complaint against Nadar and others for detaining his wife. The case was compromised and the accused were acquitted on 5th October 1918. The allegation of the complainant is that Nadar promised to return his wife which he has not done. The alleged breach of his promise, however, is not material for the purposes of the present case. On 29th October 1918 Jumma again instituted a similar complaint for detention against Nadar and three others. The Magistrate trying the case has framed a charge for this offence. The persons charged applied for revision to the District Magistrate, who has forwarded the proceedings, under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, to this Court on the ground that a second complaint after an acquittal is against the provisions of section 403, Criminal Procedure Code, and that in a similar case reported in Emperor v. Harnam Singh (1), it had been held by this Court that after a compromise further proceedings were ultra vires.

I have perused the authority referred to by the District Magistrate and find that it was merely held that after a compromise in a section 498 case further proceedings in that case were ultra vires. This is an obvious proposition but it does not apply to the present case. In this case Jumma is now complaining in a new complaint, of the detention of his wife which took place since 5th October 1918, and I am unable to understand how he is in any way debarred from prosecuting this complaint. Section 403, Criminal Procedure Code, certainly can have no application as previous acquittals were in respect of previous detentions. Counsel for the applicants urges that the effect of the acquittal of 5th October 1918 was to indemnify the wrong-doers from any punishment in respect of the woman's detention. With this argument I agree with the qualification that the indemnity was only effective for an offence committed before the date of the acquittal. It is clear that detention of a married woman is a continuing offence and that a person committing such an offence is always liable to prosecution except for any period in respect of which he has been found innocent. I hold, therefore, that the action of the Magistrate in framing the charge is in no way ultra vires.

I may mention that Dr. Nand Lal also contended that it was clear from the complaint itself that the accused were being charged with the abduction and with previous acts of detention. The fact and date of the original abduction were certainly mentioned in the complaint as also the previous detention. But these references were merely preliminary and it cannot be argued that it was complainant's intention to prosecute again the accused for offences for which they had been acquitted.

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 497; 22 P. L. R. 1910; 11 Cr. L. J. 366; 53 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.

SHIMBHU NARAIN V. EMPEROR.

I dismiss the application for revision. The record to be returned to the Magistrate for continuance of the proceedings.

W. C. A.

Interference declined.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 124 OF 1923.

March 28, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ryves.

SHIMBHU NARAIN—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

*Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 88, 92—
Chaining up insane person—Good faith.*

Where a person of education and wealth and living in a town, where medical attendance can easily be procured, chains up his occasionally insane brother in an unnecessarily cruel way for over 3 months and apparently would have continued so to confine him indefinitely, if the District Judge had not interfered, he cannot be said to have acted in good faith, i.e., with due care and attention and cannot be given the benefit of sections 88 and 92 of the Penal Code.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Farrukhabad.

Messrs. C. Ross Alston and P. N. Sapru, for the Applicant.

Mr. R. Malcomson (Assistant Government Advocate), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an unusual case. Shimbhu Narain was convicted by a Magistrate of the First Class under section 344 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to one day's detention, till the rising of the Court, and a fine of Rs. 200. His appeal was dismissed by the learned Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad and he comes here in revision. The facts are not disputed.

Shimbhu Narain is a wealthy Zemindar and an Honorary Magistrate in the town of Kanauj. The charge against him is that of having wrongfully confined his brother, Maheshwar Narain, for more than ten days, in fact, from the 29th of March until the 3rd of July 1922. It appears that Mahesh-war Narain is subject to fits of insanity, and, on such occasions, exhibits dangerous and violent tendencies. On or about the 29th of March he certainly became very violent and went about brandishing a sword and threatening to do violence to people. I think there is no doubt that on that date he was insane, and dangerously so. Shimbhu Narain had him chained up with very heavy chains and kept him in that condition until the 3rd of July, when, the matter having been reported to the District Judge, Shimbhu Narain was called upon to produce Maheshwar Narain before him. He did so and brought him to Court chained in the same fetters in which he had been confined. An examination of Maheshwar Narain's mental condition was then made by two medical practitioners and he was certified to be then sane. These facts are admitted.

It is argued that Shimbhu Narain was justified in what he did and that he acted honestly. As evidence of his honesty, attention is drawn to the fact that he produced Maheshwar Narain before the District Judge in the very fetters with which he had been chained. Both the lower Courts have held that the manner in which Maheshwar Narain was chained was unnecessarily cruel. This, it is argued, is irrelevant and does not affect his guilt. In my opinion, although the matter has not been considered in the same light by the Courts below, it is relevant on the question of the good faith of the accused. The accused relies on sections 88 and 92 of the Indian Penal Code as justification. The learned Sessions Judge has rightly held that an accused person who desires the benefit of this or any of the other exception in the Code must prove that he comes within its scope, and that the accused has failed to do so. Under both sections 88 and 92, the accused person must show that he acted in good faith. Now, "good faith," for the purposes of those sections, is explained by section 52 of the Code which says, "nothing is said to be done in good faith which is done without due care and attention." The evidence shows that although Maheshwar Narain is subject to fits of violent insanity nevertheless he has lucid intervals. It seems, in fact, that these fits only come on occasionally and are temporary. Under these circumstances, having regard to the fact that the accused is a person of education and wealth and that he lives in a town where medical attendance could easily be procured, he cannot be said to have acted with due care and attention in chaining up his brother in this unnecessarily cruel way for over three months, and apparently he would have continued so to confine him indefinitely if the District Judge had not interfered. If the definition of "good faith" as given in the General Clauses Act Act X of 1897, which says "a thing shall be deemed to be done in good faith where it is in fact done honestly whether it is done negligently or not" had been applicable, there might have been some force in the argument of the learned Counsel for the applicant, although even then I am doubtful whether the accused, having regard to his position in life, could be entirely exonerated. In my opinion the conviction is right. I decline to interfere.

LAKHMI DAS V. EMPEROR.

M. D.

*Conviction upheld.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 358 OF 1919.

May 10, 1919.

Present :—Mr. Justice Dundas.

LAKHMI DAS—CONVICT—PETITIONER versusEMPEROR—RESPONDENT.Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 441—Criminal trespass—Intention to cause annoyance.

Where, with a view to attach the property of his judgment-debtor, a decree-holder enters the premises of a third person without having any right to do so, his act amounts to an invasion of the privacy of that person which would necessarily cause great annoyance, and comes within the definition of section 441 of the Penal Code, even though his primary object may not have been to cause annoyance, as he should be deemed to have intended the natural consequences of his act.

Ram Saran v. Emperor, 12 P. R. 1906 Cr.; 4 Cr. L. J. 293; 54 P. L. R. 1907, relied on.Bhikam Singh v. Emperor, 42 Ind. Cas. 1006; 15 A. L. J. 808; 19 Cr. L. J. 46, not followed.Akshoy Singh v. Rameshwar Singh, 35 Ind. Cas. 515; 43 C. 1143; 20 C. W. N. 1071; 17 Cr. L. J. 339, distinguished.

Petition for revision, under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, of an order of the Sessions Judge, Jhelum, dated the 14th December 1919, confirming that of the Magistrate, First Class, Jhelum, dated the 10th October 1918.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—One Lala Lakhmi Das of Pari Darwaza, Jhelum District, had a money-decree against one Amir Khan of the same place.

On the 25th December 1917 he has been found to have entered the enclosed yard of one Dhuman Khan, son-in-law of Amir Khan, in order to seize and attach certain goats the property of Amir Khan.

On this finding of fact the Magistrate had convicted him of criminal trespass under section 448, Indian Penal Code, and the conviction has been upheld by the Sessions Judge.

Lakhmi Das applies for revision of this order and a number of authorities have been quoted to me in support of his contention that his act does not amount to a criminal offence.

Criminal trespass is defined in section 441, Indian Penal Code, and the definition is as follows :—

"Whoever enters into or upon property in the possession of another with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person in possession of such property.....is said to commit criminal trespass."

The first case quoted is Bhikam Singh v. Emperor (1). In this case the decree-holder seized cattle belonging to the judgment-debtor from the house of a third party. It was held that he was not guilty of criminal trespass in the house of that third party.

The order is very brief and does not give any details of the facts but, no doubt, supports the contention of the applicant.

The next case Akshoy Singh v. Rameshwar Singh (2) is only to the point, in that it lays down that if a person enters on land in the possession of another in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right without intention of annoying the person in possession he cannot be convicted of criminal trespass. This, however, was a boundary dispute.

In Meajan v. Sharafatullah Khan (3) it is

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 1006; 15 A. L. J. 808; 19 Cr. L. J. 46.

(2) 35 Ind. Cas. 515; 43 C. 1143; 20 C. W. N. 1071; 17 Cr. L. J. 339.

(3) 17 Ind. Cas. 415; 16 C. W. N. 1007; 13 Cr. L. J. 783.

VALAVARTY ANKANNA V. PILLAMERI ADIRIBHOTLU.

pointed out that to constitute criminal trespass as distinguished from a civil trespass there must be an intention by the trespasser to cause annoyance.

• In Alladilla v. Empress (4) it is remarked that to constitute the offence of criminal trespass it must be proved that some criminal intent was present in the mind of the accused and it does not at all follow that because an act is unlawful and is one that the Civil Law will restrain or for which it will compensate the injured party in damages that it is necessarily criminal. In Ram Saran v. Emperor (5) the conclusion was arrived at that the fact that the primary intention of the accused is to assert a bona fide claim to property does not necessarily justify an act by him which he knows or must be assumed to know to be likely to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession.

In the body of the judgment a remark is made that it is no violence to the language of the section to hold that a man shall intend the natural consequences of his act.

Now in this case it is clear that neither the bailiff nor the applicant had any right to enter the enclosed yard of Dhuman Khan and that, as a matter of fact, they must have known that, under the circumstances, the act was a decided invasion of the privacy of his household which would necessarily cause him great annoyance.

The Magistrate and the learned Sessions Judge are of one opinion on this question of fact.

Although, therefore, a desire to cause annoyance to Dhuman Khan may not have been the primary object of Lala Lakhmi Das he seems to have been in fact guilty of an act which comes within the definition of section 441, Indian Penal Code, and there is, therefore, no ground for interference in revision.

W. C. A. & N. H.

Revision dismissed.

(4) 29 P. R. 1882 Cr. (5) 12 P. R. 1906 Cr.; 4 Cr. L. J. 293; 54 P. L. R. 1907 (F. B.).

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION NO. 41 OF 1923.

February 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer.

VALAVARTY ANKANNA—

ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

PILLAMERI ADIRIBHOTLU—

COMPLAINANT—RESPONDENT.

Criminal trial—Stay of trial pending decision of civil suit—Proper procedure—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 344—Government of India Act, 1915, (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 107.

An application for stay of trial in a criminal case pending the decision of a Civil Court ought to be made in the first instance to the Magistrate trying the case under section 344 of the Criminal Procedure Code and if the party fails to get a reasonable order, a revision against the order of refusal, should be filed to the High Court.

The High Court will not act under section 107 of the Government of India Act on an independent application for stay of proceedings.

Petition praying that, in the circumstances stated in the affidavit filed therewith, the High Court will be pleased to issue an order directing stay of further proceedings in C. C. No. 2 of 1923, on the file of the Court of the Sub-Magistrate, Ponur, pending disposal of Original Suit No. 1 of 1923 on the file of the Court of the District Munsif, Bapla.

Mr. T. R. Subrahmanya Aiyar for Mr. K. S. Ganapathy Aiyar, for the Petitioner. Mr. Ch. Raghava Rao, for the Complainant Respondent.

ORDER.—There is no appeal or petition pending in this Court in this connection. This is not a case for the exercise of the extraordinary powers of this Court under section 107 of the Government of India Act. The petitioner may apply under section 344, Criminal Procedure Code, to the Sub-Magistrate to postpone the trial before him pending the decision of the Civil Court, and if he fails to get a reasonable order, he may then ask this Court to revise the order so passed. The petition is dismissed.

V. N. IV. Petition dismissed.

LAL, BAIJNATH SINGH v. CHANDRAPAL SINGH.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1518 OF 1921.

April 5, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Daniels.

LAL, BAIJNATH SINGH—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

Thakur CHANDRAPAL SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Landlord and tenant—Grove-holder—Right to transfer trees.The general law is that a person who plants a grove with the permission of the zemindar acquires a transferable interest in the trees.Jugdip Narain Singh v. Jokhan Ahir, 5 Ind.
Cas. 256 and Ram Sarup v. Jagan Nath, 25 Ind.
Cas. 132, distinguished.Muhammad Yasin v. Ilahi Bakhsh, 16 Ind.
Cas. 455; 34 A. 545; 10 A. L. J. 73, referred to.Haidar Ali Khan v. Gangu, A. W. N. (1906)
204, Haji Muhammed Ismail Khan v. Mithu Lal, 17 Ind. Cas. 656; 11 A. L. J. 649 and Jalesar Sahu
v. Raj Mangal, 63 Ind. Cas. 437; 43 A. 606; 19
A. L. J. 616, followed.Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Allahabad, dated the 19th
July 1921.Messrs. Lakhshmi Narain Tewari, Iqbal
Ahmad and Kumuda Prasad, for the Appellant.

Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The dispute in this case relates to a grove No. 168 in Mauza Ghatampur in the Allahabad District. The grove was planted by the ancestors of the second and third defendants with the permission of the zemindar on payment of nazrana and they occupied the land as grove-holders. They have transferred their rights in the grove by a sale-deed to the first defendant Chandrapal Singh. The plaintiff-appellant Lal Baijnath Singh thereupon instituted the present suit on the allegation that the transfer was unlawful and that it gave the zemindar a right to recover possession of the land. Both the Courts below have dismissed the suit. They held that under the general law a person who plants a grove with the permission of the zemindar acquires a transferable interest in the trees and that the plaintiff has failed to prove any custom disentitling the defendants from transferring their rights.

Two points arise in the appeal, (1) whether a custom forbidding grove-holders to transfer the trees is laid down in the wajib-ul-arz of the village, and, if so, whether it has been rebutted; (2) whether the general law has been rightly laid down by the Courts below.

At the time when the wajib-ul-arz was prepared the village was owned by a single zemindar. The wajib-ul-arz states that there are in this village certain groves of which a separate list is given. The clause continues:—"Apart from eating the fruits and flowers, the planters have no kind of right of cutting down, selling or mortgaging without the permission of the zemindar. The zemindar has no right to a share in the produce, and no one can plant a grove in future without the permission of the zemindar, and when the land of the groves becomes vacant it will be under the zemindar's control." Read in connection with the previous sentence the natural reference of the word planters (nasiban) is to the planters of the groves which have just been enumerated. Having regard, moreover, to the form of the clause and to the prohibition which follows against planting fresh groves without permission, it seems highly doubtful whether this clause intended to lay down any general custom. At any rate, it appears to me that the natural construction of the clause relied on by the appellant is to limit it to the groves which are specifically referred to in the clause.

I find, therefore, that there is no evidence of any special custom governing the case. It becomes necessary to consider whether the Courts below have rightly laid down the general law prevailing in the Province. The appellant contends that when a grove is planted with the zemindar's permission the ordinary rule is that the grove-holder has no transferable interest in the trees. He has been unable to cite any reported case in support of this view, but he relies on two unreported decisions in Letters Patent Appeal No. 23 of 1909, [Jugdip Narain Singh v. Jokhan Ahir (1)] and a Single Judge decision in Second Appeal No. 118 of 1914, [Ram Sarup v. Jagan Nath (2)]. The former decision was considered and distinguished in the case of Muhammad Yasin v. Ilahi Bakhsh (3) relied on by the Court below. It was pointed out that in the unreported Letters Patent Appeal the wajib-ul-arz distinctly stated that the trees belonged

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 256.

(2) 25 Ind. Cas. 152.

(3) 16 Ind. Cas. 455; 34 A. 545; 10 A. L. J. 73.

SUDHAMANI DAS v. SURAT LAL DAS.

to the zemindars. The Muhammad Yasin's case (3) laid down the law as being that prima facie every man has a right to dispose of any property he possesses whether it be a grove or anything else. It is, no doubt, open to comment that these remarks were obiter as the wajib-ul-arz in that particular case declared expressly that persons planting the groves should have rights of ownership in the trees. There are, however, other cases not depending on the terms of any special wajib-ul-arz which have laid down the law in the same sense. Two of these cases are referred to by the learned Judge, Haidar Ali Khan v. Gangu (4) and Haji Muhammad Ismail Khan v. Mithu Lal (5). The same view has very recently been taken in Jalesar Sahu v. Raj Mangal (6), a case which was specially referred to a Bench for the purpose of settling the law on the subject. In that case it was held that the planting of a grove with the permission of a zemindar even on occupancy land had the effect of changing the status of a tenant into a grove-holder and that the latter had a transferable right in the trees. I find, therefore, that the view of the law taken by the Courts below is correct and I accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

M. A. A. Appeal dismissed.

(4) A. W. N. (1906) 204.

(5) 17 Ind. Cas. 656; 11 A. L. J. 649.

(6) 63 Ind. Cas. 437; 43 A. 606; 19 A. L. J. 616.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

March 6, 1923.

Present:—Lord Atkinson, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

SUDHAMANI DAS AND ANOTHER—
APPELLANTS

versus

SURAT LAL DAS AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Will—Absolute estate bequeathed to widow, legality of—Construction of Will—"Malik," import of.

A Hindu can give by Will an absolute estate in his property to his widow.

The word "malik" employed in a Will has considerable force as indicating that the person in reference to whom it is used should take absolute interest in the properties conferred. [p. 531, col. 1.]

Appeal from the Calcutta High Court.

Mr. Parikh, for the Appellants.

Messrs. De Gryther, K.C., and Dube, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question arising in this case is the proper construction of the Will, dated the 11th May 1896, of the testator, Banka Behari Saha Das. He left a widow and a brother, who has since died, and is represented by his son, who, if the testator's widow was only entitled to a life-estate, would be entitled to the property.

It has been well-established that, in the absence of anything to the contrary, the words of a Will—in India—are to be taken as having their ordinary meaning. It appears to their Lordships that nothing could be clearer than the following provisions of this Will. At the end of paragraph 1 the testator says:—

"I give my wife permission to adopt five sons in succession. My wife aforesaid is authorised to adopt one to five sons according to her will."

[Paragraph 2 commences]: "If my wife aforesaid should adopt a son in accordance with the authority given by me, the aforesaid adopted son and my wife aforesaid shall succeed to the ownership of the entire properties in equal shares, vested with the power of sale and gift, and no violation of such provision shall be permitted."

Therefore, if there was an adopted son, no stronger words could be used to confer upon the widow the absolute right and interest in one-half, and on the adopted son the absolute right and interest in the other half of the property.

This is followed by a provision about their living together in the ancestral home:—

"and in the event of disagreement between my adopted son and my wife, my estate shall be divided equally among my adopted son and my wife aforesaid, and after my death, my wife aforesaid shall take out Probate of this Will, and when the adopted son attains to the age of twenty-

CHANDAN KUNWAR v. NARAIN.

one my wife aforesaid shall make over his estate to him."

Then paragraph No. 4 provides as follows:

"If the aforesaid adopted son, or my wife aforesaid should find it necessary to sell any of the properties left by me, they shall be entitled to sell it to a stranger if my heirs and co-sharers refuse to purchase it for an adequate consideration."

And the last paragraph runs:—

"If no son is taken in adoption by my wife [which is the event which has occurred], she shall succeed to all the properties left by me after my death, with powers of sale and gift, and my wife aforesaid shall be malik, and be in possession, and she shall have power of sale and gift in accordance with the provisions in paragraph 4."

In every one of these provisions it is, therefore, clear that the testator's intention was to give the absolute property to the wife—either in the whole of the property, or, if there was an adopted son, in one-half of the property. As was pointed out in the Court below, the word "malik" in itself has considerable force as indicating that the person in reference to whom it is used should take absolute interest in the properties conferred.

The appellant's argument which is based on the provisions of paragraph 4 is fallacious. What paragraph 4 says is this:—

"If the aforesaid adopted son, or my wife aforesaid should find it necessary to sell any of the properties left by me, they shall be entitled to sell it to a stranger if my heirs and co-sharers refuse to purchase it for an adequate consideration."

This only means that, before selling a portion to a stranger, which the widow has a perfect right to do she shall offer it—or give the opportunity of purchasing it at an adequate consideration—to the co-heirs. That by no means limits her power of sale in any degree, and it appears to their Lordships that the decision appealed from was right.

This appeal must, therefore, be dismissed with costs, and their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

A. M. & W. C. A. Appeal dismissed.

Solicitor for the Appellant:—Messrs. Downer and Johnson.

Solicitor for the Respondent:—Messrs. Barrow, Rogers and Nevill.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION SECOND CIVIL APPEAL.]

NO. 1353 OF 1922.

March 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh.

Musammat CHANDAN KUNWAR—

PLAINTIFF—DECREE-HOLDER—

APPELLANT

versus

NARAIN alias GIRDHARI—DEFENDANT

JUDGMENT—DEBTOR—RESPONDENT.

Easement—Light, easement of—Measure of right.

There is no rule defining the measure of a dominant owner's right to easement of light or requiring an angle of 45 degrees through which the rays of the sun are to be received. The principle is that interference with the dominant owner's right in order to be actionable, must be a substantial deprivation of light, enough to render the occupation of the house uncomfortable according to ordinary notions. This would differ in different places and different circumstances. [p. 532, col. 1.]

Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores Limited, (1904) A. C. 179; 73 L. J. Ch. 484; 90 L. T. 687; 53 W. R. 30; 20 T. L. R. 475, followed.

Execution second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Aligarh, dated the 23rd August 1922.

Mr. Panna Lall for the Appellant.

Mr. Gulzari Lall, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—I think this is a question of fact and that no question of law is raised. The decree which the successful decree-holder obtained directs the defendant to open the roshandans. It is a very unfortunate expression because the roshnadans are on the decree-holder's property and the decree did not mean that the defendant was to touch the decree-holder's property but to remove the obstructions, which he has created, so as not to interfere with the plaintiff's right of light. The plaintiff complains that what the defendant has done in pretended compliance or attempted compliance with the decree does not in fact remove the obstruction or, in the words of the decree, "open the roshandans." The two grounds of appeal raised here are that there has been no compliance with the decree so far as the roshandans are concerned and that the decree entitles the decree-holder to light at an angle of 45 degrees which he has not got. I think the latest authority in principle is to be found in the decision of the House of Lords in SAMU PATTER V. WILSON.

Colls v. Home and Colonial Store Limited (1), which certainly altered the view of the law which had been entertained up to that date. It is clear law that there is no rule defining the measure of the dominant owner's right or requiring an angle of 45 degrees through which the rays of the sun are to be received. The principle laid down by the House of Lords is that there must be a substantial privation of light enough to render the occupation of the house uncomfortable according to ordinary notions. That, as Lord Halsbury points out, must differ considerably in the City of London and in the country and obviously differ very considerably in abais or towns in these Provinces. All the foregoing observations really mean that it is a question of degree or fact in each case. In this case the Amin appointed by the Munsif reported that the decree had been complied with and the Munsif agreed with him. In appeal the learned District Judge appointed a Commissioner who reported on the 18th July. He says "as for compliance with the terms of the decree if it means that light and air may be allowed to the appellant I have seen the room which has the roshandan there, sufficient light and air come through them." On this the Court below has found that the decree has been complied with. That is a finding of fact and I cannot interfere. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

M. A. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1904) A. C. 179; 73 L. J. Ch. 484; 90 L. T. 687; 53 W. R. 30; 20 T. L. R. 475.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 46 OF 1921.

September 7, 1922.

Present:—Sir Walter Schwabe, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Wallace.

E. N. A. SAMU PATTER

—GARNISHEE—APPELLANT

versus

F. H. WILSON, THE OFFICIAL
ASSIGNEE OF V. M. APPACHI CHETTY AND SONS—INSOLVENTS—PETITIONERS

—RESPONDENTS.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909),

s. 56—Dominant motive to avoid bankruptcy—Fraudulent preference—Procedure.

To constitute fraudulent preference under section 56 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the giving of preference to a particular creditor must have been the dominant view of the debtor. Where the dominant motive of the insolvent was to keep a particular creditor quiet and avoid bankruptcy altogether and the desire to prefer and the giving of preference were incidental only, the obligation incurred by the debtor is lawful and the transaction does not offend against the Laws of Bankruptcy and must be upheld. [p. 534, col. 2.]

Sharp v. Jackson, (1899) App. Cas. 419; 68 L. J. Q. B. 866; 80 L. T. 841; 6 Mans. 264; 15 T. L. R. 418, Official Assignee of Madras v. T. B. Mehta & Sons, 49 Ind. Cas. 968; 42 M. 510; 36 M. L. J. 190; 25 M. L. T. 265; (1919) M. W. N. 293, followed.

In a motion by the Official Assignee to set aside a transaction of the debtor as being a fraudulent preference, the onus of proof is on the Official Assignee to make out his case before the Garnishee can be called upon to meet it. [p. 535, col. 1.]

Appeal from the judgment and order of Mr. Justice Phillips, dated the 18th February 1921, passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Insolvency Jurisdiction of the Court, in I. P. No. 6 of 1919.

JUDGMENT.

Schwabe, C. J.—This is a motion by the Official Assignee in the Insolvency of V. M. Appachi Chetty & Sons, that a transaction of 9th December 1918 under which security was given to the present appellant, Samu Patter, called the Garnishee, for Rs. 43,668-5-11 should be set aside as a fraudulent preference or in the alternative, on the ground that it was not a bona fide transaction in that it offends against the Laws of Bankruptcy.

The matter came before Phillips, J., and it was tried in the following manner. The Official Assignee's report was read and the affidavits filed on behalf of the Garnishee were read presumably and then the deponents thereto were put into the witness-box and cross-examined on behalf of the Official Assignee; then the bankrupt was called by the Official Assignee and nominally examined but really cross-examined on his behalf; then two further witnesses were called on behalf of the Official Assignee and a speech was made on behalf of the Garnishee and Counsel for the Official Assignee replied. In my judgment the procedure is not correct, and if it is the usual procedure it should be altered. The onus is originally on the Official Assignee. A motion of this kind with witnesses against the bankrupt should be tried practically as if it were an action. The case should be opened on behalf of the Official Assignee, and his report read, at any rate, as if it were a pleading. Whether it is admissible as prima facie evidence of the facts under rule 117 of the Bankruptcy Rules is a matter which I should wish to consider when the point arises. The evidence to be called on behalf of the Official Assignee must be called in its proper place. If it is an evidence that can be properly reserved to be used to rebut the evidence given on behalf of the Garnishee it can be so reserved. The Official Assignee can, of course, if he so pleases, put in the respondents' affidavits and rely upon them. When he has closed his case, the case for the respondent should be opened, the affidavits, if not already in, read at the examination-in-chief of the deponents, supplemented with the leave of the Judge by oral evidence. If notice has been given for them to attend they can, then, and not till then, be cross-examined. Further evidence, can, with permission, be given on the Garnishee's behalf, and evidence in proper cases in rebuttal may be then called and the closing speeches made. The insolvent may be called as a witness by either party; if called, although usually considerable latitude is given, he must be examined by the party calling him and not cross-examined, unless he has shown himself hostile and permission is given to cross-examine. The other side can, of course, cross-examine him.

SAMU PATTTER v. WILSON.

The procedure in the present case was, in my judgment, irregular in that the Garnishee and his witnesses were examined before the completion of the Official Assignee's case. The Garnishee, like any other defendant, is entitled to hear the case he has to meet, and the Official Assignee, like any other plaintiff, has to make out his case, before the Garnishee can be called upon to answer it. The Official Assignee has this advantage that he has the Garnishee's case before him on oath and can, if he wishes, use the Garnishee's affidavit as evidence. This matter is of considerable importance as it is the practice how far this practice is right, I do not discuss now, to proceed by motion in practically all cases by the Official Assignee against strangers.

Turning to the questions in dispute in this case, it is to be observed, that the Official Assignee's report was directed mainly to establishing the second point, and not to establishing fraudulent preference; and though the two points were kept alive until the end and the learned Judge decided both in favour of the Official Assignee, the second point being, as far as I can understand, that the Garnishee obtained this security by promising to advance money to the insolvent and then did not carry out that promise properly; and that, therefore, the transaction is a fraud on the Bankruptcy Law, I have failed to discover on what principle of law the decree on this point was based, and it is enough to say that, although he had a decree in his favour on the point, the learned Advocate-General refused even to argue in support of it.

This leaves the question of fraudulent preference. Section 56 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act avoids the transfers of property or payments made by any person unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own money in favour of any creditor with a view of giving that creditor a preference over the other creditors, if such person is adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date thereof. In this case the insolvent was undoubtedly unable to pay his debts as they became due from his own money and in giving the security in question he preferred the Garnishee over the other creditors. But the question remains whether he did so with a view of giving that preference. This has been explained to mean, looking at the mind of the bankrupt at the time, was the dominant view to give a preference to a particular creditor? See Sharp v. Jackson (1); Official Assignee of Madras v. T. B. Mehta & Sons (2). If his real object was to continue trading or to save himself from serious consequences or if he was really induced to make the payment or to give the security by the pressure of the creditor and those who were the dominant factors in his mind and the desire to prefer and the giving of the preference were incidental only, the preference is not a fraudulent preference within the meaning of the section. The insolvent, the Garnishee and his son, the Bills Manager of the Madras Bank, who negotiated the matter on his father's behalf, have all been called as witnesses and all treated by the Trial Judge as unreliable. Two agents or managers of the insolvent also gave evidence and their evidence was accepted by him. Looking at all the evidence and treating it all, except that of the last witness as suspicious and to be carefully scrutinized, I think the real relevant facts are that the insolvent was seriously involved by reason of the fall in the market price of piece-goods in Madras in September 1918, such fall being increased on the signing of the Armistice in November and was being pressed by his creditors in Bombay and elsewhere. The hundis which he had given to the Garnishee had been dishonoured, a very serious matter for a trader and there were other pressing claims. He had large quantities of piece-goods under mortgage-bonds and other persons and unless the market recovered he was hopelessly insolvent. But I am convinced that he believed that the market was going to recover. Whether he had reasonable grounds for the belief is to my mind immaterial. On December the 4th, his brother who had a similar business filed his petition. The Garnishee was getting very anxious as he was owed about Rs. 46,000 and was totally unsecured. About December the 3rd, there was an interview at Madras at which he pressed for payment or security and promised that, if he was secured, he would render further assistance to the insolvent by making further loans. About that date, the insolvent left Madras on private affairs. The bankruptcy of his brother made the Garnishee still more anxious and he sent his son, the Bills Manager of the Madras Bank, on a night's journey to Velampalayam to interview the insolvent and try to get from him payment or security. I am satisfied at the ensuing interview, the son pressed very hard for payment or security and probably also threatened to take action, which would have had the effect of bringing the insolvent down, if he was not satisfied. I have no doubt that the bankrupt was speaking the truth when he said that the son would not have gone away without a promise of security. I am also satisfied that at that time the bankrupt was doing all that he could to avoid bankruptcy and to carry on his business until the market righted itself. Further, the son held out great inducement to the insolvent by promises, perhaps somewhat vague, that if his father was satisfied he would not only induce his father to make further advances but would also use his influence with Madras Bank to induce them to render financial assistance to the insolvent.

(1) (1899) App. Cas. 419; 68 L. J. Q. B. 866; 80 L. T. 841; 6 Manson 264; 15 T. L. R. 418.

(2) 49 Ind. Cas. 968; 42 M. 510; 36 M. L. J. 190; 25 M. L. T. 265; (1919) M. W. N. 293.

SAMUEL PATTEN V. WILSON:

I agree with the argument of the learned Advocate-General that if all this amounts to a request for a preference, and a promise that if a preference is given, help will be forthcoming not to enable the insolvent to continue his business but either merely to stave off the bankruptcy for a short while or to assist in reinstating him after the bankruptcy it would be right to say that the dominant view was to prefer, and further I think that such a transaction might probably be set aside as a fraud on the Bankruptcy Law. But if the real intention and hope was to avoid bankruptcy altogether, then I think, that was the dominant view, and the preference merely incidental. The pressure also had a considerable bearing on the insolvent's action. I have little doubt because he must have known that if he did not keep this particular creditor quiet, the fact of the bills being dishonoured had only got to be made public to bring about immediate bankruptcy. In my judgment, the true view in this case is that the dominant view was to keep this particular creditor quiet and to get assistance from him and his son to enable the insolvent to keep going and to avoid bankruptcy altogether; but this is borne out by the fact that the insolvent proceeded to keep other pressing creditors quiet by payment or security and to carry on business as far as possible in the ordinary way for a month, when he called his creditors together and tried to persuade them to allow him to go on still further, a proposal which would have been accepted but for the refusal of certain Bombay creditors. Within two months the market had righted itself sufficiently to have enabled the business to be carried on and possibly he would have become entirely solvent but, of course, it was too late.

SAMU PATTAR V. WILSON.

I think that on the evidence that the Garnishee did not give a liberal interpretation to his promise of further help, and he got payment of Rs. 5,000 of his debt in a manner which does not commend itself to me. But as I find that the dominant motive was not to give a preference to the Garnishee, this motion ought to have been dismissed with costs. It follows that this appeal will be allowed with costs here and below.

Wallace, J.—I agree. In this case I consider the following facts established by satisfactory evidence, and affording the only reasonable conclusions on that evidence:—

(1) that from October 1918 onwards the Garnishee Samu Patter was nervous about his commitment with his debtor, Muthukumara Chetty and was become annoyed (see letter of 30th October 1918,) on his continual delay in meeting his obligations to him, amounting to Rs. 43,000;

(2) that on the 3rd December 1918, he became so anxious that he left Palghat in search of his debtor, and when he did not find him at his place of business at Tirupur, followed him up to Madras and interviewed him there for some days probably pressing for payment, but not succeeding in getting any very definite arrangement made;

(3) that on 4th December 1918, his debtor's brother a partner in a separate but similar firm went insolvent;

(4) that the Garnishee probably became more importunate, and insisted, as he says, on cash payments, or if that was not possible, on some security for his debt;

(5) that when the debtor left on 7th December 1918 for Tirupur, the Garnishee sent his son, Narayana Aiyar, to continue the pressure on him and his son then clearly, as stated by the debtor himself, got him to agree to give security for his father's debt, made him understand that unless he got a letter to the debtor's agent in Madras arranging for the security, he would not leave him, and himself made some promise that he would get his father, in consideration of this security, to advance the debtor some cash to enable him to stave off the more pressing of his creditors in Bombay;

(6) that while no definite figure of advance was then fixed upon, the debtor in his letter (now lost) to his Madras agent must have mentioned such a promise of advance and probably suggested to his agent to stand out for Rs. 25,000;

(7) that his agent Vijayaraghavachari, when he received this letter, accordingly did so, demanding from Samu Patter an advance of Rs. 25,000 for the Bombay creditors, but was put off by Samu Patter, who said, not that there was no undertaking by him to advance money, but that he would pay some advance after the business of the pledge was carried through;

(8) that in order to get his security on December 10th, 1918, the Garnishee had to take over from the Indian Bank a loan of one lakh on pledged goods;

(9) that when Vijayaraghavachari found out that in Maya Nadar's deal on 9th December 1918, the Garnishee himself had benefited to the extent of Rs. 5,000 by having a hundi to the amount drawn by him on his debtor honoured, he indignantly called on the Garnishee to make good his promised advance;

(10) that the Garnishee finally in pursuance of the undertaking given by his son, on 13th December 1918 did advance Rs. 15,000 on a pro-note signed by the debtor and another, a substantial merchant, which money was remitted by the debtor to Bombay creditors;

(11) that the debtor was able to carry on his business till 8th January 1919, when Bombay creditors put him into the Insolvency Court, though his Madras creditors were willing to wait;

(12) that there is, until we come to the matter of this pledge, no suggestion that the debtor's methods of business were underhand or that his failure was due to any unscrupulous or fraudulent methods but solely to the slump in the piece-goods prices at the time, and that the failure might have been avoided if prices had recovered;

(13) that it was then difficult for any one to decide whether prices would or would not recover, while the Madras creditors were willing to give the debtor time to allow them to recover, and it is apparent that the piece-goods were not considered valueless or the Garnishee would not have incurred a further debt of one lakh on them.

SHIB DEI V. KANIZ FATIMA.

On these facts I have to decide whether the Official Assignee has established a proof that the security given by the debtor to the Garnishee one month before his insolvency was a fraudulent preference under section 56 of the Presidency Insolvency Act.

It appears to me clear on these facts that the debtor's firm on 16th December 1918 was not hopelessly insolvent; that the debtor was genuinely endeavouring to carry on, was trying to raise money to satisfy the more importunate creditors in Bombay, and that the Madras creditors were willing that he should so carry on. It appears to me further that the security secured by the Garnishee was definitely in consideration of a promise by the Garnishee's son to persuade his father to advance the debtor money, not for himself, but for his Bombay creditors, i. e., to assist in tiding him over the crises and that as a matter of fact, that promise was carried out later by the Garnishee.

I cannot accept the learned Advocate-General's contention that the advance of Rs. 15,000 had nothing to do with the security given to the Garnishee. The fact that he was amply secured for that advance cannot affect the view that the debtor had already a promise of an advance when he agreed to the Garnishee's previous debt being secured, and I do not think that the Garnishee would have advanced a further sum even on adequate security to a man ex hypothesi hopelessly insolvent, unless he had some previous consideration therefor.

Nor can I agree that the debtor was hopelessly insolvent, and, therefore, the preference given to Samu Patter must have been actuated by some ulterior motive to prefer him at the expense of other creditors, though no doubt he was unable to pay from his own money his debts as they fell due. I have shown that even a month later than the date of the giving of the security, the Madras creditors were willing to give the debtor a chance of recovery. This fact, viz., that the debtor was trying to keep his feet, coupled with the following, that the propelling force towards this arrangement came from the Garnishee, that the debtor had given the security in return for some definite promise of advance to enable him to stave off the Bombay creditors, and that he used the advance for that very purpose, and not for himself, that no close connection of friendship or anything but a long business relationship is found as between the debtor and the Garnishee, people of wholly different castes, lead me to conclude that the giving of the security was induced in the mind of the debtor by pressure from the Garnishee, and by a promise that, if he gave it, he would obtain some money to enable him to stave off the threatened insolvency. These, to my mind, were the dominant motives in the debtor's mind, not any idea of conferring a favour on the Garnishee at the expense of his creditors but rather a real and genuine hope that in the outcome the giving of the security to this Garnishee would result in the recovery of his business to the benefit of all his creditors.

The law on the point is clear, see Sharp v. Jackson (1) and the Official-Assignee of Madras v. T. B. Mehta & Sons (2), where the dominant motive is not to prefer one creditor at the expense of the rest. Section 56 has no application and the obligation incurred by the debtor is lawful and must be upheld in a Court of Law.

I, therefore, agree that the appeal must be allowed with costs here and below, (costs in the original Court to be on the higher scale).

V. N. V.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1531 OF 1922.

January 5, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rafique and Mr. Justice Lindsay.Musammat SHIB DEI—PLAINTIFF
—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat KANIZ FATIMA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Construction of document—Wajib-ul-arz—Record of custom or contract.

A village confiscated by the Government during the Mutiny was re-granted to a single individual. At a subsequent Settlement a record was made in the wajib-ul-arz, purporting to be a record of a custom of pre-emption in the village:

M. & S. M. RY. CO. v. K. RANGASWAMY CHETTY.

Held, that having regard to the history of the village there could not have been a custom of pre-emption in existence at the time of the re-grant and that the record must be deemed to be a record of contract and not of custom.

Second appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Muzaffarnagar, dated the 14th of July 1922.

Mr. K. C. Mital, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—The lower Appellate Court has held in these three pre-emption suits that the plaintiff pre-emptor was not entitled to succeed on the ground that no custom of pre-emption is proved in the village.

According to what is set out in the lower Appellate Court's judgment, this village was confiscated by the Government during the Mutiny and a re-grant was made in the year 1859, when practically the whole village was granted to Uday Ram, with the exception of a small share amounting to one biswa odd. The learned Judge was, therefore, right in holding that when the re-grant was made, in the circumstances above mentioned, there could not have been any custom of pre-emption in existence. It seems that at some subsequent settlement made by M. Nasir Ali Khan, a record was made in the wajib-ul-az which purports to be a record of custom, but, as the learned Judge of the Court below observes, having regard to the history of the village, this record must be deemed to be a record of contract and not of custom.

It is argued that the lower Appellate Court has decided the case on a ground which was not taken in the First Court. That is not correct. It seems that the defendant raised the plea in the First Court that there was no custom of pre-emption at all. The Court of first instance did not decide this question but decided that, in any case, if there was a custom it could not relate to resumed muafi lands as the lands in suit. If, however, the plaintiff went in appeal to the Court below and raised the question of the existence of custom, he cannot complain if the learned Judge has decided the point, even if that decision is against him. We think that the decision of the Court below is correct in all these three appeals and we dismiss the three appeals under O. XLI r. II.

N. K.

Appeals dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 301 OF 1922.

March 16, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Phillips.

THE M. & S. M. RY. CO. LTD.—

PETITIONERS

versus

K. RANGASWAMY CHETTY AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 91—Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 72 (3)—Delivery of goods by seller to Railway for consignment to buyer—Property in goods—Seller's right to sue for damages.

Where a seller delivers goods to a Railway Company for consignment to the buyer, the property in the goods passes to the buyer under section 91 of the Contract Act and the latter alone can sue the Railway Company for damages caused by non-delivery.

Dawes v. Peck, (1799) 8 T. R. 330; 3 Esp. 12; 101 E. R. 1417, followed.

Petition, under section 115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the judgment and decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Salem, in Small Cause Suit No. 333 of 1921.

Messrs. Brightwell and Morseby, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. C. Rajagopalachari and V. N. Sama Rao, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—So far as the goods bought from Kaveri Chetty are concerned, it is obvious that plaintiffs can claim no damages and this is practically conceded in argument. Under section 91 of the Indian Contract Act the other goods had been delivered to Munisami Chetty and properties in them had passed to him. Plaintiffs in consigning the goods, some of which had never been their property, only acted as Munisami's agents. If the property had passed from plaintiffs they have sustained no loss by the non-delivery of the goods and consequently no damages. Dawes v. Peck (1) is authority for holding that consignee alone can sue in such a case and it does not seem to me that section 72 (3) of the Indian Railways Act has any application here for the responsibility of the Railway Company is not affected, but that responsibility is to the consignee and not to his agent, the consignor.

The petition is allowed and plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs throughout.

V. N. V.

Petition allowed.

(1) (1799) 8 T. R. 330; 3 Esp. 12; 101 E. R. 1417.

SHAURAN BIBI V. ABDUS SAMAD.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 117 OF 1922.

April 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Banerji, and Mr. Justice Gokul Prasad.

Musammal SHAURAN BIBI AND ANOTHER

—PLAINTIFFS—APPLICANTS

versus

ABDUS SAMAD AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE

PARTIES—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIII, r. 5—Application for leave to sue as pauper—Evidence on plaintiffs' title, whether can be taken.

In an application for leave to sue as a pauper, the Court is not entitled, before deciding whether to grant or refuse the application, to take evidence from the parties upon the question of the plaintiff's title with a view to find out whether the plaintiff has a cause of action. Taking such evidence amounts to exercising a jurisdiction not vested by law. [p. 539, col. 2.]

Jogendra Narayan Ray v. Durga Charan Guha, 52 Ind. Cas. 610; 46 C. 651, relied upon.

Charu Sita Dasi v. Haryan Chandra Mukherjee, 50 Ind. Cas. 520; (1919) Pat. 232; dissented from.

Kamrakh Nath v. Sundar Nath, 20 A. 299; A. W. N. (1898) 36; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 542 and Chatterpal Singh v. Raja Ram, 7 A. 651 (F. B.); A. W. N. (1885) 156; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 854, distinguished.

Civil revision against the order of the Subordinate Judge, Gorakhpur, dated the 5th July 1922.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, for the Applicants.

Messrs. Sankar Saran and Haribans Sahai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for the revision of an order of the Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur dismissing the application made by the applicants for leave to sue as paupers. The claim was one for recovery of immoveable property by right of inheritance. One of the defendants disputed the title of the plaintiffs to maintain the suit and also denied that the plaintiffs were paupers. The Court below took evidence upon the question of the plaintiffs' title, and after considering that evidence came to the conclusion that the plaintiffs had no right to maintain the suit. It also was of opinion that the plaintiffs' pauperism had not been established. On these grounds the application was rejected. The first contention before us is that the Court in proceeding to try the question of the plaintiffs' title exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law. In our opinion this contention is well-founded. Order XXXIII of the First Sch. to the Code of Civil Procedure lays down the procedure to be followed upon an application being presented to the Court for leave to sue as a pauper. Rule 5 of that Order specifies the grounds upon which the application may be rejected, and one of those grounds, as mentioned in clause (d) of the rule, is that the allegations do not show a cause of action. Rule 6 provides that if the Court does not reject the application on any of the grounds mentioned in rule 5, it should proceed to take evidence upon the question of pauperism. The only matter in regard to which evidence may be taken is the question of pauperism as provided in rule 6. Rule 7 provides that on the day fixed arguments may be heard and the evidence produced may be considered and the Court may grant or refuse the application. The only matter in regard to which evidence may be taken is, as stated above, that mentioned in rule 6, that is to say, the question of the pauperism or otherwise of the applicant. In our opinion clause (d) of rule 5 enables the Court to reject the application if upon the allegations made by the applicant in the plaint or in his deposition as recorded under rule 4, no cause of action is shown. It does not empower the Court to try the question of the plaintiffs' title after taking evidence on that question and in fact to try the suit on the merits, before the application for leave to sue is granted. In our opinion if, upon the allegations contained in the plaint and in the deposition of the plaintiff as recorded under rule 4, it appears to the Court that the plaintiff has no cause of action for maintaining the suit, the application may be rejected, but we do not think that the law contemplates that there should be a regular trial of the question of title upon taking evidence from both parties before the application is granted or refused. It would be prejudging the case if such evidence were taken. This view is in consonance with the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Jogendra Narayan Ray v. Durga Charan Guha (1). Our attention

(1) 52 Ind. Cas. 610; 46 C. 651.

SHAURAN BIBI v. ABDUS SAMAD.

has been drawn to a ruling of the Patna High Court in Charu Sila Dast v. Haran Chandra Mukherjee (2). If the learned Judges who decided that case intended to lay down the rule that, in order that the Court may be satisfied that the plaintiff has a subsisting cause of action, the Court may take evidence upon the merits of the case, we are unable with great respect to agree with them. The learned Vakil for the opposite party relied upon the decision of this Court in Kamrakh Nath v. Sundar Nath (3). That case is, in our opinion, distinguishable from the present case. In that case what was held was that the Court should reject the application if on the statements which are placed before the Court it appears that the plaintiff has no subsisting right of suit. It was not held in that case that the Court might take evidence for the purpose of determining whether the plaintiff had the alleged right of suit. That was not a case in which any evidence had been taken. Apparently, the plaintiff was examined and, upon a consideration of the statements made by him in his examination, the Court came to the conclusion that no right to bring the suit was shown. That case, therefore, does not afford us any guide in the matter now before us. An earlier Full Bench ruling of this Court in Chattarpal Singh v. Raja Ram (4) was referred to by the learned Judges in their judgment. There the question was whether the only point upon which the Court could refuse the application was the absence of jurisdiction to entertain the suit. According to the wording of clause (d) of rule 5 of the present Code no question of jurisdiction can arise. What has to be seen is, whether upon the allegations made by the plaintiff, that is, the allegations contained in the plaint and in the plaintiff's examination under rule 4, a cause of action is disclosed. If these allegations did not show a cause of action the Court was bound to reject the application. But in our judgment the Court is not entitled to take evidence from the parties upon the question of the plaintiff's title before coming to the conclusion whether it would grant or refuse the application. We think that in the present case in taking evidence on the question of title the Court exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law. As to the pauperism of the plaintiffs the Court below makes some general observations to the effect that the pauperism of the plaintiffs was not proved. The Court did not consider the evidence placed before it upon the question whether the plaintiffs had the means to pay the amount of Court-fee requisite for the institution of the suit. The learned Subordinate Judge said that in another suit the plaintiff had paid a large fee to a certain Pleader. It also said that she owned two sewing machines but it did not consider the value of the sewing machines, nor did it consider any point about the means of the plaintiffs to pay the requisite amount of Court-fee. In our opinion the question of pauperism was not tried by the Court below. Therefore, we hold that, in trying the question of title, the Court exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law and in not trying the question of plaintiff's pauperism it did not exercise the jurisdiction which was vested in it. We, accordingly, allow the application, set aside the order of the Court below and send back the case to that Court in order that the question of the pauperism of the applicants may be determined. We may mention that when notice was issued to the Government Pleader as to the pauperism of the plaintiffs no objection was put forward on behalf of the Government. This was a matter which the Court should also have taken into consideration. Costs here and hitherto will be costs in the cause.

M. A. A.

Application allowed.

(2) 50 Ind. Cas. 520 ; (1919) Pat. 232.

(3) 20 A. 299 ; A. W. N. (1898) 36 ; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 552.

(4) 7 A. 661 (F. B.) ; A. W. N. (1885) 156 ; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 854.

KANNIAPPA MUDALIAR v. CHINNASAMI CHETTIAR.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 882 OF 1922.

March 5, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Krishnan.

KANNIAPPA MUDALIAR—

RESPONDENT NO. 1.—PETITIONER

versus

B. CHINNASAMI CHETTIAR AND AN-OTHER—PETITIONER & RESPONDENT NO. 2

—RESPONDENTS.

Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920)
—Local Rules—Rules 13, 14, 15—Municipal Election—Absence of initials of Polling Officer on ballot paper—Vote, validity of.

Under the rules framed by the Governor-in-Council for the conduct of Municipal elections under the Madras District Municipalities Act, a properly recorded vote by a duly qualified voter cannot be treated as invalid and rejected on the sole ground that the ballot paper did not bear the Polling Officer's initials as required by rule 14 (1). [p. 540, col. 1.]

Rule 14, clause (1), is not a mandatory rule, the infringement of which will render the vote necessarily invalid. The rule is intended to identify the ballot paper as one given by the Polling Officer and where such identity can be established by other evidence, the absence of initials may be disregarded. [p. 541, col. 2.]

Rules 13 to 15 are intended to enable a duly qualified voter to give his vote secretly and freely on the ballot paper supplied to him by the Polling Officer to the candidate he approves of. Where this object is shown to have been attained in spite of the infringement of any rule, such infringement cannot justify the rejection of the vote more particularly when the infringement is not by the voter but by the Polling Officer. [p. 541, col. 2.]

Shyam Chand Basak v. Chairman of the Dacca Municipality, 53 Ind. Cas. 741; 47 C. 524; 30 C. L. J. 270; 24 C. W. N. 189, distinguished.

Ackers v. Howard, (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 739; 55 L. J. Q. B. 233; 54 L. T. 651; 34 W. R. 609, Islington case, (1901) 5 O' M. & H. 125, relied on.

Petition, under section 115 of Act V of 1908 and section 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order dated 8th December 1922, and made in O. P. No. 6 of 1922, on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Chingleput.

Messrs. T. R. Ramachandra Ayyar and S. Srinivasa Ayyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. A. Krishnaswamy Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This revision petition arises in connection with the election of a Councillor for Ward No. 5 of the Conjeevaram Municipality in October last. The petitioner before me Mr. Mudaliar and the first respondent Mr. Chettiar were rival candidates. The latter got 2 more votes than the former and would in ordinary course have been declared elected but the Chairman held 2 of his votes to be invalid on the ground that the ballot papers on which such votes were recorded, Exhibits A and B, did not bear the initials of the Polling Officer as required by rule 14 clause (1) of the Rules framed by the Governor-in-Council for the conduct of Municipal elections and published in the Fort St. George Gazette as Notification No. 1120, dated 23rd November 1920. Having done so, he proceeded to act under rule 28 and draw lots as the number of votes for the two candidates had become equalised, and as the drawing resulted in Mr. Mudaliar's favour he declared him duly elected. Thereupon Mr. Chettiar filed an Election Petition before the Subordinate Judge of Chingleput claiming that the 2 votes in question were valid ones and were wrongly excluded. The learned Subordinate Judge has found as a fact that the two votes were actually given by two duly qualified voters who voted at the election and that the ballot papers, Exhibits A and B, themselves were the outerfoils of two counter-foils in the voting paper book kept by the Polling Officer and that there could be no question that the votes were genuine votes recorded by 2 voters entitled to vote. The only objection urged to the reception of these votes was, as already stated; that they did not bear the Polling Officer's initials. No other rule or provision is said to have been infringed. In these circumstances, the Subordinate Judge held that it was wrong to reject the votes as invalid and that they should be counted in Mr. Chettiar's favour. That made the number of votes in his favour larger than the number Mr. Mudaliar got. Consequently, he set aside Mr. Mudaliar's election and declared Mr. Chettiar as properly elected. The revision is against that order.

From what is stated above, it is clear that the question to be considered is, whether a vote is to be treated as invalid and rejected on the sole ground that it does not bear the Polling Officer's initials even though it is a properly recorded vote by a duly qualified voter. The decision of the point is obviously material in the present case as the result of the election entirely turns on it.

KANNIAPPA MUDALIAR v. CHINNASAMI CHETTIAR.

The learned Vakil for the petitioner contends that the mere absence of the Polling Officer's initials on the ballot paper is sufficient by itself to invalidate the vote and he relies upon the ruling in Shyam Chand Basak v. Chairman of the Dacca Municipality (1). In that case the question was not one of the invalidity of a vote given at an election properly held as here, but of the invalidity of the whole election itself on the ground of its having been held out of the proper hours fixed for it. There the election was begun later and continued later in the morning and begun earlier in the afternoon than the time fixed for it. The question before the learned Judges was, whether that irregularity vitiated the election in toto. After an elaborate discussion of the case laid on the point, the learned Judges held that the condition infringed was not a mandatory one and that the election could be upheld if it was shown that its result was not affected by the error or irregularity committed, the burden to prove which was on the person supporting the election but that, if there was reasonable ground to believe that the result was affected by the irregularity the Court should set it aside. If I may say so respectfully, I entirely agree with the views expressed in this case. Though the ruling is not strictly in point as we are dealing with a case of a vote being challenged and not the election itself, the principles laid down may be applied to the present case and, applying them, it will follow that if nothing more appeared than that rule 14, clause (1), was infringed as regards the two votes, that would be a prima facie ground for rejecting those votes; but if it is proved by evidence that the votes were given by duly qualified voters on ballot papers supplied to them by the Polling Officer they should not be rejected. In this case, such evidence is forthcoming and the learned Subordinate Judge has found that the votes are genuine and I must accept that finding in revision; on that finding I am of opinion that the Subordinate Judge's view that the votes should be counted is correct.

I do not consider rule 14, clause (1), as a mandatory rule the infringement of which will render the vote necessarily invalid. The rule is evidently intended to identify the ballot paper as one given out by the Polling Officer. If, as in this case, the paper can be so identified by other evidence the absence of initials may, I think, be disregarded. The difficulty in any particular case will be to prove such identity.

Rules 13, 14 and 15 show how votes are to be recorded. When a person presents himself to vote he is given, under rule 13, a signature slip on which his name and number in the Electoral Roll are entered and which he has to sign or put his thumb impression, if he is illiterate. The Polling Officer files the slip if, as in this case, there is no question of the voter's identity. Under rule 14 the voter is then given a ballot paper with the initials of the Polling Officer on its back and the Polling Officer has also at the same time to enter the voter's number on the Electoral Roll in the counter-foil and put his initials against his name in the Electoral Roll. Under rule 15, the voter who has got the ballot paper secretly puts a mark against the name of the candidate he votes for and folds and deposits the paper in the ballot box. These rules are evidently intended to enable a person who is a duly qualified voter to give his vote secretly and freely, on the ballot paper supplied to him by the Polling Officer, to the candidate he approves of. So long as this object is shown to have been attained in spite of the infringement of any rule, such infringement cannot, I think, justify the rejection of the vote; more particularly when the infringement is not by the voter but by the Polling Officer for whose default he cannot properly be held responsible.

Rule 17 provides what irregularities necessarily invalidate a vote; there is no reference in this rule to the failure on the Polling Officer's part to initial as required by rule 14 as invalidating a vote. It is clear, therefore, that rule 14 is not a mandatory rule, the non-compliance with any part of which would necessarily invalidate a vote. In the corresponding Ballot Act of 1872 in England there is a provision in Part I

(1) 53 Ind. Cas. 741; 47 C. 524; 30 C.L.J. 270; 24 C. W. N. 189.

RAM BAHADUR SEN v. GANESH BHAGAT.

section (2) which requires the ballot paper to be officially marked on both sides and the second paragraph of that section says that any ballot paper that has not the official mark on its back shall be void and not counted. A question arose in England whether the absence of the official mark on the front of the ballot paper would vitiate a vote or not in the case of Ackers v. Howard (2). Their Lordships held that a ballot paper conforming in other respects to the requirement of the Ballot Act was not void because it has not the official mark on its face. That case is very similar to the one before us. In the Islington case (3), it is observed by Kennedy, J., that "an election ought not to be held void by reason of the transgressions of the law committed without any corrupt motive by the Returning Officer or his subordinates in the conduct of the election, where the Court is satisfied that the election was, notwithstanding these transgressions, an election really and in substance conducted under the existing Election Laws, and that the result of the election, that is, the success of the one candidate over the other, was not, and could not have been, affected by these transgressions." It may be said with equal force and justice that a vote ought not to be held void on account of the mistake of the Polling Officer, in the conduct of the election made without any corrupt motive, where the Court is satisfied that the vote was really given in substantial accordance with the Election Rules by a duly qualified voter to a candidate.

For the above reasons, I would hold that on his findings of fact the Subordinate Judge's view is correct and dismiss this civil revision petition with costs.

V. N. V.

Petition dismissed.

(2) (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 739; 55 L. J. Q. B. 233; 54 L. T. 651; 34 W. R. 609.

(3) (1901) 5 O' M. & H. 125.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 164

OF 1920.

APRIL 11, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Ross.

Babu RAM BAHADUR SEN—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Mahanth GANESH BHAGAT—

PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Document making mention of executant's heir—Intention to convey title—Hindu Law—Reversioner, interest of, nature of—Reversioner, whether can assign or bind interest—Family settlement, principles applicable to—Minor, whether bound—Arbitration—Minor—Award based on misapprehension, whether binding.

A Hindu lady who had an absolute estate in certain property executed a mukhtarnama in favour of one G, her son-in-law, which contained the following clause: "My daughter's son R is my heir, but he is now a minor and is unable to manage the village and Court affairs personally. I, the executant, am a parda nashin lady, and it is impossible for me to manage the village and Court affairs unless I appoint a general agent. Therefore, of my own accord, and free will I have appointed G, as my general agent. This mukhtarnama shall remain in force until my grandson R attains his majority. On attaining his majority he shall either look after his affairs personally, or appoint a mukhtar." ¹

Held, (1) that the whole object of the power-of-attorney was simply to arrange that as R, whom the executant, believed to be her heir was a minor, and as she herself was unable to manage her affairs personally, G, who was R's father, should look after the estate until the latter attained his majority; [p. 549, col. 1.]

(2) that the expression "my daughter's son R is my heir" was merely a statement of belief and was not intended to convey title; [p. 549, col. 1.]

(3) that the expression "on attaining his majority he should either look after his affairs personally or appoint a mukhtar" did not, and was not intended definitely to, confer any right, but was merely a statement of what would take place in normal course on the assumption that in law R was the executant's heir; [p. 549, col. 1.]

(4) that, therefore, the clause in the power-of-attorney was not a Will or a disposition of property in any sense, nor could it be regarded in any way as a declaration of trust conveying any definite rights. [p. 549, col. 1.]

A Hindu reversioner has no right or interest in presenti in property which a female owner holds for her life. Until it vests in him on her death, should he survive her, he has nothing to assign or to relinquish or even to transmit to his heirs. His right becomes concrete only on her demise; until then it is a mere spes successionis. His guardian, if he happens to be a minor, cannot bargain with it on his behalf or bind him by any contractual engagement in respect thereto. [p. 552, col. 1.]

RAM BAHADUR SMN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

Amrit Narayan Singh v. Gaya Singh, 44 Ind. Cas. 408; 27 C. L. J. 296; 23 M. L. T. 142; 22 C. W. N. 409; 34 M. L. J. 298; 4 P. L. W. 221; 16 A. L. J. 265; (1918) M. W. N. 306; 7 L. W. 581; 20 Bom. L. R. 546; 45 C. 590; 45 L. A. 35 (P. C.), followed.

When a dispute with regard to the rights of the members of a family has been settled by a fair compromise, such compromise will be upheld by the Court, although perhaps resting upon grounds which would not have been considered satisfactory if the transaction had been between strangers, but it must be established that the right compromised could at least have formed the subject-matter of a claim, though a doubtful claim. [p. 553, col. 1.]

A reversionary heir, however, who has only a spes successionis cannot enter into a compromise with regard to such interest as he may have in the estate of the person whose reversionary heir he claims to be. [p. 553, col. 1.]

But a compromise of a doubtful claim by the holder of a limited interest binds the reversionary heir if it is established that the compromise was a fair and honest one and that the limited holder entered into the transaction as representing the estate and for the protection of the estate and not as representing herself and for her own protection. [p. 553, col. 1.]

Whenever a question is raised whether a transaction is an alienation or a compromise of a doubtful claim the true test to apply is to see whether the alienee derives title from the holder of the limited interest. Where a transaction is based on the assumption that there was an antecedent title of some kind in both the parties and the agreement acknowledges and defines what that title is, the transaction is not an alienation but a compromise of a doubtful claim. [p. 557, col. 1.]

Bhagwati Kuer v. Jagannath Sahay, 62 Ind. Cas. 933; 6 P. L. J. 604; 2 P. L. T. 471, followed.

A family arrangement might be upheld even though there were no rights actually in dispute at the time of making it, and the Courts will not be disposed to scan with much nicety the quantum of consideration. [p. 554, col. 1.]

It is a mistake to suppose that the doctrine of family settlement extends no further than arrangements for the settlement of doubtful or disputed rights. The principle is applicable not merely to cases in which arrangements are made between members of a family for the preservation of its peace but also to cases in which arrangements are made between them for the preservation of its property. [p. 554, col. 1.]

Helan Das v. Durga Das Mundal, 4 C. L. J. 323, relied on.

Williams v. Williams, (1867) 2 Ch. 294; 36 L. J. Ch. 419; 16 L. T. 42; 15 W. R. 657; Satya Kumar Banerjee v. Satya Kirpal Banerjee, 3 Ind. Cas. 247; 10 C. L. J. 503 and Satis Chandra Ghosh v. Kaldasi Das, 68 Ind. Cas. 577; 34 C. L. J. 529; 26 C. W. N. 177; (1922) A. L. R. (C.) 203, referred to.

In the absence of proof of mistake, inequality of position, undue influence, coercion, fraud or any similar ground, a family arrangement made in settlement of a disputed or doubtful claim is a valid and binding arrangement which the parties thereto cannot deny, ignore or resile from. If the parties have settled a dispute, such settlement will not be set aside on the ground that it gave to one of them more than that which he ought possibly to have recovered if he had taken the judgment of the Court upon the matters in difference between them. [p. 554, col. 2.]

There is nothing in this doctrine of family arrangements opposed to the general principle, that, when it is sought to bind a minor by an agreement entered into on his behalf, it must be shown that the agreement was for the benefit of the minor. If improper advantage has been taken of the minor's position, a family arrangement can be set aside on the ground of undue influence or inequality of position or one of the other grounds which would vitiate an arrangement in the case of adults; but when there is no defect of this nature the settlement of a doubtful claim is of as much advantage to a minor as to an adult and where a genuine dispute has been fairly settled, the dispute cannot be re-opened solely on the ground that one of the parties to the family arrangement was a minor. [p. 555, col. 1.]

Keramutulla Meah v. Keramutulla Meah, 49 Ind. Cas. 886; 23 C. W. N. 118, relied on.

Hardeo Sahai v. Gauri Shankar, 28 A. 35; 2 A. L. J. 493; A. W. N. (1905) 171; Srinath Bose v. Nibaran Chandra Roy, 53 Ind. Cas. 945; 25 C. W. N. 859; Kanhai Lal v. Brij Lal, 47 Ind. Cas. 207; 40 A. 487; 22 C. W. N. 914; 8 L. W. 212; 24 M. L. T. 236; 35 M. L. J. 459; 16 A. L. J. 825; (1918) M. W. N. 709; 28 C. L. J. 394; 5 P. L. W. 294; 20 Bom. L. R. 1048; 45 L. A. 118 (P. C.), Beni Prasad v. Lajja Ram, 35 Ind. Cas. 63; 38 A. 452; 14 A. L. J. 438 and Ram Niranjun Singh v. Prayag Singh, 8 C. 138; 10 C. L. R. 66; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 88, referred to.

Where there is in the minds of both parties to an arbitration, and of the arbitrators, a complete misapprehension as to the true, legal position of the parties, and this misapprehension is the cause of the non-inclusion for consideration in the arbitration proceedings of the legal rights of some of the parties, the award is bad and is not binding on the parties. [p. 553, col. 2.]

(Case-law discussed.)

The principles under which the validity of an arbitration should be judged are more rigid than those which apply when a family settlement under consideration. [p. 553, col. 2.]

In some cases in which although as an arbitration proceeding the result of an award cannot be supported it is still capable of support on the ground that the award represents what is in effect the outcome of a family compromise. [p. 553, col. 2; p. 554, col. 1.]

Defendant No. 1, a Hindu minor, had a reversionary interest in the property in dispute. His mother, acting on his behalf, agreed to refer the dispute to arbitration, but neither in the agreement of reference nor in the course of the arbitration proceedings were the true legal position and rights of defendant No. 1 put forward or considered,

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

The arbitrators finally gave an award which had the effect of retarding the vesting in the defendant No. 1 of his reversionary interest for an indefinite period after the date when in law it should vest in him:

Held, (1) that the award being based on a complete misapprehension of the legal position and rights of defendant No. 1 was bad in law and was not binding on him; [p. 558, col. 1.]

(2) that the award could not be held binding on defendant No. 1 as a family settlement inasmuch as the result of the award was that the reversionary interest of the minor was affected in a manner very prejudicial to him and that no acquiescence on the part of his mother could make the award binding on defendant No. 1. [p. 558, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated the 17th May 1920.

Messrs. G. C. Das and B. N. Mitter, for the Appellant.

Messrs. M. Lall and N. K. Prasad II, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Bucknill, J.—This was a first appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Muzaffarpur dated the 17th May 1920.

The facts are very simple.

A lady named Rani Bigya Kumari Devi, the widow of one Raja Pirthipartap Sen, owned the lakhrājbrīt right in the entire 16 annas of two mouzas called Langri and Bastha in Tappa Ramgir, Parganna Manjhowā, in the Champaran District, which are the properties in dispute; she died in 1901 or 1902.

She had a daughter Prem Kumari Devi who married one Babu Gambhir Singh, she died in 1908; her husband predeceased her. They had a daughter and a son, the former called Bishun Kumari Devi and the latter Raja Rajkumar Singh. Bishun Kumari Devi married one Sri Parkash Sen and had two sons Babu Ram Bahadur Sen (who is a minor and is the defendant 1st party in this suit being represented by his guardian one Bachu Babu alias Bachu Singh who was so appointed in 1918 by the Court of the District Judge, Muzaffarpur) and Babu Shyam Bahadur Sen who died a minor before suit. Bishun died about 1917; Sri Parkash Sen is the defendant 3rd party in this suit.

Raja Rajkumar Singh married one Rani Sri Kumari Devi: they had no issue: he died in 1902 and his widow is the defendant 2nd party in this suit. Neither the 2nd nor 3rd party defendants entered appearance.

The above observations show who the defendants are. The plaintiff's position may be thus explained. As a result of certain occurrences—the legal effect of which is really the issue in this litigation—Rani Sri Kumari Devi, the defendant 2nd party who, after her husband's death, had, in 1905, already executed a thica patta in favour of a Mr. S. E. Coffin in respect of the mouzas in suit, found herself in 1908 with what purported to be a life interest in the property and, omitting immaterial intermediate transactions, in 1912, she executed a "sadhua putana" (usufructuary mortgage) deed under which this Mr. Coffin (who was part proprietor of the Bhusrari Indigo Factory) continued in possession of the estate: she borrowed in 1916 Rs. 8,000 and in 1917 Rs. 3,500 from the plaintiff on mortgage-bonds, and, finally, in 1918 executed in favour of the plaintiff a rehan-deed (usufructuary mortgage bond) for Rs. 22,250: out of this sum about Rs. 5,700 were borrowed for the purpose of enabling the sum due to Mr. Coffin, who did not wish to remain any longer in possession of the property, to be paid off; about Rs. 14,300 were set aside to liquidate the amounts due to the plaintiff under the two mortgage-bonds to which reference has just been made above; whilst the balance, amounting to some Rs. 2,300, was lent by the plaintiff to the defendant in order to meet, as was alleged to be the case with the two previous loans made to him by her, her "legal necessities". The plaintiff in 1918 thus purported to be entitled to possession of the property as a zarpeshgidar. In the meantime, however, Bachu Babu alias Bachu Singh had obtained in 1918 from the District Judge of Muzaffarpur a grant of a certificate of guardianship of the defendant 1st party; a dispute arose between him and the plaintiff in connection with the possession of the properties which culminated in 1919 in proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code this quarrel was decided in favour of Bachu Singh who is in possession. Hence this suit,

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

The plaintiff claimed the following reliefs :—

1. That upon adjudication of the lakhrāj brit right of the defendant, 2nd party, and the zarpeshgi right of the plaintiff under the defendant 2nd party, and want of title of the defendant 1st party in the properties in suit, a decree awarding possession of the same might be passed in favour of the plaintiff and that he might be put in possession thereof by dispossessing the defendant 1st party.

2. Mesne profits.

3. Costs with interest.

4. Such other relief as the plaintiff might be deemed entitled to.

The Subordinate Judge decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants 2nd and 3rd party did not appear although duly served; the defendant 1st party was ordered to pay the plaintiff's costs. Now it is necessary to see what the defence to the plaintiff's claim was as put forward by the defendant 1st party in his written statement. He claimed, in effect, that under a Will dated the 8th February 1908, his mother's mother bequeathed to him and his now deceased brother, Shyam Bahadur Sen, all the properties of Musummat Bigya Kumari Devi which had devolved upon his mother's mother as her heir. He also maintained that the occurrences, as the result of which his uncle's widow (the defendant 2nd party) found herself in possession of the property, had no legal binding effect upon himself (the defendant 1st party). Incidentally, he denied that she was under any legal necessity to borrow any amount whatsoever. He further traversed the allegation that the plaintiff was really ever in possession of the properties as a zarpeshgidar or otherwise.

It is now necessary to turn to examine those occurrences by which the defendant 2nd party found herself in possession of the property and was able to execute these deeds purporting to deal with the property by way of usufructuary mortgage. It may, at the outset, be desirable to state that there is now no dispute as to what, in the absence of any of these occurrences, would have been the normal devolution of the property. It is admitted that Rani Bigya Kumari Devi had a complete estate in the property, it is agreed that, on her death, a life interest only in it would descend to her daughter, Prem Kumari Devi; it is also admitted that as Prem Kumari's son died prior to her death the property would devolve upon her daughter, Bishun Kumari Devi, who, again, would have only a life interest therein and that, finally, it would descend to the defendant 1st party.

The first of the occurrences which took place, however, was that on the 18th of October 1894 Rani Bigya Kumari Devi executed a mukhtarnama in favour of Babu Ghambir Singh, the husband of her daughter, Prem Kumari Devi. This document which is Exhibit 16 is of considerable importance in this case but it is unnecessary to set it out in full detail. It recites that the executant had many business transactions and much litigation in connection with her estate and, after these recitals, continues "My grandson (daughter's son) Raja Rajkumar Singh is my heir, but he is now a minor and is unable to manage the village and Court affairs personally, I, the executant, am a parda-nashin lady and it is impossible for me to manage the village and Court affairs unless I appoint a general agent. Therefore, of my own accord and free will, I have appointed Babu Gambhir Singh as my general agent..... This mukhtarnama (general power-of-attorney) shall remain in force until my grandson Raja Rajkumar Singh, attains his majority. On attaining his majority he shall either look after his affairs personally or appoint a mukhtar." The executant affixed her mark in the presence of one Badri Lal. Two other persons appear to have witnessed the document which was written out by a scribe; the document was registered in due course. Now, one of the questions which arises in this case is, as to whether this document created and title to the property in favour of Raja Rajkumar Singh. It is admitted that at that date the executant could have disposed of all her property by gift or by Will; it is also admitted that, if she made no gift nor Will, the property (which was her own ajantuk strikhan) would have descended to her daughter, Prem Kumari Devi, and not to her daughter's son, Raja Rajkumar Singh. It is also admitted that the document shows that the executant was under the impression that Raja Rajkumar Singh was her heir. The RAM BHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

Subordinate Judge has found that this document did not create any title in Raja Raj-Kumar Singh. Gambhir Singh apparently, accordingly, looked after the property. Rani Bigya Kumari Devi died in 1901 or 1902. In 1908 on the 8th of February, Prem Kumari Devi made a Will (Exhibit A); in this Will, after reciting that her mother owned various properties she referred to the fact that her mother had executed a general power-of-attorney in favour of her (the testatrix's) husband Gambhir Singh. She also recited that, as her mother had no son, all her mother's acquired properties were given to her (the testatrix) as stridhan and that she and her husband had been, since the death of her mother, looking after the estate, she being the absolute proprietress thereof. The testatrix further recited that her own son Rajkumar Singh had died during his minority and, then, stated that, out of love and affection for her two grandsons (who she states will be, after her own death, her heirs) and fearing that there might be disputes over the estate after her death, she bequeathed all her properties to them. She further stated that, if she (the testatrix) should die whilst they were still minors, their father, Sriparkash Singh, as general agent, should look after the property on their behalf. It is, again here, now common ground that the testatrix was under a misapprehension in thinking that she had more than a life interest in the property assuming that it came to her on her mother's death. It is also common ground that the defendant party has always been under the impression that he obtained title under this Will. Not long after the execution of this Will Prem Kumari Devi died and, almost immediately, disputes arose which seems to have been referred in the first instance to the manager of the Court of Wards, Bettiah Raj, who suggested that the disputing parties should refer the matter to arbitration. Rajkumar's widow, on the one side, and Sri Parkash Singh, on the other, agreed to the appointment of three arbitrators named Munshi Dost Mohammad Khan, Harnandan Dube and Munshi Dasrath Lal. These three gentlemen very wisely thought that it was necessary that before they undertook any investigation there should be drawn up a formal agreement of submission to arbitration; and this was accordingly done on the 16th of April 1908 by an ekrarnamah which is Exhibit 2. This again is a very important document. The opening words read as follows:—

"We are Bishun Kumari Devi, daughter of Babu Gambhir Singh, deceased and wife of Babu Sri Parkash alive, and mother, guardian and next friend of Ram Bahadur Sen and Shyam Bahadur Sen, minors; Sri Parkash Sen, son of Babu Atal Bahadur Sen, deceased; and Musammam Rani Sri Kumari Devi, widow, of late Raja Raj Kumar Sen and daughter-in-law of Babu Gambhir Singh, deceased..... There is a dispute going on among us; the executants, about the moveable and immoveable properties acquired by our maternal grandmother, Musammam Bighya Kumari Devi, and this is likely to ruin our properties. We have, therefore, in concurrence with one another filed a petition before the manager of the Bettiah Raj for settlement of our dispute and have, according to our choice, appointed three persons, i.e., Harnandan Dube, son of Gopal Dat Dube, deceased, by caste Brahman, by occupation Zemindar and service holder, resident of Mouzah Bettiah, 'tappa' Khadda, Munshi Dasrath Lal, son of Munshi Subh Narain Lal, deceased, by caste Kayasth, by occupation a Zemindar and (also) a cashier, resident of Mouza Hasanpur Mathiya, Parganna Dangsi, District Saran, and at present residing at Bettiah, Mohalla Ganjdoo; Munshi Dost Muhammad Khan, son of Munshi Chiragh Ali Khan, deceased by caste a Pathan, by profession a mukhtar, resident of Qasha Bettah-Kalibagh, as arbitrators. Hence, in order to have the dispute settled by the arbitrators and to do away with future dispute, if any it is necessary for us to execute an ikrar nama and have it registered. Therefore, of our own accord and free will, in a sound state of mind and body, we make a trustworthy declaration and reduce to writing that the said arbitrators shall (settle our disputes) as regards the properties owned in proprietary interest maufi, lakheraj brit and zerait lands, etc., lying in Ramnagar Raj and thikadari and kashikari rights and cattle, etc., in Bettiah Raj, i.e., all the moveable and immoveable properties and household goods in whatever manner they like, never was the slightest idea in the minds of any of the parties concerned that the mukhtarnama itself was intended specifically to confer any title to the estate upon him or that it was more than what it ostensibly purported to be, a power-of-attorney. It has, however, been raised before us that the mukhtarnama did in law confer title on Rajkumar. I do not think that it did. It has been suggested to us that it is a Will or a declaration of trust either of which conferred upon Rajkumar a title to the property. The phrase which is used by the executant "My grandson" (daughter's son) "Raja Rajkumar Singh is my heir" is, in my opinion, merely a statement of belief and was not intended to convey title. The whole object of this power-of-attorney was simply to arrange that, as Rajkumar Singh, whom the executant believed to be her heir, was a minor and that as the executant herself was unable to manage her affairs personally, Gambhir Singh, a grown man and the minor's father, was appointed to look after the estate until the boy attained his majority. The expression "on attaining his majority he should either look after his affairs personally or appoint a mukhtar" does not and was not intended, in my view definitely to confer any right but was merely a statement of what would take place in normal course on the assumption that in law Rajkumar was the executant's heir. The mere fact that the execution of this power-of-attorney appears to have been witnessed by three persons does not seem to me to be material in considering whether the document is of testamentary character. I do not think that it is a Will or a disposition of property in any sense nor do I consider that it is a document which can be regarded in any way as a declaration of trust conveying any definite rights. I cannot think that, in a document of this kind, it can be possibly, with any cogency, suggested that it intended to convey or did convey any title.

RAM BAHADUR SEN v. GANESH BHAGAT.

The validity of the arbitration proceedings was attacked upon several grounds. The first and least important of these grounds was based upon a suggestion that the ladies did not understand their rights which were not properly explained to them. An attempt was made to indicate that, from the evidence, it did not appear that the ladies were clearly informed of what was taking place. The cases of Satis Chandra Ghosh v. Kalidasi Dasi (1) and of Kamawati v. Digbijai Singh (2) were drawn to our attention in this connection in order to show that it is of the highest importance that a Court, when called upon to consider the execution of deeds by a purda-nashin lady, must be satisfied that she understood what she was doing. An endeavour was made to show that in this suit there was very little evidence to indicate that the ladies had been made fully acquainted with what was being transacted. In my view this attempt has failed. So far as I can see, from such evidence as there is, there is no reason for thinking that, although they may have been mistaken as to their real legal rights, the submission to arbitration owing to the dispute which had arisen was not fully understood by these ladies.

It was next contended that the award was not really the award of the arbitrators as it was couched in such excellent language as could not have been produced by the three gentlemen who purported to have dealt with the matter. It was suggested that it was really the production of the officers of the Bettiah Raj Court of Wards. I can only say with regard to this idea that I am not in a position to be able to state whether or not in the actual wording of the award the parties were assisted by the officers of the Bettiah Raj but I do not think it would matter much even if that had been the case. All that one can observe is that it is a clear and well phrased document and, although it may have proceeded on mistaken premises, it certainly effected a not unreasonable arrangement. The arbitration proceedings were further attacked on the ground that from the submission to arbitration it was impossible to gather what was the nature of the dispute. Here, again, I am not much impressed by this argument. There was undoubtedly a dispute of a genuine character and although that fact is merely stated in general terms in the submission, it is quite clear from the award that its nature was very fully explained to the arbitrators.

(1) 68 Ind. Cas. 577; 34 C. L. J. 529; 26 C. W. N. 177; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 203.

(2) 64 Ind. Cas. 559; 26 C. W. N. 490; 43 A. 525; 15 L. W. 1; 30 M. L. T. 471; 42 M. L. J. 87; 24 Bom. L. R. 626; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 27; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 14 (1922) M. W. N. 336 (P. C.).

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

It was further urged that the award was bad because on its face it was erroneous in matters of law: (vide Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. I, p. 479): The errors in law which are suggested, are that the arbitrators thought that Rajkumar was Rani Bigya's heir and that after his death the property would pass to his widow instead of, as is admitted, originally devolving upon Prem Kumari and on her death upon Bishun Kumari and through her eventually to her sons as reversioners. It was also maintained that the award could not be supported because neither Bishun Kumari's title nor that of her minor sons was ever considered by the arbitrators. It was further contended that, in any case, the minor's reversionary interest could not be dealt with in any way and that the defendant 1st party could not be bound in any way by this award by which it was adversely affected.

I think that there is considerable force in some of these arguments. It is, of course, agreed that where a life tenant and all the reversioners are properly represented sub jure the freehold of a property can be affected by their agreement; but it is suggested here that in the arbitration proceedings Bishun Kumari, who was, properly speaking, in law the holder of a life interest, was not aware of and was not represented her own title but was simply acting on behalf of her two minor sons who were the reversioners. On the other hand, it is contended that even if this was the case her interest was in no sense adverse to that of her son and that she properly represented them and that, if she was not aware of or if she chose to sink her own life interest and support only the interest of her sons, such action would not adversely affect the validity of the arbitration proceedings. Reference was made to several cases in connection with this proposition: In Lansdown v. Lansdown (3) the facts were as follows:—

There were four brothers; the second died and the eldest entered into possession of the deceased's lands. The youngest of the four brothers, however, claimed a title whereupon they applied to a school-master who decided in favour of the youngest brother because in his view the lands could not ascend. When the school-master then gave his decision, the eldest brother agreed to divide the estate with the youngest and declared that, although he still thought he had a right of inheritance, he would rather agree to such a division than go to law. The school-master then drew up deeds of lease and re-lease of the moiety which were duly executed by the eldest brother; the youngest brother then died and the moiety descended to his minor son and heir. The eldest brother then brought a suit claiming the property and the Lord Chancellor held that he was entitled thereto on the ground that the deeds of lease and re-lease had been obtained by mistake and misrepresentation. In the case of Cooper v. Phibbs (4) it was held that where two parties, under a mistake of fact, enter into an agreement either of them has a title to come to equity to be relieved from it; but that relief will only be given on the principles of good conscience. The basis of the decision in that case is that, where parties had entered into an agreement which had been made in mutual mistake of their rights, either party was at liberty, even though there was no fraud, to have the agreement set aside. According to Halsbury (Laws of England, Vol. I, p. 442) it would seem that in England a submission to arbitration made by an infant could not be enforced against him during his infancy and would be voidable by him on attaining his majority; but that in England such submissions by infants out of Court are very rare. In In re Roberts; Roberts v. Roberts (5) it was laid down by the Court of Appeal that a compromise between members of a family of their supposed rights under a Will or other document made after a joint consultation with the family Solicitor acting as an agent for all is, in general, binding upon all the parties even though it may not be quite in accordance with their exact legal rights;

(4) (1867) 2. H. L. 149; 16 L. T. 678; 15 W. R. 1049.

(5) (1905) 1 Ch. D. 704; 74 L. J. Ch. 483; 93 L. T. 253.

(3) (1730) 25 E. R. 441; Mosely 364.

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

provided that the Solicitor had, first, fully explained to the parties what those rights are. But, if any one of the parties has entered into the compromise in consequence of what afterwards proves to have been an erroneous view taken by the Solicitor of the facts or of the law or merely because the Solicitor may have considered a compromise would be for the advantage of all parties irrespective of their legal rights, that party may have the compromise set aside. Vaughan Williams, L. J., in the course of his remarks stated: "Generally speaking, we should be disposed to support an agreement of compromise entered into after the parties have jointly consulted the family Solicitor, even though the agreement may not be quite in accordance with the rights of the parties, because we think that, generally, the very object of the compromise is to avoid the necessity of having the exact relative legal rights determined by litigation; but I cannot agree with Kekewich, J., if he means by his judgment that the family Solicitor is entitled to keep those consulting him in the dark as to their rights because he thinks that it is for the advantage of all parties to the compromise, and that if they knew their exact rights there would be no chance of compromise." In the case of Vithaldas Ganpat v. Dattaram Ramchandra (6) the circumstances were that the step-mother of a minor, against whose estate the defendants had claims, referred the matter to arbitration, purporting to act on the minor's behalf. No suit had then been filed by or against the minor. An award was made in 1899 directing the minor to pay to the defendants a sum of Rs. 950 and a decree was passed in terms of the award. In the following year the minor, by his next friend, brought a suit to set aside the decree on the grounds (a) that the minor had not been properly represented, and (b) that leave of the Court under section 462 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) had not been obtained. The lower Courts allowed the plaintiff's claim and set aside the decree; but it was held in the High Court of Bombay that the section was not applicable, as, when the agreement was entered into there was no suit or a guardian for a suit. The case was remanded to the lower Courts for hearing on the merits; the minor's next friend being, presumably, at liberty to show, if he could do so, that the minor had not been at the agreement properly represented by his step-mother. In the case of Balaji Narayan Gokhale v. Nana (7) it was held that a manager of a joint Hindu family, even when he is not the father, has the power to bind the family by a reference, of a dispute with any outsider regarding any family property, to arbitration provided such reference be for the benefit of the family; and that minors in the family are bound by the reference and consequently by the award made upon it. In the case of Bibee Solomon v. Abdool Azeem (8) it was held by the High Court that, where a compromise had been entered into affecting adversely the rights of the plaintiff, a minor, in the suit in certain property to which she was entitled by inheritance; such compromise having been sanctioned by the Court under a misapprehension of material facts and such misapprehension having been brought about by culpable ignorance and neglect of duty on the part of those who had entered into the compromise, it could be set aside. In that case the minor had been represented by her mother in a compromise with certain executors who represented the estate of the person from whom the minor derived her inheritance. There had been some uncertainty as to the value of the deceased's property and the compromise resulted in the minor receiving very much less than what she would have received had the executors not been, as the Court thought, culpably ignorant and neglectful in ascertaining the real value of the deceased's estate. But the decision was really based upon the view taken by the Court that the action of the executors practically amounted to a form of fraud.

Perhaps, the most important case which was quoted to us in this connection was that of Amrit Narayan Singh v. Gaya Singh

(7) 27 B. 287; 5 Bom. L. R. 95.

(8) 6 C. 687; 8 C. L. R. 169; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 446.

(6) 26 B. 298; 3 Bom. L. R. 887.

RAM BAHADUR SEN v. GANESH BHAGAT.

(9) in which it was held by the Privy Council that a Hindu reversioner has no right or interest in præsenti in property which a female owner holds for her life. Until it vests in him on her death, should he survive her, he has nothing to assign or to relinquish or even to transmit to his heirs. His right becomes concrete only on her demise; until then it is a mere spes successionis. His guardian, if he happens to be a minor, cannot bargain with it on his behalf or bind him by any contractual engagement in respect thereto. This decision of their Lordships was given by Mr. Ameer Ali, who, in the course of his decision, observed as follows:—"This is a suit by a Hindu reversioner to recover possession of certain properties that originally belonged to his maternal grandfather, Jhamman Singh. He alleges that the defendants-respondents before this Board, wrongfully possessed themselves of these properties under colour of certain arbitration proceedings whilst the estate was held by his mother, Kar Koer, as a female owner under the Hindu Law. Kar Koer died in 1905, and this action was brought in 1908. The suit is, therefore, clearly within time. The sole question for determination in this appeal is whether the arbitration proceedings and the decree on the award which gave to the predecessors of the respondents possession of these properties are binding on the appellant.

"On Jhamman's death, Radha Koer, his widow, applied for the registration of her name in place of her deceased husband in the Collector's Records. Her application was opposed by some of Jhamman's agnatic male relations, whom the respondents now represent. They claimed the property both under the general Hindu Law as also under some undefined family custom. Their objections were overruled by the Revenue Courts, and Radha Koer's name was duly entered in the Collector's register. Radha died shortly after in 1864, and was succeeded in the possession of the estate by her daughter, Kar Koer, the mother of the appellant. The agnates raised a fresh contest as to her right to hold the property. In the disputes that followed, and which were eventually referred to the arbitration of a number of caste-men, she seems to have been represented by her husband, Rajender Singh. There is nothing, however, on the record to show if he had any authority to act for her as her agent. Before the arbitrators had taken any action in the matter, the compromise was arrived at, in which also Rajender purported to act both for her and her infant son, the appellant. Under this compromise, Kar Koer abandoned, in favour of the agnates, all right to the immoveable property of her father, receiving on her part, besides some moveable property, two small fractional shares in certain lands which stood in her and in her mother's names. The effect of the arrangement was to extinguish completely the reversionary interest of the appellant in his grandfather's estate. The compromise was placed before the arbitrators and they were invited to make an award in accordance therewith, which they did. It is to be noted that there is nothing on the record to show that the proceedings before the arbitrator ever came to the knowledge of Kar Koer or that she knew of the compromise and its effect. In fact, it appears that Kar Koer did not acquiesce in the award, and the opposite party had to apply to the Civil Court under the provisions of section 327 of Act X of 1859 (the law that regulated at the time the procedure of the Civil Courts in India) for a decree on the award. The Court of first instance held that all the proceedings in connection with the compromise and the award had been without Kar Koer's knowledge. It accordingly dismissed the application of the agnates under section 327. They appealed to the District Judge, who apparently considered that as Rajender, her husband, was a party to the compromise, her denial could not be believed. He accordingly made a decree 'to have the award filed and enforced under section 327.' From this decision Kar Koer preferred a special appeal to the High Court of Calcutta which was dismissed. She then applied for a review of judgment, in which she was equally unsuccessful. The result of these decisions was to put her out of possession of the property covered by the compromise, and which form the subject-matter of the present action."

(9) 44 Ind. Cas. 408; 27 C.L.J. 296; 23 M. L. T. 142; 22 C. W. N. 409; 34 M. L. J. 298; 4 P. L. W. 221; 16 A. L. J. 165; 1918 M. W. N. 366; 7 L. W. 581; 20 Bom. L. R. 346; 45 C. 590; 45 I. A. 35 (P. C.).

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

Mr. Amcer Ali then proceeds to point out that the guardian of a Hindu reversioner cannot bargain with that reversionary interest or bind the minor with any contractual engagement in respect thereof. He further points out that, even if the minor had an existing right, the father could not enter into any arrangement which would bind him and which was not for his benefit. In this Court, in the quite recent case of Bhagwati Kuer v. Jagdam Sahay (10) it was held by Das and Adami, JJ., that, when a dispute with regard to the rights of the members of a family has been settled by a fair compromise, such compromise will be upheld by the Court although, perhaps, resting upon grounds which would not have been considered satisfactory if the transaction had been between strangers; but that it must be established that the right compromised could at least have formed the subject-matter of a claim, though a doubtful claim. That a reversionary heir who has only a spes successionis cannot enter into a compromise with regard to such interest as he may have in the estate of the persons whose reversionary heir he claims to be. That a compromise of a doubtful claim by the holder of a limited interest stands on the same footing and binds the reversionary heir if it is established that the compromise was a fair and honest one and that the limited holder entered into the transaction as representing the estate and for the protection of the estate and not as representing herself and for her own protection.

Now, if we endeavour to apply such principles as are enunciated in the decisions which I have mentioned to the circumstances in this case, one must first observe that the parties to the arbitration were obviously acting under quite a mistaken view of their real rights. Sri Kumari Devi was under the impression that Rajkumar Singh was endowed with title to the property by virtue of the mukhtarnama of 1894. The arbitrators seem also to have adopted that view. I have already given my reasons for thinking that Rajkumar Singh acquired no title under this mukhtarnama but, even supposing there was something to be said for that idea as a result of which the arbitrators considered that for her life time Sri Kumari was entitled to enjoy the properties, the position of Bishun Kumari, as taken up by her in the arbitration proceedings, was based upon a still slenderer foundation. She had no idea that she was the life tenant of the properties or that her sons could claim otherwise than under, what is admitted to be the invalid Will of Prem Kumari. It seems clear from the terms of the submission to arbitration and of the award that she did not put forward any claim based on her own title or any claim based on the reversionary title of her sons but only on the Will. I think, therefore, that the arbitration proceedings and the award therein cannot be supported on two broad grounds, firstly, because there was in the minds of both parties and of the arbitrators a complete misapprehension as to the true legal position: this misapprehension was the cause of the non-inclusion for consideration in the arbitration proceedings of either Bishun's own life interest or the reversionary interest of her sons. The second reason is that, although it might perhaps be said that Bishun Kumari acted as she would have if she had waived her own claim, or at any rate purported to be acting solely on behalf of the reversionary heirs, yet in arbitration proceedings it would be difficult to justify her entering into a compromise adversely affecting her sons' reversionary interests which, in fact, were apparently never even considered at all.

I must now pass to the next and very important question which arises as to whether the arrangements which took place through the medium of arbitration can be supported as some form of family compromise. There is no doubt that the principles under which the validity of an arbitration should be judged are more rigid than those which apply when a family agreement is under consideration. I think that there is ample authority indicating that in some instances in which although as an arbitration proceeding the result of an award cannot be supported, it is still capable of support on the ground that the award represents what is in effect the outcome of a family compromise. It is suggested here that even assuming that much greater latitude may be extended to the support of a family arrangement than is the case in maintaining an award under an arbitration, nevertheless, where a reversionary interest is in fact affected by a family arrangement such a compromise could not be supported; and here a fortiori because the reversionary interest was never in any way dealt with or even envied. Numerous cases have been quoted to us on this point. In that of Helan Dasi v. Durga Das Mandal (11) it was held that a partition or a family arrangement, made in settlement of a doubtful if not a disputed claim by arbitrators appointed by the parties, effecting a division of a family property and drawing up a list thereof which was signed by the parties, carried out and acted upon by them for some time, is a valid and a binding arrangement which the parties to it cannot deny, ignore or resile from. Mr. Justice Mukerjee in that case remarked that a family arrangement might be upheld even though there were no rights actually in dispute at the time of making it and that the Courts will not be disposed to scan with much nicety the quantum of consideration. That it is mistake to suppose that the doctrine of family arrangement extends no further than arrangements for the settlement of doubtful or disputed rights; and that the principle is applicable not merely to cases in which arrangements are made between members of a family for the preservation of its peace but also to cases in which arrangements are made between them for the preservation of its property. In the case of Williams v. Williams (12) the facts were as follows:—

(10) 62 Ind. Cas. 933; 6 P. L. J. 604; 2 P. L. T. 471.

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

A died leaving a wife and two sons. A had made a Will by which he gave all his property to his two sons in equal shares. But this Will was incomplete and was not admitted to Probate. The brothers, however, orally agreed that the invalidity of the Will should make no difference and for 20 years they dealt with the property as if it belonged to them equally. The widow never insisted on her claims. The younger brother died and his legal representative filed a bill for the equal division of the property. The Court upheld the family arrangement although there were in law no rights whatever in dispute. Turner, L. J., in the course of his decision remarked: "It was strongly argued for the appellant that this case does not fall within the range of those authorities; quoted that those cases extend no further than to arrangement for the settlement of doubtful or disputed rights, and that in this case there was not and could not be any doubtful or disputed right; but this, I think, is a very short-sighted view of the cases as to family arrangements. They extend, as I apprehend, much farther than is contended for on the part of the appellant, and apply, as I conceive, not merely to cases in which arrangements are made between members of the family for the preservation of its peace, but to cases in which arrangements are made between them for the preservation of its property."

In the case of Satya Kumar Banerjee v. Satya Kirpal Banerjee (13) the same principles were followed. See also Ramji Ram v. Salig Ram (14). Perhaps, the most important case bearing upon this point is that of Keramutulla Miah v. Keramutulla Meah (15). In that case it was held that in the absence of proof of mistake, inequality of position, undue influence, coercion, fraud or any similar ground a family arrangement made in settlement of a disputed or doubtful claim is a valid and binding arrangement which the parties thereto cannot deny, ignore or resile from, that if the parties have settled a dispute such settlement will not be set aside on the ground that it gave to one of them more than that which he ought possibly to have recovered if he had taken the judgment of the Court upon the matters in difference between them. That the Courts will not be disposed to scan with much nicety the quantum of considera-

(11) 4 C. L. J. 324.

(12) (1867) 2 Ch. 294; 36 L. J. Ch. 419; 16 L. T. 92; 15 W. R. 657.

(13) 3 Ind. Cas. 247; 10 C. L. J. 503.

(14) 11 Ind. Cas. 481; 14 C. L. J. 188.

(15) 49 Ind. Cas. 886; 23 C. W. N. 118.

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

tion. That there is nothing in this doctrine of family arrangements opposed to the general principle that, when it is sought to bind a minor by an agreement entered into on his behalf, it must be shown that the agreement was for the benefit of the minor. That if improper advantage has been taken of the minor's position, a family arrangement can be set aside on the ground of undue influence or inequality of position or one of the other grounds which would vitiate such an arrangement in the case of adults; but that when there is no defect of this nature the settlement of a doubtful claim is of as much advantage to a minor as to an adult and that where a genuine dispute has been fairly settled, the dispute cannot be re-opened solely on the ground that one of the parties to the family arrangement was a minor. Halsbury, (Laws of England, Vol. 14, p. 542) in dealing with what family arrangements can and cannot be supported, points out that an agreement dividing up family property though entered into under a misapprehension of the legal rights of the parties, provided such misapprehension is not induced by any party to the agreement is entitled to support even where the fact that misapprehension existed has been established by subsequent legal decision. On the other hand, at page 544, he points out that an agreement as to division of property can be set aside where the heir give up property to which he had undoubted rights without consideration or where he was ignorant or without professional assistance even though there was no evidence of fraud or undue influence. See also Hardeo Sahai v. Gauri Shankar (16), Srinath Bose v. Nibaran Chandra Roy (17), Kanhai Lal v. Brij Lal (18), Bent Prasad v. Lajja Ram (19), Ram Niranjan Singh v. Prayag Singh (20).

(16) 28 A. 35; 2 A. L. J. 493; A. W. N. (1905)

171.

(17) 53 Ind. Cas. 945; 25 C. W. N. 859.

(18) 47 Ind. Cas. 207; 40 A. 487; 22 C. W. N. 914; 8 L. W. 212; 24 M. L. T. 236; 35 M. L. J. 459; 16 A. L. J. 825; (1918) M. W. N. 709; 28 C. L. J. 394; 5 P. L. W. 294; 20 Bom. L. R. 1048; 45 I. A. 118 (P. C.).

(19) 35 Ind. Cas. 631; 38 A. 452; 14 A. L. J. 438.

(20) 8 C. 138; 10 C. L. R. 66; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 88.

In order to see what should be the principles properly to be applied in this case, it is, in the first place, important to try and see clearly what was the position prior and which gave rise to the arbitration or compromise. Sri Kumari Devi certainly had a claim: it may not have been a good claim; it may have been founded possibly upon two misapprehensions, (a) that Raj Kumar was the heir in law to Rani Bigya and that on her death he (if indeed he survived her) came into her property to the exclusion of her mother Prem Kumari. But this was a mistake: Prem Kumari was Rani Bigya's heir. Rajkumar died before Prem Kumari, in law he was not Rani Bhigya's heir at the time of the dispute: (b) that Rajkumar had been made her heir by Rani Bigya by the mukhtarnama which she executed on October 19th 1894. This may also have been and, in my opinion, was a second mistake: but it was one about which there was certainly an element of doubt, it was one of, if not the main, grounds of the dispute; the arbitrators thought the claim was well founded: the question has been actively agitated and closely argued in the present litigation.

Added to all this, Sri Kumari Devi's claim seems to have been recognised after Bigya's death by Prem Kumari. Rajkumar is said to have died shortly after Bigya in the same year (1901-02) and after his death Prem Kumari and Sri Kumari lived together. Sri Kumari was, apparently recognised by Prem Kumari as the rightful possessor of the property for in 1905 Sri Kumari granted the thicca patta in favour of Coffin who was part proprietor of the Bhusrari Indigo Factory without any objection on the part of Prem Kumari. It is only in 1908, eight days before her death, that Prem Kumari seems to have by her Will shown that she thought that she and not Sri Kumari was the owner of the estate and to have believed that she could bequeath it to her daughter—Bishun's two sons. Prem Kumari's husband had predeceased her: and Parkash Sen, her daughter's husband, may possibly have influenced Prem Kumari to make a Will in favour of his sons though that is mere surmise.

At any rate, the above observations clearly show that after Prem Kumari's death and at the time of the arbitration, Sri Kumari had a claim which though it may in law actually have been a doubtful claim was nevertheless one of quite a formidable character. It was one indeed which in my view justified Bishun Kumari in entering into negotiations with her. Next, let us look at Bishun Kumari's position prior to the arbitration. Neither she nor her husband seem to have contemplated that she on Prem Kumari's death could be the person entitled to a life interest in the estate; such a claim never seems to have been put forward at all by her; nor to have suggested itself to anyone at the time of the arbitration. She represented not herself but her minor sons and her claim for them based itself on Prem Kumari's Will. She certainly could not possibly be said to be in any way entering into a compromise as representing herself or for the protection of her own interest for she was not even aware that she had one.

RAM BAHADUR SEN V. GANESH BHAGAT.

But, if she had been aware of her own claim, could she not, acting for the protection of the estate and not on her own behalf, have properly, in order to avoid litigation and to settle the strongly advocated claim of Sri Kumari, have entered into the compromise which she did? If she could, it seems difficult to see why without knowing of her own claim, but with the same object, she could not act similarly: the only possible objection which occurs to my mind is that she was ignorant that she had in her hands a very strong weapon to use in the dispute. Now what was the result of the compromise, intrinsically not at all an iniquitous one.

Bishun's own interest is lost sight of. She was afraid that if Sri Kumari's claim is successful her own sons whom she thinks are entitled under the Will of Prem Kumari would never get anything from the estate: there seems a general but dim or at any rate not very clear impression even in the minds of the arbitrators that perhaps apart from the Will Bishun's two sons ought to come into the property after Sri Kumari's death. What Bishun does do in reality is to set the duration of her own life against that of her sister-in-law, if she (Bishun) dies after Sri Kumari the reversionary interests of her sons are not in any way affected: but if as actually happened she (Bishun Kumari) predeceased Sri Kumari then the reversionary interests of her sons are affected inasmuch as they would not own the estate until Sri Kumari's death. If there had been no compromise then on the death of Bishun Kumari which occurred in about 1917 Ram Bahadur Sen would have immediately been entitled to come into possession of the property. As it is, if the compromise is upheld, he will not do so till after Sri Kumari's death. The immediate claim here is one of possession. The minor's guardian is in fact in possession of the property and the plaintiff, by virtue of his zarpeshgi, is seeking to eject the minor's guardian from possession. If the compromise is supported, the plaintiff must succeed, but in any case his possession under his zarpeshgi would only be good until the death of Sri Kumari Devi; and whether the plaintiff could recover what he has advanced in connection therewith from Ram Bahadur Sen after Sri Kumari's death depends upon considerations with which we are not here concerned.

Mr. Justice Das in the case of Bhagwati Kuer v. Jagdai Sahay (10) expresses his view that the law as it at present (1921) stands indicates that:

1. "A reversionary heir can under no circumstances convey or agree to convey or relinquish any future right or expectancy, nor can his guardian if he happens to be a minor bargain with his possibility of succession or bind him by any contractual engagement in respect thereto."

If that was the end of the position, there seems no doubt that the arrangement in this case could not be supported for Bishun in it undoubtedly though unknowingly did something which might and actually did affect adversely her minor sons' reversionary interest. But the 2nd proposition is,—

2. "An alienation by a limited owner does not bind the reversioner; but a limited owner can bind the reversionary heir by a compromise in which each party takes a share of the family property by virtue of the independent title which is, to that extent, and by way of compromise, admitted by the other parties, if it appears that the compromise was a fair and a bona fide

RAM BAHADUR SEN v. GANESH BHAGAT.

compromise and that the limited owner entered into the compromise as representing the estate which was for the time being vested in her and acted for the protection and preservation of that estate:" and with this must be read the 3rd proposition:

3. "Whenever a question is raised whether a transaction is an alienation or a compromise of a doubtful claim, the true test to apply is to see whether the alienee derives title from the holder of the limited interest. Where the transaction is based on the assumption that there was an antecedent title of some kind in both the parties, and the agreement acknowledges and defines what that title is, the transaction is not an alienation, but a compromise of a doubtful claim."

Now, admitting that the compromise was a fair and bona fide one what would Bishun's powers be in entering into it?

I assume, in the first place, that she was aware of her own life interest and of her son's reversionary interests. Could she for the sake of peace have given Sri Kumari her (Bishun's) own life interest? I think the answer must be in the affirmative. Could she have given out and out to Sri Kumari and her side of the family a reasonable amount of the property? I think again the answer is probably in the affirmative: for though by so doing she diminished the amount of property which might come to the reversioner's hands she had for the benefit of the estate power to alienate. Could she give to Sri Kumari a longer estate in the whole property than her (Bishun's) own life interest? For example, could she give to Sri Kumari and her side of the family a limited interest in the whole property for her (Bishun's) own life and for 20 years after her (Bishun's) death? I am of the opinion that the answer is in the negative: for if she did so, she would be doing something purporting to bind the minor reversioners by a contingent retardation of the date (i.e., the date of Bishun's death) upon which their reversionary interest might vest in them. She cannot do away with her minor sons' reversionary interest she cannot bind them by entering into the contractual engagement in respect of it: she could not in my view deal with it by introducing into it a feature of time which would retard definitely the vesting of the reversionary interest in the reversioners assuming, of course, that they outlived her.

I have, therefore, not without reluctance under the circumstances of this case come to the conclusion that it was not competent for Bishun to do what she did in this case, i. e., to agree to a compromise which in giving a life interest in the whole property to Sri Kumari for her (Sri Kumari's) life might have and in fact has introduced a new condition into the reversionary interest of her minor sons; that new contingency being a postponement for an indefinite period (i. e., the period intervening between Bishun's death and the unascertainable date in the future when Sri Kumari dies) of the vesting of the reversionary interest in the 1st defendant. The transactions cannot, therefore, in my opinion be supported as a family settlement. Summarising then my conclusions, they are:—

1. I do not consider that the mukhtar-nama executed on October 19th 1874 by Rani Bigya Kumari Devi in favour of Babu Gambhir Singh, the husband of her daughter, Rani Prem Kumari Devi, endowed the executant's grandson Raja Rajkumar Singh with any title to her (the executant's estate). On this point I agree with the Subordinate Judge;

2. I do not see any grounds for considering

(a) that Ram Bahadur Sen and Shyam Bahadur Sen the two minor sons of Musammatt Bishun Kumari Devi and of her husband, Babu Sri Parkash Sen, were not sufficiently represented in the arbitration proceeding by their mother and father,

(b) that the two parda-nashin ladies, Musammatt Bishun Kumari Devi and Sri Kumari Devi, who were parties to the arbitration proceedings were not adequately acquainted with or insufficiently informed of what was taking place in connection therewith,

(c) that the arbitration award was not the award of the arbitrators. On these points I agree with the Subordinate Judge so far as he had to deal with them.

3. I do not consider that the arbitration proceedings can be supported for the following reasons:—

SHEO NATH v. BEG RAJ.

- (a) the parties went to arbitration under a complete misapprehension of their respective real legal positions and rights,
- (b) The award of the arbitrators was given under a similarly almost complete misapprehension of the respective real legal positions and rights of the parties,
- (c) The award was bad in law in that
 - (1) the arbitrators wrongly thought that the mukhtarnama of October 19th 1894 executed by Rani Bigya Kumari Devi in favour of Babu Gambhir Singh endowed Raja Rajkumar Singh with title to the estate through which Sri Kumari Devi could claim;
 - (2) the arbitrators wrongly thought that the Will made by Rani Prem Kumari Devi on February 8th, 1908 in favour of Ram Bahadur Sen and Shyam Bahadur Sen was valid;
 - (3) the arbitrators did not take into consideration the life interest which Musammam Bishun Kumari Devi held in the estate after the death of her mother, Rani Prem Kumari Devi;
 - (4) the arbitration did not (apparently) take into consideration the reversionary interest of Ram Bahadur Sen and Shyam Bahadur Sen.

On this point I disagree with the Subordinate Judge.

4. I do not consider that the first defendant would in any case be bound by the award of the arbitrators because by that award his reversionary interest was subjected to the imposition of a condition under which the vesting in him of his reversionary interest might have been and in fact is retarded for an indefinite period after the date when in law it should vest in him. To such a course he, being a minor, could not be bound by any acquiescence therein on the part of those purporting to represent him in the arbitration proceedings.

On this point I disagree with the Subordinate Judge.

5. I do not consider that the arrangements which resulted from the arbitration proceedings can be supported as a family settlement as binding the 1st defendant: because as the effect of the compromise the reversionary interest of the 1st defendant was affected in the manner which I have detailed in the preceding paragraph. I may also here add, although it may not strictly be here material, that the complete ignorance of Musammam Bishun Kumari Devi of the fact of her on claim to a life interest in the estate deprived her of utilising on behalf of the reversioners a very potent weapon in the controversy. On this point I disagree with the Subordinate Judge.

The result will be that the appeal by the first defendant will be allowed: the judgment of the Subordinate Judge will be set aside so far as it relates to the appellant: the respondent must pay the costs of the appeal both of the appeal and in the Court below.

Ross, J.—I agree.

Z. K. & N. H.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 389 OF 1922.

January 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

SHEO NATH—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER
versus

BEG RAJ—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Wrong decision on point of law or fact—Illegality or material irregularity—Revision.

A Court which comes to a wrong conclusion on a point of law or fact, in deciding a question which it had jurisdiction to decide, cannot be said to have acted illegally or with material irregularity so as to justify interference in revision by the High Court under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Civil revision of a decree of the Second Class Munsif, Hissar, dated the 1st March 1922.

Lala Namwa Mall, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner was the plaintiff in this case. He claimed the land in dispute as his property while the defendant claimed it as his. The parties referred the matter to an arbitration. The whole case was referred through the Court. The arbitrator gave an award according to which neither the plaintiff nor the defendant had any title to the land. The plaintiff occupies the position of a trustee of a temple. According to the award the temple is the owner of this piece of land. The arbitrator, therefore, decreed the claim for possession in favour of the plaintiff in his capacity as a trustee. The plaintiff filed certain objections against the award, one of them being that the arbitrator had travelled beyond the terms of the reference and had decided matters which did not form the subject-matter of the suit. The Court below took into consideration those objections and overruled them. The plaintiff has preferred this revision through Mr. Nanwa Mall, a learned Vakild of this Court. The initial difficulty in the way of the learned Vakild is that in such matters the High Court has no power to interfere. It is not denied that the learned Munsif had jurisdiction to decide the objections raised by the plaintiff before him and has decided those objections, and if in deciding those objections he has come to a wrong conclusion on a question of law or fact he cannot be said to have acted illegally or with material irregularity, vide Amir Hassan Khan v. Shco Bakhsh Singh(1). I have no power to interfere with the order of the Court below and I, therefore, reject this application for revision with costs.

THAKUR PATHAK V. RAGHO PATHAK.

N. H.

Revision rejected.

(1) 11 C. 6; 11 I. A. 237; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 559; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 83; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760 (P. C.).

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 16 OF 1923.

May 30, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Justice Macpherson.
THAKUR PATHAK AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

VERSUS

RAGHO PATHAK AND OTHERS—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, rr. 2, 8—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Suit for declaration—Admission by one defendant—Date fixed for appearance of guardian ad litem of minor defendant—Dismissal for default—Form of order.

In a suit for declaration one of the several defendants who disclaimed all interest in the property in dispute, appeared and admitted the claim. There was some difficulty in serving the guardian ad litem of one of the minor defendants, and a date was fixed for his appearance. On that date the guardian filed a written statement and then absented himself. When the suit was called on none of the parties were present and the suit was dismissed for default under O. IX, r. 2, of the Civil Procedure Code. It was urged that the suit should not have been dismissed and that at any rate the dismissal should have been under O. IX, r. 8 of the Code:

Held, (1) that the fact that one of the defendants had admitted the plaintiff's claim did not entitle the latter to have the suit decreed against that defendant and dismissed as against the rest under O. IX, r. 8 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the provisions of that rule must be read with section 42 of the Specific Relief Act which makes the grant of a declaratory decree discretionary and the discretion would obviously have been wrongly exercised in this case by granting a decree against one defendant only and that the least important defendant who had disclaimed all interest in the property in dispute; [p. 560, col. 1.]

(2) that the mere filing of a written statement by the guardian ad litem of the minor defendant before the case was called on did not amount to an appearance within the meaning of O. IX, r. 8, of the Civil Procedure Code; [p. 560, col. 1.]

(3) that, however, the date on which the suit was dismissed having been fixed only for the appearance of the guardian ad litem of the minor defendant, the Court should not have dismissed the suit on that date owing to the absence of the plaintiff but should have fixed a further date for the hearing of the suit. [p. 560, col. 2.]

Civil revision from a decision of the Munsif, Aurangabad, dated the 11th November 1922.

Mr. Sambhu Saran, for the Petitioners.

Mr. D. P. Sinha, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of the order, dated the 11th November 1922, of the learned Munsif of Aurangabad, in Miscellaneous Case No. 245 of 1922, purporting to be made under O. IX, r. 4, of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The present petitioners who are father and sons instituted a suit for a declaration that certain plots of land entered in the Records of Rights in the name of the first petitioner and the opposite party Nos. 1 (father of minor opposite party Nos. 2 to 6) and 7 belonged exclusively to the plaintiffs. A written statement was filed on behalf of the minor opposite party No. 7 through his mother-guardian admitting the claim. There were many adjournments in the suit, but eventually on the 10th August the Pleader guardian ad litem of the minor defendants Nos. 2 to 6 declined to act and the comparing clerk of the Munsif's Court was appointed in his place. On the 29th August, which was the next date fixed, it was found that the new guardian ad litem had not been served with summons and the case was adjourned till the 9th September for his appearance. The order sheet for the 9th September shows that the service return on the guardian ad litem had not been placed on the record and the case was put up on the 13th September for orders, when the parties did not appear and the suit was "dismissed for default," it being further ordered that the written statement filed on that day by the guardian ad litem of the minor defendants be placed with the record. The plaintiffs then filed an application, purporting to be under O. IX, r. 4, to set aside the dismissal on the ground of the prolonged illness of the plaintiff in charge of the suit, and the learned Munsif having disallowed it, they have appealed to this Court to revise his order.

THAKUR PATHAK V. RAGHO PATHAK.

On behalf of the petitioners it is urged in the first place, that the dismissal ought to have been under O. IX, r. 8, because the defendant No. 7 had admitted the claim and the suit ought to have been decreed against him. But it is to be remembered that O. IX, r. 8, is to be read with section 42 of the Specific Relief Act which makes the grant of a declaratory decree discretionary and the discretion would obviously have been wrongly exercised in this case by granting a decree against one defendant only and that the least important defendant who had disclaimed all interest.

It is then urged that the dismissal ought to have been under O. IX, r. 8, because the guardian ad litem was present. But there is nothing to show that such was the case, and it would appear that the guardian who was an amla of the Court simply filed a written statement at the opening of the Court and then probably advisedly failed to enter appearance at the hearing when he saw that the plaintiffs were absent.

It is then contended that on the merits the application ought to have been allowed. The reason for absence given was that the applicant No. 4 was ill. The learned Munsif did not find the evidence of illness sufficient and convincing and considered that, even if he was ill, the other applicants might have taken the necessary steps. I do not agree with these findings, but I prefer to base the order which I am about to make on the simple ground that the order of dismissal was altogether unreasonable. The 9th and then the 13th September were fixed, so far as can be gathered, for the appearance of the guardian ad litem of the minors and it is not easy to see what steps the petitioners or their Pleader were to take or could have taken on the 9th or 13th September. The fault lies mainly with the order-sheet of the learned Munsif, most of which he apparently allowed to be written by an unintelligent subordinate. Cases will constantly occur where the litigants will be prejudiced by such a procedure and in point of fact the course of the suit during August and September is an example of this. In view of its previous obscure orders and the appearance of the guardian ad litem, the Court ought, on the 13th September, to have fixed a date.

In these circumstances, the application is allowed, the order of dismissal is set aside and the suit is restored to the file on condition that within a month from this date the petitioners pay to the contesting defendants a sum of sixteen rupees as costs; if the payment is not made this application will stand dismissed.

There will be no order for costs.
Let the record go down at once.

Z. K. & N. H.

Application allowed.

GANSA ORAON V. EMPEROR.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

DEATH REFERENCE CASE NO. 9 OF 1923.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 34 OF 1923.

March 20, 1923.

Present.—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt.
GANSA ORAON—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 154, 162, 288.—Information of cognizable offence, what is—Written statement obtained from witness during investigation, admissibility of, as evidence—Statement made before Committing Magistrate transferred to Sessions record, whether can be used as substantive evidence.

The information referred to in section 154 of the Criminal Procedure Code is something in the nature of a complaint or accusation, or at least information of a crime, given with the object of putting the Police in motion in order to investigate, as distinguished from information obtained by the Police when actively investigating a crime [p. 564, col. 1.]

Circumstances may arise in which information is given to the Police of such a vague and indefinite character that it cannot be treated as coming under section 154 of the Code, so as to make it incumbent upon the officer in charge of the Police Station to start an investigation and he may reasonably require more direct information before doing so, and such further information given to him in such circumstances might not come under the provisions of section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Or the information referred to in section 154 may come from more sources than one, and more than one such information may be recorded at or about the same time. [p. 564, col. 1.]

But once definite information has reached the Police relating to the commission of a cognisable offence under section 154 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the Police have taken active steps to investigate, whether the information has been taken down in the book kept for that purpose as provided in section 154 or not, all further statements taken from the witnesses are taken in the course of a Police investigation and are inadmissible in evidence under section 162 of the Code. [p. 564, col. 1.]

Under section 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code a Sessions Court is not restricted to admitting the evidence of a witness duly taken before the Committing Magistrate merely for the purpose of contradicting that witness when giving evidence in the Sessions Court. The section is intended to enable the Court to read the previous evidence as substantive evidence at the trial where, for the purposes of justice, the adoption of such a course is found necessary by the Judge. [p. 565, col. 1.]

Queen-Empress v. Dorasami Ayyar, 24 M. 414 at p. 416; 2 Weir 377, Maruti Joti Shinde v. Emperor, 63 Ind. Cas. 332; 23 Bom. L. R. 820; 22 Cr. L. J. 636; 46 B. 97; (1922) A. L. R. (B.) 108; relied on: Queen-Empress v. Jeochi, 21 A. 111; A. W. N. (1898) 196; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 780, Emperor v.

Dwarika Kurmi, 28 A. 683; 3 A. L. J. 852; 4 Cr. L. J. 61; A. W. N. (1906) 187, referred to.

It is, however, a matter for the discretion of the Judge whether he thinks that such evidence should be used in the interest of justice, for many cases may arise in which it would be dangerous to rely upon such evidence where witnesses have proved themselves before the Sessions Judge altogether unworthy of credit. [p. 563, col. 1.]

Per Mullick, J.—Information, within the meaning of section 154 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is an allegation in the nature of a complaint, made to a Police Officer with a view to his taking action, and when such an allegation is made the Police Officer must record it as an information under the section, and the writing will attract the provisions of section 35 of the Evidence Act; and if the Police Officer should record more than one information relating to a cognisable offence they will all share the privilege of being exempt from the disability imposed by section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code. In every case it is for the Court to decide whether the communication is an information in this technical sense and whether and when the Police investigation had in fact begun. [p. 562, cols. 1 & 2.]

Criminal appeal from the judgment of Mr. Williams, Judicial Commissioner, Chota Nagpur, dated the 10th February 1923.

Mr. Sambhu Saran, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. L. Nand Keolyar, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—In this case Gansa Oraon was tried and convicted of murder and sentenced to death by the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpore on the 10th of February last. The proceedings have been referred to this Court under section 374 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the convict has appealed.

The appellant and his brother, Tikua Oraon, who were joint in estate and occupied the same house in Mouza Bongeloya in the Ranchi District. The appellant was married whilst his brother was single. There had been some dispute between them as to the division of the paddy crops on their land and Tikua endeavoured, but without success, to bring about a partition. The appellant had promised that when Tikua got married, he would agree to a partition of the land.

According to the prosecution case they had quarrelled about 7 o'clock on the night of the 15th of December last on the question of the division of the crops, with the result that the appellant picked up a balua with which he struck his brother on top of the head a severe blow cutting through the scalp and exposing the brain. Two persons are said to have been present and witnessed the occurrence. One of them was Mussammât Budhni, the wife of the appellant, the other is Khurloo, his cousin.

GANSA ORAON V. ELPERGOR.

The First Intimation which the Police received of the occurrence was at 4 P. M. on the 16th of December when Rup Singh, the chowkidar of the village, arrived at the Police Station at Basia, about 10 miles distant from Mouza Bongeloya, and reported to the Sub-Inspector that the same morning the mother of the accused and Tikua had told him that her elder son Gansa, Oraon, had assaulted his younger brother, Tikua, the previous evening, whilst they were under the influence of handia, with a tangi and that he had gone to the house and seen Tikua who had a blood stained wound on his head, but on asking him who had assaulted him he gave no reply. This report was entered in the Police Station Diary but not signed by the chowkidar, nor was it treated by the Sub-Inspector as an information within the meaning of section 154 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Sub-Inspector proceeded the same afternoon to Bongeloya and reached the village at about 8 P. M. He found Tikua at the house with a big wound on his head. He was unconscious and unable to speak. He thereupon questioned Mussammât Budhni, the wife of the appellant, whose statement he took down in writing and obtained her thumb impression in the presence of two witnesses treating it as what is known as the First Information Report which, under section 156, Criminal Procedure Code, would entitle him to hold an investigation. He then proceeded to obtain evidence from other persons with the result that the appellant was arrested on the 17th of December, and on the following day, at 9 o'clock in the morning, made a confession at the sub-jail at Gumla before a Magistrate. The statement made by the appellant at that time was to the following effect:—

"There was a division between my brother, Tikua, and myself. I struck him with a balua on his head. We are nine members including my children, and Tikua is along with his mother. He picked up a quarrel for his share. I have no motive in saying this. No body has tutored me. He took 2 annas while I have 1½ annas of the land."

On the following day the 19th of December Tikua, who had in the meantime been removed to hospital, died of his wound without having recovered consciousness.

When before the Committing Magistrate on the 4th of January the appellant admitted having made the confession to the Magistrate on the 18th December and again admitted that he had struck his brother with a balua on his head. He added that he was drunk. Before the Judicial Commissioner on the 7th of February when questioned he stated that he did not know if he had beaten Tikua as he had taken handia (country liquor). He admitted that he had made the statement before mentioned to the Magistrate but added that he made it because he had been beaten by a constable. He said he had no quarrel with his brother about land and explained the evidence given by Khurloo and another witness, Dasain, by saying that they had deposed against him because there was a dispute between himself and them. He also stated that he was on bad terms with Rup Singh, the chowkidar, who had threatened to kill him. He further stated that he had enmity with Sukhu Mahto who had given evidence as to the quarrel between the two brothers.

At the trial, Khurloo stated that on the evening of the occurrence he took food at the appellant's house and afterwards was given tobacco. He and Gansa and Tikua sat on the veranda facing south, that Gansa struck Tikua but it was a dark night and he did not know what he struck him with. He further stated that nothing was said between Gansa and Tikua, that Gansa struck him silently on the head and Tikua remained sitting. Gansa then went outside and he did not know what happened to the weapon with which he struck him. He said that Mussammât Bhudni was not with them but in the north facing room. This evidence given by an obviously unwilling witness varied in some material respects from the statements which he had made earlier before the Committing Magistrate and the learned Judicial Commissioner allowed his deposition made on the former occasion to be put in evidence.

GANSA ORAON 7. EMPEROR.

under the provisions of section 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code. His attention was drawn to his previous statement which was to the following effect:—

That he went to the accused's house in the evening and was smoking there sitting on the verandah facing east. The accused's wife, Musammāt Budhni, and Tikua were there. Tikua and the accused began to quarrel and he took up his balua and hit Tikua on the head with it and then ran away out of the house. Tikua stood up and then sat down again. He could not say why the accused struck Tikua but added that the latter had cut paddy of 2 annas on their joint land whilst the accused had cut only 1½ annas. He admitted that he had said before the Magistrate that the brothers began quarrelling and that the accused took up his balua and hit Tikua on the head with it and added that what he said in the lower Court was true but that it was not true that they quarrelled.

Budhni, the appellant's wife, was also called and stated that she did not know how Tikua met his death. She had gone to sleep after her evening meal and only saw Tikua next morning when he was unconscious. He had a wound on his head but she did not see how the injury was caused. This witness also had made a statement before the Magistrate which was at variance with her statement given before the learned Judicial Commissioner and her previous statement was allowed to be put in evidence under the provisions of section 288, Criminal Procedure Code. On that occasion she had stated that her husband and Tikua and Khurioo were on the south verandah watching the fire when her husband and Tikua began to quarrel over the division of the paddy. Her husband told Tikua that he would divide the land after Tikua's marriage and that her husband took the balua which was on the verandah and struck Tikua on the head with it once. She identified the balua which was in Court. She admitted making the statement but alleged that she made it because the constable said if she did not the Magistrate would abuse and beat her. It was proved by the Sub-Inspector that Budhni produced the balua when he first went to the house on the night of the 16th.

This was the principal evidence against the appellant. Another witness, Dasain Oraon, who knew the parties and belonged to the same village, stated that last year Tikua called a panchayat for the division of their land but Gansa would not allow any division until Tikua got married so the panchayat dissolved. On the night of the occurrence Gansa came to his, Dasain's house and stated that he had done wrong. When asked what wrong he had done, he merely repeated that he had done wrong, and, as he had nothing on the upper part of his body and it was cold he asked for a covering, which he was given, and he went away.

The medical evidence showed that there was an incised wound 7 inches long by 1 inch deep on the top of the deceased man's head and that the brain substance was coming out when he was admitted into the hospital. The post mortem examination showed that the parietal and frontal bones of the skull were clean cut as if by a sharp instrument.

The learned Judicial Commissioner was satisfied beyond any reasonable doubt that the appellant was guilty of the charge preferred, although the opinion of the Assessors was inconclusive and unsatisfactory. One of the Assessors thought it was established that the accused did strike the deceased but that it has not been proved what was the weapon used and he did not think that the accused intended to kill his brother; he thought that he should be sent to jail and not hanged. The other thought it was improbable that a brother would kill his brother, but it might be that the accused was drunk and struck his brother and that the circumstance did not warrant more than imprisonment. It would seem probable, as the learned Judicial Commissioner thought, that the dislike of inflicting a capital sentence was the primary cause of such halting opinions.

It was argued before us in appeal that the written statement made to the Sub-Inspector by the appellant's wife on the evening of the 16th ought not to have been admitted in evidence as a First Information Report. It was pointed out that information having been already given at the Police Station earlier by the chowkidar, any statements afterwards taken by the Police were taken in the course of an investigation and were inadmissible as evidence under section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code. I have no doubt that the statement made at the Police Station by the chowkidar was information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence within the meaning of section 154 of the Code. It ought to have been taken down in the book kept for that purpose as provided in the section, and whether this was done or not, in the particular circumstances of this case, I think all further statements taken from the witnesses were taken in the course of a Police investigation and that the written statements so taken were inadmissible as evidence under section 162 of the Code. Circumstances may arise in which information is given to the Police of such a vague and indefinite character that it cannot be treated as coming under section 154 so as to make it incumbent upon the officer in charge of the Police Station to start an investigation, and he may reasonably require more direct information before doing so; and such further information given to him in such circumstances might not come under the provisions of section 162. The information referred to in section 154 appears to me to be something in the nature of a complaint or accusation, or at least information of a crime given with the object of putting the Police in motion in order to investigate, as distinguished from information obtained by the Police when actively investigating a crime. I can also conceive that the information referred to in section 154 may come from more than one source, and more than one such information may be recorded at or about the same time, but once the Police have taken active steps to investigate, any written statements taken by them cannot be admissible as evidence as they would come within section 162. The Sub-Inspector in the present case stated that as the chowkidar did not give him any idea of the seriousness of the wound he thought the case to be non-cognizable. I have no doubt that he acted honestly in coming to this belief but at the same time there can be no doubt that the information disclosed by the chowkidar in the first instance was such as to show that something more than a common assault had been committed. I, therefore, consider that the so-called First information taken from Budhni, the wife of the appellant, ought not to have been placed on the record, as it was not admissible in evidence. I observe that the learned Judicial Commissioner does not refer to this statement as evidence in the case and his judgment does not appear to have been in any way influenced by it. I also think that it should be rejected. Had I considered that it in any way influenced the learned Judicial Commissioner in arriving at the conclusion of the appellant's guilt, I should have considered whether it was necessary to order a new trial. But after considering the other evidence in the case, coupled with the appellant's own confession, I feel no reasonable doubt, in my mind, that the appellant was guilty of murder. It is noticeable that the appellant, when examined in the Sessions Court, did not deny that he had confessed before the Magistrate; nor did he deny that he had beaten Tikua. He pleaded that he did not know whether he had or had not, because he had taken handia. This was also his defence before the Committing Magistrate in which he admitted the assault upon his brother but said he was drunk. The main witnesses of his guilt were the appellant's wife and a near relation and they were no doubt confronted with a very difficult and trying situation. It is only natural that they should try as far as possible to do what they could for one so nearly related, and the evidence given by both of them before the Committing Magistrate, as well as the evidence of Khurloo given at the trial, abundantly corroborate the confession made by the appellant and leave no doubt in my mind as to his guilt.

GANGA ORAON V. EMPEROR.

It was contended that the statements made before the Committing Magistrate were not admissible as substantive evidence in the case and that conviction could not be based solely upon such evidence. For this proposition the case of Queen-Empress v. Jeochi (1) was relied upon. In that case there was no evidence before the Court to prove the guilt of the accused except the statements made by some of the witnesses when before the Committing Magistrate, and Mr. Justice Bannerji, as the witnesses had given a diametrically opposite version

(1) 21 A. 111; A. W. N. (1898) 196; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 780.

GANSA ORAON V. EMPEROR.

before the Sessions Judge, refused to convict upon such evidence. In the later case of Emperor v. Dwarka Kurmi (2) the same learned Judge, when sitting with Mr. Justice Aikman, explained that in the earlier case he did not intend to hold that such depositions were wholly inadmissible, and having regard to the clear language of section 288 it could not be held that statements made before the Committing Magistrate could not be admitted in evidence under the section. Again, the Madras High Court in Queen-Empress v. Dorasami Ayyar (3) held that under section 288 of the Code the Court is not restricted to admitting the evidence of a witness duly taken before the Committing Magistrate merely for the purpose of contradicting that witness when giving evidence in the Sessions Court, but that the section was intended to enable the Court to read the previous evidence as substantive evidence at the trial where, for the purposes of justice, the adoption of such a course was found necessary by the Judge. A similar view was also expressed by the Bombay High Court in the case of Maruti Joti Shinde v. Emperor (4) and in my opinion the section clearly intends that the evidence taken before the Committing Magistrate where the witnesses produced are examined at the subsequent trial may be treated as substantive evidence in the case. No doubt, it is a matter for the discretion of the Judge whether he thinks that such evidence should be used in the interests of justice. At the same time, I consider that many cases may arise in which it would be extremely dangerous to rely upon such evidence where witnesses have proved themselves before the Sessions Judge altogether unworthy of credit. In my opinion the learned Judicial Commissioner rightly admitted the evidence in this case. It must also be observed that it was not the only evidence which corroborated the appellant's confession. That of Khurloo as given in the Sessions Court was strong corroboration of the fact that the appellant struck his brother with some sort of weapon.

The only other point argued before us was that the appellant might not have been aware that the blow which he struck his brother was one likely to cause his death, or that he might have inflicted the blow under a grave and sudden provocation which deprived him of his self-control. From first to last in this case, there is no suggestion of any grave or sudden provocation; indeed the evidence shows that the quarrel between the brothers was not violent or heated or that anything in the nature of a fight arose between them before the act was committed; nor is it possible to believe that any one using a weapon such as that which was used in this case in inflicting the wound which the deceased man received, could fail to realise that his act was so imminently dangerous that it must in all probability cause death or at least such bodily injury as was likely to cause death; and I can find no circumstances which should lead us to interfere either with the verdict or the sentence. The appeal is accordingly dismissed and the sentence confirmed.

Mullick, J.—I have no doubt that the accused committed culpable homicide by causing the death of his brother, Tikua.

From the evidence of the accused's cousin, Khurloo Oraon, in the Sessions Court it appears that on Friday the 15th December last he was on a visit to the accused's house and took his evening meal with the accused. The deceased Tikua did not share in the meal but sat afterwards with the witness and Gansa in the verandah of one of the huts. Khurloo says that suddenly, Gansa struck Tikua on the head with something which he did not see and that Gansa then went away. But in the Court of the Committing Magistrate on the 3rd January 1923 this witness said that Gansa and the deceased began quarrelling, that Gansa then took up his balua, struck the deceased on the head with it and ran out of the house; he also admitted that the accused's wife, Musammatt Budhni, was sitting in the verandah at that time. In the Sessions Court the witness denies that there was any quarrel; at the same time he asserts that what he said before the Committing Magistrate was true, though he cannot explain why the statement that Gansa and the deceased

(2) 28 A. 683; 3 A. L. J. 852; 4 Cr. L. J. 61; A. W. N. (1906) 187.

(3) 24 M. 414 at p. 416; 2 Weir 377.

(4) 63 Ind. Cas. 3321, 23 Bom. L. R. 820; 22 Cr. L. J. 636; 46 B. 97; (1922) A. I. R. (B) 108.

GANSA ORAON V. EMPEROR.

began quarrelling appears in the Magistrate's record. As to his denial that Musammāt Budhni was in the verandah, he, when confronted with his statement before the Committing Magistrate, explains that Budhni was sitting in the verandah of another room.

The Investigating Officer Ghulam Haider who took the statement of Khurloo on the evening of the 16th December states that Khurloo corroborated the statement made to him by Musammāt Budhni which clearly speaks of a quarrel between Gansa and Tikua with regard to the division of the paddy crop. Again, at 9 A. M. on the 18th December the accused made a confession before Mr. Sharling, First Class Magistrate, in the sub-jail at Gumla, the record of which runs as follows:-

"Warnings—I am a Magistrate. I warn you that if you have anything to say, think over, consider and then say. Don't speak false or don't speak anything tutored by any man."

"Q. What do you wish to say?"

A. There was a division between my brother Tikua and myself. I struck him with a balua on his head. We are 8 members including my children and Tikua is along with his mother. He picked up a quarrel for his share. I have no motive in saying this. No body has tutored me. He took two annas while I have 1½ annas of land."

On the 4th January the accused was examined by the Committing Magistrate and the record of his statement runs thus:—

"Q. Did you assault your brother Tikua with balua on his head?"

A. Yes, I was drunk.

Q. Did you make this statement (confession, Exhibit 6, and read over to the accused before me).

A. Yes."

In these circumstances, I do not think that there can be any doubt that the statement made by Khurloo to the Sub-Inspector and to the Committing Magistrate are more correct than those made by him before the Sessions Judge. That he was present and saw the assault is common to both sets of statements, and his denial in the Sessions Court, that there was any quarrel is clearly false and fail to explain the cause of the assault.

It is curious, however, that nothing was asked from the witnesses to what he did after the assault. If he had been questioned on the point he might perhaps have given valuable information as to the conduct of the accused, but, in my opinion his evidence sufficiently proves that there was a quarrel between the accused and the deceased in consequence of which the accused inflicted the injury which caused the death of Tikua.

The learned Vakil for the accused contends that Khurloo's statement before the Committing Magistrate is not admissible in evidence because the accused did not cross-examine him. The record does not show why the witness was not cross-examined in the Committing Magistrate's Court, but there is no reason for supposing that the accused was deprived of the opportunity of cross-examining the witness. There is nothing to show that he was in any way prevented by the Court from exercising his right of cross-examination.

The only other eye-witness is the accused's own wife, Musammāt Budhni. She, too, has given evidence in the Sessions Court which is at variance with her evidence before the Committing Magistrate.

She states in the Sessions Court that Tikua and the accused took their meal together and that her husband went to bed and that she does not know what happened to Tikua, but that next morning she found Tikua unconscious in the verandah with a wound on his head.

Before the Committing Magistrate on the 3rd January 1923 she admitted that the two brothers began to quarrel about the division of the paddy crop and that her husband struck the deceased on the head with a balua which was in the verandah and that the witness Khurloo was then present.

She was the first person examined by the Sub-Inspector Ghulam Haider on the 16th December and she then gave a slightly fuller account of the occurrence adding that when she questioned her husband he replied that he had assaulted his brother with the balua thinking it to be a latht.

Ghulam Haider deposes in the Sessions Court that he handed a balua to him saying that it was the weapon with which the assault has been committed.

GANSÀ ORAON V. EMPEROR.

The learned Vakil for the accused objects to the admissibility of Budhni's statement to the Sub-Inspector on the ground that it is a statement made in the course of an investigation and, therefore, inadmissible by reason of section 162, Criminal Procedure Code. On the other hand, the learned Assistant Government-Advocate contends that it is an entry in an official book prescribed by section 154 of the Code and that section 35 of the Indian Evidence Act applies. To this the learned Vakil rejoins that the real First Information in the case, i. e., the information upon which the Sub-Inspector took cognizance of the offence and commenced investigation, was the statement of the chaukidar Rup Singh which was given at the thana at 4 P. M. on the 16th December and which ran as follows:—

"Rup Singh chaukidar of Bangoliya came and reported that this day morning while he was returning from Harakh Ahir's house of Bagaucha with Harak, Tikua Oraon's mother of Bangoliya said to him that her elder son, Gansà Oraon, assaulted his younger brother, Tikua, last evening while they were under the influence of handia with a tangi; he went there along with Harak and saw Tikua Oraon who has got a blood stained wound on his head and asked Tikua as to who assaulted him, but he gave no reply."

The Sub-Inspector explains that he did not trust this information and that he did not commence the investigation till he had visited the locality and taken the statement of Musammât Budhni.

In my opinion the investigation had already commenced when the statement of Musammât Budhni was recorded; and the learned Vakil's contention must be accepted.

The word "information" is not defined but the definition of "complaint" throws some light upon its meaning. "Complaint" is defined in section 4 (h) as an allegation made to a Magistrate with a view to his taking action that some person whether known or unknown has committed an offence. In my opinion an information is a corresponding allegation made to a Police Officer and this view seems to me to be supported by the language used in section 112 of the Code of 1872 (Act X of 1872) which provides for the entry in the official register not of informations but of complaints.

I think then if the allegations made are in the nature of a complaint the Police officer must record them as an information under section 154, Criminal Procedure Code, and the writing will attract the provisions of section 35 of the Evidence Act; and if, as he seems to be entitled to do, the Police Officer should record more than one information relating to a cognizable offence they will all share the privilege of being exempt from the disability imposed by section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code. In every case it is for the Court to decide whether the communication is an information in this technical sense and whether and when the Police investigation had in fact begun.

The question then is, whether in the present case the investigation had begun before Budhni's statement was recorded by the Sub-Inspector. In my opinion it had, for the reason that Budhni's statement was not made to the Sub-Inspector with a view to taking action; on the contrary, from Rup Singh's evidence it is clear that no one in accused's house was willing to come forward as the accuser and I am satisfied from the facts of this case that Budhni's statement was certainly not that of a voluntary informant. It is then clear that, although the chaukidar's information was hearsay, the Sub-Inspector did in fact take it as an information under section 154, Criminal Procedure Code, and that he had already commenced his investigation when he recorded the statement of Budhni.

Therefore, the writing (Exhibit 1) is not legal evidence.

But the exclusion of the document does not affect the decision in this case; for Budhni's deposition before the Committing Magistrate clearly shows that the assault took place on account of a quarrel about land and that she witnessed it. The Sub-Inspector has given evidence under section 157 of the Indian Evidence Act which corroborates that deposition and her explanation in the Sessions Court that the statement and the deposition were made under the influence of fear cannot in the circumstances be accepted.

It is again to be regretted, that no attempt was made, either in the Committing Magistrate's Court or in that of the Sessions Judge to elicit from this witness any information as to the accused's movements during the remainder of the night. Rūp Singh, however, deposes that when, on the morning of the 16th, he went to the accused's house the accused would not allow Tikua to be taken to the Police nor would he go there himself. The only other inmate of the house on the night of the occurrence was Musammāt Budhni, the mother of the accused, but she states that she came home late and was taken straight away to bed and that it was not till the following morning that she saw the wound on Tikua's head.

GANSA O-AON V. EMPEROR.

Realizing the prime importance of reducing the value of the accused's confessions the learned Vakil contends that, having been retracted in the Sessions Court they themselves require corroboration. Now, in the Sessions Court the accused while admitting the two previous statements made to the Magistrate said that he had been beaten by the Police and that having been under the influence of liquor he knew nothing about the assault. In my opinion the statement made by the accused to the Committing Magistrate on the 4th January 1923 was not tainted by any coercion or undue influence and it is conclusive corroboration of the confession of the 18th December 1922, it proves satisfactorily that the accused did assault his brother.

In this later statement he added the plea of drunkenness but it is clear there is no substance in it. The only direct evidence on this point is that of Budhni and she states that Gansa and the deceased had drunk handia in the morning but not with their evening meal. The chowkidar also states in his information to the Police that the deceased's mother had informed him that the assault had been committed under the influence of drink. Giving the fullest weight to this evidence it goes only to show that the accused had taken alcohol in the course of the day, but the onus of proving that he did not commit the act with the intention of causing death or injuries sufficient to cause death is upon him and he has declined to give any explanation or evidence in the Sessions Court. There is no evidence whatsoever that the accused was not in a position to formulate the intention to kill or to cause injuries sufficient to cause death. As to the quarrel there is no evidence of its suddenness and no provocation has been proved which would reduce the offence to one less than murder.

The result is that, in my opinion, the accused is guilty of murder.

As for the motive, the evidence of Dasain and Sukhan shows clearly that a dispute had been going on between the deceased and the accused and that the deceased wanted a division of the family lands because he wished to marry.

Finally, a plea has been made for mitigation of sentence, but having regard to the callous manner in which the accused behaved after the occurrence, it is impossible to allow the plea. The evidence of Dasain shows that after the assault the accused came to him and said that he had done wrong and complained that he was feeling cold. He did not explain what he had done but he borrowed a covering from Dasain which was recovered the next day from the accused's house. Nothing is known as to what he did during the remainder of the night, but it does not appear that he made any attempt to assist Tikua or that he showed any contrition. On the following morning the accused declined to allow the deceased to be taken to the thana and it was not till the Police arrived that the deceased was despatched to the hospital at Gumla.

In my opinion the sentence of death should be confirmed.

Z. K.

Sentence confirmed.

THIBU BHOGTA v. EMPEROR.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 8 OF 1923.

AND

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 25 OF 1923.

March 16, 1923.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt.

THIBU BHOGTA AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 164 (3)—Confession, mode of recording—Magistrate, duty of, to put questions.

All that section 164 (3) of the Criminal Procedure Code requires is that a Magistrate recording a confession on questioning the person making the confession must have reason to believe that it is being made voluntarily. No express form of questions is prescribed, and the extent to which the Magistrate should question the person making the confession must largely depend upon the particular facts of each case. Whilst it is clearly desirable that he should always put such questions as may be necessary to enable him to determine whether the confession is voluntary, no particular form of questioning can be laid down as necessary. [p. 574, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where the circumstances under which a confession is made are not such as to create any suspicion in the mind of the Magistrate and he is satisfied from the demeanour of the person making the statement as well as the questions put and the manner in which the statement is made that it is voluntary, the statement cannot be objected to on the ground that the provisions of section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code were not complied with. [p. 575, col. 1.]

A Court which is called upon to accept a confession must in each case satisfy itself that the Magistrate recording the confession honestly believed, and took steps to ascertain, that the confession was a voluntary one. [p. 575, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal from the judgment of Mr. Williams, Judicial Commissioner, Chota Nagpur, dated the 17th February 1923.

Mr. Steswar Dayal, for the Appellants.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—In this case Phasur Bhogta was tried before the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur assisted by two Assessors in February last on a charge of murdering Sukru Bhogta and Musammatt Pandari his wife by poisoning on the 22nd of October last year. Thibu Bhogta was tried at the same time on a charge of abetment of the murder of Sukru Bhogta who was his elder brother. The learned Judicial Commissioner, as well as the Assessors, found both the accused guilty and they were sentenced to death.

The proceedings have been submitted to this Court for confirmation of sentence under section 374 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the convicted men have appealed.

The appellants and the deceased persons belonged to the same village, Aidega, in the Simdega sub-division of the Ranchi District in Chota Nagpur. The date upon which the alleged crime took place was the Sohrai Basi, that is, the day after the Sohrai festival, which is observed as a holiday in that part of the Province and is devoted to feasting and drinking throughout the village, the residents going from house to house for that purpose. Put shortly, the case for the prosecution is that the appellant, Thibu Bhogta, was on bad terms with his brother, a blind man with whom he had quarrelled as to the division of their land. The quarrel was one of long standing and Thibu had on a previous occasion purchased poison for the purpose of poisoning his brother. On the 22nd of October last he procured some poison which he made over to Phasur Bhogta promising him a reward of Rs. 10 and two bullocks if he would administer it to his brother Sukru. The same evening Phasur invited Sukru to his house where he went accompanied by his little daughter Jamni. As Sukru was blind, either Jamni or one of his other children usually accompanied him when he went out. At Phasur's house he partook of handia, a spirit distilled from rice, and konhara chakna, a preparation of pumpkin and chillies used as a sort of relish apparently to induce thirst. This was offered to him by Phasur. Shortly afterwards, Sukru's wife, Pandari, also accompanied by their small daughter Gangi, a twin of Jamni's, arrived and she also was offered and partook of the same food and drink. The time was in the evening about sunset. Shortly after they returned home, both Sukru and his wife were attacked with symptoms of poisoning from which they died, Sukru the same night and Pandari in the early hours of the next morning.

The principal evidence against the appelants consists of confessions made by each of them on the 2nd of November, before Mr. Walze, Magistrate of the First Class, at Simdega. The confessions so made were repeated with slight additions, but substantially to the same effect, before the Committing Magistrate on the 8th of December. At the trial before the Judicial Commissioner on the 3rd of February they withdrew their confessions, stating that they had been asked to confess by the Daroga, and pleaded not guilty.

THIBU BHOGTA v. EMPEROR.

Apart from the confessions of the appellants themselves, the evidence is purely circumstantial, and although it might be sufficient to raise great suspicion against the accused, we should not be prepared to convict them upon that evidence alone.

The main question for determination is whether we can rely upon the confessions. This involves a consideration of whether the evidence in the case affords corroboration of the matters alleged by the accused themselves before the Magistrate in their confessions.

According to the evidence called on behalf of the prosecution, it would appear to be clearly established that the two brothers were on bad terms. The quarrel was one of long standing and arose out of a dispute between them as to their land. They held a joint parcha from their landlord, but they lived in separate houses with their respective wives and families and cultivated separate plots. According to the landlord of the village, Chandrabhan Singh, who has a house there in which he occasionally resides, the quarrel between these two brothers had been going on for some ten years; and in the early part of Sukru 1920 the deceased man complained to him that Thibu had purchased poison from one Gobind Das Gosain for the purpose of poisoning him and said that he would lodge a complaint at the Police Station. The Sub-Inspector afterwards came to the village and investigated the matter but nothing came of it. After that Thibu lodged a complaint before the Magistrate charging his brother, Sukru, with calling Thibu's wife a witch and accusing him, the landlord, of trying to beat him. Again nothing came of it; the case being withdrawn. The story as to Sukru complaining about his brother's plot to poison him finds corroboration from the evidence of Hamid-ud-din, the Writer Head Constable at Ranchi, who in 1920 was stationed at Kalebira, the nearest Police Station to Aidega, where the parties in this case lived. He states that in 1920 he was stationed at Kalebira and on the 7th of March of that year Sukan Bhogta came and complained that Thibu had given Rs. 2 to Gobind Das Gosain for the purpose of getting poison which he suspected was to poison him. Sukru said he had questioned Thibu who denied it. He also stated that they had some dispute about their land. The complaint was entered in the Station Diary of that date. This document was produced and bears out the statement given by the Writer Head Constable. It is obvious, therefore, that for some time the two brothers were on anything but friendly terms and Sukru was apprehensive of being poisoned.

To return to the evidence of Chandrabhan, the landlord. This witness further stated that at the time when the occurrence just mentioned took place in March 1920, Thibu asked him to grant separate rent-receipts to himself and Sukru and offered him Rs. 10 salami for this purpose. Before that a joint receipt for the whole parcha used to be given to Sukru. A petition for this purpose was written there, and then on behalf of Thibu by a witness who has been called stating that Sukru had threatened to take Thibu's tanr land and praying for a separate receipt on payment of separate rent. A separate receipt was in fact given to Thibu two days later for half the rent. This document was produced from Thibu's house during the investigation by the Police which took place before the present prosecution. It also appears from the evidence of Dibru Bhogta, the 16 years old son of Sukru, that in Jeth last year Sukru had sown Gondli on tanara's tanr land claimed by Thibu, and Thibu had sown Gondli on some baree land claimed by Sukru and the quarrel was still continuing. The fact that there was a quarrel between them about these tanr lands is also proved by other witnesses including Brindabatti the wife of Thibu who, when before the Committing Magistrate, had stated that there was a dispute about Gondli tanr between Sukru and her husband although at the trial she refused to admit it. There is no evidence of any quarrel between Phasur the other appellant and Sukru; in fact it is stated by at least one of the witnesses that they were not on bad terms. I have referred in some detail to the evidence as to the quarrel between the two brothers as it is a matter alleged in both the confessions as the motive for the poisoning.

THIBU BHOGTA v. EMPEROR.

I now come to the evidence of the actual occurrence which took place on the 22nd of October. There is evidence to show that both Sukru and his wife had been at the house of Phasur eating and drinking about noon or a little earlier on the same day. Other persons were also present on that occasion and it would seem clear that if poison was in fact administered by Phasur it was not on that occasion. It was urged on behalf of the appellants that there was in fact no reliable evidence that the deceased couple were at the house of Phasur on the later occasion in the afternoon, that I am satisfied from the evidence, which I shall refer to, that it has been proved that they were there shortly before sundown.

The first witness who speaks to what took place when Sukru and his wife returned home in the evening, is Dibru Bhogta, the son of Sukru already referred to, a boy of 16 years of age. He had been out in the fields at work most of the day. He returned home for his midday meal, went out again, and came back in the evening. His father and mother had both returned home by that time. His mother was ill and vomitted; his father said he wanted to make water and asked Dibru to take him out which he accordingly did taking him to a place not far from the house. His father made water and was purged and on getting up found he could not walk and had to be helped home by his son. He vomitted a great deal on his way back to the house and on arriving lay down on a charpoy. He told Dibru that he and Pandari were going to die and asked him to call the landlord and the chowkidar of the village and to go to the Police Station. He said that Phasur had given him poison and that Thibu had instigated him to do so. Thibu had by this time arrived at the house and other neighbours were coming in as the news spread, and Thibu, when he heard the accusation against him, said nothing. Thibu helped to assist his brother on to the charpoy but Sukru said "why you are showing me this affection when it is you who have given me poison. The fields will now be yours." Two other men, Nagru and Bipat Bhogta, who have also given evidence had arrived at the house when Sukru made these accusations against his brother. These two witnesses have also been called and affirm that they heard Sukru accusing Thibu. The words used by both vary slightly from those used by Dibru. The words heard by Bipat are said to have been "This is all your work, why are you showing me any affection. You have got all my lands now." Nagru's account of it is that Sukru said "You and Phasur have given both of us dawa, why have you come to show affection for me." Although Dibru maintained in cross-examination that these two witnesses were present when his father accused Thibu, it appears that, when, before the Committing Magistrate, he had stated that no conversation took place between his father and Bipat and Nagru and that his father was unconscious when they arrived. Whether Bipat and Nagru actually heard these words or not would appear to be doubtful from what Dibru had stated before the Magistrate but it seems clear that they were said in the presence of Dibru himself as he reported the matter early next morning to Chandrabhan, the landlord, when he went to him and stated what had occurred. The words reported to him according to Chandrabhan were "why do you try to assist me when you had me poisoned by Phasur."

Samitri, a daughter of Sukru, about 15 years of age, who was at a neighbour's house when her parents returned home that night, arrived a little later on being sent for. She deposes that her father said that he and her mother had been poisoned by Phasur and Thibu, the poison being given in honhara chakna at the house of Phasur. She says that her brother Dibru was present when her father said this. It would appear, however, from her evidence in cross-examination that she was merely speaking of what Dibru had told her. Dibru and several of the other witnesses describe the symptoms

THIBU BHOGTA V. EMPEROR.

from which Sukru and his wife were suffering. They were both vomiting and felt restless and uneasy; they had tingling sensation over the body described as jhin-jhin. They had difficulty in standing up or walking as if they were losing the use of their limbs. The two children Jamni and Gangi who went respectively with their father and mother to Phasur's house were also called and gave evidence. They stated that their father and mother drank handia and ate konhara chakna at Phasur's house and they both say that it was in the evening. They themselves did not eat or drink anything. Jamni states that it was her parents who told her about that poison. It would further appear from their evidence that Phasur's wife was at the time inside the house and not on the verandah, where the eating and drinking was going on, and did not see what took place. The fact that the two deceased persons were at Phasur's house on the evening of the 22nd of October is also deposed to by Mohit Ram Lohar who had been to a neighbouring village and was returning in the evening at sunset. As he was passing Phasur's house he says he saw Sukru and his wife and their two little girls in the court-yard of Phasur's house. He in fact entered to hear what was going on and he was given a drink of handia and just at that time Sukru and his wife and the children went away. He also mentions the name of another man called Bhaunra Patras as being present but he has not been called as a witness. Early the following morning, when Dibru and the others went to report the matter to Chandrabhan, the latter advised them to go to the Police Station and report. Dibru, accompanied by Nagru and Bipat, went later to Kolebira, about 12 miles distant, where the Police Station is. According to Nagru when Chandrabhan told them to accompany Dibru to the Police Station, Thibu who was present said "why go to the Police Station, better bury the dead bodies as there will only be trouble in going to the Police Station." The chowkidar was not at that time in the village but as the three proceeded to Kolebira they met him on his way back from that place and informed him of what had taken place. He accordingly accompanied them to the thana at Kolebira and he himself lodged the First Information Report, the others being present at the time. This report states that the chowkidar met the others coming to the thana and how they told him that a double murder had been committed and that Phasur Bhogta of Aidega had administered poison both to Sukru Bhogta and his wife in the afternoon at the time of drinking handia. that they returned home and vomitted. He also states certain words of Sukru as reported to him to the effect that some one should "go and call Phasur, what harm did we do him that he administered poison to us both. None of us will survive. Phasur has placed earth in the mouths of my children, that is, deprived them of the means of subsistence." No mention is made in the First Information Report about Thibu and this is relied upon by the defence as an important omission. It appears, however, from the Sub-Inspector's evidence, that he also questioned Dibru and the other witnesses when the First Information was taken down and Dibru told him that when Thibu wanted to assist his father the latter said "don't lift me, don't touch me, you and the villagers in conjunction have done this".

A post mortem examination was made on the bodies but no poison was found in viscera and unfortunately none of the matter vomitted was preserved for chemical analyses. The bodies were those of healthy persons with no signs of injury, and it would appear that the actual cause of death was asphyxiation. The internal organs were much congested. According to Colonel Murray, the Civil Surgeon of Ranchi, who gave evidence at the trial and who had received the post mortem examination report, it could not definitely be said from the indications appearing from the report that death was due to poisoning but that a suspicion of poisoning arose from the absence of any injury or organic disease. He stated that poison could be entirely evacuated by vomiting and that the condition of congestion of the internal organs brain, lungs, etc., may appear in the case of persons who had taken poisons such as aconite, dhatura, or yellow oleander. He also stated that vomiting might lead to asphyxia by particles of vomitted matter being drawn into the respiratory passages. The post mortem examination, therefore, is of a negative character which shows symptoms consistent with poisoning or other causes. It is well-known, however, as reference to books on Medical Jurisprudence will show, that certain poisons, such as aconite, do produce the symptoms which were observed in the present case. In Lyon's Medical Jurisprudence, 7th Edition, 691, the action and symptoms of aconite poisoning are described. It first produces tingling and then paralysis, the sensory nerve-terminals causing numbness. It produces similar effects on the motor nerves and centers of the medulla and cord. The motor ganglia of the heart are paralysed, the respiratory centre is slowed, death being usually due to arrest of respiration. Among the other symptoms it is there stated that the tingling is followed by numbness and great muscular weakness, the patient staggers if he attempts to walk, respiration becomes slow and weak, and death may occur from shock or syncope but usually occurs from asphyxia due to paralysis of the respiration. Most of these symptoms were observed in the present case. At page 696 the importance of examining the vomitted matter as well as the viscera in fatal cases is insisted on, and several instances are given of this kind of poisoning where no poison was found in the stomach or its contents or the liver or other organs but was found in the vomitted matter.

THIBU BHOGTA V. EMPEROR.

I now turn to the confessions of the appellants on which the conviction was mainly based. It would appear that they were both arrested on the 30th of October and sent to Simdega where they arrived on the following day. The Magistrate, understanding that they wished to make confessions, gave them time for reflection and committed them to the local jail until the 2nd of November, so that they might have time for reflection freed from Police influence. The Magistrate informed them that he was a Hakim and asked Phasur Bhogta "do you like to make any statement before me of your own free will". He answered "yes," and on being asked, "What do you want to state" replied that there was a quarrel between Sukru and Thibu in the month of Jeth and both brothers were ready to fight armed with arrows and baluas; that Sukru Bhogta had ploughed the land and that there was enmity between the brothers. In Assar last Thibu one evening had asked him to do away with Sukru but he refused, that on Sunday, about 12 days ago, Thibu called him to his house and gave him handia to drink and some poison like maida flour on a leaf of a green clour and asked him to administer it to Sukru. He first declined and Thibu said that he would pay him Rs. 10 and give him a pair of bullocks and any other thing he would demand. This took place at noon. He then describes how the same day he met Sukru returning after drinking and took him to his house and having mixed the poison given by Thibu with chakna made him eat it and also gave him handia to drink, that Sukru's wife Pandari also came and ate the chakna into which poison was mixed and also took handia. They then went away and he adds that Sukru died at 10 P. M. and his wife at cock crow. He also adds that Thibu did not tell him that the medicine was zahur (poison) but told him that it was bish (poison) and that if it was taken by any man he would emicate and die within two or three months.

In the case of Thibu the Magistrate stated to him "I am a Hakim, you may make your statement if you so wish." He states in effect that he had a quarrel with his brother in Asar last over their land and there was an altercation between them. He told the landlord Chandrabhan who said that he too had enmity with Sukru because he did not pay his rent and advised Thibu to kill him but he refused. Later, in the month of Bhado, he again complained to the landlord that Sukru was cutting his Gondil and asked him to expostulate and again the landlord advised him to kill his brother and offered to give him poison for the purpose, suggesting that if Thibu could not administer it he should get Phasur Bhogta to do so. He got the poison on Friday and gave it to Phasur Bhogta on the following Sunday, the day after the Sohrai and told him that Chandrabhan had given him the poison to kill Sukru; that as he, his brother, could not administer it to him Phasur had better do it. The same day in the evening Phasur called Sukru to his house and gave him the poison mixed with chakna. When doing so his wife Pandari also came to the house and took the chakna with her husband and they both died. The Magistrate recorded that he believed the confessions to be voluntarily made.

THIBU GHOSTA V. EMPEROR.

It was strongly urged before us that the confessions ought not to have been recorded by the Magistrate at all because he did not comply with the provisions of section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the third clause of which provides "that no Magistrate shall record any such confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily." It was contended that the question put to Phasur was not sufficient to enable the Magistrate to arrive at the conclusion that the confession was made voluntarily, and that in the case of Thibu no question in fact was put but he was merely told that he might make a statement if he so wished. I may say at once that with regard to the last contention, I can see no material difference between asking a person if he wishes to make a voluntary statement and stating to him that he may make a statement if he so wishes. It is contended, however, that even if a general question of this sort should be put, that is not enough within the provisions of the section to entitle the Magistrate to record the confession.

Certain cases were relied upon in support of this contention: Ragho Laya v. Emperor (1), Jogjiban Ghose v. Emperor (2), Farid v. Emperor (3), Queen-Empress v. Narayan (4) and Jibodhan Bhuiyan v. Emperor (5) (decided by this Court in 1917). In the last-mentioned case the Court found that the confessions were improperly induced by the Police and recorded in the presence of a Police Officer and they refused to accept them. One of the learned Judges, Chapman, J., did not deal with the question of Magistrate's jurisdiction; The other learned Judge, Roe, J., who agreed with him added: "As I understand section 164, clause (3), a Magistrate is bound to question the accused closely as to his motives in making a confession, and if he fails to do so he has no jurisdiction to say that he is satisfied that the confession is voluntarily made. He has, therefore, no jurisdiction to record it as a Magistrate." In the case of Ragho Laya v. Emperor (1) the same learned Judge refers with disapproval to the invariable practice of Deputy Magistrates in this Province of ignoring entirely the provisions of section 164 (3), and expresses the view that it is not sufficient for a Magistrate merely to inform the accused person that he is a Magistrate and tell him that he may make a statement of his own accord if he so chooses but not to make any statement which he had been tutored, by others to make, and adds that what is meant by the Code is that the Magistrate should ask the accused some questions as "why are you confessing, are you sorry for your crime, or is it that some one has told you that you will gain something by a confession," and that he should refuse to proceed with the recording of the confession until he has a satisfactory answer to his question.

In a more recent case, Emperor v. Dewan Kahar (6) decided in 1922 the dictum of Rao, J., was criticised and dissented from if it was meant to lay down a proposition of law, but if it was merely a rule of prudence it was unobjectionable. All that the section requires is that the Magistrate on questioning the person making the confession shall have reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. No express forms of questions is prescribed, and, in my opinion, the extent to which a Magistrate should question the person making the confession must largely depend upon the particular facts of each case. As pointed out by Mr. Justice Das in the case last mentioned, there are cases which on the face of them attract the suspicion of a Magistrate and there are others which do not attract suspicion at all, and it is quite impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject. The Court must in each case satisfy itself that the Magistrate honestly believed and took steps to ascertain that the confession was a voluntary one. I think it would be a very dangerous rule to lay down that any particular form of questioning is necessary. Whilst it is clearly desirable that a Magistrate should always

(1) 40 Ind. Cas. 721; 18 Cr. L. J. 721.

(2) 2 Ind. Cas. 681; 9 C. L. J. 663; 13 C. W. N. 861; 10 Cr. L. J. 425.

(3) 65 Ind. Cas. 613; 2 L. 325; 5 P. W. R. 1922 Cr. J. 23 Cr. L. J. 149; 4 U. P. L. R. (L.) 33; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 237.

(4) 25 B. 543; 3 Bom. L. R. 122.

(5) 39 Ind. Cas. 991; 1 P. L. W. 388; (1917) Pat. 149; 18 Cr. L. J. 623.

(6) 72 Ind. Cas. 961; 4 P. L. T. 145; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 13.

THIBU BHOOTA v. EMPEROR.

put such questions as may be necessary to enable him to determine whether the confession is voluntary. I can see no reason why a comprehensive question such as that objected to by Rao, J., in the case of Ragho Laya v. Emperor (1) should not be sufficient in certain cases. In the present case the persons confessing had not been in Police custody for more than 24 hours. They were then given two days for reflection freed from Police influence and came again voluntarily to make their statements. There was primarily no reason why the Magistrate should expect any undue pressure although he was bound to satisfy himself by a proper enquiry that the statements were voluntary, and I can see no reason why the confession as taken down by the Magistrate should be inadmissible under the section. The question is not whether, having regard to all the circumstances and the other evidence in the case, we should accept the confessions as true, but whether the Magistrate, in the circumstances shown, exceeded his jurisdiction in recording them at all. Even if they were properly recorded, there always remains the further question of whether the Court should accept them as statements of the truth. In the present case, although the questioning was meager, the circumstances were not such as to create any suspicion in the mind of the Magistrate and he may well have been satisfied from the demeanour of the persons making the statement as well as the questions put and the manner in which the statements were made, that they were voluntary. In my opinion the confessions recorded are not objectionable on the ground that the provisions of section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code were not complied with. The real question is whether, on the rest of the evidence in the case, there is sufficient corroboration of the facts mentioned in the confessions to enable us to judge of their truth. The evidence, as already stated, clearly shows that there was a feud between these two brothers of long standing and that their quarrel was cropping up from time to time. It is suggested that the motive was totally inadequate to induce Thibu and certainly Phasur to commit a crime of this magnitude. It must be remembered, however, that all the parties in this case are Mundas descended from aboriginal tribes and one cannot apply to them the same tests of conduct as one would in the case of more cultured people, and what might well appear to be no adequate inducement to commit a crime in the case of people of a higher standard of intelligence and morals, might appear to them to be more than adequate. There seems to be no reason why these confessions should have been made if they were not in the main true. One feature which is frequently observable in confessions amongst people of a low standard of intelligence is present in this instance. It will be observed that in both cases, whilst confessing their crime, they introduced circumstances which probably appeared to them to show a certain amount of extenuation. In the case of Thibu he seeks to excuse his action on the ground that he was influenced and urged thereto by the landlord. In the case of Phasur he alleged, which was no doubt true, that Thibu was the prime instigator and further that he told him that the poison was such that the man would not die immediately but would emaciate and die later, and in his examination before the Committing Magistrate he puts the extenuating circumstance even higher by saying that Thibu told him that Sukru would not die if he took the poison but would only be emaciated. It is impossible, however, to accept this part of his statement as it was clearly an afterthought.

After considering the whole of the evidence it seems to me ample to support the truth of the confessions made and I have no reasonable doubt that they were true in so far as they disclosed the guilt of the appellants. In my opinion this appeal should be dismissed and the sentences confirmed.

Mullick, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

CHANDER SEN V. EMPEROR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 563 OF 1922.

December 20, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Walsh.

CHANDER SEN—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 190 (1) (c), 191—Cognizance of offence by Magistrate—Omission to inform accused of his right to have case transferred—Illegality.

When a Magistrate takes cognizance himself of an offence under section 190 (1) (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code, the accused has a right under section 191 to have the case tried by another Magistrate and to be told by the Magistrate that he has such a right. An omission to inform the accused and the Magistrate's refusal to transfer the case when asked to do so are fatal to the legality of the trial. The accused, in order to save time and trouble of a further hearing may waive his right. But he can do so only when he is distinctly told by the Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code that he has the right to decline to be tried by him.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Muradabad, dated the 17th October 1922.

Mr. Durga Prasad, for the Applicant.

Mr. R. Malcomson, Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case a punkha coolie had stolen a brooch worth Rs. 20 which he sold to the present applicant Chander Sen for one anna. Chander Sen was examined as a prosecution witness and admitted that he had given the boy one anna and that he handed the brooch on to a caste-follower who was a sonar. He represented himself as a philanthropist which, of course, is nonsense. The next time he wants to do an act of philanthropy and give a boy one anna when he is hungry, I should advise him not to take a stolen brooch in exchange. The notion that he handed on this ill-gotten gain as a present to his friend the sonar is nonsense. The brooch would only be worth to a sonar what it would fetch, and it is, therefore, reasonable to suppose, in fact quite certain, that Chandra Sen intended to divide the proceeds with his friend. It was clearly a dishonest act which deserved punishment though no more than a petty theft to which, no doubt, he was by chance subjected to a sudden temptation. The punishment seems to me to have been adequate, and the fine, unless he is a man of some position, rather severe. All this, however, is really irrelevant to the question which I have to determine, and is only relevant upon the question whether the authorities in the Magistrate's Court now think it worthwhile to proceed further with this matter, if a further trial is lawful upon which question I express no opinion. But it is quite clear that his revision must be allowed. The trial and conviction were unlawful. The Magistrate quite rightly took cognizance himself of the offence on the evidence of the witness. Section 191 provides that the accused in such a case shall be informed by the Magistrate, before any evidence is taken, that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court. The meaning of that is obvious. The accused has a right to have the case tried by another Court and he has a right to be told by the Magistrate he has such a right. This was not done. Indeed, the Magistrate himself refused to transfer the case when asked to do so. This omission was fatal to the legality of the trial. It is idle in such a case to talk about acquiescence or waiver. A man has no option but to acquiesce when the decision has already been given against him. No doubt, an accused person in order to save time and trouble of a further hearing may waive his right. He can only waive it when he is distinctly told in accordance with the provisions of the Act that he has the right to decline to be tried by that Court. When he has been so told he can decide whether he waives the right. Nothing of that kind has happened here. The conviction and sentence must be set aside and the fine, if paid, refunded.

Having regard to the state of work in the Criminal Courts, I should not myself consider it necessary to proceed further with a re-trial.

Let the brooch be returned to the Magistrate to enable him to return it at once to Miss Cruddas.

N. K. Revision allowed.

SAFDAR KHAN V. MUHAMMAD ZAMAN KHAN.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 79-44 OF 1921.

February 22, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Pison, J. C.

SAFDAR KHAN—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

VERSUS

MUHAMMAD ZAMAN KHAN AND AN-

OTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Proof—Opinion of tribe, value of—Tribal and family custom—Special custom—Burden of proof—Succession—Pagwand—Presumption—Whole blood, whether excludes half blood—Gagiani tribe of Peshawar District.

Custom is a mere crystallisation of public opinion in matters affecting the social and economic life of a community, and it is not an unsound criterion of the existence of a custom whether or not it is to any extent in harmony with general opinion. [p. 579, col. 1.]

It is dangerous to hold that a custom, which is categorically repudiated and condemned by the majority of a tribe, is actually the custom by which they are bound. [p. 579, col. 1.]

There is an overwhelming presumption that a particular family follows the general custom of its tribe, and, in particular cases, definitely established instances of a mode of succession in a family belonging to a particular tribe are of enormous value in arriving at a general custom, which is simply the aggregate of the customs of particular families. [p. 580, col. 1.]

Courts have the widest latitude in discovering and establishing any particular custom applicable to any particular community, and it is for this reason that case-law has been particular in distinguishing the customs of various tribes. But Courts are bound to recognise some limit to the distinctions which can be drawn among different members of the same community, and they are obliged to take certain tribes as the lowest units regarding which case-law can be established as binding. [p. 582, col. 1.]

Courts must, in the interests of justice and the discouragement of litigation and uncertainty of tenure, lay down the normal rule of succession applicable by custom to the tribe as a whole. In such cases it may be possible for special families to prove a special custom, but the onus will lie heavily on him who asserts a departure from the general rule. [p. 582, col. 2.]

The statement of a custom prevailing among Muhammadans as being in conformity with Muhammadan Law, is no bar whatever to its being a valid and a genuine tribal custom. This is particularly the case where there is any confusion or variety in the details of the custom, and where it has been, in any way, in a state of flux. In such a case it is natural and legitimate that members of the tribe concerned should refer their custom to the test of Muhammadan Law, and although this test may not be the ultimate ratio decidendi, it is not one which in any way invalidates a statement of custom. [p. 582, col. 1.] Where it is found that the parties to a suit follow the pagwand rule of succession the onus of proving that the whole blood excludes the half lies on the party alleging it. [p. 578, col. 1.]

Gholam Muhammad v. Muhammad Bahshsh, 4 P. R. 1891 (F. B.), relied on.

The rule prevailing in the Gagiani tribe of the Peshawar District is that in succession to a brother's estate the whole blood excludes the half. [p. 582, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree and judgment of the Additional Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 1st June 1921, setting aside a decree and judgment of the Sub-Judge, Charsadda, dated the 12th January 1920.

JUDGMENT.—(May 4th, 1922).—The parties in this case are Gagianis of Matta Moghalkhel in the Peshawar District, and are sons of Kabut Khan. Kabut Khan had two sons Safdar Khan and Nasarullah Khan by one wife, and Muhammad Zaman and Rustam Khan by another. The land now in suit is the estate of Nasarullah Khan, deceased. His own brother Safdar Khan claims to succeed alone to the whole estate of his own brother, to the exclusion of Muhammad Zaman and Rustam Khan, who are half brothers of the plaintiff and of the deceased. The sole question to be decided in this case is, whether, by the custom prevailing among the parties, the whole blood excludes the half-blood in succession to a brother's estate. The Sub-Judge who tried the case, Mr. Wylie, Assistant Commissioner of Charsadda, found for the plaintiff. The Divisional Court on appeal found for the defendants.

It can be said at once that there is not the least doubt that the parties follow the "pagwand" system in succeeding to a father's estate, i.e., they inherit from their father per capita and not per stirpes. As there were two surviving sons by each wife on Kabut Khan's death, the mode of succession was actually the same whether they inherited per capita or per stirpes. I do not attach very much importance to the entry in the Revenue papers, that the two groups of sons succeeded half and half; but, apart from this, the "pagwand" succession is almost conclusively proved by the fact that Kabut Khan, the father of the parties, was one of the persons who declared before Mr. Lorimer, when the Code of Customary Law of the Peshawar District was prepared at the Settlement of 1895-96, that in the Gigiani tribe succession was "pagwand."

SAFAR KHAN v. MUHAMMAD ZAMAN KHAN.

But this finding does not conclusively prove that, when brothers succeed to the estate of a deceased brother, whole blood does not exclude the half. There is a presumption that it does not so exclude and Gholam Muhammad v. Muhammad Bakhsh (1) is an authority for holding that, when parties follow the "pagwand" rule, the onus of proving that the whole blood excludes the half lies upon the party alleging it. But it must be clearly recognized that this onus can be, and has on some occasions been, discharged, and that there are well-established cases of the whole blood excluding the half in succession to a brother's estate although all brothers succeed equally to their father's estate. This point is noticed very clearly by the learned Revenue Commissioner in his order of the 30th of July 1920, dealing with the present case. But I think that the distinction has been partly missed by the learned Divisional Judge. The distinction is very clearly dealt with by Mr. Bunbury in his ruling published as J. R. 21 of 1904, which relates to the neighbouring Daudzai tract. Mr. Bunbury held, that the Daudzai tribe followed the "pagwand" rule of succession, but, that, nevertheless, in succession to a brother's estate the whole blood excluded the half. I quote the following passage from that judgment: "The view of the first Court that, because the "pagwand" rule obtained in the family of the parties, therefore, the whole and the half blood succeed equally, is not to my mind logically sound. All the sons of one individual by different wives are related "inter se" in the half blood; but the sons by the same mother are related "inter se" in the whole blood: and it does not at all follow that a rule which governs the distribution of the father's property among these sons would subsequently govern the distribution of the share of one of the latter among his full and half brothers." A further point of importance in that ruling is that it established the principle that the whole blood excluded the half practically entirely upon oral evidence produced by the parties, and there can be no doubt, that in the present case also, the evidence of witnesses and the results of local inquiries are extremely important and cover a very wide field. In the revenue proceedings, the first local inquiry was made by the Naib-Tahsildar who, although he found against the present plaintiff in view of judicial precedents, seems to have considered that the custom as shown by his inquiry and the evidence of the leading men of the tribe, was in plaintiff's favour. The Revenue Assistant, K. B. Mian Ghulam Samdani, on appeal found definitely in plaintiffs' favour and gave a very complete resume of his reasons for doing so. Mr. Wylie, the Assistant Commissioner, recorded the evidence of very important representatives of the Gigiani tribe including that of K. B. Abdúl Jabbar Khan, Zaildar, and Ghulam Haidar Khan, Honorary Magistrate, and he further referred to his experience with a representative jirga of the Gigiani tribe held in 1920, and in which the opinion was absolutely unanimous that the whole blood excluded the half. He remarked in his judgment, probably with justice, that there was no other question on which such a jirga could have produced a unanimous opinion. Again, we find this very question in 1919 referred under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, to a local jirga and a finding given that the whole blood excluded the half. As against this there is not the least doubt that the oral evidence produced by the defendants was of the most unsatisfactory character. Most of their witnesses were not Gigiani and those that were, were persons of no position. The above to my mind is fully sufficient in itself at least to neutralize the presumption which arises from the "pagwand" system of succession to a father's estate especially in view of the fact that we have in a neighbouring tract an established instance where the presumption has been similarly rebutted.

(1) 4 P. R. 1891 (F. B.).

The case for the defendants, therefore, rests upon two supports, (a) the custom as recorded in answer No. 63 of Lorimer's Customary Law, and (b) the weight of judicial decisions. To take first (a) alone I am inclined to think that the authority of Lorimer's Customary Law is less important than would appear at first sight. It has been argued by the learned Counsel for the respondents in this case, that the evidence now produced in Court and the local inquiries made by K. B. Ghulam Samadani and Mr. Wylie represent rather the view of the tribe as to what the custom ought to be than what it actually is. It is pointed out, that Mian Ghulam Samadani was certainly influenced, partly by sentimental considerations and possibly by his own view on the question of equity. He alludes, for instance, to the habitual frictions between half brothers and to the assistance which is often given in time of adversity by one own brother to another. It may be admitted that what we are endeavouring to ascertain is certainly not what the custom ought to be, but what it is. But we must, at the same time, take into full consideration the fact that, as noted in a well-known ruling of Mr. Barton in this Court, "custom is a mere crystallization of public opinion in matters affecting the social and economic life of a community and it is not an unsound criterion of the existence of a custom whether or not it is to any extent in harmony with general opinion." It is, therefore, dangerous to hold that a custom, which is categorically repudiated and condemned by the majority of a tribe, is actually the custom by which they are bound. Now I think, that the objections taken to statements made by leading members of the tribe as to their own customs in the present case may equally well be brought against Mr. Lorimer's record itself. He was doing precisely what a series of Revenue and Executive Officers have been doing in the present case. He was depending entirely upon opinions expressed before him at the moment. He was in no better position to ascertain the truth of those statements than were the officers who have made local inquiries in the present case. In fact, I am inclined to think, that the latter were in the better position of the two. Mr. Wylie's judgment shows, that he had considered the question for a very extended period. It was not only the evidence which he recorded in the present case, but his experience of the representative Jirga the year previously. Few persons could have been in a stronger position than he was to get to the bottom of the custom and practice of the Charsadda Sub-Division. I attach, again, the greatest weight to the finding passed under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation. A tribal Jirga is exactly the tribunal most competent to decide a question of tribal custom and a finding under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, is a legal finding, and when it deals with questions of this kind, has all the weight of an important judicial decision. These considerations show that even where Lorimer's Customary Law is most definite it is not a document upon which reliance can be placed for all time. It has indeed been exposed to a series of criticism in the recorded rulings of this Court. We have a very clear precedent also in the case of Dardzi tribe for the discovery of cases, where sons succeed to a father's estate by "pagwand", but inherit inter se with reference to uterine descent only against the custom as recorded by Mr. Lorimer.

SAFDAR KHAN v. MUHAMMAD ZAMAN KHAN.

I now turn to (b), the question of recorded judicial authority. The judicial precedents in favour of each side are set out in Mr. Bolton's order of the 30th July 1920, and, at first sight, their weight is, as he considered, in favour of the defendants. But a closer examination of these rulings shows to my mind an extremely small balance, if any, on the defendants' side. Three judgments are alluded to by Mr. Bolton as favouring the defendants. Of these, two, viz., Mr. Bolton's own finding in the Divisional Court, Case No. 2 of 1909, and the Revenue Commissioner's finding in Case No. 129 of 1910-11, do not relate at all to the exclusion of the half blood by the whole in succession to a brother's estate. They allude solely to the question of "pagwand" or "chundwana" inheritance to a father's estate. This point seems to have been lost sight of inasmuch as the question for consideration was not whether the present parties inherited "pagwand" (this had already been decided), but, whether, notwithstanding that system of inheritance, brothers succeeded inter se on a different principle. The only important ruling, therefore, on the actual question of whole blood not excluding half among brothers is the Judicial Commissioner's ruling in Case No. 42 of 1904. Now, an examination of that ruling shows that it was passed on revision proceedings and at a preliminary hearing only. It is a very short order and it cannot be said to deal at all exhaustively with the general customs, I have not yet seen the Divisional Court's order against which revision was then lodged and possibly, it may disclose a complete case. But as regards the revisional order, I cannot, though with all respect to the high authority which passed it, regard it, as having quite the same binding force as other rulings which have been passed after a lengthy discussion on full appeals. Now, this order is the only judicial precedent which I have seen for the view that the whole blood does not exclude the half among Gigianis. As against this, there are two recorded rulings in which the opposite view was taken. Case No. 186 of 1899 is extremely important as it was there held among certain Gigianis of Matta Moghalkhel, where the bulk of the land now in suit is situated, the whole blood did exclude the half. It has been remarked that that decision was passed on precedents found in a particular family, but I do not think that this affects its importance. There is an overwhelming presumption that a particular family follows the general custom of its tribe, and in any case, definitely established instances of a mode of succession in a Gigiani family are enormously important in arriving at a general custom which is simply the aggregate of the customs of particular families. There is another Case No. 107 of 1896 in which it was held, that whole blood excluded the half by Muhammadan Law. I do not entirely agree with the view taken by the Revenue Commissioner that it is irrelevant simply because none of the present parties follow Muhammadan Law. It may be admitted that its force is weakened, but I think it is going too far to say that it is irrelevant. The tendency of Pathans who follow tribal customs in preference to Muhammadan Law to attempt nevertheless to adjust and reconcile those customs with the principles of "shariyat" has been frequently noticed, and has coloured their pronouncements on questions of custom both in Lorimer's Code and on subsequent occasions. The mere fact that parties assigned the reason for a particular practice to Muhammadan Law, rather than to Pathan custom does not necessarily imply that that practice was not in accordance with their custom.

SAFDAR KHAN v. MUHAMMAD ZAYAN KHAN.

From the above, it will be clear that the defendants benefit very little, if at all, from recorded judicial precedents, and I have already alluded to the overwhelming nature of the plaintiff's oral evidence and of the results of extended local inquiries.

I now turn to a very important part of the evidence, the actual instance of successions recorded in mutation proceedings. In the Revenue inquiries 115 mutations were discovered, of which it is said that 59 are in favour of the defendants and 56 in favour of the plaintiff. Unfortunately, I cannot determine by an examination of those mutations, whether all of them or which of them relate to the Gigiani tribe, nor are the learned Counsel on either side able to enlighten me on this point. It appears to me probable that those produced refer to the Doaba tract as a whole and not necessarily to the Gigiani tribe in particular. I think it is extremely important that all possible mutations should be compared which relate exclusively to the Gigiani tribe and to no other. The Gazetteer of the Peshawar District would seem to show that the Gigiani tribe has always held a very peculiar position and I do not think that a parallel can necessarily be drawn between its customs and those prevailing in such portions of the Doaba tract as are held by other tribes. I am, therefore, obliged to remand this case for this point to be cleared up. Under O. XLI, r. 25, I remand this case to the Divisional Court with the request, that the learned Divisional Judge will direct the Assistant Commissioner of Charsadda to make an inquiry upon all recorded mutations of the succession of brothers to a brother's estate relating exclusively to the Gigiani tribe, and will submit the result of this inquiry with his opinion to this Court. I may remark that another case that of Muhammad Rafiq v. Sher and others in which the same issue of custom is involved, has been heard by me today and I have made a remand under O. XLI, r. 25 in that case also. It is not on all fours with the present case. It was decided not by the Assistant Commissioner, Charsadda, but by Arbab Wali Muhammad Khan, Munsif, First Class, who merely followed the decision of the Assistant Commissioner in the more important case. There are, however, in that case certain preliminary points to be cleared up with regard to the parties' position, and I think it is important that on remand both cases should be heard by the Assistant Commissioner.

SAFDAR KHAN v. MUHAMMAD ZAMAN KHAN:

Return by 10th October 1922. Objections and hearing on 11th October 1922.

Mr. Hukim Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—My order of the 4th of May 1922 is to be read as part of the final order on this appeal. The return made to the order of remand shows that 65 of the relevant mutations in the Doaba tract relate to succession among Gigianis, and that in 39 of these whole and half blood have succeeded equally and in 26 the whole has excluded the half blood. The Tahsildar who conducted this investigation, notes in his report of the 31st of July 1922, that the opinion generally expressed was, that the whole blood excluded the half. The same view is strongly enunciated by Major Reilly, the present Assistant Commissioner of Charsadda, to whose Court the remand was made. He also convened a jirga of all the leading men of the tribe and again referred to them this issue. Their written finding is attached to the record of Civil Revision No. 135 of 1921 (Muhammad Rafiq v. Sher) in which a remand was made simultaneously.

I have already reviewed at length the original evidence produced in this case and have discussed in detail the record of custom and the judicial precedents. With reference to the remarks in my former order regarding Civil Revision No. 42 of 1904, I have now examined the judgment of the Divisional Court also in that case. The examination tends to confirm the view that the ruling is of little value as a precedent. The question of the possibility of whole blood excluding half by virtue of a custom co-existing with the pagwand distribution was not really discussed. It was found that the succession in that particular family had been irregular in the past and that neither pagwand or chundawand custom had been completely followed, and that, in consequence, "the ordinary rule of inheritance must come in." As I have already said, the order passed by the Judicial Commissioner was of a summary nature rejecting a petition for revision in limine, and involved no serious review of the question of custom. I have already pointed out that this judicial precedent stands alone among several others of far more importance to the opposite effect.

It remains to consider whether the inquiry now made on this remand has materially added to our knowledge of custom. So far as regards the recorded mutations of succession, the balance in favour of equal inheritance by whole or half blood does not appear to me seriously to shake the weight of other evidence to the exclusion of half blood by whole. The learned Counsel for the respondents argues that the finding of the jirga convened by Major Reilly, if examined carefully, tends rather to confirm than to rebut the conclusion arrived at by the Divisional Court. He contends that it is clear from the wording of the finding itself that the jirga wanted to introduce an innovation because that innovation would be in accordance with Muhammadan Law. This, of course, is another form of the argument that we are dealing with, a record not of what custom is, but of what people think, it ought to be. I do not consider, however, that the opinion of the jirga bears this construction. It is true that at the beginning it states that the signatories wish that full blood should inherit a brother's estate to the exclusion of half blood. At the same time, it concludes by saying, that "generally full blood succeeds to a brother's estate, and we, all the Khans, are also of opinion that this is the best and just mode of inheritance in a brother's estate, as is always done and as Muhammadan Law orders us to do. We abide by Muhammadan Law in this respect." I do not think that this can be twisted into an admission that the signatories contemplate an innovation or, that they are trying to revise an existing custom. It is clear, indeed, from the rest of their finding that the custom has actually varied in different villages and is, to some extent, in a state of confusion. Again, I consider that Courts are apt unduly to press that aspect of the case which treats Pathans of the Peshawar District as bound by custom to the exclusion of Muhammadan Law. There appears to be a prevalent idea that not only are such tribes bound by their own custom, as opposed to Muhammadan Law, but that such custom can never be in accordance with Muhammadan Law. I can see no justification whatever for this extreme view. There is nothing in the least impossible in certain features of tribal custom approximating to the tenets of Muhammadan Law, and indeed one would naturally expect to find this feature among any class of Muhammadans. The statement of a custom as being in conformity with Muhammadan Law is, to my mind, no bar whatever to its being a valid and a genuine tribal custom. This is particularly the case where there is any confusion or variety in the details of the custom and where it has been, in any way, in a state of flux. In such a case it is natural and legitimate that members of the tribe concerned should refer their custom to the test of Muhammadan Law and, although this test may not be the ultimate ratio decidendi, it is not one which in any way invalidates a statement of custom. It is argued, again, by Counsel that we have, in this recorded opinion, an admission that every village has a separate custom, and that, in these circumstances, it is for Courts to decide what special custom obtains in each particular village. I am unable to subscribe to this view. Courts undoubtedly have the widest latitude in discovering and establishing any particular custom applicable to any particular community, and it is for this reason that case-law has been particular in distinguishing the customs of various tribes. But it appears to me, that Courts are bound to recognize some limit to the distinctions which can be drawn among different members of the same community; and that they are obliged to take certain tribes as the lowest unit regarding which case-law can be established as binding. It would seem to me impossible to leave the Courts of this Province in a position of having to discover and lay down a special rule of succession in every particular village of a small tract, such as the Gigiani tract, and of determining its applicability to practically every distinct family of the tribe. It is impossible to escape from the view that Courts must, in the interests of justice and the discouragement of litigation and uncertainty of tenure, lay down the normal rule of succession applicable by custom to the tribe as a whole. In such cases it may be possible for special families to prove a special custom, but the onus will lie heavily on one who asserts a departure from the general rule. I can only regard the opinion recorded by the jirga in this case as a statement of the custom accepted unanimously by all the leaders of the Gigiani tribe as the custom which governs their mode of succession, and which, in spite of individual variations, is regarded by the tribe as a whole as the normal and established mode of succession. I have already, in my previous order, enumerated the other reasons which have led me to the same view. It is one which is supported by the trend of judicial decisions, by an overwhelming consensus of oral evidence and by all the local inquiries, which have been made in the present case starting from the first investigation made on the question of mutation. It is also, as I have already shown, not in conflict with precedents which have been laid down in an adjoining tract. I must hold, therefore, that the rule prevailing in the Gigiani tribe is that, in succession to a brother's estate, the whole blood excludes the half.

SAFDAR KHAN V. MUHAMMAD ZAMAN KHAN.

On the above finding the present appeal must succeed. I, therefore, set aside the order of the Divisional Court dismissing the suit and grant the plaintiff a declaratory decree to the effect that he succeeds solely to the estate of his deceased brother Nasarullah Khan. The defendants will pay the plaintiff's costs throughout.

Z. K. & N. H.

*Appeal allowed.
Order set aside.*

MAWAZ KHAN v. ZOHRA JAN.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 390 OF 1920.

February 19, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol

Mr. Justice Martineau.

MAWAZ KHAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS versusMusammat ZOHRA JAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND BEGAM JI—
DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.Custom—Alienation by limited owner—Female reversioner, whether can object.

Where a female is in possession of certain property with a limited interest, her alienations can be controlled by another female who is entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of the alienor.

Maqsud-un-nisa v. Kaniz Zohra, 135 P. R. 1908; 194 P. W. R. 1908, followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Attock, at Cambellpore, dated the 12th December 1919, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Cambellpore, dated the 2nd August 1919.

Mr. Jai Gopal Sethi, for the Appellants.

Mr. Sagar Chand, for Mr. B. D. Qureshi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Fateh Ahmad by Will devised his property to his widows and daughters. On his death his reversioners contested the validity of the Will with the result that this Court in its decision—Mowaz v. Gulab Jan (1) held that the Will should have no effect upon the ordinary rule of devolution of property in this family. Subsequently, Musammat Begam Ji, one of the widows of Fateh Ahmad, gifted her share in her late husband's estate to his reversioners, the plaintiffs in the earlier case, and the present suit was by the daughters for a declaration that the gift by Musammat Begam Ji was not binding upon them and for possession of Begam Ji's share of the estate which she had forfeited by re-marriage.

The Trial Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiffs had not established any right to contest the alienation by Musammat Begam Ji because they had not been able to show the nature of the right under which they claimed. The plaintiffs are women and were represented ed by Counsel who had no clear idea apparently as to the nature of the widow's title. In reply to the plea of the defendants he first stated that they succeeded on the re-marriage of Musammat Begam Ji by right of survivorship, then he opined that it was by right of succession, and finally elected for the right of survivorship. The learned District Judge on appeal went into the status of widows and unmarried daughters and found that, according to the custom obtaining among the parties, who are Khattars of Tahsil Attock, widows and unmarried daughters succeeded in equal shares and, on the death of a widow or daughter, the survivor or survivors succeeded to her share. The term 'survivor' appears to have caused confusion. It does not mean that the survivor succeeds under the technical rule of survivorship; it means simply that the survivors succeed under custom to the estate of the deceased. In second appeal we are asked to interfere on the ground that the claim to succeed was based on the rule of survivorship and the Appellate Court had decided according to custom, but, in our opinion, there has been no confusion in the minds of the parties as to the question in issue between them. It is noteworthy that in their earlier suit, reported as Mowaz v. Gulab Jan (1), the reversioners admitted the right of the widows and daughters to possession up to the time of death or marriage or re-marriage in the case of the widows, and this admission confirms the finding of the lower Appellate Court that till death or marriage widows and daughters succeed in equal shares to the estate of the deceased. The real question in dispute between the parties was, whether the daughters were competent to contest an alienation by a widow. This question had been answered in the affirmative by the lower Appellate Court, following Maqsud-un-nisa v. Kaniz Zohra (2), which provides that when a female is entitled to succeed on the death of the alienor and when the alienor holds only a limited interest in the estate, such female is competent to control the alienations of the alienor. This rule is based upon common sense and general principles of equity and we accept it without hesitation.

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 920; 97 P. R. 1914; 220 P. L. R. 1914; 121 P. W. R. 1914.

(2) 135 P. R. 1908; 194 P. W. R. 1908.

NANJADIK RAI v. RAM JATAN RAI. SUBRAYA SAMPIGETHAYA v. KRISHNA RAIPADITHAYA.

For these reasons we find the decree of the Court below worthy of affirmation and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

ruling in Kalyan Mal v. Samad (1) in which it has been held that a question of proprietary right is involved. Following that ruling, I reject the plea of the appellant and dismiss the appeal with costs.

M. A. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 18 Ind. Cas. 244; 35 A. 157; 11 A. L. J. 118.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1587 OF 1921.

April 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

NANJADIK RAI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

RAM JATAN RAI AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), ss. 34, 177 (e)—Question of proprietary title—Appeal.

In a suit for ejectment under section 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act, if the defendant pleads that he is not a tenant but a mortgagee of proprietary rights, a question of proprietary title is raised within the meaning of section 177 (e) of the Act, and an appeal lies to the Civil Court.

Kalyan Mal v. Samad, 18 Ind. Cas. 244; 35 A. 157; 11 A. L. J. 118, followed.

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Ghazipur, dated the 10th August 1921.

Messrs. U. S. Bajpai and S. D. Sinha, for the Appellants.

Dr. M. L. Agarwala, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for ejectment in the Revenue Court. The only plea which has been argued is that no appeal lay to the Court below, no question of proprietary title having been raised within the meaning of clause (e) of section 177 of the Tenancy Act. The plaintiff brought the suit under section 34 alleging that the defendant was occupying the land without his permission. The contesting defendant, Ram Jatan Rai, pleaded that he was a mortgagee of the proprietary right. The plaintiff's proprietary right was not in dispute. If the matter were one of first impression there might, I think, be room for controversy whether the issue whether the defendant was a tenant or a mortgagee from the proprietor does really raise a question of proprietary right; but the question is concluded by the

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

FULL BENCH.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 498 OF 1921.

March 12, 1923.

Present:—Sir Walter Schwabe, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter.

SUBRAYA SAMPIGETHAYA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1, 3, 4—
APPELLANTS

versus

KRISHNA RAIPADITHAYA—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6 (d) —Right to future maintenance—Alienability—Test.

The right under a contract to a defined amount in cash or kind for future maintenance is "property" under section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act. But whether it is an interest in property restricted in its enjoyment to the owner personally so as to render it inalienable under clause (d) must depend on the facts of each case and must be ascertained by the ordinary rules of interpretation of the contract, the question being whether the intention of the parties was that the right should be personal and, therefore, inalienable. That intention is to be ascertained from the language of the document itself and the surrounding circumstances at the time of its execution, considered as a contract to come into operation at once without reference to what has in fact since happened. [p. 587, col. 2; p. 588, col. 1.]

A widow by a deed surrendered all her interest in her late husband's property in favour of the nearest reversioner of her husband in consideration of his agreeing to pay some debts of the husband and maintain her during her lifetime and the document also provided in the alternative that if it was not convenient for her to live jointly with him, she should remain in the building in which she resided and be then entitled for separate provision for food, clothing and a certain quantity of rice, which were charged upon certain immoveable properties:

SUBRAYA SAMPIGETRAYA v. KRISHNA BAI PADITHAYA.

Held, that the intention of the parties to be derived from the document was that the rights of the widow under the contract should be personal and inalienable under section 6 (d) of the Transfer of Property Act. [p. 588, col. 1.]

Second appeal against a decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, South Kanara, in Appeal Suit No. 122 of 1920, preferred against a decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Karkal, in Original Suit No. 148 of 1919.

This second appeal coming on for hearing on the 6th and 7th of April 1922, upon perusing the grounds of appeal, the judgments and decrees of the lower Courts and the material papers in the suit, and upon hearing the arguments of Mr. C. V. Anantakrishna Ayyar, for the 1st Appellant, and Mr. K. Srinavasa Rao, for the Appellants, and of Mr. B. Sitarama Rao, for the Respondent, and the case having stood over for consideration till the 19th of April 1922, the Court, (Oldfield and Spencer, JJ.) made the following

ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A FULL BENCH.

Oldfield, J.—I agree to a reference to a Full Bench in the terms, which my learned brother is about to state. In doing so, I commit myself to no opinion as to whether section 6, Transfer of Property Act, is to be interpreted with reference to public policy. For it is not clear that the considerations which arise correspond with any of the heads of public policy which authority has hitherto recognised and which it is undesirable to multiply, or that the refusal of the law to treat certain things and rights, of which a widow's right to future maintenance may be one, as property susceptible of transfer, may not be a sufficient justification for interpreting the section in the manner proposed.

Spencer, J.—In this second appeal a question has arisen whether the sale of a right to maintenance which a Hindu widow executed in favour of the plaintiff was valid. The widow, who is named Lakshmi Hengsu, in 1904 surrendered by Exhibit B her husband's estate to the nearest reversioner subject to a condition by which she became entitled to food and clothing for life and a right of residence, the food to consist of 45 muras of rice of two descriptions charged on the liability of the surrendered properties; and nearly ten years later she conveyed under Exhibit A her right to collect future maintenance in the form of 45 muras of rice annually to the plaintiff in consideration of a sum of Rs. 1,000. The description of property in the document refers to another conveyance of the widow's right to collect arrears of maintenance which she executed on the same day.

Mr. Anantakrishna Ayyar who appears for the appellants concedes that the transfer of arrears of maintenance already accrued at the time of transfer is valid. But he argues that Exhibit B is invalid so far as it purports to transfer future maintenance. In the lower Appellate Court in dealing with this point of law, the Subordinate Judge relied on an observation in Annapurni Nachiar v. Swaminathan Chetty (1), of Sir Arnold White, Chief Justice, and Munro, J. They state: "It may be that voluntary alienations of rights for future maintenance should be prohibited as well as the taking of such rights in execution. The Legislature has not thought fit to prohibit them. We are not prepared to say that, at any rate where as here, the amount payable is subsequently fixed by agreement or by decree, a transfer of a widow's right to maintenance from her late husband's estate is inalienable." With due deference, I feel some difficulty in accepting that dictum as a correct statement of the law on the subject. So far as it makes an agreement to pay maintenance to a widow transferable, it seems to be opposed to section 6, clause (d) of the Transfer of Property Act which declares that an interest in property restricted in its enjoyment to the owner personally cannot be transferred by him. On this section and clause there is a note in the Commentary by Shephard and Brown on the Transfer of Property Act, which is so well accepted an authority that I do not hesitate to quote it. It says: "The right to future maintenance cannot be attached in execution of a decree and it seems clear that such a right enjoyed by a Hindu widow cannot be made the subject of a sale or other transfer by her since the right exists for her personal benefit only." It may be doubted

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 439; 34 M. 7; 8 M. L. T. 108. (1910) M. W. N. 505; 20 M. L. J. 785.

SUBRAYA SAMPIGETIAYA V. KRISHNA BAIPADITHAYA.

whether she could effectually transfer her interest in property allotted to her for her maintenance. As regards attachment of the right to future maintenance reference is made to Diwali v. Apaji Ganesh (2), and section 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Diwali v. Apaji Ganesh (2), the decision proceeded upon the proviso against alienation contained in the deed of assignment. But section 60, clause (n) is quite clear. The Courts have consistently held that a right to future maintenance cannot be attached in execution. In Nanammal v. Collector of Trichinopoly (3) the fact that the right to maintenance has ripened into a decree did not, in the opinion of Abdur Rahim, J., and Munro, J., who was also a party, to Annapurni Nachiar v. Swaminathan Chetty (1), make the right to maintenance any more attachable. In Palikandy Mammad v. Chingoran Kelth Valia Appa (4), Sadasiva Aiyar and Moore, J., had no hesitation in holding that there could be no attachment of a right to future maintenance. As pointed out by Sadasiva Aiyar, J., in that case, the public policy of prohibiting transfers found in section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act and the prohibition against attachment under Civil Procedure Code, both rest upon the same foundation. In England it was held in Watkins v. Watkins (5), that alimony granted to a separated wife was not alienable by her. Lindley, L. J., indicates the reasons for this. He says the Court which orders it never loses its control over it and the doctrine of inalienability is based on the old ecclesiastical law. The learned Judges who decided Annapurni Nachiar v. Swaminathan Chetty (1) evaded the application of the Transfer of Property Act by saying that the right to future maintenance was not in their opinion "property." Seshagiri Ayyar, J., in Seshappa Heggade v. Chandayya Heggade (6) also expressed an opinion that a right to maintenance would not be covered by clause (d) of section 6 as it could not be described as an interest in property restricted in its enjoyment to the owner personally. But my learned brother, Oldfield,

J., who sat with him pronounced an opinion only on the other question which arose as to the maintainability of the suit in a Small Cause Court. In Annada Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mallik (7), Mookerji, Acting Chief Justice, in deciding that the chance of Hindu reversioners succeeding to the estate of the last full owner was not alienable property under clause (a) of section 6, discussed a definition of "property," a definition which could cover a widow's right to maintenance. He pointed out that when non-existent property is made the subject of a contract, the party who takes the agreement is in no better position when he attempts to defeat the application of the statutory provision by this means, as no Court of Equity will assist him in his endeavour to accomplish his purpose which is opposed to public policy. In 12 Calcutta Law Journal there are two instructive cases, Asad Ali Molla v. Haider Ali (8) and Tara Sundari Debi v. Sarada Charan (9). Mookerjee, J., observed in the earlier case, at page 133,* that if a person is entitled to a monthly allowance under a deed, the allowance can be attached by an execution-creditor only after it has become due, so that an assignee of a decree for arrears of maintenance can execute it against the judgment-debtor in the same manner as the original decree-holder; and, at page 154,* where land has been granted in lieu of a right to maintenance the interest of the grantee is liable to be sold in execution of a personal decree. He quotes the decision in Harris v. Brown (10) by the Privy Council where a monthly allowance of Rs. 50 devised by Will for the maintenance of a daughter was transferred and the Privy Council treated the assignments operative. In that case, no question as to the illegality of the assignment by the legatee, Flora Williams, of this allowance was raised with reference to section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act. The two cases Enact

(2) 10 B. 342; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 615.

(3) 5 Ind. Cas. 879; 20 M. L. J. 97.

(4) 34 Ind. Cas. 381; 40 M. 302; 30 M. L. J. 361.

(5) (1896) P. 222; 65 L. J. P. 75; 74 L. T. 636;

44 W. R. 677.

(6) 53 Ind. Cas. 665; 37 M. L. J. 402.

(7) 65 Ind. Cas. 27; 48 C. 536; 25 C. W. N. 496; 33 C. L. J. 457.

(8) 6 Ind. Cas. 826; 12 C. L. J. 130; 14 C. W. N. 918; 38 C. 13.

(9) 7 Ind. Cas. 80; 12 C. L. J. 146.

(10) 28 C. 621; 28 I. A. 159; 5 C. W. N. 729; 3 Bom. L. R. 808; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 92 (P. C.).

*Pages of 12 C. L. J.—[Ed.]

SUFRAYA SAMPIGETHAYA V. FRISUNA BAIPADITHAYA.

Hossein v. Nujeeboonissa Begum (11) and Maharajah Dheraj Mahtab Chand Bahadur v. Sreemuttee Dhun Coomaree Bibee (12), the latter relating to an annuity charged on an estate in favour of a brother which was held to be attachable in execution, are not very material to the question before us, as they were decisions prior to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act in which the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code alone were considered. In the present case the provisions for residence and clothing under Exhibit A. appear to be undoubtedly interests restricted in enjoyment to the widow Lakshmi Hengsu. As the allowance of rice was intended to be for support after she had parted with her interest in the land and as it would come to an end at her death, this also appears to be an interest restricted to her personally and a transfer of such an interest is, in my opinion, prohibited on grounds of public policy by section 6, clause (d). Whether after a decree has been obtained for arrears of past maintenance the decree-holder can assign the decree for execution is a matter which does not require to be decided on the facts of this case. As the decision in Annapurni Nachiar v. Swaminathan Chetty (1) appears to be at variance with section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act and other decisions already referred to, we refer the question to a Full Bench: "Whether the interest of a widow who has obtained by a registered deed a right to future maintenance during her lifetime even if charged upon specified immovable property is capable of being transferred when the transfer is attempted to be effected at a time before the maintenance has become due."

This second appeal came on for hearing in pursuance of the Order of Reference to a Full Bench, dated the 19th of April 1922, on the 29th and 30th of January 1923.

Messrs. C. V. Anantakrishna Ayyar and K. Srinavasa Rao, for the Appellants.

Mr. B. Sitarama Rao, for the Respondent.

OPINION.

Schwabe, C. J.—The question referred to the Full Bench is, "Whether the interest of a widow who has obtained by a registered deed a right to future maintenance during her lifetime even if charged upon specified immovable property is capable of being transferred when the transfer is attempted to be effected at a time before the maintenance has become due." I do not think that it is possible to give a general answer to this question, and I will confine myself to considering whether the assignment in this case is valid. By a document, called a general power-of-attorney, the widow surrendered all her interest in her late husband's property in favour of the nearest reversioner of her husband in consideration of his agreeing to pay some debts of the husband and to maintain her during her lifetime. The document then continues (according to a corrected translation) "Besides maintaining me by giving me food and clothing, etc., until my lifetime you should also perform my obsequies, etc., after my death. Henceforward, you should also perform the Sradha of my husband, father-in-law and mother-in-law, making the necessary expenses therefor... If it is not convenient for me to live jointly with you. I should remain in the building where I now reside. In that event, except that for my food and clothing you should pay yearly 33 muras of kuchlu rice and 12 muras of belige rice charged on the following properties, I have no right to contract any debts as a charge on the said properties or have any claim to the return of the property."

Whether the right to future maintenance, apart from the contract, or under a contract to provide clothing, board, and residence in the house of the other contracting party is property at all, within the meaning of section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act, is a matter upon which there has been considerable divergence of opinion, but it is unnecessary to consider that here as in my judgment, it is a purely personal right and is clearly inalienable.

The right under a contract to a defined amount in cash or kind for future maintenance is, in my judgment, property under the enabling words of section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882. But the question remains whether it is an interest in property restricted in its enjoyment to the owner personally, such an interest under clause (d) of that section being inalienable. This must depend on the facts of each particular case and must be ascertained by the ordinary rules of the interpretation of the contract; the question being, whether the intention of the parties was that the right should be personal and, therefore, inalienable. That intention is to be ascertained from the language of the document itself and the surrounding circumstances at the time of its execution. It must be considered as a contract to come into operation at once, and in the light of the surrounding circumstances as they then stood. What has in fact happened since is not a relevant consideration, except perhaps as an illustration of what may possibly have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time of this contract. The widow was surrendering her life-interest in the property in exchange for the agreement for maintenance, and it seems to have been quite clearly in the contemplation of the parties that the reversioner should continue in possession of the property and of the family house, and the fact that he has since sold the property does not help us to arrive at the true interpretation of the contract.

(11) 11 W. R. 138.

(12) 17 W. R. 254.

SUBRAYA SAMPIGETHAYA v. KRISHNA BAIPADITHAYA.

Examining the contract itself, we find that the first alternative form of maintenance provided was by residence in the house and by sharing the meals of the family. The second alternative was that, if she chose to live apart, she should receive definite amounts of paddy secured by a charge on the land. There is no provision for an election once and for all, and I see no reason why she should not at her will at one time live in the house, and at another live away and receive the paddy. This leads me to the conclusion that the intention of the parties to be derived from the document was that the rights under the contract should be personal and inalienable; for, she could not give to another the right of living and feeding with the reversioner's family.

I think that the view expressed above that this question must turn on the intention of the parties reconciles most, if not all, of the apparently conflicting decisions on this question.

The right to future maintenance properly so-called, by which I mean the right to be maintained by the supply of clothing, board and lodging, is inalienable, and so I understand the statements in the Text-Books, Trevelyan's Hindu Law, II Edition, page 80, West and Bhuler's Hindu Law, page 283 and Shepherd and Brown, Transfer of Property Act, page 209, and so, I think, may be explained the decision in Rajat Kamini Debi v. Raja Satya Niranjan Chakrabarty (13), where, on facts somewhat similar to these, it was held that a widow who released her life-interest in return for an agreement to pay her Rs. 100 per annum and supply her with 39 maunds of rice per annum could alienate her interest under the agreement; for, in that case, it was no part of the agreement that she should be clothed, fed or housed and, therefore, there was nothing personal about the contract at all. This, too, was, I think, the view of Mookerjee, J., who in two cases decided in the same month held that the widow's right to maintenance under one contract could be taken in execution and under another it could not. Asad Ali Molla v. Haider Ali (8) and Tara Sundari Debi v. Sarada Charan (9). The right to attach is governed by the Code of Civil Procedure, but in his judgments he discussed fully the inalienability of such right. In Tara Sundari Debi v. Sarada Charan (9) in which he held the right inalienable and, therefore, not attachable, the payments were not to be made until the donee lived separately from the family, and he distinguishes between cases where the provision of land, money or goods is taken in lieu of maintenance without any restraint upon alienation where the land, money or goods are alienable, and cases where the right is purely personal. If the latter, he considers that, even when the right is merged in a decree, it is not alienable. Bhyrhub Chunder Ghose v. Nubo Chunder Goocho (14), Enact Hossein v. Nujeeboonissa Begum (11) and Maharajah Dheraj Mahtab Chand Bahadur v. Sreemuttee Dhun Coomaree Bibee (12), I think, may be reconciled on the same

(13) 53 Ind. Cas. 587; 23 C. W. N. 824.

(4) 5 W. R. 111.

SUBRAYA SAMPIGETHAYA v. KRISHNA BAIPADITHAYA.

ground. Annapurni Nachiar v. Swaminathan Chetty (1) and the explanation of it in Palikandy Mammad v. Chingoran Keloth Vahu Appa (4) by Sadasiva Aiyar, J., do not assist me in arriving at the principle to be applied. The remarks of Seshagir Ayyar, J., in Seshappa Heggade v. Chandayya Heggade (6) on this point were purely obiter but can properly be explained by limiting their application to cases of maintenance properly so called. I do not think that any useful purpose will be served by going in further detail into any of these cases or others to which our attention was drawn.

I answer the question referred by saying that this widow's right to future maintenance was inalienable.

Oldfield, J.—The question referred is stated in general terms, which, as the referring order of Spencer, J., and argument before us show, are liable to be applied to interests of different kinds and subject to different legal incidents. Some confusion has again been introduced by reliance on the exemption under section 60, Civil Procedure Code, of a right to maintenance from attachment. But that exemption is inconclusive, when, as here, a transfer by act of parties is in question and when some of the descriptions of property enumerated in the section certainly are not, and it is not to be assumed that a maintenance right is exempted from attachment. Authorities relating to attachment are accordingly irrelevant, except in so far as they deal with the only provision of law at present material; section 6 (a), Transfer of Property Act, under which property cannot be transferred, if it is "restricted in its enjoyment personally to the owner." And on this account Palikandy Mammad v. Chingoran Keloth Vahu Appa (4), one of the decisions of this Court, regarded as conflicting in the reference, is not of assistance, the prohibition against attachment having been relied on directly. The other Annapurni Nachiar v. Swaminathan Chetty (1) proceeds on the view that a right to future maintenance is not property within the enabling words of an interest in property contemplated by paragraph (d) of section 6. But, with all respect, we have not been shown that this view has been taken elsewhere; it is inconsistent with the statutory exclusion of such a right from property liable to attachment; and, if it were acceptable, explanation would still be necessary as to the law, by which the validity of a transfer of what is not property is recognized or can be tested at all.

Authority need not be cited to show that section 6 (d) requires more than the termination of the interest in question with the life of its owner. But in the present case that requirement is complied with. For it is not conceivable that Exhibit B was meant to enable the widow to have some other person clothed or to introduce any stranger she might nominate to the family meals. The rights conferred on her are clearly personal; and it is, therefore, unnecessary to follow Mookerjee, J., in his exhaustive discussion in Tara Sundari Devi v. Sarada Charan (9), of the questions (1) whether an interest created in lieu of and in discharge of a right to maintenance is assignable, and (2) whether it is material that the right is enforceable by a charge on immoveable property. For, as regards the first, I agree that there is no question of a discharge in Exhibit B, the widow's option to return at any time to actual maintenance instead of a periodical allowance having been preserved, and as regards the second, the only substantive right under transfer is the right to future maintenance already considered and no question of an impersonal interest in land available for the enforcement of that right can arise, except incidentally and in case a default takes place.

I concur in the opinion expressed by my Lord.

Coutts-Trotter, J.—I am of the same opinion and have nothing to add.

V. N. V.

Answered accordingly.

JHANDU V. HUSAIN BIBI.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 575 OF 1920.

February 22, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

JHANDU—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammal HUSAIN BIBI AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Muhammadan Law—Marriage—Iddat on death—Pregnancy, effect of—Marriage during iddat, validity of.

The period prescribed by the Muhammadan Law for the Iddat of a widow, on the death of a regularly married husband, if not pregnant, is four months and ten days, and if pregnant, four months and ten days or until delivery, whichever is longest.

The marriage of a Muhammadan woman before the expiry of the period of Iddat is illegal.

Ilahia v. Imam Din, 1 Ind. Cas. 894; 29 P. R. 1909; 34 P. W. R. 1909; 47 P. L. R. 1909, followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 7th February 1920, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Amritsar, dated the 30th October 1919.

Sheikh Niaz Muhammad, for the Appellant.

Lala Kahan Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Jhandu, son of Umar, a Gazar, instituted a suit against Musammal Husain Bibi, alleging that she had been lawfully married to him and claiming restitution of conjugal rights. It appears that Musammal Husain Bibi was a widow when Jhandu married her and the defence set up was that the marriage, if any, was illegal and not binding as it had been solemnized within the period of Iddat, namely, four months and ten days from the death of her former husband. It was found as a fact that the marriage in question took place within two months of the death of Musammal Husain Bibi's former husband, and the Courts below, following Ilahia v. Imam Din (1), dismissed the plaintiff's suit holding that the marriage in question was illegal and, therefore, not binding on Musammal Husain Bibi. Jhandu has now come up to this Court in second appeal through

Mr. Niaz Muhammad, and it has been contended that the decision in Ilahia v. Imam Din (1) was bad and opposed to Muhammadan Law.

Our attention has been drawn to various treatises on Muhammadan Law, such as Muhammad Usaf's Muhammadan Law, Vol. III, page 63, Hamilton's Hedaya, page 130, Abdur Rahman's Muhammadan Law, pages, 316, 317, Muhammad Ali's translation of the Quran, page 1086, verse 4, Fateh-ul-Qadir, page 141, and Bailie's Digest, page 355. We have carefully examined these, (with the exception of Fateh-ul-Qadir, which has not been actually placed before us) and in addition we have consulted Wilson's Digest of Anglo-Muhammadan Law and Tayabjee's Principles of Muhammadan Law. The reference to Muhammad Ali's translation of the holy Quran affords no assistance as that obviously deals only with a case of a divorced woman. In Tayabjee's treatise at page 133 a table is shown giving the duration of the period of the Iddat and, according to this table, the period prescribed for the Iddat of a widow on the death of a regularly married husband, if not pregnant, is four months and ten days, and if pregnant four months and ten days or until delivery, whichever is longest. In the present case it appears that Musammal Husain Bibi was pregnant at the time of her former husband's death and was delivered of her child before the expiry of the four months and ten days' period.

It has been contended that the Muhammadan Law requires only that a widow should maintain the period of Iddat for such period as is laid down, namely, four months and ten days, or, if she be pregnant, until such time as she is delivered of the child, the period fixed being curtailed if the delivery takes place before the expiry of the period of four months and ten days. We are unable to find any authority to support this contention and none has been laid before us. In Hamilton's Hedaya at page 130 the following passage occurs:—"Now the Iddat of a widow is not designed for the purpose of ascertaining the state of her womb: for if it were so, it would not be determined by the lapse of time (supposing her to be one who is subject to the menstrual discharge) but by three terms of her courses; whereas we see that the law fixes it at four months and ten days, although she be a woman of that description; but it is made incumbent merely as a fulfilment of one of the rights of marriage." See also pages 132 and 145.

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 894; 29 P. R. 1909; 34 P. W. R. 1909; 47 P. L. R. 1909.

FARZAND ALI V. EKADASHI.

According to the view taken by Wilson the period of Iddat for a woman, who has been lawfully married, is four months and ten days, and if she happens to be pregnant it continues until delivery, vide pages 112 and 113 and Appendix D. page 519. This is the view that was adopted in Ilahia v. Imam Din (1), a view with which we are in accord.

We, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

UDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 31
AND 32 OF 1922.

August 1, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ashworth.

Shaiikh FARZAND ALI—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

EKADASHI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Ex parte decree—Appeal—Appellate Court, power of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 115, 151, O. XLI, rr. 23, 24, 25—Remand, when permitted—S. 151, object of—Appeal, when may be treated as revision.

When a suit is decided ex parte the Appellate Court to which an appeal from the decree is preferred, has jurisdiction to reverse the decree of the lower Court on the ground that such Court was wrong in proceeding to decide the case ex parte and has also power to remand the suit for re-hearing. [p. 592, col. 1.]

Sadhu Krishna Ayyar v. Kuppan Ayyangar, 30 M. 54; 1 M. L. T. 268; 16 M. L. J. 479 (F. B.), relied on.

The Code of Civil Procedure permits a remand by an Appellate Court not only in the particular case set forth in O. XLI, r. 23, but also in all cases where there has been any error, defect or irregularity which has vitiated the whole decision of the case, provided that the procedure under O. XLI, rr. 24 and 25 does not meet the cases. [p. 593, col. 1.]

An order of remand cannot be made under r. 23 of O. XLI of the Code, unless the case has been disposed of without entering into the full merits by reason of a decision on law or fact which has prevented the case being tried to the end. [p. 593, col. 2.]

Section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure can never be invoked in any case unless a Court has jurisdiction to entertain the case. It cannot be invoked to give a Court jurisdiction, if it does not possess it otherwise. [p. 593, col. 2.]

Where no appeal lies, an appeal to the High Court may be treated as an application for revision [p. 593, col. 2; p. 594, col. 1.]

Ramji Das v. v. Bhagwan Das, 43 Ind. Cas. 180, not followed.

Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code is intended merely to rule out revision of interlocutory orders. An order of remand is not an interlocutory order. [p. 594, col. 1.]

Miscellaneous Appeals against an order of the Third Additional District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 10th April 1922, setting aside a decree of the Munsif, North Lucknow, dated the 9th July 1921.

Mr. Nazir-ud-din, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. K. Ghose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These two miscellaneous appeals arise from the following facts. The plaintiff-appellant brought two suits for possession of certain plots of land and damages. Notice was duly served on the defendant-respondent for his appearance on the 25th April 1921. The defendant did not appear and the Munsif ordered that both cases were to proceed ex parte. Owing to the necessity, however, of a plan being prepared no ex parte decree was given on that date and the cases were adjourned to the 30th May and further adjourned on that date to the 28th of June. On that date the defendant appeared and asked to be heard in answer to the suit under O. IX, r. 7. Evidence was taken as to whether he had good cause for his previous non-appearance and his application was rejected on the 4th July. On the 9th July the Court decreed both suits ex parte in favour of the plaintiff. Against these decrees the defendant-respondent brought an appeal before the third Additional District Judge of Lucknow. He was of the opinion, that the defendant had absolutely failed to assign good cause for his previous non-appearance when he applied to the Munsif under O. IX, r. 7, but he held, on the authority of the ruling Bhagwati Prasad Tewari v. Muhammad Shibli (1), reported in Volume 20 of the Allahabad Law Journal, page 270, that whenever a defendant applied to be heard in a suit the hearing of which had been adjourned ex parte his application was bound to be allowed irrespective of whether he showed good cause for his previous non-appearance or not. The Additional Judge has expressed the opinion that the ruling ignored the provisions of O. IX, r. 7, but must nevertheless be followed. He was in error in his interpretation of the ruling. The facts in the ruling as reported in the Allahabad Law Journal are, as usual in that Journal, not fully set forth, but it is clear from the judgment of the Allahabad High Court that the Judges held in that case the defendant to have shown good cause. They say "his application to be heard ought to have been granted." This does not mean that it ought to have been granted merely because he made it, but implies that it ought to have been granted on the merits. Apparently, in that case the lower Court had rejected his application in ignorance of the fact that he had a right to make it under O. IX, r. 7. It is clear, therefore, that the decision appealed against was incorrect.

FARZAND ALI V. EKADASHI.

Another ground on which the remand order is impugned is that the lower Appellate Court could not entertain any objection to the decree of the First Court on the mere ground that it was heard ex parte. There is, however, strong authority to the contrary. In the Full Bench case Sadhu Krishna Ayyar v. Kuppan Ayyangar (2) it was held, after full discussion of the previous rulings of the Calcutta and other High Courts, that when a suit is decided ex parte and the Appellate Court to which an appeal from the decree is preferred has jurisdiction to reverse the decree of the lower Court on the ground that such Court was wrong in proceeding to decide the case ex parte and has also power to remand the suit for re-hearing. The only ground on which it appears to me that the contrary view could be based would be on the principle that a section dealing with a particular case should override one dealing with a general case—generalibus specialia derogant. There is, however, no authority for the application of this maxim to the interpretation of statutes unless the two sections are repugnant. The general rule is that, where an Act adds a remedy in respect of anything it is to be construed as cumulative provided that there is nothing else in the Act to suggest the contrary.

It has also been urged that the lower Appellate Court in any case had no right to remand the case as the only power of remand is one given under O. XII, r. 23. There appears to be some authority for holding that a District Judge has no power of remand except under this provision of law or under section 151, Civil Procedure Code, by exercise of his inherent power. I refer to cases Gokul Prasad-Har Prasad v. Ram Kumar (3) and Kulsoomunissa v. Ram Prashad (4). These rulings, however, appear to have ignored certain provisions of the Code and not to have considered the previous Full Bench case already mentioned by me. The two rulings relied upon were not by a Full Bench and one of the two Judges in each case was the same. Section 107 of the Code confers on every Appellate Court a general power of remand subject to conditions and limitations imposed. It is clear that section 100, sub-section (2), of the Code of Civil Procedure by allowing an appeal against an ex parte decree must, if interpreted as I have shown it ought to be interpreted, to allow an appeal from such a decree merely on the ground that it has been passed ex parte, be deemed to show an intention on the part of the Legislature that there should be an order of remand as no other procedure would meet the case. Again, section 105, sub-section (2), of the Code speaks of an order of remand from which an appeal lies. The Code must, therefore, have contemplated an order of remand from which an appeal does not lie. As an appeal lies from an order of remand under O. XII, r. 23, the Code clearly contemplates an order of remand passed under

(3) 64 Ind. Cas. 878; 19 A. L. J. 971; 44 A. 176; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 254.

(1) 66 Ind. Cas. 892; 20 A. L. J. 270; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 110.
(2) 30 M. 54; 1 M. L. T. 268; 16 M. L. J. 479 (F. B.).

(4) 67 Ind. Cas. 713; 20 A. L. J. 321; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 226; 44 A. 492; 4 U. P. L. R. (A) 168.

FARZAND ALI V. EKADASHI.

Some other section. Again, the same section 105, in sub-section (1) allows any error, defect or irregularity in an order affecting the decision of a case to be set forth as a ground of objection in the memorandum of appeal. Now, it is obvious that there may be an error, defect or irregularity at the very commencement of the trial by the Court of hearing which would affect the whole decision of the case and that it may be necessary in order to secure proper re-hearing of the case to remand it. The Code of Civil Procedure must, therefore, be held to permit a remand by an Appellate Court not only in the particular case set forth in O. XLI, r. 23 but also in all cases where there has been any error, defect or irregularity which has vitiated the whole decision of the case, provided that procedure under O. XLI, rr. 24 and 25 does not meet the case. In the present case, therefore, I do not hold that the order of remand by the lower Appellate Court was without jurisdiction, but I hold that it was wrong on its merits owing to a wrong view being taken by the lower Appellate Court of the law.

It is urged, however, by the respondent's Counsel that in these appeals the appellant is not appealing from the judgment of the lower Appellate Court but only against its order of remand and it is maintained that under O. XLIII, r. 1 (m), of the Code no appeal will lie against an order of remand unless that order of remand be passed under O. XLI, r. 23. On the other hand, it is urged by the appellant's Counsel the order of remand of the lower Appellate Court should be regarded as an order passed under O. XLI, r. 23. He has relied on the ruling Gokul Prasad-Har Prasad v. Ram Kumar (3), as well as the other ruling referred to above reported as Kulsoonnunmissa v. Ram Prashad (4). In the former of these rulings it is stated that the policy of the Allahabad High Court has always been to allow as wide a meaning as is reasonably possible to O. XLI, r. 23. In the second ruling one of the Judges has gone so far as to state that "in the case of an order of remand it must be presumed, unless the contrary is shown at the time when it is made, to be made under O. XLI, r. 23." Now, the former ruling as reported in the Allahabad Law Journal does not give the facts of the case. They are, however, known to me. The real facts of the case were that the Court of hearing had, after fixing issues, sent the whole case to be decided by a Commissioner appointed to examine accounts and not merely referred to the Commissioner certain facts to be discovered from the accounts. An order of remand in such a case can hardly be deemed to be an order of remand under O. XLI, r. 23. In my view, it is undesirable to give a wider meaning to the provisions of O. XLI, r. 23 than the language of the section will reasonably justify merely in order to get over real or imaginary difficulties in the Code. If the section is approached without bias its meaning must be clear. An order of remand cannot be made under this rule unless the case has been disposed of without entering into the full merits by reason of a decision on law or fact which has prevented the case being tried to the end.

There can, in my opinion, be no question that the order of remand impugned in the present case was not passed by the lower Appellate Court under O. XLI, r. 23. It may be argued, however, that, under section 151 of the Code, this Court has inherent power to allow the appeal against the order of remand notwithstanding that no right of appeal is given by the Code, if this is necessary in the interests of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court; section 151 provides that nothing in the Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court. It is, therefore, urged that section 105 (1) of the Code, read with O. XLIII, r. 1 (m), can be ignored by this Court under section 151. But section 151 of the Code can never be invoked in any case unless a Court has jurisdiction to entertain the case. It cannot be invoked to give the Court jurisdiction, if it does not possess it otherwise. It would not appear necessary to cite any authority in support of this proposition. It is not, however, necessary to invoke section 151 as I am of the opinion that, under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, this Court has power to deal with the case in revision. There is abundant authority for holding that where no appeal lies an appeal to the High Court may be treated as an application for revision. It is true that in Ramji Das v. Bhagwan Das (5) it was held by two Judges of the Allahabad High Court that it cannot do so in a case like this, as a Court is not entitled indirectly to allow an appeal which is not given by the Court by treating the matter as one in revision. But neither anything in the Code nor any authority was cited in support of such a view and I am not prepared to follow it. It may be argued that section 115 only refers to a case which has been decided and this will not include a suit the hearing of which has been remanded on appeal. But section 115 is intended merely to rule out revision of interlocutory orders. An order of remand is not an interlocutory order as it entirely disposes of the case, so far as the Court passes it, for the time being. The case can only come up again on a further appeal. It is true that the rulings of the Allahabad High Court reported as Gokul Prasad-Har Prasad v. Ram Kumar (3) and Kulsoomunnissa v. Ram Prashad (4), which I have criticised above, ignore the use of section 115 in such a case but they do not appear to have considered the question of the applicability of that section.

HABIB GUL v. SHAHDAD KHAN.

Consequently, holding that the order of remand by the lower Appellate Court was not justified, I set aside that order of remand in revision and direct the lower Appellate Court to hear the appeal on its merits. That appeal raises two points first, whether the Court of first hearing was justified in hearing the case ex parte, and, secondly, whether, if so, there was evidence on the record to prove the plaintiff's claim. The costs of this appeal will abide the result.

W. C. A.

Order set aside.

(5) 43 Ind. Cas. 180.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FURTHER CIVIL APPEAL NO. 54 OF 1922.

April 20, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pipon, J. C.

HABIB GUL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

SHAHDAD KHAN AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), s. 12 (a), as amended by N.-W. F. P. Regulation (II of 1906) — "By right of blood relationship," "in order of succession," meaning of—Persons entitled to pre-empt — Admissions—Admission of Counsel on point of law, whether binding on party.

The law of pre-emption obtaining in the North-West Frontier Province is one which deprives a person claiming to succeed by Will or other form of artificially regulated succession from putting forward pre-emption rights under section 12 (a) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act as amended by the North-West Frontier Province Regulation, II of 1906, but it includes all cases where the pre-emptor would be entitled to succeed to the property sold by right of blood relationship, whether such relationship is with the vendor himself, or with the natural heirs of the vendor. [p. 598, cols. 1 & 2.]

Clause (a) of section 12 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act assumes by its concluding words "in order of succession", that any person who would be entitled ultimately to inherit, however remote such inheritance might be, and however many preferential heirs might be in existence, has a right of pre-emption under the clause. [p. 598, col. 1.]

A Counsel cannot bind his client by an admission made purely on a point of law. [p. 596, col. 1.]

Further appeal from the judgment and decree passed by the Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 25th March 1922, whereby a decree passed by the Sub-Judge, Mardan, dated the 15th December 1921 was reversed.

Mr. Saaduddin Khan, K. S., for the Appellant.

Mr. Diwan Chand, R. S., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are these. The plaintiff Shahdad Khan sued to pre-empt an area of 196 kanals 2 marlas situated in the village of Kurogh in the Mardan Tahsil which had been sold on the 4th of January 1920 by Shamshad Khan and his wife, Musammat Shamso Jan, to Habibgul. Shamshad Khan was described as the owner of 1 kanal 2 marlas and Musammat Shamso Jan as the owner of 19 kanals 15 marlas which formed the subject of the sale. The title of Musammat Shamso

HABIB GUL v. SHAHDAD KHAN.

Jan had been acquired by gift from her husband Shamshad Khan. The suit was instituted on the 4th of January 1921. On the 27th of January 1921 the vendee Habibgul executed a sale-deed re-transferring the land to Firdaus Khan, the son of the vendors, Shamshad Khan and Musammat Shamso Jan. Shahdad Khan claimed to pre-empt under section 12 (a) of Act II of 1905 as being a person who, but for the sale, would be entitled to inherit the property. The suit was resisted on the ground that the re-sale to Firdaus Khan extinguished the right of the plaintiff to pre-empt, Firdaus Khan being a pre-emptor with a superior right. The Trial Court accepted this plea and dismissed the suit. On appeal by the plaintiff the Divisional Judge held that the sale to Firdaus Khan had been made subsequent to the institution of the suit, that it was not a genuine sale for real consideration, and that possession of the subject-matter had not been delivered, and that, therefore, it could not adversely affect the rights of the plaintiff to pre-empt. He accordingly decreed the suit. The appeal was resisted principally by Firdaus Khan alleging that his sale extinguished the plaintiff's right to pre-empt, and he was represented by Counsel. The first vendee, Habibgul, however, also made an appearance, though he was not represented by Counsel. During the hearing of the appeal a further plea was set up by Firdaus Khan which had not been taken in the Trial Court, viz., that, as regards the bulk of the land in suit, the plaintiff was not a person who but for the sale would have been entitled to inherit within the meaning of section 12 (a) of Act II of 1905 (as amended for the North-West Frontier Province), the principal vendor being Musammat Shamso Jan with whom the plaintiff was not connected by blood relationship. The plaintiff, before the Divisional Judge, resisted this plea partly on the ground that Musammat Shamso Jan had only acquired her title as owner by a purely benami transaction and that her husband Shamshad was the real vendor. The Divisional Judge overruled this contention on the ground that there was nothing on the record to establish the allegation that the gift by Shamshad to Musammat Shamso Jan was benami. He found, however, that Shamshad was, nevertheless, a person entitled to inherit from Musammat Shamso Jan as her next heir would be Firdaus Khan, and that plaintiff would succeed by blood relationship to Firdaus in the event of his decease. He remarked "constructively, therefore, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed to Musammat Shamso Jan by right of blood relationship through the woman's son." A further appeal has been lodged in this Court by the original vendee, Habibgul, and the sole contention set up by him on this appeal is that the plaintiff has no right to pre-empt the sale by Musammat Shamso Jan, as he is not an heir to Musammat Shamso Jan by blood relationship within the meaning of section 12 (a) of Act II of 1905 as amended for the North-West Frontier Province.

The present appeal is resisted by the plaintiff-respondent mainly on three grounds:—

1. That the contention now raised by the appellant is not one which was ever set up in the Trial Court, and that it cannot be set up at the present stage of the proceedings.

2. That the gift by Shamshad Khan to Musammat Shamso Jan was a benami transaction, and that the plaintiff-respondent is entitled to allege, and to prove this on the present appeal in view of the fact that he was given no opportunity of doing so in the First Court when the vendee did not make the ownership of Musammat Shamso Jan a ground for attacking his rights of pre-emption.

3. That in any case the finding of the Divisional Judge is correct that the plaintiff is a person who would ultimately inherit from Musammat Shamso Jan but for the sale and in the event of her decease.

As regards the first of these three points, it is contended by the learned Counsel for the appellant that the suit was resisted from the outset on the ground that the plaintiff had no right to pre-empt on the ground of being a collateral. It is admitted that this plea was not specifically raised by the vendee, Habibgul, in his written statement, but it is urged that this ground was actually taken by Shamshad Khan and Musammat Shamso Jan, and that the vendee, as a defendant, was entitled to use a plea set up by his co-defendants. I do not regard this argument very seriously, as the plea set up by Shamshad and Musammat Shamso Jan did not really relate to this question at all. It is true that they stated in their pleas that the plaintiff was not their collateral, but this amounted to nothing more than a demand that plaintiff should prove his relationship, and it is perfectly clear that what they contested was his relationship with Shamshad. They cannot be considered as having, in any way, implied that, if the plaintiff succeeded in proving that he was a collateral of Shamshad, he was nevertheless not entitled to pre-empt because he was not a collateral by blood relationship with Shamshad's wife. I can only regard the contention now set up by the appellant as one which was never taken in the Trial Court. It has, further, been noticed by the Divisional Judge, and this point is emphasized by the learned Counsel for the respondent, that the present appellant's Counsel in the Trial Court admitted in his written arguments that, unless the validity of the re-sale to Firdaus could be established, the suit for pre-emption must succeed. I am not prepared, however, to rule that this point cannot be taken as a ground for further appeal. There would be no legal bar to such a point of law being raised either on first or on second appeal, especially when it is one which goes to the whole root of the plaintiff's right to sue. Again, there is ample authority for the view that a Counsel cannot bind his client by an admission made purely on a point of law. I consider, therefore, that I have to deal with the contention now set up on its merits.

HABIB GUL v. SHAHDAD KHAN.

There is some force in the objection made on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent that he was never called upon in the First Court to meet a ground of attack based upon the absence of blood relationship between the plaintiff and Musammat Shamso Jan and that, therefore, he was precluded from raising the plea, which he otherwise would have raised, that Musammat Shamso Jan was a benami donee and that Shamshad must be regarded as the sole vendor. This question, however, does not seem to me very material to the decision of the case. In the first place, it would be difficult, if not impossible, for the plaintiff to prove that the transaction was benami. The plaintiff itself fully admits the ownership of Musammat Shamso Jan, and recites in detail the extent of her ownership as compared with that of her husband, and alludes to her as one of the actual vendors. Apart from this, the case really turns upon the far more important question of the interpretation of section 12 (a) of Act II of 1905 and its applicability to the present facts and, as I shall show below, I consider that the appeal must, in any case, fail upon this point alone.

I now turn to the really important point for decision in this case, the question as to whether, when a woman has acquired a title in land by gift from her husband and has sold her right to an outsider, a collateral of her husband can pre-empt on the ground that he is a person who would be entitled to inherit the property but for the sale, by right of blood relationship. The learned Counsel for the appellant argues that the wording of section 12 (a), as amended for the North-West Frontier Province by Regulation II of 1906, is perfectly clear, and he would interpret it as meaning that the only person who can claim to pre-empt under this clause is one who would inherit the property by right of his blood relationship with the vendor. He contends indeed that the addition of the words "by right of blood relationship", by Regulation II of 1906 was made with the specific purpose of excluding a pre-emption claim, such as that now in question, and of leaving no doubt that the pre-emptor in the case of land owned by a female must be collaterals of the female herself and not of her husband. He further, supports his argument by a consideration of Explanation (2) to section 12 of Act II of 1905 and of the Explanation to section 15 of Act I of 1913 which, in the Punjab, has replaced section 12 of Act II of 1905. He challenges the admissibility of the Divisional Judge's ruling that plaintiff is "constructively" entitled to succeed to Musammat Shamso Jan by right of blood relationship. To consider first the bearing of Explanation (2) to section 12 upon the present case, it is argued by the learned Counsel for the respondent that the word "succeeded" in that Explanation covers also the acquisition of title by gift. The Explanation runs that "in the case of sale by a female of property to which she has succeeded through her husband, son, brother or father, the word 'agnates' in this section shall mean the agnates of the person through whom she has so succeeded." The commentary upon this Explanation in Shadi Lal's Pre-emption Act states that "the explanation applies only if the female has got the property by inheritance and has no application to the case of a female getting the property in any other way." I am somewhat doubtful of the correctness of this portion of the Commentary in view of the remarks made in Ellis's Commentary on Act I of 1013. By the latter Act Explanation (2) to section 12 of Act II of 1905 was amended and now runs as follows: "In the case of sale by a female of land or property to which she has succeeded on a life-tenure through her husband, son, brother, or father, the word 'agnates' in this section shall mean the agnates of the person through whom she has so succeeded." Mr. Ellis remarks that where a female has obtained a full estate from her husband or son, the persons entitled to pre-empt are not their agnates, as was the case under the Act of 1905, but those of her father and brother who are her own agnates as well if on her death they would be entitled to succeed. In alluding to a woman obtaining a full estate from her husband or son, the learned Commentator would appear to be referring to the case where she acquired the full estate by gift or sale as well as by inheritance, and his view appears to be that, under Act II of 1905, it would, in all cases where she had obtained an estate of any kind, be the agnates of her husband, son, brother or father who would have been entitled to pre-empt and not her own agnates. It appears to me, however, that it is not absolutely material to the decision of the present case which of these two conflicting views is correct. It think it has been overlooked that the explanations in both cases refer to pre-emptive rights under clause (b) of section 12 and clause (b) of section 15, and not to the rights derived from clause (a). Clause (a) does not contain the word "agnates" at all. I consider that it is necessary to interpret clause (a) quite independently of the explanations and to construe it strictly both by its own wording and by the intention of the Legislature in using the words which are actually used. The contention of the appellant that the object of Regulation II of 1906 in adding the words "by right of blood relationship" was to exclude pre-emption suits such as that with which we are now dealing, is certainly an incorrect one. I have examined the correspondence which led to the introduction of this amendment. I find that the sole ground on which this amendment was introduced was to avoid the possibility of Courts having, in pre-emption suits, to adjudicate upon the validity of Wills. It was thought that if section 12 (a) of Act II of 1905 were introduced into the North-West Frontier Province without amendment, there might be innumerable cases in which persons would set up the claim that they were entitled under a Will to inherit the property and would base suits for pre-emption upon contested Wills: As against this the learned Counsel for the appellant points out that a person to whom a bequest has been made under a Will, cannot claim, during the testator's lifetime, to be a person entitled to inherit. This view may be perfectly correct, but the fact remains that it was the possibility of persons setting up titles under a Will and that possibility alone which led to the introduction of Regulation II of 1906 and the addition of the words "by right of blood relationship." Now, the argument of the learned Counsel for the appellant appears to me to contain one unwarranted assumption. It proceeds on the supposition that we must read the section as if it contained the words "by right of blood relationship to the vendor." The words "to the vendor" do not appear in the section and their omission appears to me to be vital. It must be remembered, as I have already pointed out, that we are dealing with section 12 (a) alone and not with any question of the interpretation of the word "agnates" as used in section 12 (b). What we have to consider is (1) whether the pre-emptor would be entitled to inherit at all, and (2) whether his title to inherit would be derived from blood relationship and not from any extraneous cause, such as a legacy or other form of artificially acquired right. A collateral of the husband of Musammât Shamsó Jan would certainly be entitled ultimately to inherit. The section says nothing about immediate inheritance. On the contrary, it assumes by the concluding words "in order of succession," that any person who would be entitled ultimately to inherit, however remote such inheritance might be and however many preferential heirs might be in existence, has a right of pre-emption under this clause. It is clear that the immediate heir of Musammatt Shamso Jan is her son, Firdaus Khan, and it is also clear that Shahdad Khan is an ultimate heir of Firdaus Khan. The only question, therefore, is whether Shahdad Khan fulfils the second condition, viz., that he is entitled to inherit the property by right of blood relationship. I fail to see how it can be argued that his title to succeed rests upon anything except blood relationship. Firdaus Khan would succeed to Musammatt Shamso Jan solely by right of blood relationship to her. Shahdad Khan would succeed again to Firdaus Khan solely by right of his blood relationship to him. In other words, it is blood relationship and that consideration alone which governs the right of Shahdad Khan to succeed ultimately to the estate. It seems to me unnecessary to consider the position which would arise if Firdaus Khan were not in existence, or if he pre-deceased Musammatt Shamso Jan. I see no reason to deal with a hypothetical case, but it may be remarked that there is a consensus of authority for the view that if Musammatt Shamso Jan died without direct heirs, the estate would revert to the collaterals of her husband and not those of herself. However this may be, as the parties stand at present, Shahdad is clearly an heir entitled ultimately to succeed and an heir who derives his title from blood relationship. I have already said that I can see nothing in the wording of the section to warrant the assumption that we must add the words "to the vendor" after the words "by right of blood relationship." If the Legislature had intended to add those words, it would have added them. To make the position clear, I consider that the law obtaining in the North-West Frontier Province is one which deprives a person claiming to succeed by Will or other form of artificially regulated succession from putting forward pre-emption rights under section 12 (a) of Act II of 1905, but that it includes all cases where the pre-emptor would be entitled to succeed to the property by right of blood relationship, whether such relationship is with the vendor herself or with the natural heirs of the vendor.

HABIB GUL, v. SHAHDAD KHAN.

JAGANNATH SAO V. DEBI PRASAD.

On the above view, I maintain the finding of the Divisional Judge that the plaintiff in the present case has a right of pre-emption and is entitled to a decree. I, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER NO. 127 OF 1922.

May 31, 1923.

Present.—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

JAGANNATH SAO AND OTHERS—
APPELLANTS

versus

DEBI PRASAD DHANDHANIA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 30—Decree directing sale of property on failure of payment—Attachment, whether necessary before sale.

The procedure laid down in O. XXI, r. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code is only applicable in the case of a decree for the payment of money, that is to say, where there is no decree which affects any specific immoveable property. In such a case before any specific immoveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor can be the subject of sale in satisfaction of the decree, it is necessary that the property should first be attached. [p. 599, col. 2.]

Where, however, a decree itself gives effect to a charge on specific immoveable property and directs the property to be sold in the event of the decretal amount not being paid, the decree is in fact something more than a decree for the payment of money and it is altogether unnecessary that the procedure laid down in O. XXI, r. 30, of the Civil Procedure Code should be carried out before the property is sold. [p. 599, col. 2.]

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 7th April 1922.

Mr. Narendranath Sen, for the Appellants.

JAGANNATH SAO v. DESI PRASAD.

Messrs. Rai Guru Saran Prasad and Jadubans Sahai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This is an appeal on behalf of the judgment-debtors from an order of the Subordinate Judge passed in execution dismissing the objection of the judgment-debtors and ordering execution to proceed.

It appears that the decree-holders obtained against the judgment-debtors a decree for the sum of Rs. 29,925. That decree which was passed on the 14th June 1919 was the result of a compromise between the parties to the suit. The suit was decreed in terms of the compromise. It provided that a decree should be passed in favour of the plaintiff for the sum of Rs. 25,925 and that the defendants should pay that sum together with interest and costs by certain instalments which were set out at the end of the decree. If the defendants should fail to pay the whole or portion of any of the instalments then the plaintiff should have the right to realise the entire decretal amount of principal and costs together with interest at 8 annas per cent. per month until realization. Certain properties were also given as security for the due fulfilment of the terms of the decree, and by clause (c) of the decree it was provided that should these defendants fail to pay the decretal amount payable by instalments, the plaintiffs shall have the right to take out execution of the decree, to get the charged property sold by auction, and realise the decretal amount principal with interest and costs to which these defendants shall have no objection. Those are the principal terms of the compromise as embodied in the decree. Now default was made in the payment of the instalments and thereupon the decree-holders applied for execution of the decree on the 21st September 1921 claiming the balance still due, one instalment only having been paid, and a sale of the property charged by the terms of the decree as security for the fulfilment of those terms. The judgment-debtors filed an objection to execution and contended that the properties charged under the decree could not be sold in execution unless they were first attached as provided in O. XXI, r. 30. That rule provides that "Every decree for the payment of money, including a decree for the payment of money as the alternative to some other relief, may be executed by the detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor or by the attachment and sale of his property or by both." The learned Subordinate Judge who heard the objection came to the conclusion that there was no necessity in the present case, having regard to the terms of the decree which provided specifically for the sale of these properties in the event of default in payment of the instalments to attach the properties before sale but that the decree would be executed by a sale of the properties as provided therein. From that decision this appeal has been preferred.

It seems to me that in a case of this sort where the decree gives effect to a charge on the property and orders the property to be sold in the event of the instalments not being paid, it is altogether unnecessary that the procedure mentioned in O. XXI, r. 30, should be carried out. That procedure is only applicable in the case of a decree for the payment of money, that is to say, cases in which there is no decree which affects any specific immoveable property. In such cases, before any specific immoveable property belonging to the judgment-debtor can be the subject of sale in satisfaction of the decree, it is necessary that the property should first be attached. In the present case, however, the decree itself provides for the sale of this very property in the event of the instalments not being paid and the decree is in fact something more than a decree for the payment of money. It is not only a decree directing the payment of money but it is a decree directing that in the event on non-payment certain property belonging to the judgment-debtor shall be sold. The form of the decree is very similar to that in a mortgage-decree. It is clear that in mortgage-decrees it is not necessary to attach the property and the reason for that is that the form of the decree in a mortgage-suit itself directs that the property shall be sold. So here the form of this decree which created a charge upon the property directed that the property in question should be sold in a certain event which has happened. In my opinion O. XXI, r. 30, has no application to a suit like the present, and the decision of the learned

DHUMI V. MUHAMMAD SAJJAD ALI KHAN.

Subordinate Judge was right.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No.

188 OF 1923.

May 16, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

DHUMI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

Nawab MUHAMMAD SAJJAD ALI

KHAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XL, r. 1—Declaratory suit—Receiver, appointment of—Agricultural land—Appointment of Receiver to collect rent—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

The question that a Court has to consider in dealing with an application for the appointment of a Receiver is whether, in the circumstances of the case, the appointment of a Receiver is just and convenient, the object merely being to preserve the property. [p. 601, col. 1.]

A Court is not debarred from appointing a Receiver of property forming the subject-matter of a declaratory suit in which possession of the property is not to be awarded to one party or the other. [p. 601, col. 1.]

Dan Prasad v. Gopi Kishen, 22 Ind. Cas. 59; 36 A. 19; 11 A. L. J. 973, Amarnath v. Tehal Kaur, 67 Ind. Cas. 383; 4 U. P. L. R. (L) 73; (1922) A. I. R. (L) 444, relied on.

A Civil Court has jurisdiction to appoint a Receiver to collect the rents of agricultural land. [p. 601, col. 2.]

Raghubir Singh-Jaswant Singh v. Narinjan Singh, 72 Ind. Cas. 569; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 48, distinguished.

Miscellaneous first appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Delhi, dated the 4th January 1923, appointing the Collector of Delhi an ad interim Receiver for the collection of the rents of the property in suit.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from an order passed by Bhagat Jagannath, M. A., Subordinate Judge of Delhi, on the 4th of January 1923, holding that the Collector of Delhi be appointed an ad interim Receiver for the collection of rents of the property which is the subject-matter of controversy between the parties in this case. The suit out of which this appeal has arisen was instituted by 199 persons, all residents of village Khor Punjab in the Delhi Province, and was one for a declaration that they and defendants Nos. 15, 18 and 19 were owners in possession of the land in the village and that defendants Nos. 1 to 4 had no rights therein. It appears that in the Mutiny of 1857 the whole of this village was confiscated by Government on account of the rebellious conduct of the then proprietors and subsequently released in favour of one Nawab Ahmad Ali Khan Mandal of Karnal, ancestor of defendants Nos. 1 to 4, as its sole proprietor. Since then the plaintiffs have continued to be recorded in the Revenue paper as tenants-at-will and the predecessors-in-title of defendants Nos. 1 to 4 as proprietors. Rent was fixed at Rs. 14,000 per annum and it is alleged that it regularly used to be realised from the plaintiffs till about three years before the institution of the suit. The defendants have put in a large number of documents showing that during the last 66 years they have brought several suits for rent and ejectment and that they have always been decreed. No objection has ever been taken by the plaintiffs to the proprietary rights of the defendants, and it has always been taken for granted that they have been holding the land merely as tenants under the defendants-proprietors. After the institution of this suit the defendants-proprietors made an application to the Court below that as there was no likelihood of the case being decided at an early date and that as the rents were running into arrears, it was not only just and convenient but necessary that a Receiver should be appointed for their collection so that in the event of the defendants ultimately succeeding in the case they may not be put to any unnecessary loss on account of the action of the plaintiffs. It was pointed out that a sum of about Rs. 36,000 was already due and that if the case dragged on for another three years, which in all probability it would, a further sum of about Rs. 40,000 would become due which would be impossible to realise from the plaintiffs who were not possessed of any independent property of their own. The learned Subordinate Judge gave effect to this prayer and appointed the Collector of Delhi an ad interim Receiver to realise rents and to deposit them in the Government Treasury pending the order of a competent Court as to payment thereof. Against this order the plaintiffs have preferred an appeal to this Court through Bakhshi Tek Chand, and I have heard Mr. Shamair Chand on behalf of the respondents.

DHUMI V. MOHAMMAD SAJJAD ALI KHAN.

Three contentions have been raised by Bakhshi Tek Chand in this appeal, firstly, it is contended that as the suit brought by his clients was one for a mere declaration, the Court should not have appointed a Receiver of the property, the possession of which could not be awarded to one party or the other by the Court in which the suit was pending. It should, however, be remembered that by appointing a Receiver the Court did not intend to determine any legal rights in the property but merely intended to preserve the rents of the property in custodia legis until the legal title thereto could be established by one party or the other. No authority has been cited in support of the proposition that the powers of a Court to appoint a Receiver are limited to suits of a possessory nature only, and having regard to the fact that the object of the appointment of a Receiver is to protect the property and to maintain its status quo ante. I do not think that there is any force in the objection that the appointment is invalid merely because the suit in which the appointment was made was one for a mere declaration. In the case of Dan Prasad v. Gopi Kishen (1) it was laid down that a Court had a right to appoint a Receiver where it appeared to it to be just and convenient to do so, and that the Court could make such an order suo motu. The same rule was laid down in a recent case decided by a Bench of this Court, Amarnath v. Tehal Kaur (2) where it was held that a Court was not debarred from appointing a Receiver of property forming the subject matter of a declaratory suit, in which possession of the property was not to be awarded to one party or the other, and that the object of the appointment of a Receiver was to preserve the property in its actual condition pending the disposal of the suit between the parties. I do not see any force in this contention and I consequently overrule it.

Next, it is contended that the institution of the suit should not be allowed to result in improving the position of the defendants. It is pointed out that if the suit had not been instituted the defendants would have had to bring suits against the plaintiffs for the recovery of the rents due and to execute the decrees for the realisation of their decretal amounts, and it is urged with some show of reason that they should not be relieved from the necessity of instituting suits and of proving their claims merely because the plaintiffs have instituted a suit against them for the determination of their legal rights in the property. The argument is plausible enough, but it entirely loses sight of the fact that by the institution of this suit the position of the defendants, instead of being in any way bettered as contended by the plaintiffs, has been made much worse. If they were now to bring suits for the recovery of the rents due they would be met with an objection that their rights in the property itself, of which the rent was being claimed, had not yet been adjudicated upon and that they were consequently not entitled to have their claims decreed. The suits would in all probability be stayed and by the time that the main suit instituted by the plaintiffs against the defendants was decided, a large amount of rent would become overdue which it would be very difficult to recover. By the appointment of a Receiver the Court has tried to avoid all these difficulties and has, in my opinion, exercised its discretion in a most sound and judicial manner.

Lastly, it is contended that a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a Receiver over agricultural lands, the control of which rests entirely in the hands of a Revenue Court. I do not see any force in this objection. If this objection were to prevail, the result would be that a Civil Court would be debarred from exercising all jurisdiction in the matter of appointment of a Receiver even in cases where the corpus of the property in dispute consists of house property and agricultural lands. The

(1) 22 Ind. Cas. 59; 36 A. 19; 11 A. L. J. 973.

(2) 67 Ind. Cas. 383; 4 U. P. L. R. (L) 731 (1922)
A. I. R. (L) 444.

CHHUTTAN v. JWALA PRASAD.

question that the Courts have to consider in dealing with applications under O. XI, r. 1, is whether, in the circumstances of the case, the appointment of a Receiver is just and convenient, the object merely being to preserve the property, and it is nowhere provided that where both house and agricultural properties are in dispute, a Receiver with regard to the house property should be appointed by a Civil Court and with regard to the agricultural property by a Revenue Court. Moreover, it should be observed that in the present case a Receiver has not been appointed to take possession of the agricultural lands or to manage them but merely for the purpose of the collection of rents relating to that property. The case of Raghubir Singh-Jaswant Singh v. Narinjan Singh (3), cited by Bakhshi Tek Chand in support of his contention, is not exactly in point. In that case the lower Court appointed a Receiver in respect of the whole of the property in dispute without any sufficient grounds being disclosed for the appointment of a Receiver. It was held by the High Court that the Court should not appoint a Receiver except upon proof by the plaintiff that prima facie he has a very excellent chance of succeeding and that the property in possession of the defendant was in danger of being wasted and destroyed. The defendant in that case was in possession as a manager of a joint Hindu family and the Court very rightly held that a manager should not be ousted from possession unless a very strong case for his ouster was made out. Incidentally, the question of the Court's jurisdiction over the apportionment of the produce of agricultural lands also came up and it was observed by the learned Judge in the course of his judgment that in cases where the Court has no jurisdiction over the apportionment of the produce, the appointment of a Receiver for the agricultural lands was still less justifiable than that regarding the other property. I do not think that the facts of the two cases are in any way similar and I overrule the objection.

Further, it should be observed that the lower Court, in the exercise of its discretion after considering all the facts and evidence, has come to a conclusion that the appointment of a Receiver with regard to the collection of rents in this case was necessary. It is now for the appellants to show that the Court exercised its discretion improperly. It has been repeatedly held that a Court of Appeal will not, except in an extreme case, disturb an order as to the appointment of a Receiver by a Court below vide Jibanessa Khatun v. Majid-unnessa Khatun (4), Raja Ram v. Sheorani Kuer (5), Sant Ram v. Ram Chana (6), Kadir Bakhsh v. Ghulam Mohammad (7), Bai Parvati v. Mansukh Jetha (8) and Amarnath v. Tehal Kaur (2). In my opinion this was pre-eminently a fit case in which a Receiver ought to have been appointed and no sufficient ground has been made out to interfere with the discretion which has been exercised by the Court below.

I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K. & N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) 18 Ind. Cas. 398; 17 C. W. N. 581.

(5) 7 Ind. Cas. 344.

(6) 6 Ind. Cas. 659; 53 P. W. R. 1910; 36 P. R. 1910; 72 P. L. R. 1910.

(7) 55 Ind. Cas. 50; 2 U. P. L. R. (L.) 56; 30 P. W. R. 1920.

(8) 59 Ind. Cas. 361; 22 Bom. L. R. 1097; 44 B. 972.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 151
OF 1922.

April 5, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels,
Sheikh CHHUTTAN AND ANOTHER—
OBJECTORS—APPELLANTS
versus

JWALA PRASAD—DECREE-HOLDER—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 144—Property attached in execution—Suit by third party regarding title to property—Property handed to Receiver in second suit—Second suit, dismissal of—Application under s. 144 by decree-holder in first suit, whether maintainable.

(3) 72 Ind. Cas. 569; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 48.

CHHUTTAN V. JWALA PRASAD.

If a decree-holder in execution of his decree attaches certain property, but on a third party bringing a suit to establish his title to that property, the property is placed in charge of a Receiver in proceedings in the second suit; it is not competent to the decree-holder in the first suit, on failure of the second suit, to claim the recovery of the property from the Receiver, by an application under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, in the execution proceedings in the first suit.

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Bareilly, dated the 13th of May, 1922.

Mr. U. S. Bajpai, for the Appellants.

Mr. N. P. Asihana, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is brought against an order which purports to be made under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, in Suit No. 789 of 1907 filed by the respondent, Jwala Prasad, against Sewa Singh and certain other defendants.

In that suit Jwala Prasad caused the produce of 37 plots to be attached. The present appellant, Sheikh Chhuttan, asked that the sale of the crops might be stayed on account of a declaratory suit which he was filing. He did file such a suit against Jwala Prasad and certain third parties on 13th April 1920 for a declaration that the crops in dispute were not liable to sale under Jwala Prasad's decree but were the property of tenants cultivating from him on a batai rent so that he, Sheikh Chhuttan, was entitled to half the crops. Sheikh Chhuttan's suit was decreed by the Court of first instance. While this suit was pending an application was made by him to have the crops made over to a sipurdar and they were made over to two persons, Khumani, who was a servant of Sheikh Chhuttan, and one Sewa Singh. In some way which is not explained the crops were subsequently entrusted to Sheikh Chhuttan's son, the second appellant, Kalim-ud-din. After Sheikh Chhuttan's suit was decreed Kalim-ud-din made over half the crops to his father and the other half to the tenants. This was about October 1920. On 28th July 1921 Sheikh Chhuttan's suit was dismissed in appeal.

Jwala Prasad's application for execution of his decree had remained pending from 28th February 1920. Thereupon on 2nd May 1921 the decree-holder, Jwala Prasad, filed an application which is on the record asking that the grain might be brought to sale and stating that he would take separate proceedings for the loss caused to him by the wrongful suit of Sheikh Chhuttan. The Court then issued notice to the sipurdar to produce the property for sale. Notice seems to have been served on Kalim-ud-din, for the order-sheet contains an order of the Court dated 17th December 1921 stating that he objects that he was not sipurdar in this case but in the case instituted by his father. The Court overruled this objection on the ground that the property was attached in Jwala Prasad's suit and that the attachment became subject to the result of the suit subsequently filed by Sheikh Chhuttan. The Court held that Kalim-ud-din was bound to produce the property and that being unable to do so by reason of having given it to other persons without authority from the Court he was bound to deposit the price. Ultimately, on 1st September 1922, the order out of which the present appeal arises was passed against Sheikh Chhuttan and Kalim-ud-din directing them to pay Rs. 1,000 in respect of the attached crops wrongfully appropriated by them. An appeal was preferred to the District Judge. To this appeal a preliminary objection was taken that no appeal lay; the learned Judge held that section 144, Civil Procedure Code, applied but on the merits considered that the Munsif's order was correct and declined to interfere.

The appellant's case in this Court is that the Courts below had no jurisdiction to pass an order against the appellant in execution proceedings in Jwala Prasad's suit. It is urged that neither Kalim-ud-din nor Sheikh Chhuttan was a party to that suit and, further, that the proceedings by which a sipurdar was appointed and in which the alleged act of wrongful misappropriation was committed, took place in Sheikh Chhuttan's Suit No. 231 of 1920 and not in Jwala Prasad's suit. It is, therefore, contended that Jwala Prasad's only remedy against the appellants was to institute a regular suit against them, as in the case of Sheikh Chhuttan he originally declared his intention of doing.

On behalf of the respondent decree-holder it is contended that Kalim-ud-din was sipurdar in Jwala Prasad's case and as such is liable and it is further urged that as on the appellant's own contention the case is not covered by section 144, Civil Procedure Code, no appeal lies to this Court.

SARDARA V. ALLAYAR.

I have no hesitation in overruling the preliminary objection. One of the issues which the Judge of the Court below had to decide was whether the case was covered by section 144, Civil Procedure Code. He applied his mind to the question and he decided it and the appellant cannot be deprived of his right of appeal because one of his grounds for challenging the decree is that the decision on this issue was wrong.

On the merits it is difficult to see how any proceedings under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, could possibly be taken against the appellants in Jwala Prasad's case. Kalim-ud-Din, at any rate, was no party to that case either in the original Court or in the execution proceedings. The order appointing him sipurdar was made in the suit filed by Sheikh Chhuttan. His position being substantially that of a Receiver under Chapter XL of the Code the Court might in that suit have called on him to produce the crops or their value. It could not do so in a suit to which he was an entire stranger. Sheikh Chhuttan's only connection with Jwala Prasad's suit was the fact that he applied to have the sale of the crops stayed on the ground that he was going to file a separate suit in respect of them. Whatever further proceedings were taken by him were taken in his own suit. Moreover, section 144 only applies where a decree has been set aside in appeal or otherwise. The only decree which has been set aside is the decree in Sheikh Chhuttan's suit. Whatever remedy the respondents had against the appellants was either by application in Sheikh Chhuttan's suit to which the respondent was a party, or by a separate suit. The present proceedings on his part were entirely misconceived. I, therefore, allow the appeal and set aside the decree against the appellants. As the appeal is allowed on a technical point I award no costs. The parties will bear their own costs in all Courts.

M. D. J.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1776 OF 1917.

May 6, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Harrison.

SARDARA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

ALLAYAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Parties.—Suit for possession against joint holders, dismissal of—Appeal in presence of some only of respondents, whether competent—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 4—Suit for possession against joint holders, dismissal of—Appeal, abatement of, against one respondent—Appeal, entire, whether abates.

An appeal against the dismissal of a suit for possession against several persons who hold the property jointly cannot proceed in the presence of some only of the respondents.

Bejoy Gopal Bose v. Umesh Chandra Bose, 6 C. W. N. 196, Basir Sheikh v. Fazle Karim Biswas, 28 Ind. Cas. 703; 19 C. W. N. 290 and Azimuddin Mandal v. Tara Sankar Ghose, 47 Ind. Cas. 638; 28 C. L. J. 201, relied on.

An appeal against the dismissal of a suit for possession against several persons who hold the property jointly abates in its entirety where one of the respondents dies and his legal representatives are not brought on the record within time.

Khuda Bakhsh v. Mathra Das, 18 Ind. Cas. 182; 62 P. R. 1913; 85 P. L. R. 1913; 89 P. W. R. 1913, Hadu v. Lala, 21 Ind. Cas. 951; 41 P. R. 1915; 15 P. L. R. 1914; 16 P. W. R. 1914, Inayat v. Ganga, 32 Ind. Cas. 829; 3 P. R. 1916; 260 P. W. R. 1915, Daya Singh v. Bula Singh, 38 Ind. Cas. 7; 118 P. R. 1916; 189 P. W. R. 1916, Fateh v. Bhanju Ram, 41 Ind. Cas. 730; 96 P. R. 1917; 49 P. W. R. 1917, Jamna v. Sarjit, 52 Ind. Cas. 510; 67 P. R. 1919, Sardari Lal v. Ram Lal, 57 Ind. Cas. 199; 1 L. 225; 1 L. J. 225; 143 P. L. R. 1928 and Fatta v. Sikandar, 56 Ind. Cas. 927; 2 L. L. J. 442; 2 U. P. L. R. (L.) 112, relied on.

Gajo Singh v. Amrit Narain Singh, 60 Ind. Cas. 722; 2 P. L. T. 234, distinguished.

Appeal from a decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Jhang, dated the 30th March 1917.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Appellants.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs in this case brought a suit against 18 defendants for possession of an area of land which they said belonged to them and on which all the defendants had trespassed. The suit was dismissed by the Trial Court on the 30th March 1917. On the 16th February 1917, after the conclusion of the arguments one Amir, defendant, died;

NAGENDRABALA DASSI v. DINANATH MAHISH.

In spite of this fact his name was shown as one of the respondents in the appeal and it was not until the 12th of May 1920 that respondent's Counsel brought this fact to the notice of this Court. On the following day an affidavit of the appellants was put in and a month later on the 15th June 1920 Counsel applied for permission on their behalf to bring Amir's son on the record. It is admitted that the appellants live 10 miles from the respondents and no reason has been shown for holding that they were prevented by any sufficient cause from ascertaining the fact of Amir's death. The appeal automatically abated against him and his representative at the end of six months and in the absence of any good cause being shown we do not accede to the prayer of the appellants to set aside the abatement.

This being the position, Counsel has adopted two alternative lines of argument. He contends, in the first place, that in spite of the application put in by himself there has been no abatement against Amir, inasmuch as he died before the judgment was pronounced by the Trial Court. Under O. XXII, r. 6; the death of Amir between the conclusion of the hearing and the pronouncement of judgment is immaterial, and if there has been no abatement all the parties are not before the Court and as explained in Bejoy Gopal Bose v. Umesh Chandra Bose (1), Basir Sheikh v. Fazl Karim Biswas (2) and Azimuddin Mandal v. Tara Sankar Ghose (3), the appeal must fail.

It is, however, clear that the appeal has abated against Amir and all we are concerned with is the question of the consequence of such abatement qua the remaining respondents. Now, the position taken up by the plaintiffs-appellants is that the defendants are all trespassers and are all in occupation of the land in suit. It is contended that, because they own other land in well defined ancestral shares, it must be taken that they also hold this land in accordance with the same ancestral shares. This position is contradictory to the suit as framed. The defendants hold the land jointly and there had been no specification of shares or separation of interests, and there is a mass of authorities to the effect that, under these circumstances, the abatement against the one individual respondent leads to and necessitates the abatement against them all. In this connection we may refer to the following authorities cited by Mr. Tek Chand:—

Khuda Bakhsh v. Mathra Das (4), Hadu v. Lala (5), Inayat v. Ganga (6), Daya Singh v. Buta Singh (7), Fateh v. Bhanju Ram (8), Jamna v. Sarjit (9), Sardari Lal v. Ram Lal (10) and Fatta v. Sikandar (11), with which we agree.

As against these rulings Counsel for the appellants has referred us to Gajo Singh v. Amrit Narain Singh (12) a case which is easily differentiated from the present, for the only question before the Court was the effect of the death of certain respondents in execution proceedings arising out of the final decision by the Privy Council. Whatever test be applied and more especially by that referred to in Hadu v. Lala (5), namely, the possibility of a suit proceeding in the absence of the one particular defendant, we find that the relief sought was joint and indivisible against all the defendants-respondents, and, therefore, the inevitable consequence of the abatement of the appeal against one of the respondents is the complete abatement against all.

We, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) 18 Ind. Cas. 182; 62 P. R. 1913; 85 P. L. R. 1913; 89 P. W. R. 1913.

(5) 21 Ind. Cas. 951; 41 P. R. 1915; 15 P. L. R. 1914; 16 P. W. R. 1914.

(6) 32 Ind. Cas. 829; 3 P. R. 1916; 260 P. W. R. 1915.

(7) 38 Ind. Cas. 7; 118 P. R. 1916; 189 P. W. R. 1916.

(8) 41 Ind. Cas. 730; 96 P. R. 1917; 49 P. W. R. 1917.

(9) 52 Ind. Cas. 510; 67 P. R. 1919.

(10) 57 Ind. Cas. 199; 1 L. 225; 1 L. L. J. 225; 143 P. L. R. 1920.

(11) 56 Ind. Cas. 927; 2 L. L. J. 442; 2 U. P. L. R. (L.) 112.

(12) 60 Ind. Cas. 722; 2 P. L. T. 234.

(1) 6 C. W. N. 196.

(2) 28 Ind. Cas. 703; 19 C. W. N. 290.

(3) 47 Ind. Cas. 638; 28 C. L. J. 201.

G. I. P. RAILWAY v. HIMATLAL JAGJIVANDAS.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL EXTRAORDINARY APPLICATION

No. 232 OF 1922.

January 19, 1923.

Present :—Justice Sir Norman Macleod, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

G. I. P. RAILWAY—DEFENDANT—

APPLICANT

versus

HIMATLAL JAGJIVANDAS AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—OPPONENTS.

Railway Company—Goods consigned under Risk Note, Form B—Loss of goods—Wilful neglect or theft—Onus of proof.

In an action for the price of goods short delivered by a Railway Company to whom they were consigned for carriage under a Railway Risk Note, Form B, the onus lies upon the plaintiff to prove that loss was due to theft by, or to wilful neglect of, the Railway Company's servants. [p. 606, col. 2.]

Although in equity a Railway Company ought to give such information to their customers as is in their possession with regard to the loss of goods delivered to them, it is not incumbent, under the law, upon them to do so. Still the Company should produce before the Court for examination those of its servants who are in a position to be acquainted with the facts relating to the disappearance of the goods. Where this is done, the absence of any explanation by the Company as to what had happened to the goods, is not evidence that the short delivery was due to wilful misconduct of the Company's servants. [p. 607, cols. 1 & 2.]

Smith, Ltd. v. Great Western Railway Co. (1922) 1 A. C. 178; 91 L. J. K. B. 423; 27 Com. Cas. 247; 38 T. L. R. 359, followed.

Civil extraordinary application against the decree passed by the First Class Subordinate Judge at Broach, in Small Cause Suit No. 810 of 1921.

Mr. O'Gorman, instructed by Messrs. Little & Co., for the Applicant.

Mr. N. K. Methu, for the Opponents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs sued the South Indian Railway Company and G. I. P. Railway Company for damages in respect of short delivery of certain tins of oil which were delivered to the South Indian Railway Company at Erode Railway Station for carriage to Baroda. When the train arrived at Kalyan, it was found that the waggon which contained the plaintiffs' goods was open and seventeen tins were missing. The plaintiffs signed the Risk Note B and in order to recover, the plaintiffs had to prove that the loss was due to theft by, or to the wilful neglect of, the Company's servants, transport agents or carriers employed by them before, during and after transit over the said Railway or other Railway lines working in connection therewith or by any other transport agency or agencies employed by them respectively for the carriage of the whole or any part of the said consignment: provided that the term "wilful neglect" could not be held to include fire, robbery from a running train or any other unforeseen event or accident.

The learned Judge came to the conclusion that the theft was not committed in a running train, although he does not deal in detail with the evidence given by the witnesses with regard to the arrival of the train at Kalyan. The theft was discovered when the waggons were examined within a few minutes of their arrival at Kalyan, and if the theft was not committed in the running train, it would appear it must have been committed within a few minutes of the train's arrival at Kalyan. That would be a conclusion which it would be rather difficult to arrive at. However that may be, the onus lies upon the plaintiffs to prove that loss was due to theft by, or to the wilful neglect of, the Company's servants, and they called no evidence to prove that; it is true that there is the evidence of the Company's servants, but, in our opinion, there is nothing in the evidence of the Company's servants which would entitle the Court to come to the conclusion that the loss was due to theft committed by one of them or to any wilful neglect on their part.

The liability of Railway Companies under Risk Notes of this character, and the question what it is incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove was considered recently in Smith, Ltd. v. Great Western Railway Co. (1). Lord Buckmaster said, after reading out the clause in the agreement which provided that the Company should not be liable for the loss of the goods except upon proof that the loss arose from the wilful misconduct of the Company's servants (pages 182, 183):—

"The first question to determine is, what is the true meaning of that condition? It has been suggested on the part of the appellant that it must be read as though it con tained exceptions in favour of the Railway Company with a proviso reserving to the consignor rights in a certain event, and that it was consequently incumbent upon them to prove that the goods had disappeared owing to the specified facts, and when that was proved it would become necessary for the consignor to establish that he had the benefit of the proviso, or, in other words, that the loss had arisen owing to the wilful misconduct of the Company's servants.

(1) (1922) 1 A. C. 178; 91 L. J. K. B. 423; 27 Com. Cas. 247; 38 T. L. R. 359.

RAJA SINGH v. DURGA SINNH.

"I am unable so to regard this clause; it is, in my opinion, a clause which throws upon the trader, before he can recover for any of the goods, the burden of proving in the first instance that the loss sustained arose from the wilful misconduct of the Company's servants. It is perfectly true that this results in holding that the apparent protection afforded to the trader is really illusory; it practically gives him no protection at all, for it is often impossible for a trader to know what it is that has caused the loss of his goods between the time when he delivered them into the hands of the Railway Company's servants and the time when they ought to have been delivered at the other end of the journey. The explanation of the loss is often within the exclusive knowledge of the Railway Company, and for the trader to be compelled to prove that it was due to wilful misconduct on the part of the Railway Company's servants, is to call upon him to establish something which it may be almost impossible for him to prove. None the less, that is the burden that he has undertaken, and the question is whether in this case he has afforded any evidence which calls for an answer on the part of the Railway Company. All he has been able to show is this: he has proved the delivery of the goods in the manner that I have mentioned to the Railway Company's servants, and he has put in evidence a correspondence between himself and the Railway Company, and their answers to certain interrogatories. I am bound to say that the correspondence does not reflect very creditably upon the attitude which the Railway Company adopted, and certainly does not show any anxiety on their part to satisfy one of their customers as to such of the circumstances as were within their knowledge, associated with the loss of these goods."

It appears, therefore, that, although it may be said that in equity the Railway Company ought to give such information to their customers as is in their possession with regard to the loss of goods delivered to them, it is not incumbent under the law upon them to do so and they are not obliged to go out of their way to assist a plaintiff in proving wilful neglect. But as there are rules of procedure enabling a party to administer interrogatories in a Small Cause Court suit, we still think that in this country a Railway Company should produce before the Court for examination those of their servants who were in a position to be acquainted with the facts relating to the disappearance of their customer's goods. The G. I. P. Railway Company have done so in this case, and, in our opinion, very rightly, but the learned Judge considered that their long continued failure to give any explanation as to what had happened to the seventeen tins short delivered, coupled with the want of explanation to account for the delay, afforded evidence upon which it could be found that the short delivery was due to wilful misconduct of the Company's servants. That is a conclusion which can no longer be warranted under the decision to which we have just referred. Therefore, the Rule must be made absolute and the suit dismissed with costs.

W. C. A.

*Rule made absolute.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1483 OF 1921.

April 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.RAJA SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS*versus*DURGA SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.Hindu Law—Father's debt—Sons, pious duty of —Death of father, effect of.

RAJA SINGH V. DURGA SINGH.

A debt by a Hindu father which is neither antecedent nor for legal necessity, is not binding on the sons on the plea of pious obligation merely because of the father being dead on the date of the institution of the suit.

Chet Ram v. Ram Singh, 67 Ind. Cas. 569; 44 A. 368; 49 I. A. 228; 3 P. L. T. 363; 31 M. L. T. 50; 43 M. L. J. 98; 16 L. W. 89; (1922) M. W. N. 455; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 64; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 247; 3 P. L. R. 1922; 24 Bom. L. R. 123; 27 C. W. N. 150; 21 A. L. J. 114; 37 C. L. J. 79 (P. C.), followed.

Gharib Ullah v. Khalak Singh, 25 A. 407; 30 I. A. 165; 5 Bom. L. R. 478; 7 C. W. N. 681; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 483 (P. C.), distinguished.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ghazipur, dated the 26th July 1921.

Dr. M. L. Agarwala, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ram Nama Prasad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These appeals by the defendants arise out of two suits to set aside two sale-deeds executed by two adult members of the joint family to which the plaintiffs belong and by their mother. The sole issue in the case which is now material was whether these deeds were executed for purposes binding on the joint family estate. The consideration of the sale-deeds is made up of various items but the only item which is in dispute in this appeal consists of Rs. 415 which was applied to pay off a mortgage executed by the father of the plaintiffs. Part of the consideration was set off against each sale-deed. Following the law as laid down in Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1) the Courts below have gone on to consider how far this mortgage was executed for legal necessity. Some items have been allowed and the others disallowed. The appellants do not challenge the findings as to the separate items. Their argument is that, inasmuch as the father who executed the mortgage is dead, it is immaterial whether the mortgage was executed for legal necessity or not. They invoke the doctrine of pious obligation on the part of the sons and say that the debt is binding on the sons whatever the purpose for which the money was borrowed so long as that purpose was neither illegal nor immoral. No direct authority was cited in support of this view for the case of Gharib Ullah v. Khalak Singh (2) on which the appellants rely is not really an authority on the point, and it appears to me impossible to accept the view contended for in view of the recent decision of the Privy Council in Chet Ram v. Ram Singh (3). There the father had executed a sale-deed in lieu of a previous usufructuary mortgage. The matter came before the Privy Council and their Lordships held that, under the rule laid down in Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1), the usufructuary mortgage could not constitute antecedent debt. At the time when the suit was brought the father was dead but his sons and grandsons were alive. Their Lordships refused to accept the contention that the father's death made any difference or that the transaction which was otherwise invalid could be treated as valid by reason of the father having died prior to the suit. I, therefore, reject the argument put forward by the appellant. Both appeals clearly fail and they are accordingly dismissed with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

M. A. A.

Appeals dismissed.

(2) 25 A. 407; 30 I. A. 165; 5 Bom. L. R. 478; 7 C. W. N. 681; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 483 (P. C.).

(3) 67 Ind. Cas. 569; 44 A. 368; 49 I. A. 228; 3 P. L. T. 363; 31 M. L. T. 50; 43 M. L. J. 98; 16 L. W. 89; (1922) M. W. N. 455; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 64; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 247; 3 P. L. R. 1922; 24 Bom. L. R. 123; 27 C. W. N. 150; 21 A. L. J. 114; 37 C. L. J. 79 (P. C.).

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.).

FATEH MUHAMMAD KHAN V. WAFI BEGUM.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 70 OF 1922.

April 21, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Pipan, J. C.

Shahzada FATEH MUHAMMAD KHAN

—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat WAFI BEGUM AND OTHERS
—RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration—Reference by agent—Authorisation, proof of—Arbitration in criminal proceeding, nature of—Custom v. personal law—Sadozai royal family, whether governed by custom or Muhammadan Law—Succession—Females, exclusion of.

No instrument in writing is necessary to establish a valid authorisation by a principal to his agent to make a reference to arbitration. [p. 611, col. 1.]

Ram Das v. Abbas Khan, 51 P. R. 1893 (F. B.), Unniraman v. Chathan, 9 M. 451; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 709, Saturjit Persat Bahadoor Sahi v. Dulhin Gulab Koer, 24 C. 469; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 980, relied on.

At the same time, proof is required, whether there has been an instrument in writing or not, that the agent was actually authorised to make a reference to arbitration. [p. 611, col. 1.]

Whenever there is a gap in the Customary Law which cannot be filled otherwise, it must be filled by a reference to the personal law of the litigating parties. [p. 612, col. 1.]

Daya Ram v. Sohail Singh, 110 P. R. 1906; 31 P. L. R. 1907; 59 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.), relied on.

The Sadozai family, descended from Shah Shuja, follows Muhammadan Law in matters of succession and no custom obtains in the family whereby females are excluded from inheritance. [p. 612, col. 1.]

Second appeal from an order of the Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 20th March 1922, reversing that of the District Judge, Peshawar, dated the 22nd June 1921.

Mr. Diwan Chand, R. S., for the Appellant.

Mr. Saaduddin Khan, K. S., for the Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—This suit is for possession of a kothri situated in Peshawar City which was originally purchased by Musammat Gauhar Nisa. Musammat Gauhar Nisa died in 1915 and the parties to the suit are her relatives. They belong to an Afghan family which has been for many years resident in the North-West Frontier Province and the Punjab. The family in question is a branch of that of Shah Shuja Sadozai, the Amir of Afghanistan, who lost his throne during the course of the first Afghan War. It holds a high social position and many members of it are now in Government service. The sub-joined pedigree table shows the relationship of the parties to the present suit.

The suit is brought by Musammat Swati Begam and Musammat Wafa Begam, who are two married daughters of Musammat Gauhar Nisa. They claim to succeed to the kothri with the shares to which they would be entitled under Muhammadan Law. They calculate their joint share as 22/32nds of the property. The calculation depends on the assumption that they are entitled to 16/32nds as heirs to Musammat Gauhar Nisa the remaining 16/32nds having devolved upon their brother, Mahmud. Mahmud has died and, as shown by the pedigree table, left a widow and a daughter. The shares of the widow and daughter, who are defendants Nos. 2 and 3 in this case, would be 10/32nds of the whole estate, while the remaining 6/32nds would devolve upon the plaintiffs as heirs to Mahmud thus entitling them to 22/32nds in all. The suit is resisted by Shahzada Fateh Muhammad, first cousin of the plaintiffs, who is supported by the widow and daughter of Mahmud who have consented to receive only maintenance from the estate. The suit is resisted inter alia on the ground that the parties are not governed by Muhammadan Law, as alleged by the plaintiffs, but by a special custom which excludes females from inheriting immovable property. The Trial Court found that the parties were governed by this custom and on this finding dismissed the suit. The Divisional Judge, on appeal, remanded the case for further evidence upon the issue of whether Muhammadan Law or special custom applied to the parties, and, after considering a return made to the remand, held that the parties would succeed in the present case by Muhammadan Law, and granted the plaintiffs a decree for the relief sought by them. A further appeal has been lodged in this Court by the defendant Shahzada Fateh Muhammad.

FATEH MUHAMMAD KHAN V. WAFI BEGUM.

One of the grounds on which the suit was resisted in the Trial Court was that Musammât Gauhar Nisa in purchasing the property in dispute, had used funds which belonged to the defendant Fateh Muhammad and that she had not a sole or unqualified title to the property. This contention is again set up in the grounds of the present appeal, but has not been pressed before me by Counsel. It is indeed clear, as pointed out by the learned Divisional Judge, that the contention is supported by no evidence and cannot possibly succeed. I need not, therefore, consider it further.

The appeal, as argued before me, proceeds on three main grounds:—

(1) that the present suit did not lie because the parties had made a valid reference to arbitration out of Court followed by a valid award which found that the plaintiffs were not entitled to possession of the property.

(2) That the parties are governed by a special custom excluding females from inheriting immovable property.

(3) That even if it be proved that the parties follow Muhammadan Law, the share to which the plaintiffs are entitled is not that which has been alleged in the plaint and which has been decreed to them.

I proceed to deal with these points in order.

(1) The arbitration proceedings referred to arose in the following manner. On the 5th of February 1920 Fateh Muhammad put in an application to the Deputy Commissioner of Peshawar under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, asking for a settlement of his claims by Council of Elders. He alleged in the application that his entire property has been in charge of Mahmud as his guardian, and that the latter had taken advantage of his guardianship to acquire property in his own name from the income of Fateh Muhammad's estate, and that a portion of the estate was in possession of the present plaintiffs, Musammât Swati Begam and Musammât Wafi Begam, who had no right to hold it as against him. This application was sent to the City Magistrate of Peshawar who forwarded it to K. S. Maulvi Ghulam Hassan for inquiry. The present plaintiffs on that occasion were represented by Shahzada Shah Alam, the son of Musammât Wafi Begam, who purported to be acting as agent for both. He and Fateh Muhammad agreed before K. S. Maulvi Ghulam Hassan to refer the dispute to two arbitrators and an umpire. The arbitrators and the umpire put in an award on the 8th of May 1920 which was forwarded to the Court of the City Magistrate by the Sub-Registrar. This award purported to make a final settlement of all disputes between the parties, awarding maintenance only to Musammât Khurshid Begam and Musammât Fairukh Sultan and prescribing that the present plaintiffs should give up possession of the property now in suit, Musammât Swati Begam receiving Rs. 500 from Fateh Muhammad. The arbitrators stated in the award that it had been agreed to by Fateh Muhammad and by the agent of the present plaintiffs. The agent, however, objected before the Court to the award and stated that the plaintiffs would seek their relief in a Civil Court. No further proceedings were, therefore, taken under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation. It would appear that the Trial Court, rightly or wrongly, considered that the objection set up by Fateh Muhammad against the present suit was one which contended that there had been proceedings under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation which would operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit. This objection was, of course, unsustainable as no decree between the parties had ever been passed under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation. The objection, as urged in the Divisional Court, was that there had been a valid reference to arbitration out of Court by which parties were bound and which would bar a subsequent suit. The ruling of the Judicial Commissioner of this Province in Civil Revision No. 86 of 1915 is quoted as authority for the view that arbitration proceedings taken in a Criminal Court are to be regarded as arbitration proceedings taken out of Court. This view is undoubtedly correct, and it cannot be denied that if there were valid arbitration proceedings between the parties and a valid award drawn up in those proceedings, the present suit would be barred. The validity of the proceedings, however, and of the award is contested by the respondents on the ground that Shahzada Shah Alam who purported to be acting as the agent of the present plaintiffs had no valid authority to act for them and no valid authority to make a reference to arbitration. It is argued, indeed, that the Counsel for the defendants in the Trial Court was so conscious of this obvious defect in the arbitration proceedings that he abandoned the position and fell back upon the allegation of res judicata. As against this, it is contended by the appellant that Shahzada Shah Alam, who is the son of Musammal Wafi Begam, was clearly an agent authorized by her and by her sister and that no instrument in writing was necessary to establish a valid authorization. In support of this proposition Ram Das v. Abbas Khan (1), Unniraman v. Chathan (2) and Saturjit Pertap Bahadoor Sahi v. Dulhin Gulab Koer (3) are quoted as authorities. It may be conceded that this view is correct. At the same time, proof is required, whether there has been an instrument in writing or not, that the agent was actually authorized to make a reference to arbitration. I am unable to see in the present case any presumption that such an authority existed. The women themselves never appeared in the proceedings at all and, even admitting that the procedure in a trial under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation is necessarily irregular and to some extent extrajudicial, it would be unusual for a dispute of this nature to be referred to a regular arbitration without either the express consent of the parties concerned, or some appearance or the execution of some document by them which would authorize the conduct of their case by an agent. I cannot agree with the argument put forward by the respondents' Counsel that the initial words of the arbitrator's award imply in any case that the present plaintiffs consented to, or ratified, the reference to arbitration. The arbitrators simply use a phrase almost invariable in the compilation of an award when they allude to themselves as "maqbulah farigain." It is noticeable also that when they allude to the parties' acceptance of their finding, they specifically refer to acceptance by Fateh Muhammad himself and by the agent of the other side. To my mind, it is perfectly clear that the Divisional Judge is correct in holding that the reference to arbitration was an invalid one so far as the present plaintiffs are concerned, and that they neither consented to or ratified the reference. On this finding it must naturally follow that the present suit is not barred by any valid award drawn up upon a valid reference to arbitration.

FATEH MUHAMMAD KHAN v. WAFI BEGAM.

2. The question as to whether the parties are governed by Muhammadan Law or by a special custom, has been dealt with at length by the learned Divisional Judge and we now have a very complete body of evidence upon the record upon both sides of the question. It is important to remember that, as pointed out by the Divisional Judge, the defendant is not alleging that the parties follow the ordinary agricultural custom of the Peshawar District, but is pleading that a special custom exists in this particular family by which females are excluded from inheriting immoveable property. I agree also with the dictum of the Divisional Judge that the onus of proving such a special custom lies very heavily upon the defendant. I further agree that this onus has not been discharged. I do not think it necessary on this further appeal to review at length the evidence which has been recorded. It is sufficient to say that instances have been shown where females have inherited immoveable property, and that there has been at least one judicial decision to the effect that the Shahzada family in the matter of succession is governed by Muhammadan Law. The judgment in one of these

(1) 51 P. R. 1893 (F. B.).

(2) 9 M. 451; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 709.

(3) 24 C. 469; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 980.

FATEH MUHAMMAD KHAN V. WAFI BEGAM.

cases is upon the record and relates to a case between certain members of the Shahzada family who are resident in the Ludhiana District. There was a very clear finding in that case to the effect that the family was governed by Muhammadan Law. As against this, one of the chief pieces of evidence adduced by the defendant was a mutation proceeding taken between certain other members of the family in the Gujranwala District. The final order on that mutation which is dated the 9th of March 1914 was to the effect that daughters had no rights to succeed to the property of their father. The order in question, however, when closely examined, carries little or no weight. It disposes of one instance which would militate against the view taken by the Revenue Officer in a manner which is distinctly unconvincing. The Revenue Officer finally disposed of the judicial authority for holding that the family was governed by Muhammadan Law by the somewhat surprising argument that Pathan agriculturists of the Sharakpur Tahsil of the Gujranwala District were governed by their own custom embodied in the riwaj-i-am. Now, this argument was obviously beside the point, as the Shahzada family could not, by any stretch of imagination, be regarded as members of the Pathan agricultural community of the Gujranwala District. There would not be the least presumption that they followed the custom of the district in which they happened to be settled purely in virtue of lands granted to them by Government as Afghan refugees. Nor, again, can I see any force in the contention that, as this Sadozai royal family were originally residents of Afghanistan, they are thereby to be presumed to follow a custom which excludes females from inheritance. This contention has been disposed of rightly by the Divisional Judge by a consideration of the very exceptional position which was held in Afghanistan by the family in question. I need not review the evidence of various members of the family who have been produced on either side. It is sufficient to say that, even where instances have been adduced to show that females have been excluded from inheritance there is no necessary presumption that an inviolable custom exists so excluding them, and that where the practice adopted by the family has been in a state of uncertainty and flux, the parties have definitely ceased to be governed by their personal law. The case seems somewhat parallel to that which was dealt with by the Privy Council in Abdul Hussein Khan v. Bibi Sona Dero (4) where, although 68 instances had been quoted where females had failed to succeed to immoveable property, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that this fact was insufficient to exclude them. It was remarked that the evidence fell short of the standard to which it must attain in order to succeed in altering the devolution of property according to Muhammadan Law to a devolution determined by a family custom. The standard there set up, therefore, was a very high one and I see no reason why it should not be considered as equally high in the present case. I have already indeed pointed out that the onus of proving his contention lay very heavily upon the defendant. I may, further, refer to Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh (5) which lays down a proposition highly important to questions of this nature in this Province. In that judgment Mr. Justice Chatterjee made the very apposite remark that, "the principle to be borne in mind is that whenever there is a gap in the Customary Law which cannot be filled otherwise, it must be filled by a reference to the personal law of the litigating parties. This rule underlies all application of Customary Law to the concrete facts of a case." Certain other minor points which have been brought up by the respondents, such as the remark in a sale-deed executed by Musammal Wafi Begam that daughters do not succeed to the estate, seem to me to have little or no bearing upon the case. She and her sister actually did succeed, did secure possession at one time of the property in suit, and the arbitration proceedings admit their possession. The arbitration proceedings themselves are quoted in support of the contention that females are excluded from inheritance, but the award, on close examination, hardly bears this interpretation. Indeed, it may be said that it definitely admits the title of the two women to the property now in suit when it describes that they shall receive Rs. 500 compensation and that they shall give up the property on receipt of this compensation. It may be argued that unless compensation had been prescribed, they would have been entitled to succeed to the property itself. Nor, again, do I attach much weight to the report made by K.S. Maulvi Ghulam Hassan as a local Commissioner during the hearing of the present case. His report, dated the 16th of June 1921, is extremely meagre and is in no way convincing. He appears to have thought that as Afghans in general are bound by custom in the Peshawar District, it, therefore, lay upon the plaintiffs to show that they were governed by Muhammadan Law. As a matter of fact, no such presumption was warranted as the parties were not Afghans (or as they are ordinarily called, Pathans) of the Peshawar District, but immigrants from Afghanistan resident in Peshawar City, and the recorded custom of Peshawar City is actually that its inhabitants normally follow Muhammadan Law. I consider on the evidence that the learned Divisional Judge was fully justified in his conclusion that Muhammadan Law must be followed in the present case and that the plaintiffs are entitled to inherit the property in suit according to the shares to which they would be entitled under Muhammadan Law.

(4) 43 Ind. Cas. 306; 45 C. 453; 16 A. L. J. 17; 23 M. L. T. 117; 27 C. L. J. 240; 1 P. L. R. 1918; 20 Bom. L. R. 528; 12 S. L. R. 104; 45 J. A. 10; 4 P. L. W. 27; 34 M. L. J. 48; 22 C. W. N. 353 (P. C.)

(5) 110 P. R. 1906; 31 P. L. R. 1907; 59 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.).

ALI MAHOMED KHAN v. ALI AKBAR KHAN.

3. I have already referred to the calculation made by the plaintiffs of the shares claimed by them. It is argued for the appellant that there is an obvious flaw in this calculation, inasmuch as Musammal Gauhar Nisa, during her lifetime, on the 26th of October 1913 gifted the whole of the property by a tamliknana to her son Mahmud. If this is the case, it is clear that the plaintiffs could only succeed to the property as heirs of Mahmud and not as heirs of their mother, Musammal Gauhar Nisa. It has been contended by the respondents that this deed of gift is not shown to have been acted upon. At the same time, there is every thing to show that it was, and its validity appears to have been accepted by the learned Divisional Judge and the existence of this deed was one of the reasons given for finding that Musammal Gauhar Nisa was full and unqualified owner and that she had not been provided funds out of Fateh Mohammad's estate. It would seem that the learned Divisional Judge overlooked the result of his own view of the deed. Its validity having been once accepted, the estate must have passed to Mahmud, and the plaintiffs could only succeed as his heirs. I have been shown nothing by Counsel for the respondents to upset the view that it is necessary on this appeal to correct the shares decreed to the plaintiffs and to grant them a decree only for such shares as they would be entitled as heirs to Mahmud. The estate of Mahmud, according to Muhammadan Law, would devolve in the following manner:—his daughter would receive one-half or 16/32nds, his widow 1/8th or 4/32nds and his two sisters the balance remaining, i.e., 12/32nds. To the latter share, therefore, the plaintiffs must be entitled. I, therefore, accept this appeal to the extent that the decree of the Divisional Court be varied so as to give the plaintiff a decree for possession to 12/32nds of the property in suit.

Costs:—The appeal has succeeded only on a minor point and has failed on the more important contention set up. I, therefore, direct that half the costs of the respondents on this appeal be borne by the appellant. The appellant will pay his own costs.

Z. K.

Appeal partly accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 75

OF 1922.

January 18, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Fforde.

ALI MAHOMED KHAN—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

ALI AKBAR KHAN AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Waki—Dedication, proof of—Burial of saintly person, whether renders land trust property—Sajjada nashin, appointment of, effect of.

ALI MUHAMMAD KHAN V. ALI AKBAR KHAN.

In the absence of proof of a dedication, express or implied, of a plot of land to public religious uses, the mere burial in it of a saintly person cannot have the effect of converting the land into trust property.

In the absence of a wakf the appointment of a person as a sajjada nashin must be regarded as a courtesy title only.

Zinat Bibi v. Emma, 40 Ind. Cas. 240; 107 P. R. 1917; 111 P. L. R. 1917; 92 P. W. R. 1917, followed.

Letters Patent Appeal from the decree and judgment of Mr. Justice Martineau, dated the 6th February 1922, passed in Civil Appeal No. 1426 of 1921, and published as 63 Ind. Cas. 415, reversing that of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 1st April 1922.

Bakhshi Tek Chand and Saikh Niaz Ali for the Appellant.

Mr. Abdul Rashid and Lala Badri Das, R. B., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The circumstances which have given rise to this appeal under clause 20 of the Letters Patent are briefly as follows:—

Mian Mauammad Khan, a Pir of the Chishti sect, lived in the defendants' village, Bassi Nau, in the Hoshiarpur District. The second defendant was married to one of his daughters, and the plaintiff is the son of another daughter. The Pir died in May 1914 at Bassi Nau and was buried in a grove belonging to the defendants in the neighbouring village of Kakkon. On the 23rd June 1914 the fortieth day after his death, a large number of persons, including his disciples and representatives of the leading shrines of the Chishti sect, assembled at the tomb, and the plaintiff was installed by a majority of the congregation as sajjada nashin. The plaintiff claims that the defendants dedicated 16 kanals of land to the shrine as wakf and he has brought the present action for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with the shrine and with his management thereof.

Now, the Courts below have concurred in holding that the plaintiff was duly appointed a sajjada nashin, but that the alleged appropriation of the land to religious purposes has not been established. The question which has been argued before us by the learned Advocate for the plaintiff-appellant is, that the land on which the tomb of the saint was erected is trust property, and that the plaintiff is entitled to a free access thereto. It is admitted that the defendants, who were undoubtedly the owners thereof, did not expressly dedicate the land under or around the tomb to religious uses, and the only question is whether a presumption of implied dedication arises from the fact that the saint was buried there and that urs has since been held at the tomb four or five times on his death anniversary.

Now, it is true that, on account of the saintly character of the deceased, the parties intended that his tomb should be regarded as a religious institution of a sort, but we are not prepared to dissent from the conclusion of Mr. Justice Martineau that the circumstances mentioned above do not justify the finding that the defendants divested themselves of their rights of ownership and appropriated the property to a religious trust. The plaintiff was undoubtedly appointed sajjada nashin, but in the absence of a wakf this title must, as pointed out in Zinat Bibi v. Emma (1), be regarded as a courtesy title.

Mr. Tek Chand for the appellant is unable to cite any authority to support the contention that the mere burial of a saintly person in a plot of land has the effect of converting that land into trust property, and we do not think that the circumstances that urs was held for a few years without any demur by the defendants materially advances the case for the plaintiff. It must be remembered that the deceased was the father-in-law of the second defendant and there is nothing improbable in the theory that he himself buried the saint in the land of which he was a part proprietor. Be that as it may, the onus was clearly upon the plaintiff to establish a dedication, express or implied, to public religious uses, and we consider that he has failed to discharge that onus.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 40 Ind. Cas. 240; 107 P. R. 1917; 111 P. L. R. 1917; 92 P. W. R. 1917.

RAM NATH V. MANNU LAL.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1156 OF 1921.

March, 20, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Daniels.

RAM NATH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
VERSUSMANNU LAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS
RESPONDENTS*Contract Act (I.X of 1872), s. 62—Contract, novation of—Non-performance—Original contract, reversion to.*

Where, although the defendant is, by virtue of a contract entered into with the plaintiff, under a liability to the latter, both the parties agree to have their rights determined by an arbitrator and the arbitrator does determine the defendant's liability, it is not open to the plaintiff. On failure of the defendant to satisfy his claim in accordance with the award, to revert to the original contract and bring a claim in violation of the terms of the award and based upon the original contract.

Manohur Koyal v. Thakur Das Naskar, 15 C. 319; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 796, dissented from.

K. M. P. R. N. M. Firm v. P. T. Theperumal Chetty, 67 Ind. Cas. 905; 45 M. 180; 14 L. W. 660; (1921) M. W. N. 861; 42 M. L. J. 236; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 314; 31 M. L. T. 478, relied upon.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jhansi, dated the 25th of October 1920.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Appellant.

Dr. S. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—After hearing the learned Counsel in this case we are of opinion that this appeal should be allowed and that the order of the First Court should be restored.

The suit was brought by the plaintiffs-respondents to recover a certain sum of money alleged to be due in respect of a contract which was entered into on the 12th September 1918, for the delivery by the 18th November of that year of a bale of dhotis at a certain rate.

The date fixed for payment was the 27th of November 1918. It is not denied that the goods were delivered to the defendant on the date in question and it is also not denied that the price was not paid on the date fixed for payment.

It appears, however, that after this latter date, inasmuch as there had been much speculation in this class of goods, a Committee of the Cloth Merchants of Jhansi assembled and brought out a plan by which claims for breach of contract of delivery of those goods or for failure to pay the price due in respect of these goods were to be settled.

The decision of this Committee was that the dealings should be settled and the goods paid for on the basis of a price of Rs. 5-12-0 per pair of dhotis plus half the difference between the price so fixed and the contract price.

Both the Courts below have found that the parties to this case submitted to what we may call the award of this Committee and agreed that the claim which the plaintiffs had against the defendants should be settled on this basis.

The present suit, however, has been brought by the plaintiffs on the basis of the old contract and the question arose as to whether the plaintiffs were entitled to resort to the old contract and to claim damages accordingly. The Court of first instance held against the plaintiffs and found that they could only recover on the basis of the scheme which was laid down by the Cloth Merchants Committee. It was found that if this scheme were enforced, the defendant was liable to pay to the plaintiffs a thousand rupees. In appeal the learned District Judge has reversed the decision of the First Court. He has taken a view of the case which is based upon a decision of the Calcutta High Court, Manohur Koyal v. Thakur Das Naskar (1). The result of this is that he found that, although the parties had agreed to be bound by the decision of the Committee, nevertheless, as the defendant had failed to satisfy the plaintiffs' claim in accordance with the Committee's decision, the plaintiffs were entitled to revert to the old contract and to claim damages on a larger scale.

We may mention that the decision on which the learned Judge relies has been dissented from in the case of K. M. P. R. N. M. Firm v. P. T. Theperumal Chetty (2).

For ourselves we do not think that, in the circumstances of this case, the plaintiffs were entitled to revert to the original contract. They agreed to accept settlement of their claim for damages on the basis of

(1) 15 C. 319; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 796.

(2) 67 Ind. Cas. 905; 45 M. 180; 14 L. W. 660; (1921) M. W. N. 861; 42 M. L. J. 236; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 314; 31 M. L. T. 478.

TIRATH RAM v. MUHAMMAD ABDUL RAHIM SHAH.

the scheme which was laid down by the Cloth Merchants' Committee and we think they ought to be bound thereby. In this view, therefore, the Court below was in error in increasing the sum which had been awarded to the plaintiffs by the judgment of the First Court. We, therefore, allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below and restore the decree of the Court of first instance. The appellant is entitled his costs in the Court below and in this Court.

As regards the cross-objections they have no force and are dismissed with costs.

M. A. A. & N. H. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2799 OF 1918.

March 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof and — Mr. Justice Campbell.

TIRATH RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

MUHAMMAD ABDUL RAHIM SHAH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 91, O. XXII, rr. 4, 9, O. XXVI, r. 9—Suit to establish right of way, nature of—Appeal—Abatement—Death of respondent—Ignorance of death, whether sufficient cause for setting aside abatement—Judgment based solely on local inspection, legality of.

A suit to enforce the enjoyment of a right of way as an easement does not fall within the purview of section 91 of the Civil Procedure Code and does not, therefore, require the sanction of the Collector. [p. 618, col. 1.]

It cannot be said that an appellant's ignorance of the death of a respondent can in no case be a sufficient cause for setting aside an abatement. A question of this nature cannot be decided on generalities and independently of the circumstances of each particular case before the Court. [p. 617, col. 2.]

Mir Nawab v. Hardeo, 12 Ind. Cas. 871; 60 P. R. 1911; 42 P. L. R. 1912; 238 P. W. R. 1911, Daya Singh v. Bula Singh, 38 Ind. Cas. 7; 118 P. R. 1916; 189 P. W. R. 1916, referred to.

A judgment should not be based solely on the result of a personal local inspection made by the Judge. [p. 618, col. 2.]

Ahmad Sahib Shulari v. Magnesite Syndicate Ltd., 29 Ind. Cas. 60; 39 M. 501; 2 L. W. 460; 17 M. L. T. 387; 28 M. L. J. 598, Kessowji Issur v. G. I. P. Railway Company, 31 B. 381; 6 C. L. J. 5; 11 C. W. N. 721; 17 M. L. J. 347; 4 A. L. J. 461;

9 Bom. L. R. 671; 2 M. L. T. 435; 34 I. A. 115 (P. C.), relied on.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Multan, dated the 4th July 1918, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Multan, dated the 21st December 1916.

Bakhshi Tek Chand and Lala Jagan Nath, for the Appellants.

Sheikh Niaz Ali, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs in the suit out of which this second appeal arises were 15 inhabitants of a suburb of Multan City called Basti Faridabad. The defendants were Tirath Ram and Lachhmi Narain, sons of Ram Chand, who are the recorded owners of certain fields numbered 181-7 and 193-5 lying between Basti Faridabad and the outskirts of the City proper. The matter in dispute is the right of the plaintiffs to use as a path or road a strip of land falling within the boundaries of those fields and running along the edge of the basti.

On 7th November 1910 the uncle of the present defendants, who was then the owner of the fields, applied successfully to the Municipal Committee for permission to erect a wall shutting off access to the fields from a road to the south. The sanction lapsed, but was renewed on 24th October 1912. Subsequently, on the recommendation of the Deputy Commissioner, President of the Committee, the sanction was cancelled. The plaintiff's uncle appealed to the Commissioner who restored the original resolution granting sanction. The plaintiffs then filed the present suit.

In its amended form the plaint asked for a declaration that the inhabitants of Basti Faridabad were owners of the pathway shown in the plan attached to the plaint, and in the alternative for an injunction directing the defendants not to obstruct the pathway by their wall on the ground that the inhabitants of Basti Faridabad had a right of way over it by easement. The Trial Court dismissed the suit. On appeal by the plaintiffs the District Judge granted them a decree declaring that they have the right to use "as a public right of way" a strip of land 6 feet broad which he specified, and enjoining the defendants not to obstruct the use of that strip of land by the plaintiff as a path.

TIRATH RAM V. MUHAMMAD ABDUL RAHIM SHAH.

The defendants have preferred a second appeal.

A preliminary objection is raised by the plaintiffs-respondents that one of their member, Rahim Dad, died on 30th November 1918, that no application was made by the appellants to implead his legal representatives within the period then allowed by law, and that, therefore, the appeal has abated not only against Rahim Dad's representatives but also in its entirety under O. XXII, r. 4 (3).

It is admitted that Rahim Dad died on the date alleged. The appellants presented an application on the 7th July 1919, stated to be under O. XXII, r. 4 and 9, praying that the minor son of Rahim Dad under guardianship of one of the existing respondents be made a respondent in his father's place, and pleading that the application had not been made earlier because the appellants were unaware of Rahim Dad's death. The application was supported by an affidavit that the defendants had been living out of Multan, one as a student at Lahore and the other as a student at Lyallpore, and that for that reason they had had no knowledge of the death of Rahim Dad. An order was passed by a Single Judge granting the application subject to all just exceptions.

We can see no reason for refusing to treat this application, in accordance with the usual practice of this Court, as one for an order setting aside the abatement of the appeal. An illustration of the practice is Arur Singh v. Todar Mal (1), and many others could be quoted.

The learned Counsel for the respondents has contended strenuously that the abatement should not be set aside putting forward the following reasons:—

(1) Rahim Dad's death was registered by the Municipal Committee, Multan, on 2nd December 1918.

(2) The appellants are residents of Multan and have many relations permanently living there who could have been asked to watch their interests and perform their duties in this particular respect.

(3) The appellants must have come home for the Christmas vacation of 1918 and thus have been in a position to ascertain the fact of Rahim Dad's death.

(1) 49 Ind. Cas. 501; 22 P. W. R. 1919,

(4) Their deceased father was a member and Vice-President of the Municipal Committee for over twenty years and, therefore, the appellants had special facilities for access to Municipal records.

(5) In the case of the death of another respondent, Jumma, the appellants applied for substitution of his legal representative on 30th September 1920, saying that the death had occurred 3½ months previously, and actually the death was not reported to the Municipal Committee until a subsequent date, the 12th October 1920.

These allegations are not supported by affidavit and, so far as the record shows, (2) and (3) are based on mere conjecture. A copy of the entry registering Rahim Dad's death has been shown to us, but we cannot assume from the fact that the appellants' father was at one time Vice-President that the appellants have any special connection now with the Municipal Committee. The incident of Jumma's death, if anything, goes to show that the appellants have used reasonable and honest diligence in their conduct of the appeal.

Two reported cases Mir Nawab v. Hardeo (2) and Daya Singh v. Buta Singh (3) have been cited to us in which this Court held that an appellants' ignorance of the death of a respondent was no sufficient cause for setting aside an abatement, but each of these was decided upon its own facts and it is impossible to decide a question of this nature on generalities and independently of the particular circumstances of the particular case before the Court. Here we have got an affidavit that the appellants, Tirath Ram and Lachhmi Narain, one of them a minor and the other his brother and next friend a mere youth, were absent from Multan for the eminently laudable purpose of prosecuting their studies. The respondents have not challenged this statement by counter-affidavit, and we see no reason why it should not be believed. It is scarcely necessary to say that a student, who wishes to do himself justice, concentrates his full attention upon his work, and we cannot presume, without any testimony to support the assertion, that the appellants

(2) 12 Ind. Cas. 871; 60 P. R. 1911; 42 P. L. R. 1912; 238 P. W. R. 1911.

(3) 38 Ind. Cas. 7; 118 P. R. 1916; 189 P. W. R. 1916.

TIRATH RAM V. MUHAMMAD ABDUL RAHIM SHAH.

came back to Multan at Christmas 1918. We hold that sufficient cause is established and we set aside the abatement and order that Haq Nawaz, minor, under the guardianship of Khaliq Dad, be made a respondent in place of Rahim Dad, deceased.

We come now to the merits of the appeal.

The defendants pleaded in the Trial Court that there was no pathway, that the plaintiffs were not owners, that they had no right of easement, and that the suit could not lie without the sanction of the Collector under section 91, Civil Procedure Code, read with section 93. The issues with which we are concerned were drawn as follows:—

1. Is the land in suit the plaintiffs' property?

2. If not, had the plaintiffs an unobstructed and continuing right of easement for 20 years before the institution of the suit?

3. Do sections 91 and 93, Civil Procedure Code bar the suit?

The Trial Court decided the first issue against the plaintiffs. The decision was challenged in appeal but the learned District Judge recorded no specific finding upon it.

The second issue was decided against the plaintiffs by the Subordinate Judge and in their favour by the learned District Judge.

On the third issue the Subordinate Judge held that the suit came within the scope of section 91. The District Judge held that it did not.

We uphold the learned District Judge on this latter point. The form of the pleadings in no way supports the contention of Mr. Tek Chand for the appellants that the suit is of the character referred to in section 91. The fact that the plaintiffs' witnesses described the place in dispute by such expressions as shar-i-am cannot affect the pleadings, nor can we hold that these are modified by a casual statement recorded as made by the plaintiffs' Counsel during the hearing of evidence in reply to some question by the Subordinate Judge that the place "is a public pathway." The plaintiffs clearly claimed enjoyment of a right of way as an easement. It is true, as pointed out by Mr. Tek Chand, that in order to constitute an easement there must be two distinct tenements one dominant and the other servient, and that an easement cannot be claimed except with reference to the claimant's connection with a certain tenement. This requisite is fulfilled here. The easement is claimed for the bashindgi abadi and the abadi is the alleged dominant tenement. No relief is sought in respect of a public nuisance and there is no claim and so there can be no declaration, that the place in suit is a public thoroughfare and has been obstructed as such.

The learned District Judge's method of deciding the second issue relating to the claim to an easement is one which we are constrained to hold was not in accordance with law and it is necessary to return the appeal for re-decision. None of the evidence produced in the Trial Court by the plaintiffs was discussed or noticed. The learned District Judge visited the spot, and recorded that the result of his inspection raised so strong a presumption that the right of way had existed since the abadi was built that the burden of proof initially on the plaintiffs shifted at once on to the defendants, who denied the right of way. The judgment proceeded, "I am myself satisfied that whether or not the pathway now running along the western edge of the valley is part of the old Khasra No. 196, the plaintiffs have undoubtedly the right to use it and have exercised this right since the basti was inhabited. To deny the right by judicial decision would be a monstrous oppression."

It was laid down in Ahmad Sahib Shutari v. Magnesite Syndicate Ltd. (4), that a judgment should not be based solely on the result of a personal local inspection made by the Judge, and both this ruling and the strictures passed by the Privy Council on the procedure of the Court below in Kessowji Issur v. G. I. P. Railway Company (5) are peculiarly applicable here. The learned District Judge had to adjudicate upon the state of affairs existing when the suit was filed. The suit was filed on 23rd November 1914. The District Judge visited the spot in July 1918. He ignored all the evidence given about conditions at the time of suit and prior thereto, and based his decision entirely upon what he himself observed nearly four years after the institution of the suit.

(4) 29 Ind. Cas. 60; 39 M. 501; 2 L. W. 460; 17 M. L. T. 387; 28 M. L. J. 598.

(5) 31 B. 381; 6 C. L. J. 5; 11 C. W. N. 721; 17 M. L. J. 347; 4 A. L. J. 461; 9 Bom. L. R. 671; 2 M. L. T. 435; 34 I. A. 115 (P. C.).

SARVOITHAMA RAO V. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

The decision on the preliminary point of onus of proof was for this reason entirely wrong and we accept the appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the District Judge and remand the appeal under O. XL r. 23, for re-decision in accordance with law upon the evidence. Stamp on appeal will be refunded and costs will be costs in the cause.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITIONS NOS. 705, 758
AND 828 OF 1922.

January 11, 1923.

Present.—Sir Walter S. Schwabe, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Wallace.

C. SARVOITHAMA RAO—PETITIONER

versus

THE CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920), s. 352—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Municipal Election—Rejection of Nomination Paper by Chairman—Local Government declining jurisdiction to decide as to validity of Nomination Paper—Injunction restraining holding of election pending decision of civil suit—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Election held—Injunction restraining Councillor elected from acting, whether can be granted—Civil suit, maintainability of—Remedy.

A Nomination Paper put in on behalf of a candidate for election as a Municipal Councillor was wrongly rejected by the Chairman of the Municipal Council and on the rejection of the Nomination Paper, the only other candidate was declared under the rules to have been duly elected. In a suit by the candidate whose nomination was rejected for an injunction to restrain the elected candidate from acting as Councillor and the Chairman of the Council from holding a meeting of the Council, as then constituted for the purpose of electing a new Chairman:

Held, (1) that the plaint disclosed no cause of action against either of the defendants; the successful candidate did nothing wrong, as he simply found himself elected and proposed to take his seat nor could the Court be properly asked to restrain the Chairman from holding a meeting of the Council; [p. 623, col. 2.]

(2) that the proper remedy of the plaintiff was to proceed by an Election Petition to set aside the election which had already taken place. [p. 623, col. 2.]

Where after the rejection of the Nomination Paper of a candidate for a Municipal Council the election regarding the other candidates validly nominated was to be held and the candidate whose Nomination Paper was rejected attempted under rule 31 of the Madras Municipal Election Rules to refer the question of the rejection of his nomination to the Local Government and the Local Government wrongly declined jurisdiction and thereupon he brought a suit for a declaration that his Nomination Paper was wrongly rejected by the Chairman and for an injunction to restrain him from holding the election without the plaintiff as duly nominated candidate and also to compel him to hold an election with plaintiff as a candidate:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff was not bound to wait till the election was held; he had a cause of action to prevent by injunction the carrying out of the threatened action which would have the effect of illegally interfering with his rights; [p. 624, col. 1.]

(2) that section 352 of the Madras District Municipalities Act did not preclude a suit for an injunction to restrain the doing of a threatened wrongful act to the detriment of the plaintiff; [p. 624, col. 2.]

(3) that the Local Government having declined jurisdiction to interpret the rules and there being no conclusive ruling on the point, notwithstanding rule 31 of the Madras Municipal Election Rules, the Civil Court had jurisdiction to inquire into and decide the matter. [p. 624, col. 2.]

Per Schwabe, C. J.—If a man entitled to vote or be a candidate at an election is wrongfully deprived of that right, an action for damages lies against the person so depriving him; but if the act by which the right is interfered with is done in a judicial capacity, no action for damages will lie unless the act is done maliciously, i.e., dishonestly. [p. 623, col. 2; p. 624, col. 1.]

Ashby v. White, 1 Sm. L. C. (11th Ed.) 240 at p. 295 and (10th Ed.) 231; 2 Ld. Raym. 938; 14 Howell St. Tr. 695; 92 E. R. 126, Municipal Board of Agra v. Asharfi Lal, 65 Ind. Cas. 984; 44 A. 202; 20 A. L. J. 1; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 1, Pickering v. James, (1873) 8 C. P. 489 at p. 509; 42 L. J. C. P. 217; 29 L. T. 210; 21 W. R. 786, relied on.

Apart, however, from an action for damages in respect of past acts, there is also a cause of action of a different nature to prevent by injunction the carrying out of any threatened action which would have the effect of illegally interfering with the plaintiff's rights. Where there is a legal right which can be asserted in law or equity, a Court of Equity can grant an injunction in protection of that right. [p. 624, col. 1.]

Aslatt v. Southampton Corporation, (1881) 16 Ch. D. 143; 50 L. J. Ch. 31; 43 L. T. 464; 29 W. R. 117 45 J. P. 111, Richardson v. Methley School Board, (1893) 3 Ch. 510; 62 L. J. Ch. 943; 3 R. 701; 69 L. T. 308; 42 W. R. 27, relied on.

Per Wallace, J.—The right of being nominated to stand as a candidate for a Municipal election is a legal character within the meaning of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act; but this legal character is itself the creation of a specific Statute and where the Statute itself sets up a proper Tribunal for trying cases of the infringement of the right to such a legal character and that Tribunal has functioned judicially, the Civil Court has no jurisdiction to deal with a case of an alleged infringement of that right. [p. 625, col. 1.]

SARVOTHAMA RAO v. CHAIRMAN MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

But where the duly constituted tribunal has declined jurisdiction and refused to try the question of the right of a party to a legal character the aggrieved party is thus bereft of his statutory and constitutional remedy, and it is the province of the Civil Court as a Court of Equity to fill the vacuum created and to exercise the jurisdiction which the proper tribunal has failed to exercise. [p. 626, col. 2.]

Accordingly, where the Local Government which is the statutory tribunal in a particular case, misinterprets its own rules as giving it no jurisdiction to decide the validity of a Nomination Paper at a Municipal election, the ordinary Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for that relief and to grant a proper temporary injunction retaining matters in status quo ante until the suit is tried. [p. 626, col. 2; p. 629, col. 1.] (Case-Law English and Indian, considered.)

Petitions Nos. 758 and 828 of 1922 under section 115 of Act V of 1908 and Petition No. 705 of 1922 under section 115 of Act V of 1908 and section 197 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order, dated 13th October 1922, passed by the District Court of Chingleput, in Miscellaneous Appeals Nos. 37, 39 and 38 of 1922 in Original Suits Nos. 454, 462 and 461 of 1922, on the file of the Court of the District Munsif of Poonamalle.

Mr. M. S. Venkatarama Iyer (with him Messrs. A. K. Madhava Rao and Janakirama Iyer), for the Petitioners.—These are petitions to revise orders of District Judge of Chingleput dissolving temporary injunctions issued by the District Munsif in three suits to declare the plaintiffs therein as having been duly nominated as candidates at certain Municipal elections and for injunctions against the Chairman restraining him from holding an election and a meeting of the Council. The Nomination Papers in two of the three cases were rejected on the ground that the Ward numbers were not mentioned and in the other that the thumb impression of the seconder was not attested.

The rejections were all of them clearly wrong. Since the Rules do not provide for any of these at all,

A question of jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to entertain the suit has been raised.

The right to stand as a candidate and be nominated as such is undoubtedly a civil right. It is a right to a status and is a legal character within the meaning of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act and a suit for declaration as to such right, therefore, lies.

Sabhapati Singh v. Abdul Gaffur (1), Nataraja Mudaliar v. Municipal Council of Mayavaram (2), Mella Ataul Huq v. Chairman of Manickirola Municipality (3), Narendra Nath Mitter v. Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (4).

Even if section 42 of Specific Relief Act does not in terms apply plaintiff is entitled to bring a suit for the declaration of his right to stand as a candidate. Section 42 is not exhaustive of the declaratory suits entertainable by Civil Courts; see Lakshminarasimha v. Ramalingam Pillai (5), Robert Fischer v. Secretary of State for India (6). This is really a suit to set right the infringement or contravention of a statutory right. The onus of proving want of jurisdiction of the Civil Court is on the defendant. (See section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code). Srimath Kidambi v. Pitipiti Kutumbayudu (7).

The next question is if the cognisance of the suit is barred by any express or implied provision of law.

Rule 1 of the Municipal Election Rules deals only with the remedy after an election is held, not before. That rule cannot apply.

Rule 31 empowers the Local Government to decide questions relating to interpretation of rules otherwise than in connection

(1) 24 C. 107; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 736.

(2) 12 Ind. Cas. 311; 36 M. 120 at p. 125; 10 M. L. T. 219; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 233; 21 M. L. J. 878.

(3) 57 Ind. Cas. 960; 48 C. 378; 24 C. W. N. 969.

(4) 48 Ind. Cas. 314; 22 C. W. N. 943; 28 C. L. J. 289; 46 C. 119.

(5) 59 Ind. Cas. 245; 39 M. L. J. 319 at p. 321; 12 L. W. 202; (1920) M. W. N. 519; 28 M. L. T. 205.

(6) 22 M. 270; 3 C. W. N. 161; 26 I. A. 16; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 459; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 192 (P. C.).

(7) 25 Ind. Cas. 891; 39 M. 21 at p. 22; 27 M. L. J. 233.

SAKVOTHAMA RAO V. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

with Election inquiry. The present cases are not, however, cases of interpretation of rules at all but of their application to proved facts in a given case.

Secondly, the question of interpretation can arise under that rule only on a reference by the Municipal Chairman himself and a private party has no right of reference at all to the Government.

Thirdly, even if it is a case of interpretation of rules a decision of the Local Government can be final so far as it goes only as between the superior and inferior officers of the Government and cannot oust the ordinary jurisdiction of the Civil Court.

Sri Raja Simhadri Appa Rao v. Chelasanane Bhadrappa (8), Municipal Board, Agra v. Ashrafi Lal (9).

In order to oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court the language must be clear, express and unambiguous and there is a well recognised presumption against ouster of jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Maxwell's Interpretation of Statutes, Chapter V, section 1, 3rd Edition, pages 193-195, Bhupendra Nath Basu v. Ranajit Singh (10).

Fourthly, in any case, even if there was an original bar on account of the creation of a special tribunal under rule 31, the bar has been removed in the present cases when the Local Government has declined to act. There is no final, legal or conclusive decision or adjudication by any authoritative tribunal and the decision of the tribunal that it has or has no jurisdiction cannot be final and is obviously subject to consideration by Civil Courts. See In re Sharafaly Mamooji (11), Ganesh Mahadev v. Secretary of State for India (12); Nataraja Mudaliar v. Municipal Council of Mayavaram (2).

Hence rule 31 does not stand in plaintiff's way. Neither section 352 of the District Municipalities Act affects, the plaintiff's right of suit. It is confined to acts done and not to acts threatened, necessitating a preventive remedy. Further, the protection is only in respect of acts done in "good faith," which means, according to the definition in the Madras General Clauses Act of 1891, "done with due care and attention." In the present case, there was no care since the rejection was obviously due at least to an imperfect reading or understanding of the rules by the Chairman.

See Izzat Ali v. Muhammad Sharafatullah Khan (13), 23 Halsbury's Laws of England, 350, 356.

Again, the act of the Chairman in rejecting the Nomination Papers was clearly of a ministerial or executive character and not judicial, and even if it is judicial, a right of suit is not barred in cases where there has been merely colourable and illusory exercise of discretion as in the present cases. See Leslie Williams v. Haines Thomas Giddy (14), Gell v. Taja Noora (15), Reg. v. Tynmouth Rural District Council (16).

That being my right and there being no bar, the next question is what are my remedies. I am entitled both to a mandatory and preventive injunction.

That a Civil Court will grant a mandatory injunction when there would be no other adequate remedy for an aggrieved party is well established by the decisions in Narendra Nath Mitter v. Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (4), Molla Attaul Huq v. Chairman of Manicktola Municipality (3).

Wherever, in Presidency Towns, a writ of mandamus can be issued under section 45, a mandatory injunction can be issued under the Specific Relief Act, section 55. Narendra Nath Mitter v. Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (4).

At any rate, where a subject has rights secured to him under the Statute he must be protected in the enjoyment of such rights and threatened infringement will be prevented by preventive injunction.

(8) 30 M. 41; 1 M. L. T. 414.

(9) 65 Ind. Cas. 984; 44 A. 202; 20 A. L. J. 1; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 1.

(10) 20 Ind. Cas. 676; 41 C. 384 at p. 386.

(11) 7 Ind. Cas. 958; 34 B. 659 at p. 661; 12 Bom. L. R. 737.

(12) 49 Ind. Cas. 427; 43 B. 221; 21 Bom. L. R. 27.

(13) 39 Ind. Cas. 553; 39 A. 516 at p. 519; 15 A. L. J. 541.

(14) 11 Ind. Cas. 509; 21 M. L. J. 641; 15 C. W. N. 669; 10 M. L. T. 288 (P. C.).

(15) 27 B. 307; 5 Bom. L. R. 133.

(16) (1896) 2 Q. B. 219; 44 W. R. 646.

SARVOTHAMA RAO V. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

See Aslati v. Southampton Corporation (17); Richardson v. Methley School Board (18), Municipal Board, Agra v. Ashrafi Lal (9); Robert Fischer v. Secretary of State for India (6).

Mr. K. S. Krishnaswami Iyer (with him Mr. T. M. Kasturi), for the Respondent.—In two of these three cases, it is necessary to remember the elections have been completed and the other candidates have been returned and they stand on a different footing from the other case. Whatever may be the case as to the third, the two suits do not lie.

The first position I take is that there is no right of suit in regard to a judicial act and it is based on principles of public policy that a public officer should not be harassed by suits in regard to acts done judicially in the performance of his public duties unless there is proved dishonesty and mala fides.

No such suggestion or allegation has been made in the present case.

A Returning Officer's functions are partly judicial and partly ministerial; but the rejection of a Nomination Paper is undoubtedly a judicial act; see Woodward v. Sarsons (19), Reg. v. Collins (20), Akers v. Howard (21), Pritchard v. Bangor Corporation (22), [vide also Izzat Ali v. Muhammad Sharaf-ullah Khan (13), Municipal Board, Agra v. Ashrafi Lal (9) as to distinction between judicial and ministerial acts].

Unless, therefore, wilful malice is proved there can be no cause of action against the rejection of a Nomination Paper by Returning Officer. See Pickering v. James (23), Ashby v. White (24).

Where a special tribunal has been constituted by the Legislature for decision of (17) (1881) 16 Ch. D. 143; 50 L. J. Ch. 31; 43 L. T. 464; 29 W. R. 117; 45 J. P. 111.

(18) (1893) 3 Ch. 510; 62 L. J. Ch. 943; 3 R. 701; 69 L. T. 308; 42 W. R. 27.

(19) (1875) 10 C. P. 733; 44 L. J. C. P. 293; 32 L. T. 867.

(20) (1877) 2 Q. B. D. 30; 46 L. J. Q. B. 257; 36 L. T. 192.

(21) (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 739 at p. 751; 55 L. J. Q. B. 273; 54 L. T. 651; 34 W. R. 609; 50 J. P. 519.

(22) (1888) 13 A. C. 241; 57 L. J. Q. B. 313; 58 L. T. 502; 37 W. R. 103; 52 J. P. 564.

(23) (1873) 8 C. P. 489 at p. 509; 42 L. J. C. P. 217; 29 L. T. 210; 21 W. R. 786.

(24) 1 Sm. L. C. (11th Ed.) 240 at p. 295 and (10th Ed.) 231; 2 Ld. Raym. 938; 14 Howell St. Tr. 695; 92 E. R. 126.

certain questions arising under the Act, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is clearly ousted. The right of standing as a candidate in a Municipal election is itself a statutory right and infringements thereof be governed by specific provisions. There is no general right of suit at all. Bhaishankar Nana-bhai v. Municipal Corporation of Bombay (25); Nataraja Mudaliar v. Municipal Council of Mayavaram (2); Lakshminarasimha v. Ramalingam Pillai (5).

Here, after an election the election tribunal is alone competent to hear petition and before election the Local Government is constituted the tribunal. See section 36 and rule 31 of the Election Rules.

Section 352 of the District Municipalities Act bars the present suit.

The scope of the section is not restricted to acts done but includes also cases of injunction. Under the almost identical provisions of section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code it has been held at any rate by this High Court that notice to Secretary of State must be given even in suits for injunction.

See Superintending Engineer, Bezwada v. Chitturi Ramakrishnayya (26), Secretary of State v. Kalekhan (27), Samanthala Koti Reddi v. Pothuri Subbiah (28).

Further, there is no question of want of good faith at all and section 352 is a complete answer to plaintiff's suit.

There is again another remedy open to the aggrieved party, namely, section 36 of the District Municipalities Act under which the Governor in Council may prohibit the doing of any action by the Chairman under the Act or under colour of the Act if it is in excess of his powers.

Again, under rule 31 of the Election Rules the Local Government is constituted the sole tribunal for deciding questions of interpretation of rules. The point for decision is whether or not the rules require the Nomination Paper to contain certain particulars.

(25) 31 B. 604; 9 Bom. L. R. 417.

(26) 58 Ind. Cas. 885; 39 M. L. J. 151 at p. 152; 12 L. W. 193; (1920) M. W. N. 495; 28 M. L. T. 163.

(27) 16 Ind. Cas. 947; 37 M. 113; (1912) M. W. N. 786; 23 M. L. J. 181; 12 M. L. T. 224.

(28) 46 Ind. Cas. 86; 41 M. 792; 7 L. W. 586 34 M. L. J. 494; 23 M. L. T. 357; (1918) M. W. 414 (F. B.).

SARVOTHAMA RAO v. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

Where the party has had a decision, right or wrong, by the Local Government there is no power in the Civil Court to interfere with that decision.

But what exactly is the plaintiff's right. A right to vote or stand as a candidate may be a civil right but there is no civil right recognized at every intermediate stage leading up to the standing as a candidate. The right of nomination is only one of the steps leading up to the right to stand. Every infringement of the rules does not confer a civil right. Right to stand as a candidate may be a civil right but there is no civil right to being nominated.

Assuming there is a civil right, the remedy is only by way of damages. See Ashby v. White (24) and not to sue for declaration or for injunction while the election is still going on.

Rule 1 provides for an Election Petition after the election is over and the improper refusal of a Nomination Paper is one of the grounds on which an election can be set aside. That excludes impliedly a right of action in respect of such rejection otherwise than at an election enquiry.

As no suit would lie, no injunction can be granted. In any case, the Court will not by an order of injunction compel the Chairman to do what he has no power to do. There is no provision of law under which the Chairman can revise or review or cancel his orders. He has no option but to proceed with the election. Rogers on Election page 577, Pritchard v. Bangor Corporation (22).

JUDGMENT.

Schwabe, C. J.—These are civil revision petitions in three suits, all arising out of the Municipal elections for Saidapet. The first Civil Revision Petition No. 705 is in a suit which asks for a declaration that a Nomination Paper put in on behalf of the plaintiff as a candidate for election as a Municipal Councillor was wrongly rejected by the Chairman of the Council, the defendant, and for an injunction to restrain him from holding an election without the plaintiff as a duly nominated candidate, and also to compel him to hold an election with the plaintiff as a candidate.

The other two Civil Revision Petitions Nos. 758 and 828, are in suits by two persons, whose Nomination Papers were also rejected, against two other candidates who being the only other candidates for the Wards in question were by the rules deemed to have been elected when these Nomination Papers were rejected. The claim in the suits is for an injunction to restrain these persons from acting as Councillors and also against the Chairman, who is made a party for this purpose, to restrain him from holding a meeting of the Council as now constituted for the purpose of electing a new Chairman.

In the first case, and in one of the others, the rejection of the Nomination Papers was on the ground that it did not give the number of the Ward for which the candidates desired to stand; and in the other case, on the ground that the thumb-mark of the seconder of the candidate had not been attested.

The District Munsif of Ponnamalle granted interim injunctions in all three cases, the District Judge on appeal dissolved them all.

I am clear that the rejection of the Nomination Papers was not in law justified in any of the three cases, and that all three plaintiffs ought to have been treated as duly nominated.

In the two latter suits, I am, however, of opinion that the injunctions ought not to have been granted, because the plaints in them disclosed no cause of action against the defendants. The successful candidates have done nothing wrong. They have simply found themselves elected and, therefore, as their duty is, propose to take their seats. Nor do I think that any Court can properly be asked to grant an injunction restraining the Chairman from holding a meeting of the Council as at present constituted. It is open to these plaintiffs to proceed by Election Petitions. In my judgment, there being no cause of action against the defendants in these two suits there can be no ground for granting an injunction.

Turning now to Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922, if a man entitled to vote or to be a candidate at an election is wrongfully deprived of that right, an action for damages lies against the person so depriving him. This was established in England in Ashby v. White (24), which case has since been uniformly followed, and in my judgment this is also the law of this country as was stated in Municipal Board, Agra v.

SARVOTHAMA RAO v. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

Asarfi Lal (9). But this statement requires qualification, for if the act by which the right is interfered with is an act done in a judicial capacity, then the rule applies that no action lies unless the act is done maliciously, which in this context really means dishonesty; see Pickering v. James (23), particularly the judgment of Brett, J., at page 509. In this case the Chairman was acting in a judicial capacity in rejecting these nominations and it is not alleged that he acted dishonestly and, therefore, no action would lie for damages against him. But there may still be a cause of action of a different nature, not in respect of the Chairman's past acts, but to prevent by injunction the carrying out of any threatened action by him which would have the effect of illegally interfering with the plaintiff's rights; and, in my judgment, this is such a case. The Chairman has unlawfully rejected the plaintiff's Nomination Paper and he has announced his intention of holding an election for Ward No. 5 without permitting the plaintiff to be a candidate. I do not think that the law is such that the plaintiff must wait until the election is held and then bring an Election Petition, which is bound to succeed; nor, indeed, would that remedy give him all that he is entitled to, because after the Election Petition had succeeded, there would have to be fresh nominations and there might be other candidates in the field that he would not now have to meet, to say nothing of the trouble and expense that he would necessarily be put to. There is ample authority to support this view. In Aslatt v. Corporation of Southampton (17), where it was proposed to hold an election of an Alderman of a Borough in the place of the plaintiff, who, it was wrongly alleged, had vacated his seat, the Court of Chancery interfered by an injunction forbidding the holding of the election. In Richardson v. Methley School Board (18), that Court granted an injunction to prevent the holding of an election for the post of School Master in place of the plaintiff, who was wrongly alleged to be disqualified for the office, and it was laid down that, where there is a legal right which can be asserted in law or equity a Court of Equity can grant an injunction in protection of that right. I have no doubt that this Court possesses the same powers under the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and, in my judgment, this is a case for exercising them. Reliance is placed by the defendant on section 352 of the Madras District Municipalities Act, 1920, which protects the Chairman from suits in respect of acts done in his official capacity, but, in my judgment, there is nothing in that section to preclude a suit being brought to restrain him from doing a threatened wrongful act to the detriment of another. It is also contended that no action lies because the decision of the Chairman is final and conclusive. I can find nothing in the rules to make it so. Under rule 31, if any question arises as to the interpretation of the rules, otherwise than in connection with an Election inquiry, the question shall be referred to the Local Government whose decision shall be final. The plaintiff tried to refer the question of the rejection of his nomination, which was a question of the interpretation of the rules, to the Local Government but the Local Government declined jurisdiction in the matter on the grounds, as they inform us through the Government Solicitor, that the matter had not been referred to them by the Chairman, or otherwise officially, and that the matter was already sub judice. The result is, that there has been no conclusive ruling on the point and it is open to us to decide the matter.

I venture to express a hope that it may be possible for the Local Government, acting under section 36 of the Act, to cancel the rejection of this nomination by the Chairman and direct the election to be held with the plaintiff as a candidate. They will, no doubt, also consider whether any action can be taken in the other two cases so as to avoid the necessity of an Election Petition.

The defendant must pay the costs of the proceedings for injunction before the District Munsif and before the District Judge and of this Petition No. 705. The plaintiffs in the other two suits must pay the costs of these petitions Nos. 758 and 828.

Wallace, J.—These petitions are all petitions to restore the order of the District Munsif granting temporary injunctions pending disposal of the petitioners' suits. Certain general features are common to all and with these I shall first deal.

SARVOTHAMA RAO V. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

The Nomination Papers of the three petitioners as candidates for the Municipal election were declared invalid by the Chairman. In two cases there was only the other candidate, who was declared duly elected, and in the other case the election has not yet been held. All the three candidates are suing for declarations that their nominations were proper and that they were entitled to stand. The original Court, by injunction, has in the former two cases restrained the duly elected candidates from sitting, and in the latter case, Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922 before us, has restrained the holding of an election. The District Judge on appeal dissolved all the three injunctions, and we are now asked to restore them pending disposal of the petitioner's suits, framed to restore to them the right to stand as a candidate of which they have been deprived.

2. The main contention of the respondents in all the cases is that the suits themselves will not lie and, therefore, no injunctions can be granted. The District Munsif in his final order granting injunctions avoided deciding that question. It would have been better if he had decided the suits and the injunction petitions together. It is impossible in deciding the propriety of these injunctions to avoid deciding on the maintainability of the suits.

3. The petitioners' chief contention is that the suits are maintainable under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act as being suits by persons entitled to legal character for the declaration of their title. That the general right of being nominated to stand as a candidate for a Municipal election is a legal character cannot, I think, admit of doubt, but before it follows that section 42 will give a right of suit, we have to note that this legal character is itself the creation of a specific Statute, the District Municipalities Act, V of 1920, and that it is settled law that where a Statute itself sets up a proper tribunal for trying cases of the infringement of the right to such a legal character and that tribunal has functioned judicially, the Civil Court will have no jurisdiction. So that we have to examine, firstly, what is the nature of the infringement of the right complained of; secondly, is there a tribunal appointed by the Act or the Rules under it to deal judicially or quasi-judicially with such an infringement, and thirdly, if there is one, has it functioned?

4. As I conceive the position, no one is denying the petitioners' general right to be nominated to stand as candidates in this or in other elections, provided that their Nomination Papers are in proper form. No one, least of all the Chairman, is concerned to deny that the petitioners were entitled to stand if their interpretation of the rules is correct and if their Nomination Papers were in proper form, and no one, least of all the petitioners, is concerned to deny that they were not entitled to stand if the Chairman's interpretation of the rules is correct and their Nomination Papers were not in proper form.

5. Therefore, the only question of substance that the suits really raise is, whether or not the petitioners' Nomination Papers were in proper form, that is, whether the rules on this matter have been properly followed. No allegation of bad faith is made against the Chairman, and there is no contention that he deliberately misinterpreted or disobeyed perfectly clear rules with the object of depriving any one of his lawful rights. Hence, we must take it that the Chairman honestly considered that he was conforming to the rules when he rejected the three nominations. The position then is this: that the Chairman in good faith, although mistakenly, in my opinion, held the meaning of the rules to be in one way, while the petitioners hold it to be another. The real point at issue and the point which the District Munsif who has to try the suits must decide, therefore, is merely whether the rules have been properly interpreted, and according as his interpretation inclines towards the petitioners' view or the Chairman's view, the petitioners will or will not have a cause of action. If the petitioners get a decision of the proper authority, whose decision is final in this matter, interpreting the rules in the manner for which they contend, their rights will be once for all restored.

6. Is the Civil Court then the final authority for that purpose, and will a civil suit lie, which, in essence is merely calling upon the Civil Court to interpret these rules regarding the nomination of candidates for election? I think that the answer would ordinarily be in the negative for the short reason that, as I read the rules, another tribunal is set up for that very purpose. Rule 31 of the Election Rules clearly lays down that "if any question arises as to the interpretation of these rules otherwise than in connection with an Election enquiry, the question shall be referred to the Local Government whose decision shall be final," that is, the Local Government which drafted the rules is the final arbiter for deciding what the rules mean, and the Civil Court cannot ordinarily be asked to decide whether the Local Government's interpretation of its own rules is right or wrong.

SARVOTHAMA RAO v. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

7. There is, however, in one of these cases Civil Revision Petition No. 705, this peculiar feature which was disclosed to us only towards the close of the argument before us, namely, that the petitioner had, after the unfavourable ruling of the Chairman, made a reference to the Local Government and asked it to interpret the rules and revise the Chairman's order and permit his nomination, and that the Government's answer was that it declined to interfere. The answer is before us and on its face it is not clear on what grounds the Government declined to interfere, but the letter, also before us, produced by the Government Solicitor on 18th December 1922, makes it clear that the refusal to interfere was on the ground that the Local Government had no jurisdiction, Government apparently holding that, while a reference can be made in such a case under rule 31 it cannot be made by a private party but only by the Chairman. I am myself unable to read rule 31 so, and, so long as it is read so, so long will an aggrieved candidate be driven for his remedy to the cumbrous method of a civil suit and an injunction. The net result, however, is that the Government conceived that it had no jurisdiction and, therefore, declined to function as the judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal it was intended to be, because it thought that the case had not been properly brought before it.

8. Now, if this tribunal had functioned in this case and given a decision—whether right or wrong in the opinion of the Civil Court is immaterial—I am clear that the Civil Court would have no jurisdiction and the remedy provided by the Statute would have been used and exhausted and its decision on the matter would be final. But where the proper tribunal has declined jurisdiction and the aggrieved party is thus bereft of his statutory and constitutional remedy, it is the province of the Civil Court, as a Court of Equity, to fill the vacuum created and to exercise the jurisdiction which the proper tribunal has failed to exercise.

9. It cannot be admitted that the fiat of the Chairman in the matter of interpretation of the rules is absolutely final, and that he can by his mere order prevent a candidate from standing for election; such a principle is not deducible from the Act or the rules. The rules not only do not say so, but provide a method of appeal or revision from such an order. Self-Government has not progressed so far in the direction of autocracy. If Government then misinterprets its own rules as giving it no jurisdiction so as to take away from the aggrieved party the remedy provided by the rules, and thus, in effect, declares that it never intended itself to have jurisdiction then the Civil Court must take it either, that the Statute does not oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court or that the Government, nevertheless has jurisdiction, but refused to exercise it. In the latter case the Civil Court may legitimately be called on to interfere in order to decide whether a particular authority has or has not jurisdiction in a particular matter, and if that authority has jurisdiction but refused to exercise it, then to exercise it itself, and not to leave the aggrieved party without any remedy. In other words, the ordinary jurisdiction of a Civil Court may, in the first instance, be barred by a Statute or Rule setting up another authority, but when that Statute or Rule is not obeyed and that other authority refuses to function then the bar is removed, and there is nothing to prevent the Civil Court itself functioning.

10. The attitude of the Government in declining jurisdiction in this case is difficult to understand. In other cognate matters, a definite tribunal has been set up by it, which automatically ousts the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. In the case of an elector wrongfully excluded from the Electoral Roll, the rules under the Act provide for the decision of the case by a special tribunal. In the case of malpractices or irregular procedure at an election, the rules provided for an Election Petition being brought before the District Court or a Sub-Court. It is difficult, therefore, to believe that the Government intended to leave without remedy a candidate whose nomination was improperly rejected by the Chairman, and I am fortified by this, in my opinion, that the Government in this case wrongly declined to exercise a jurisdiction which was intended to be exercised by it.

SARVOTHAMA RAO v. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET.

11. In Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922, therefore, I am satisfied that the tribunal was then really set up but refused to function, and such refusal is the direct source for the petitioner's cause of action and the basis for the maintainability of his suit. On that ground the suit out of which that Civil Revision Petition has sprung is prima facie maintainable.

12. I shall now deal with the three points urged by the respondents against the maintainability of that suit and the other two suits. The first is section 352 of the District Municipalities Act. That is a bar to suits only in respect of acts done, but the real grievance in Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922 is not that the Chairman rejected the nomination but that he intends to hold an election without allowing petitioner to stand, that is that the Chairman is threatening to do wrong. Section 352 is no bar to such a suit. But it will, I conceive, be a bar to the other two suits from which Civil Revision Petitions Nos. 758 and 828 have sprung, since in my view, the election in those cases has been held, there being no difference between a case where a contest has taken place and a case where a contest has not taken place. If a candidate has been returned as elected, the election is over and has been held. Therefore, in these two cases the suits are to set aside acts done and not acts threatened. I am not at present, however, very sure of the correctness of this opinion and to prefer to decide the fate of these two suits on the next ground of objection.

13. This ground is that all the three suits are barred because the petitioners have their remedy by way of Election Petitions. In the case of Civil Revision Petitions Nos. 758 and 828 I am clear that this is a good objection. Elections have been held and there is a tribunal set up by the rules for the decision of petitions to set aside elections, a tribunal whose decision under the rules is final. The Statute itself, therefore, provides the remedy and the statutory tribunal has not refused jurisdiction. The ordinary Civil Courts, therefore, have at present no jurisdiction. In my opinion for this reason also these two suits are not maintainable in the Civil Court.

14. But as regards Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922 the position differs radically. The election has yet to be held and I am quite clear that any post-election remedy is wholly inadequate to afford the relief which the petitioner seeks, namely, that this election, now published, be stayed, until it can be held with himself as a candidate. It is no consolation to tell him that he can stand for some another election. It is no remedy to tell him that he must let the election go on and then have it set aside by petition and have a fresh election ordered. The fresh election may be under altogether different conditions and may bring forward an array of fresh candidates. The petitioner can only have his proper relief if the proposed election without him is stayed until his rejected nomination is restored and hence an injunction staying this election was absolutely necessary, unless the relief asked for was to be denied him altogether in limine. In most cases of this kind no doubt there will be difficulty for the aggrieved party to get in his suit in time before the threatened wrong is committed; but, when he has succeeded in so doing, the Court cannot stultify itself by allowing the wrong which it is asked to prevent to be actually consummated while it is engaged in trying the suit.

15. The third ground of objection relates more to the grant of the injunction in Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922 than to the suits themselves, and, that is, that this Court or any other cannot by injunction compel the Chairman to do what he has no longer any power to do, it being urged that the Chairman has no power under the rules to revise or cancel his own orders, and must automatically proceed to hold an election. I am not impressed by this argument. It is tantamount to saying that the Chairman has no power to set right an admitted wrong. I should hesitate to draw any such conclusion, and, in any case, the Chairman can apply for the intervention of the Local Government which under section 36 of the Act has ample powers to set right any blunder or mistake.

SARVOTHAMA RAO v. CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, SAIDAPET:

10. The cases quoted before us do not appear to me to affect these conclusions. Both sides have quoted freely from English Law, mostly from cases of mandamus and quo warranto, which clearly lay down that a Returning Officer is acting judicially in deciding on the validity of a nomination paper, and that, in respect of such judicial act, no suit for damages can be maintained against him. That is a different question. The case in Pritchard v. Bangor Corporation (22) is a case in which the Civil Court claimed jurisdiction to interfere with the order of the Returning Officer disqualifying a candidate as passed without jurisdiction and proceeded itself to decide on the validity of an election. That also was a case of mandamus. The only English cases really helpful are Aslatt v. Southampton Corporation (17), and Richardson v. Methley School Board (18) which follows on the former, in which injunctions similar to those now in controversy were granted in actions for an injunction by a Court of Equity, the injunctions being granted under section 25 of the Judicature Act, 1873.

17. As regards Indian Cases, apart from cases such as In re Surendra Chandra Ghose (29) and Narendra Nath Mitter v. Radha Charan Pal Bahadur (4) and In the matter of Amulyadhan Addy (30) founded on mandamus, the case in Sabhapat Singh v. Abdul Gaffur (1) is one in which it was declared generally that a suit by a candidate in a Mofussal election will lie for a declaration of his right to vote and to stand as a candidate, and that he was duly elected. It proceeded partly on the consideration of a saving clause in section 15 of the Bengal Municipal Act III of 1884, which it was held must be read into to previous Act of 1884 and partly on the ground, that if no such suit lay, there will be no way of upholding and maintaining such civic rights in the Mofussal. The grounds for this decision seem open to question since the rules under the Act of 1884 evidently provided for an election petition before the District Magistrate and the ratio decidendi would imply that section 42 of the Specific Relief Act will support such a suit in the Mofussal, though it cannot be called in aid in the Presidency Town, because section 45 of the Act, which was called in aid in that case and has so often, been called in aid in similar cases in Calcutta, implies, by force of clause (d), that there is no other remedy and, therefore, no remedy under section 42. I do not think that that case is of very much assistance. In Molla Ataul Huq v. Chairman of Manicktola Municipality (2) the question of jurisdiction was dealt with in a very summary manner, the want of jurisdiction not being seriously pressed, probably in consequence of the earlier ruling in Sabhapat Singh v. Abdul Gaffur (1).

18. In Municipal Board Agra v. Asharfi Lal (9) the suit was for damages for wrongful refusal to enter the voter's name on the Electoral Roll, and it may be noted that in that case the party had had his name already entered on the Electoral Roll by the District Magistrate before he came into Court, so that it does not help us to decide whether in Allahabad a suit for entry on the Electoral Roll or a similar relief will lie.

19. Coming to the Madras cases Nataraja Mudaliar v. Municipal Council of Mayavaram (2), relying on Bhaishankar Nanabhai v. Municipal Corporation of Bombay (25), declares that a civil suit will not lie to set aside an order of the Collector, (who was the tribunal designated under the rules under Act IV of 1884 to pronounce finally on the validity or the invalidity of an election), declaring an election invalid, after an enquiry has been held by him. The decision is clear that a Civil Court cannot, as it were, sit in appeal over a tribunal appointed by Government to decide such a question finally. No doubt the learned Judges in that case say that a suit would lie to declare that the plaintiff was a person qualified to vote and stand as a candidate and that so far is authority for the position that such a suit is not under all circumstances wholly unmaintainable. The case in Valli Ammal v. Corporation of Madras (31) proceeds on the general

(29) 49 Ind. Cas. 454; 45 C. 950.

(30) 50 Ind. Cas. 307; 46 C. 132.

(31) 16 Ind. Cas. 971; 38 M. 41; 12 M. L. T. 469; 23 M. L. J. 531; (1912) M. W. N. 1162.

NATHUNI RAI F. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

principle that the Legislature would not have intended the word "final" in a particular section of the Municipal Act to be so interpreted as to leave the Municipal Council to be a final Judge in its own cause. The principle is applicable to the present case, and, in so far as it declares the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to prevent such a wrong, it is in point.

20. The case in Lakshminarasimha v. Ramalingam Pillai (5) was sufficiently decided by one learned Judge on the ground that the particular rules of the Local Boards Act which he was considering, were ultra vires and could not, therefore, oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court but he also held that the rules in that particular case, if valid, would oust that jurisdiction. The other learned Judge concurred in the latter opinion. This case does not deal with the particular difficulty here, which is occasioned by the rules not being carried out.

21. I, therefore, agree that the correct principle is that, when a duly constituted tribunal has refused to try the question of the right of a party to the legal character of one entitled to be nominated to stand as candidate for an election, and there is no other remedy available, the ordinary Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for that relief and the right to grant a proper temporary injunction retaining matters in status quo ante until the suit is tried. Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922 is exactly such a case and the injunction granted by the original Court was, therefore, a proper one. In the other two cases, the election has been held and the petitioners have a remedy not yet employed or exhausted, namely, by way of Election Petition, and, therefore, their suits are at the least premature, and in my view at present unobtainable. The injunctions granted in those cases cannot, therefore, be upheld. In Civil Revision Petition No. 705 of 1922 the order of the District Judge should, therefore, be reversed and the injunction granted by the District Munsif restored. The other two Civil Revision Petitions should be dismissed.

V. N. V. & N. H.

C. R. P. No. 705 accepted.

C. R. P. Nos. 858, 828 dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREES
Nos. 398 TO 457, 554 TO 569, 571 TO 636, 638
TO 657, 659 TO 699 AND 785 OF 1921.

April 23, 1923.

Present :—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Ross.

NATHUNI RAI AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Maharajadhiraj SIR RAMESHWAR
SINGH BAHADUR—PLAINTIFF
—RESPONDENT.

Maharajaahiraj SIR RAMESHWAR
SINGH BAHADUR—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

DAMODAR DAS AND OTHERS—DEFEND-ANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Trees, whether belong to tenant—Burden of proof—Pleadings and proof—Custom set up not proved—Court, whether can find portion of custom set up proved.

Under the general law trees standing on land held by a tenant on cash-rent belong to the landlord and if any custom deviating from this general proposition is alleged, it must be proved conclusively by those who maintain it. [p. 631, col. 1.]

Semble:—Enquiries as to the existence of a custom are not on the same footing as those relating to a contract, and yet in modern times, since there has been attached to the form of pleadings less rigid adherence than in former days, a Court would have little hesitation in finding on the evidence in a case that, although an entire custom set up by a defendant does not exist, yet a material part of it does. [p. 638, col. 2; p. 639, col. 1.]

Eshenchunder Singh v. Shamchurn Bhutto, 11 M. I. A. 7; 6 W. R. P. C. 57; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 87; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 209; 20 E. R. 3, Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 21 A. 412; 1 Bom. L. R. 311; 3 C. W. N. 454; 26 I. A. 153; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 474; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 971 (P. C.); Ward v. Shepherd, (1817) 146 E. R. 367; 3 Price 608 and Desai Ranchhodas Vithaldas v. Rawal Nathubhai Kesabhai, 21 B. 110; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 75, distinguished.

Appeals from the decision of the District Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 7th October 1920, modifying a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 31st March 1920.

Messrs. L. N. Singh and D. P. Sinha, for the Appellants.

Messrs. S. Sultan Ahmad, Murari Prasad and R. K. Jha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Bucknill, J.—An important question is involved in these numerous second appeals from and applications in civil revision relating to a decision of the District Judge of Darbhanga, dated the 7th October 1920, modifying a decision of the Subordinate Judge of that place, dated the 31st of March of the same year. There are also cross-appeals by the respondent. The facts are substantially similar in all the suits and are extremely simple.

NATHUNI RAI V. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

The plaintiff is the Maharajadhiraj of Darbhanga and the defendants are occupancy raiyats in a Mouza called Narar Darbhanga, belonging to his estate. The dispute is simply as to whether the defendants can cut down and appropriate trees on the land which they occupy.

Now, in his plaint in Second Appeal No. 398 of 1921 (the papers in which I, throughout, shall for convenience alone refer), the plaintiff, after reciting that Mouza Narar belongs to him in his proprietary interest and that the defendants are Kashikars under the ticca system, alleges that they have legally no connection and concern with the timber of the Mango, Jack-fruit, Siso, Pithi, Babul and Gamhar trees which were, or are still, standing on the land occupied by the defendants and that when any such trees are cut down or fall down the plaintiff is legally entitled to appropriate the entire timber thereof. The plaintiff then details the alleged breaches of his recited rights, and, after setting out the value of the timber wrongly appropriated by the defendants, prayed for the following reliefs:—

(a) that on adjudication of title it might be held by the Court that the entire timber of the trees standing on the Gachhi of the defendants belongs to the plaintiff after they happen to fall or are cut down, and that the defendants have no connection and concern whatever therewith;

(b) that it might be held by the Court that the defendants had, without any right, cut down the trees and appropriated the timber thereof as detailed in his plaint and that he is, therefore, entitled to recover damages to the amount of the value as indicated by him.

The defendants in their written statement alleged that there is a custom prevailing in the Mouza where their lands are situated that the malik has no right to the trees standing on Khap (cash-rent-paying) lands but that the tenants are entitled to appropriate and sell the entire timber of the trees when they are cut and when they fall down. The defendants also maintained that the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation. In addition to this the defendants drew attention to a suit brought by the plaintiff a short time previously against two persons named Sondhari Rai and Bachan Rai in which the same question as in the present suit had been raised and in which he had been unsuccessful. The defendants further put forward certain other contentions, which are not here really material, traversing the allegation as to the number of trees alleged to have been cut and the value of the timber appropriated by them. The pleadings in all the other cases were substantially the same with minor differences which are not before us of any moment. On these pleadings the case went for trial before the Subordinate Judge. It will be observed that the principal question for determination is as to the allegation by the defendants of the custom existing in the village under which the tenantry have the right to cut trees and appropriate their timber without the permission or assent of the plaintiff and without paying him any compensation. There is also the subsidiary question as to whether the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation or affected by the previous decision in the case which the defendants mentioned in their written statement. Now, the Subordinate Judge drew up numerous issues: to five only of which I think it is necessary that I should refer. These issues are:—

No. 3. Is the plaintiff entitled to the timber alleged by him?

No. 4. Is there any custom by which the raiyats are to get the entire timber of the trees standing on their kashi lands?

No. 6. Is the suit barred by limitation?

No. 8. Are the trees Agachha (useless for utilization as timber) as alleged by the defendants; if so, can the claims lie?

No. 10. Is the plaintiff's claim barred by estoppel?

Now, it may be advantageous, before attempting to deal with the decisions at which the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge respectively arrived, to enunciate clearly the fundamental principles of law upon which the consideration of this case must be approached. It is common ground that, in cases where such a relationship of landlord and tenant as obtains in this case exists, the property in trees and their timber lies with the landlord and that, if any custom deviating from this general proposition is alleged, it must be proved conclusively by those who maintain it. In these cases the plaintiff pleaded the general law, the defendants pleaded a custom varying the general law to the effect that the tenants are entitled to cut trees as they wish and to appropriate to themselves the timber thereof. Having thus defined the law, it may now be stated that the Subordinate Judge found that the plaintiff was entitled only to half the timber of the trees and decreed the 127 suits in favour of the plaintiff on that basis but without costs. From this decision there were appeals and cross-appeals by the plaintiff and the defendants, respectively. The District Judge dismissed both without any order as to costs in favour of either party; he, however, slightly modified the judgment of the Subordinate Judge by holding as against the plaintiff that some kinds of trees which the Subordinate Judge had thought could not be regarded as properly falling within the category of timber or fruit trees (i.e., Agachha) ought not to be excluded from that classification. It is from this decision of the District Judge that these appeals and cross-appeals have now been preferred to this Court. It may be convenient to consider and deal with first the Issue No. 10 relative to estoppel. This question relates to what, if any, bearing a decision in a case which was brought by the plaintiff against one Sondhari Rai and others in the Small Cause Court of Darbhanga has on this suit: in that action the plaintiff alleged a claim similar to that in the present case against the defendants who were in the same position as are the defendants in these appeals. No evidence was, however, there adduced on behalf of the plaintiff to rebut certain testimony which was brought forward by the defendants in that case to show that the custom under which the tenants were entitled to cut the trees and appropriate their timber existed in this village. It was there held that the defendants had proved a custom and that the plaintiff failed. It is, I think, obvious, as is pointed out by the Subordinate Judge, that such a judgment could not affect any decision which ought to be arrived at in the present cases; as, here, the parties are entirely different. The matter, however, came to this Court in Civil Revision No. 132 of 1916 principally upon another point:—Namely, as to whether the Munsif was right, in taking into consideration what is known as the "Village Note"; this is a kind of memorandum, drawn up by Survey Officers at the time of Land Settlement Operations, which is supposed to give some account of, inter alia, any customs which exist in a locality concerned. The "Village Note" in respect of Mouza Narar was said to support the defendants' allegations but it was contended on behalf of the plaintiff in the revisional proceedings before this Court that it was of no evidential value. Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad, before whom the matter came, ruled that the Village Note did possess evidential force and should not be excluded from consideration. The Subordinate Judge has rightly pointed out that this previous decision by the Munsif, sitting as a Small Cause Court Judge and in a suit in which the defendants were not the same as those in these appeals, could not act as res judicata; whilst the District Judge has indicated that any argument that an entry in a Village Note to the effect that a landlord had given up his claim to the value of trees on khaf lands paying full bhit rent, could operate as an estoppel against him, in a suit in which he contended to the contrary, must obviously be fallacious.

NATHUNI RAI V. RAMESEWAR SINGH.

With regard to Issue No. 3 "Is the plaintiff entitled to the timber as alleged by him?" and Issue No. 4, "Is there any custom by which the *raiya*s are to get the entire timber of the trees standing on their kasht lands?" the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge have both correctly pointed out the fundamental principles of law. The former says it is clear that, according to well-established propositions of law, "the right to appropriate the entire timber of the trees standing over the tenant holdings belongs to the malik who is the proprietor of the soil. That being the case, the onus lies on the tenants (defendants) to prove a custom by which they are entitled to appropriate the entire timber of the trees standing over their nahdi holdings which are known as khap holdings. The question to be decided in these cases is as to whether the defendants have succeeded in proving custom in the manner alleged by them. I have carefully considered the nature of evidence adduced in these suits on behalf of the defendants that they have failed to prove any such custom as is alleged by them." The District Judge writes: "It has been decided in several cases that by the Common Law of India trees growing on tenants' lands are part of the soil and as such the right to appropriate the wood primarily belongs to the landlord. There are innumerable rulings on this point and it would serve no useful purpose to enumerate them here. As a matter of fact, this rule of Common Law was not questioned before me by either party. No exception is made in the case of trees planted by the tenants or their ancestors. The only exceptions allowable are in respect of comparatively valueless trees which come under the designation of Agchhas. Of course, the case of a tenant having a permanent right in the land is a different one. As, however, none of the defendants claim any permanent right to the lands it is not necessary for me to discuss the law relating to such tenants. This Common Law of India may, however, be modified by local custom or usage. But such custom or usage must be proved by the tenants." The Subordinate Judge and the District Judge, each then, continue to discuss the nature of the evidence upon which the defendants had placed reliance in order to prove the custom alleged by them; they both remark that it was essentially the same as that which had been adduced before the Munsif in the case which the plaintiff had brought against Sondhari Rai and they both, unhesitatingly, reject such evidence as supporting any such custom as they alleged. It may be, here, advantageous to quote from what the District Judge writes in his judgment upon this question as he summarises, in my view, very capably the value of the evidence. He writes, "I shall now examine the evidence of custom. Both sides have given evidence, oral and documentary, in support of their respective allegations. The documentary evidence on behalf of the tenants is practically the same as was filed in Sondhari Rai's case referred to above, with this exception that the judgment in Sondhari's case also is relied upon by the tenants in support of their allegations. The judgment of Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad in Sondhari's case, however, shows that the documentary evidence was not sufficient to prove any custom. Reasons in support of this finding are given in the judgment and I accept those reasons as my own. The case was practically decided on the oral evidence in that case, or rather, the absence of oral evidence on the side of the landlord. The question is, how far the judgment in Sondhari's case strengthens the position of the tenants in the present suits. The law, no doubt, is that a judgment though not inter partes is evidence and sometimes good evidence of custom in other suits. The judgment in Sondhari's case has, if possible, a greater value by reason of the fact that the present plaintiff was the plaintiff in that case. But it cannot operate as res judicata and the evidence of custom afforded by it can be rebutted. In the present case there is ample evidence on the record on the plaintiff's side to rebut the whole evidence, oral and documentary, on the defendant's side. It is also to be seen that Sondhari's case was a petty Small Cause Court one, in which the plaintiff was not expected to produce evidence so exhaustively. The evidence on the side of the plaintiff in these suits consists both of oral testimony and documents. The principal documents are lots of kabuliyats, including about 40 executed by the defendants or their predecessors-in-interest in 40 of these suits. All the kabuliyats are registered documents and most of them were executed in 1902, that is, shortly after the publication of the Record of Rights. There are, however, some earlier in date than the Survey proceedings. All the kabuliyats are almost to the same effect. The portions relevant for the present inquiries are paragraphs 7 and 9. In paragraph 7 the tenants agreed not to cut away the trees bearing fruits and those not bearing fruits from the demised lands without the consent of the malik and it is stated that this is according to previous custom. Paragraph 9 runs as follows: 'In pursuance of the terms enumerated in paragraph 10 of the former kabuliyat and in accordance with the previous usage prevailing in the village, I shall not sell trees bearing fruits and those not bearing fruits without permission in writing of the malik or his authorised agent.' It was contended by the learned Vakil for the tenants that these kabuliyats cannot help the plaintiff because, in the first place, the permission related to the cutting of the trees and there is always a distinction between the right to cut trees and the right to appropriate the wood after they fall down or are cut. No doubt, the two things are entirely different as has been held in the cases reported as Samsar Khan v. Lochin Dass (1) and Nafar Chandra Pal Chowdhuri v. Ram Lal Pal (2) and the notes to the same. But in these kabuliyats, the custom or usage is admitted in respect to both these rights separately. Paragraph 7 relates to the first right and paragraph 9 to the second right. Paragraph 9 says that permission is to be taken according to previous usage before selling trees and that half the value will go to the landlord. The kabuliyats, therefore, clearly show that according to the prevailing usage the tenants are to obtain the landlord's permission in selling the trees and the landlord is to get half the value. The Chalan and account papers proved by the plaintiff show clearly that all along the tenants did ask for permission and the malik got half the values of the trees. The number of instances proved by the plaintiff is innumerable. There is also oral evidence in support of the plaintiff's case that the right to the wood is all along with the landlord. The contrary evidence on the side of the tenants is worthless. Most of the witnesses are interested witnesses and some of them have themselves paid half the price of the wood to the landlord. In my opinion, therefore, the evidence on the plaintiff's side is overwhelming to rebut the oral and the documentary evidence on the side of the defendants."

NATHUNI RAI V. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

NATHUNI RAI v. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

Now, before I proceed to consider the arguments which have been addressed to us on behalf of the appellants (that is by the defendants) in these appeals in their endeavour to show that the District Judge was wrong in deciding that they had not proved the custom which they maintained, I think it is desirable to point out that the main contention which is strongly urged upon us by the learned Counsel who appeared for the plaintiff in his cross-appeal upon this point is that, having come to the conclusion as they did that the defendants had failed to prove the custom which they alleged, the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge, ought, so far as any question of custom was concerned, to have decided forthwith against the defendants. Instead of this, however, the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge, after having thus held that the defendants had not proved the custom pleaded, then proceeded to enquire as to whether they, upon the evidence adduced before them, could find any ground for thinking that the plaintiff was not entitled to the whole of the rights which he claimed; and, as I have already stated, their decision was that the plaintiff was only entitled to half the value of the timber of trees cut by the tenantry or fallen. It has been strongly contended on behalf of the plaintiff that, in thus making out a case for the defendants which was not the defendants' own case, and in thus in effect finding in favour of a custom which was not suggested by the defendants, the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge have both made a serious legal error. With this important question I shall deal later.

Now, the arguments which were put forward on behalf of the defendants in their attempt to show that the District Judge was wrong in thinking that the defendants had not proved the custom which they alleged, do not, I may at once say, appear to me to be of any great cogency. It was first urged that as in Sondbari's suit there had been a decision that a custom such as is here alleged by the defendants had been proved, that decision, if not absolutely conclusive, was of the highest evidential value. In this connection our attention was drawn to several cases: in Beg v. Allah Ditta (3) a general custom of agnatic succession put forward by claimants to property was traversed by

(1) 23 C. 854; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 567.

(2) 22 C. 742; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 493.

(3) 38 Ind. Cas. 354; 44 C. 749; 12 P. W. R. 1917; 21 M. L. T. 310; 32 M. L. J. 615; 19 Bom. L. R. 388; 45 P. R. 1917; 15 A. L. J. 525; 21 C. W. N. 842; 26 C. L. J. 175; 44 I. A. 89 (P. C.).

NATHUNI RAI V. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

the allegation of an established custom which was referred to in the Riwaj-i-am (Official Records of Custom). In Tulsi Mahton v. Jhandoo Pandey (4) it was similarly held that the Fard-Rawaj Bhaoli was receivable in evidence and of evidential value in proof of a custom of the nature of rental payable; whilst in Lekraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh (5) it was also held that the wajib-ul-arz (Village Administration Papers) was admissible in evidence in support of proof of custom. I do not think, however, that there is really anything which can be added usefully to what the District Judge has said with regard to the evidential value either of decision in a previous case between different parties or as to that of such matters as a Village Note, or papers of the class referred to in the cases just quoted. These latter are perhaps in a somewhat different category and of stronger utility than the first named, but, even so, are in no sense conclusive. It was next urged that the District Judge had not sufficiently discussed in his decision the evidence adduced by the defendants as to the existence of the custom and in particular had discarded the oral testimony given on their behalf in a very perfunctory manner. I do not, however, think that it can be said that the District Judge's judgment in this respect is materially irregular. He does not, it is true, discuss the oral evidence put forward by the defendants in any detail nor, in view of the very large number of witnesses (stated by the Subordinate Judge to be about 170) is it reasonable to suggest that he should have done so. The Subordinate Judge has himself said quite rightly: "It is not the largeness of their numbers but the quality of their deposition that is of use. I have carefully considered the nature of the evidence adduced by the defendants' witnesses which are generally of the same nature. Their statements do not appear to be truthful." And the District Judge, as does also the Subordinate Judge, points out that their evidence is entirely of interested character. I, therefore, think that there is no ground for differing from the view to which both the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge came, namely, that the defendants did not prove the custom which they alleged in their written statement.

Having now thus expressed my view that the District Judge was right in his conclusion that the defendants had not proved the custom pleaded it is next most convenient here to deal with the question which is the principal subject of the plaintiff's cross-appeal. I have already outlined how that cross-appeal arises. The plaintiff (respondent here) contends that it was not open to the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge to find a case for the defendants which they themselves never pleaded and that, even if it had been right for the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge to find evidence of some custom other than that pleaded, their finding was, in this case, based upon inferences which could not properly be drawn from the facts as placed before them. To both these arguments the defendants (appellants here) reply that it is open to a Court when a particular custom is pleaded to find one of a more limited nature than that adduced and that here the finding was warranted by the evidence.

It is particularly important, before considering the first of these two contentions, to observe carefully why the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge thought fit to enter upon such an enquiry. I must admit that I have felt some misgiving as to whether their action was correct. Under the general law the plaintiff had admittedly a good claim; the defendants had set up a custom that the tenantry was entitled to cut the trees and appropriate the timber; they had failed to prove such a custom; they had alleged no alternative.

I am inclined to think that the phrasing of the third issue "Is the plaintiff entitled to the timber as alleged by him?" was probably partly responsible for the pursuance of their investigations after it had been decided that the defendants' contention of custom as pleaded should be rejected; but this further enquiry was actually dealt with both by the Subordinate Judge and

(4) 38 Ind. Cas. 176; 2 P. L. J. 187; 1 P. L. W. 238.

(5) 5 C. 744; 6 C. L. R. 593; 7 I. A. 63; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 93; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 704; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 61; 4 Ind. Jur. 423; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1081 (P. C.).

NATHUNI RAI V. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

the District Judge as part of the Issue No. 4 "Is there any custom by which the *raiya*ts are to get the entire timber of the trees standing on their kasht lands." The Subordinate Judge, after discussing the evidence as to this issue (i.e., Issue No. 4), appears to have been struck by the undoubted fact that it was to his mind satisfactorily shown by the plaintiff's witnesses that the practice of the Raj in this Mouza was that these *raiya*ts should apply to the Raj for permission to cut a tree, that they were as a general rule allowed to fell it and to appropriate the timber on payment in of half of the estimated value of the wood to the Raj treasury. He writes, "I accordingly disbelieve the defendants' witnesses on this issue and hold that their statements that the tenants used to get 16-annas timber without any payment of price to the Raj are false. Considering all the oral and documentary evidence adduced on behalf of both parties I have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that it has been satisfactorily proved that the Raj used to realise half prices of timber from the tenants of Narar in respect of their trees standing on their nakhi holding which are known locally as khap holdings as have been proved by the plaintiff's witnesses. No doubt the oral and documentary evidence adduced by the plaintiff shows that the practice was for the tenants to apply and then half price was settled on behalf of the Raj on the reports of the Raj amlas and then the tenants used to deposit half prices by means of chalans and then they used to cut the trees and appropriate the entire timber. It was contended on behalf of the Raj that the Raj is entitled to get price of 16-annas timber and the price of half the timber was remitted to the tenants as maf because they applied for permission and hence those that cut them without any such permission are not entitled to get such maf. In my opinion this story of treating the remaining half price, which the tenants used to get as maf is an afterthought. The chalans filed on behalf of the plaintiff do not treat them as maf. It is not written therein that the landlord's share is 16-annas price out of which half is remitted for applying for permission to cut as is now alleged. On the other hand, these chalans of the plaintiff, viz., most of them both of the period prior to the execution of the kabuliyats in 1902 and prior to the time of Survey proceedings and also the chalans produced by the plaintiff subsequent to the said periods clearly show that it was expressly written there that the malik's share of the timber is half. That being the case, the fact that the remaining half share was the *raiya*ti share was practically acknowledged in these chalans. This was done in pursuance of a clear custom which is expressly stated in the registered kabuliyats of 1902, vide Exhibit 63 (117). It is clearly mentioned that the tenant would not sell trees without the written permission of the malik in pursuance of previous custom. The words are rewaj and dastur sabik, it is further written therein that if he sells such trees with such permission then he would pay half price to the malik as he is always doing. Thus payment of half price in pursuance of an old and previous custom is clearly mentioned in these kabuliyats. The idea of treating the remaining half as maf was not present then. No doubt it is written in these kabuliyats of 1902 that if he does not pay the half price then the malik would be entitled to realise the real price thereof by suit. It was contended on plaintiff's behalf that the plaintiff is entitled to realise the price of 16 annas share by this stipulation. In my opinion, in the first place, it is not quite clear whether the expression real price thereof refers to the price of half share, stated before in the said paragraph or to the price of 16-annas share. If it means as price of 16-annas share then it is in the nature of penalty for not previous payment of the half share after filing application for permission. The malik did not reserve the right to realise more than half share according to his discretion when the tenants applied for permission. Moreover, in the older kabuliyats Exhibit 63 (137) of 1895 and in the kabuliyat, Exhibit 63 (136) of 1898 there does not seem to be any trace of even this alleged penal clause. In the kabuliyats of 1895 and 1898 there is no trace whatever of the said penal clause. Rather, it is expressly written therein that if a tenant would sell any tree, then half share thereof belongs to the malik and if he does not pay half share amicably (bakhu-da men) then the malik would be entitled to realise by suit. There is not a word about the malik's right to realise price of 16-annas share in default of amicable payment is contended. That being the case it is clear from the old papers filed by the Raj that in pursuance of old rewaj prevalent in this village from a long time the malik is entitled to get half prices only and not prices of 16-annas timber. And, therefore, the general law has been modified by special custom prevailing in this village of the tenants paying half share only. No doubt one or two papers have been filed of recent years to show that the Raj realised full share when the tenant did not pay the half share by application. But these recent attempts cannot, in my opinion, override the long established usage by which the tenant became entitled to get half share and the malik's share was acknowledged to be only half. In my opinion these recent attempts of realising 16-annas share on the strength of general law, ignoring the old custom prevalent in the village of taking only half share, has provoked this litigation and has led the tenants to deny even half price which they were paying amicably from before. Taking all these facts and circumstances into consideration, I have no hesitation in coming to the finding that in accordance with local custom the landlord is entitled to get only price of half the share of timber in this village. Nara and the tenants are entitled to get the other half share. I further hold that the plaintiff is not entitled to get more than half share even if the tenant has not taken permission or has cut without permission or previous payment of half price. In any case, the malik is not entitled to get more than price for half the share. Of course, it is for the convenience of both parties to get the half price settled and paid by means of previous applications. But if the tenant does not do that there is nothing in the evidence of the custom to justify a penalty of payment of full price for default when no such penalty was even thought in the old kabuliyats of 1895 and 1898 referred to above. I decide this issue accordingly and hold that the tenants are liable to pay only price of half the timber of the trees standing over their nakdi holdings."

NATTJUNI RAI v. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

The District Judge follows the same line of thought adopted by the Subordinate

Judge and remarks:—"The next question is, whether the landlord is entitled to the whole value of the wood. On behalf of the landlord an attempt was made to say that in those cases in which the tenants obtained previous permission of the landlord half the value was remitted to the tenants. But where no such permission was taken the tenants are to pay the full value. I have been taken through the evidence of these witnesses and I do not think that their evidence on this point is worth anything. Not a single instance of the landlord getting the whole value has been given in case of trees cut before the present dispute arose. The instances given after the dispute are very few in number. The kabuliyats relied upon by the landlord do not show any such distinction. The learned Vakil for the Maharaja laid great stress on the last sentence of paragraph 9 of the kabuliyat and argued that it supported his contention, but I cannot agree with him on this point. This last sentence shows that in case payment is not made to the malik he will be at liberty to realise from the tenant "assal with interest." The learned Vakil contended that this word "assal" means the full price. I, however, do not agree with him on this point. The word "assal" literally means principal. The context shows that the principal is. I have, therefore, no hesitation in holding, that the kabuliyats do not support the learned Vakil's contention that the full value is to be paid in case the trees are cut without permission. I may here add, that in the plaints no such distinction is mentioned and plaintiff did not claim the whole price on the ground that the trees in these cases were cut without any permission. I am, accordingly, of opinion, that by custom and local usage half the value of the wood goes to the landlord and the other half to tenants whether the latter cuts the trees with or without previous permission. In respect to the argument of the learned Vakil for the tenants that half the value is given to the landlord as price of his permission I may refer to Exhibit 19/18, which is a petition by a tenant for permission to appropriate the wood on payment of price. Half the price was taken.

NATHUNI RAI V. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

In this case as well as in some other cases covered by some other applications there was no question of permission to cut trees. In other case, no doubt, the applications contained prayer for permission to cut and appropriate. But the right to cut the trees is conferred on the tenants by section 23 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and so the permission must be taken to be permission to appropriate and not the permission to cut. The two rights are dealt separately in two different paragraphs of the kabuliyats. The right of the landlord to half the value of the trees is recognized in paragraph 9 which has nothing to do with the right to cut the trees. So this right has nothing to do with the permission to cut. The learned Vakil argued that the kabuliyats cannot be taken as evidence of custom as it is always open to the contracting parties to expressly disregard custom in making contracts. But the recital in paragraph 9 shows, that this stipulation was made in express recognition of the custom and not in spite of the same. So there is no force in the argument of the learned Vakil."

It does not seem to have been suggested to the Subordinate Judge or the District Judge that the plaintiff's case resting on the general law and the defendants having failed to establish the very clearly defined custom which they pleaded, there might be, in law, nothing further for the plaintiff to do in order to justify a decree being passed in his favour; or that it was not, in law, open to the Court to find the existence of some custom not alleged by the defendants and of a more limited nature than that put forward by them.

Apart from this purely legal aspect of this procedure, they did, it is true, mention shortly the proposition that what is gained by a regular repeated permission cannot be the foundation of a custom as against a licensor but they dismiss the suggestion on the ground apparently, that the contracts made between the plaintiff and the defendants were so made in express recognition of the custom and not as negating it.

The question as to whether the inferences drawn from the evidence as to the existence of such a custom, are justified or, of course, a separate matter for consideration. I attempt, therefore, in the first place, to consider the important point as to whether it was open to the lower Courts to find a custom other than that adumbrated by the defendants. Unfortunately, there were but few authorities quoted to us on behalf of the plaintiff and none on behalf of the defendants on this point; the only suggestion indeed made on behalf of the latter being that a plea of a wide custom might justify a finding on the evidence of the existence of a narrower. In Volume X of Halsbury's Laws of England, at page 236, paragraph 446, it is stated: "Evidence to prove a custom must not only be consistent with the custom which is alleged but must also prove a custom which is no wider than that alleged. If the evidence tends to prove a custom wider than that which is alleged, the party seeking to establish the custom is not at liberty to adopt part only of the evidence and to reject the rest." But this proposition does not, in my view, necessarily tend to establish the converse; namely, that if a broad custom is pleaded the existence of a lesser custom could not, if proved, be found. In the case of Eshenchunder Singh v. Shamachurn Bhutto (6), it was held by the Privy Council, that it was incorrect to conclude parties (i.e., to hold parties bound) by inferences of fact not only inconsistent with the allegations in the plaint, but, which were, in reality contradictory to the case made by the plaintiff in the Court below. There was a suit for specific performance of an agreement the object of which was to recover possession of a four annas undivided share in a putni talook. The decision of the Court of first instance found the case in direct contradiction to the allegations contained in the plaint. When the matter, however, went on appeal to the High Court of Calcutta that Court appears to have formed a conclusion upon an assumed case which was inconsistent with the recorded evidence contained in the original judgment. Lord Westbury in the course of his decision stated:—

"This case is one of considerable importance, and their Lordships desire to take advantage of it, for the purpose of pointing out the absolute necessity that the determinations in a cause should be founded upon a case either to be found in the pleadings or involved in or consistent with the case thereby made." I do not, however, think that these remarks bear very forcibly upon the decision in the appeals now before us. For although it is quite true, that in the pleadings there is nothing indicated as to the exact custom which the lower Courts have found to exist it is difficult to say that the determination to which the lower Courts have come was not founded upon, or a part of, the case as it was presented in evidence before them. The case of Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (7) which was also quoted to us seems to me to have little bearing upon the matter. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in that case merely pointed out, that special customs may be pleaded by way of exception to a general rule of law, but must be proved by evidence. They condemned the procedure which the learned Chief Justice of Allahabad had apparently adopted of tying the plaintiffs down to the obligation of showing a custom providing for a specific application of general law; their Lordships considered that in adopting this procedure the learned Chief Justice was inverting the process by which the law should properly be ascertained; or, in other words, that where a plaintiff relies upon the general law it is not necessary for him to prove any custom as to the practice of any such general legal principle. The ancient case of Ward v. Shepherd (8), which was also referred to, merely lays it down that a defendant could not plead a contractual relationship as well as a custom. If a defendant pleads that he has a right arising out of a contract with a plaintiff, he cannot, at the same time, plead that that right arises out of a custom; presumably, because it would be embarrassing. Perhaps, the case of Desai Ranchhoddas Vitthaladas v. Rawal Nathubhai Kesabhai (9) is of slightly more value in this appeal than any of the others which have been placed before us; but even that does not appear to me to be of much practical utility. It was a second appeal. The plaintiffs sued to obtain recovery of possession of certain lands to which they alleged they had succeeded on the ground that there was a custom amongst their people excluding widows and daughters from inheritance. It was held by the lower Courts that a custom excluding daughters, but not widows, had been established. The High Court of Bombay held that, if a decree appealed against was based upon wrong views of the law of evidence or upon a misconception of the canons which the Privy Council and the High Court had defined as to how a special custom should be proved, the High Court ought to interfere in a second appeal. It was held that the plaintiffs should not have been allowed to shift the basis of their claim from an alleged custom which excluded both widows, and daughters to one, which only excluded daughters. The point, however, for decision in the present appeals is to my mind very different from that, which obtained in the case quoted. The plaintiff here never based his claim upon any custom at all. The defendants alleged the custom which they failed to prove; but, from the evidence given on behalf of the defendants, the lower Courts considered that it was apparent that a custom had been proved, of the same type as that which the defendants had alleged but of a narrower character: was it permissible for them to record and decide upon such a finding? I have not much doubt that it is only within comparatively recent times and since there has been attached to the form of pleadings less rigid adherence than in former days, that the answer to this question would have been in the affirmative. Enquiries as to the existence of a custom are not on the same footing as those relating to a contract. There is little analogy between a case in which a plaintiff claims £1,000, the defendant denies any indebtedness, and a Court finds £500 due and a suit in which a plaintiff claims to close his private park and the defendants plead a right of way by custom across it: and yet I cannot help thinking that

(6) 11 M. I. A. 7; 6 W. R. P. C. 57; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 87; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 209; 29 B. R. 3.

NATHUNI RAI v. RAMESAWAR SINGH.

(7) 21 A. 412; 1 Bom. L. R. 311; 3 C. W. N. 454; 26 I. A. 153; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 474; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 971 (P. C.).

(8) (1817) 146 B. R. 367; 3 Price 608.

(9) 21 B. 110; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 75.

NATHUNI RAI v. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

in modern times a Court would have little hesitation in finding, that although the entire custom alleged by a defendant did not exist yet a material part of it did. It is perhaps best to illustrate what I mean by a simple hypothetical illustration drawn from English life. A landowner has an estate on which lies a large lake and near which is situated a village. By the Common Law all the fishing rights in the lake belong to the landowner. The villagers, however, net and angle for fish in the lake and he brings actions against villagers A. B. C. D. and E. to restrain them from doing so. They plead that the villagers have by custom a general right of fishing in the lake; they fail, however, to prove that they have any general right of fishing; but, in the evidence, which is brought forward by the plaintiff to rebut that which has been adduced by the defendants, it transpires very clearly that there is a custom from time immemorial by which the villagers may catch fish in the lake with rod and line. I do not think that a Court would have any hesitation in refusing to take away from the villagers that customary right or in finding the existence of this limited custom. I am disinclined, therefore, to consider that, it may not have been open to the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge to find the existence of this custom (if indeed it did exist), and in this way to limit the relief granted to the plaintiff. On the other hand, there is much to be said for the argument here that there was no real proof of any custom. There is no doubt, that the plaintiff's evidence and indicate that there was some kind of practice and it would seem clear that the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge have substantially discarded the oral evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff and have based their finding as to the existence of custom upon a construction of the kabuliyats under which tenants leased land from the Raj. Our attention has been drawn by the learned Counsel who appeared for the plaintiff to some of the oral evidence given on the part of the plaintiff and notably to that of P. T. Onraet, who is one of the Managers of the Darbhanga Raj. He deposes very definitely (and his evidence may be taken as typical of that which was given on behalf of the plaintiff in connection with this matter) that, "In Narar, when the *raiya*s applied for permission to cut trees standing on their nakai holdings, permission used to be given on receiving half of the price to the timber. When they did not apply, then the Raj used to realise full price of the timber. The *raiya*t was allowed the other half when they applied for permission. The other half was allowed to the *raiya*s as a matter of concession to them when they applied for permission and not as a matter of right." The Subordinate Judge, however, was of the opinion, that this allegation, that the grant of the half of the value of the timber to the tenant was a matter of grace, was an afterthought: whilst the District Judge is impressed by the fact that no instance of the landlord getting the whole value was given in the case of trees cut before the present dispute arose. It is not proper in second appeal generally to consider whether or not the lower Courts have taken a right view of evidence in coming to findings of fact; but, putting aside the oral evidence, the construction of the kabuliyats, upon which the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge mainly based their view that a custom was shown, can certainly be considered by this Court in order to see whether their meaning has been properly interpreted. A typical specimen of this kabuliyat is shown in that executed by one Musan Barahi, dated 1st of August 1902. The material portion reads thus:—

Paragraph 7.... "I shall not cut and fell the fruit-bearing and non-fruit-bearing trees existing on the lands without the consent of the proprietor, and paragraph 9, in conformity with the conditions laid down in paragraph 10 of the previous kabuliyat, and the custom, and usage formerly prevailing in the village, I shall not sell the fruit-bearing or non-fruit-bearing trees without the written consent of the proprietor or his authorised amla. If I sell the same after obtaining a written permission of the proprietor or his authorised amla then I shall continue to pay the price in moiety therefor, to the proprietor as I have all along paid the same to him without any objection whatever. If I fail to pay the same, proprietor is and shall be competent to realise the principal amount of price besides interest, thereon, till the day of realisation from my person and property by instituting a suit in Court."

NATHUNI RAI V. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

Now, the Subordinate Judge seems to have been very dubious as to what the "principal" or as he describes it the "real" price actually meant. He suggests, however, that if it means the whole value of the timber it might be regarded as in the nature of a penalty on the tenant, if he did not apply for permission to cut the tree. He also points out that in still older kabuliyats than those of 1902, this penalty clause (as he calls it) does not appear to be included. The District Judge, however, is decided in his view, that the word "principal" or "real" does not mean the "full price" at all, but that from the context it indicates only the half price. I am bound to say, that, I think, the construction which has been placed upon these kabuliyats is incorrect; and that even if it were correct its effect would not be that of proving a legal usage which could be regarded as a custom capable of being supported by the tenantry against the landlord. It is instructive to observe here that even now in their grounds of appeal the defendants in paragraph 8 maintain that the District Judge was wrong in his decision; on the ground that the kabuliyats were taken by the plaintiff in defiance of the custom; and of the Record of Rights, and that these kabuliyats sought to set up another custom which, however, could have no effect in destroying the custom which was alleged by the defendants, that is to say, their rights to the whole, so far as I can see there is nothing in these kabuliyats, which would support a definite custom, which could be recognised by law. It seems to be admitted that as, at any rate, a matter of contractual relationship between the plaintiff and the tenantry, the latter could not cut down a tree without obtaining the permission of the former; and, although the District Judge thinks, that the recital in paragraph 9 of the kabuliyats shows, that the stipulation as to obtaining consent to sell the timber was made in express recognition of a custom that the tenant should get half the value, it is equally clear that neither the cutting of the tree nor its sale could lawfully be effected without the consent of the proprietor: and this was so, whether under the kabuliyats or by the general law. I cannot think that where it is necessary for a tenant to get permission to cut down a tree, the fact that, if he does so obtain such permission before cutting it down, he is granted half the value of the timber can well be shaped into circumstances upon which any custom recognised as such in law can be based. To follow this line of thought to its logical conclusion let us suppose that to-day an individual applies to the plaintiff to lease some of the plaintiff's land as a kashkar on the ticca system. If the plaintiff chose it seems to me that there is nothing to prevent him from putting in the kabuliyat of lease a clause simply saying that he would not allow the tenant to cut down any trees. The tenant might complain that he was being treated differently to the way in which the plaintiff had previously treated other tenants in the village; but it is difficult to see how he would be in a position to force the plaintiff to accede to his wishes. Although, therefore, I think that the evidence in the case undoubtedly indicates that, as a matter of practice, the plaintiff has been in the habit of allowing upon application a tenant to sell and appropriate half the value of the timber of a tree which has been, with the plaintiff's assent, cut down or which has fallen down, I do not think, that that practice can be regarded as under the circumstances capable of being crystallized into a custom recognizable by law. For this reason, therefore, I think, that the cross-appeal of the plaintiff in connection with this part of the case must be allowed.

That the plaintiff's case was barred by limitation was not very strongly urged before us. It is difficult, indeed, to see how it could be. The period of limitation is one of three years but both the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge on Issue No. 6 entirely disbelieved the defendants' evidence and believed that given on behalf of the plaintiff.

The Subordinate Judge finds as a fact that the trees in connection with which the suits were brought were cut within the period of limitation: whilst the District Judge, after discussing the evidence most carefully, in great detail, comes to the conclusion that there can be no doubt that the Munsir's decision is correct.

NATHUNI FAU. RAMESHWAR SINGH.

There remains only a small matter upon which the plaintiff has entered a cross-objection: it relates to the difference of opinion between the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge as to what are the species of tree to which the plaintiff's right applies. It is common ground that the tenantry have the right to cut and appropriate to themselves trees which can be classified as Agachha, a word which I understand means useless or valueless for fruit-bearing or timber purposes. The Subordinate Judge points out that the defendants alleged that many sorts of trees giving them by name (Sisam, Gambar, Gular, Mahua, Jamun, Khair, Babul, Imli, Barhar, Bair, Siris, Simal and Sahijan) were Agachha. He held that of these species, two only, namely, Bair and Sahijan, were Agachha and excluded them from the plaintiff's claim. The District Judge, however, came to the conclusion that there were other trees which should properly be placed in the Agachha category and stated that these were Barhar, Simar, Gular, Jimal, Bair, Sahijan and Siris. The learned Counsel for the plaintiff objects to the inclusion of the two first named and points out that even from the Judge's own remarks it is not possible that they should be regarded as in the Agachha class. What the District Judge says is, "As for Barhar and Simar, though they are comparatively big trees and their timber is sometimes used for some other purposes, they cannot be classed as either timber or fruit-bearing trees. Their timber is of very inferior kind and planks, etc., made of them do not last long. On the other hand, the tenants derive very little profit from these trees when they are allowed to stand on the land. They sometimes occupy much room and the tenants are required to pay rent for the lands occupied by such trees. So I must class these as Agachha. I am of opinion that, whether Agachha or not, the tenant is entitled to these trees." I think that the contention put forward on behalf of the plaintiff is here justified. I am not sufficiently familiar with the nature of the trees mentioned by name to be able to express any opinion as to what particular trees should be included in the useless class; where trees, however, are such as bear useful fruit or are utilizable as timber it seems clear that they fall within the class over which the proprietor has rights. One can well understand that there are certain trees or bushes which are not in this class; but the two trees mentioned are stated to be big trees the timber of which, although inferior, is utilizable for making planks. I think that they should not have been included in the category of trees over which the landlord has no rights.

The result, therefore, will be that the defendants' appeal is dismissed with costs throughout. The plaintiff's cross-appeal will be allowed with costs. The judgment of the District Judge will be set aside and plaintiff be granted a decree in the terms of his plaint other than with regard to such trees as are found by the Subordinate Judge to be Agachha.

The general order in the above appeals and civil revisions will, therefore, be:

(1) the second appeals filed by the tenants-defendants are dismissed in each case with costs, except that there will be one joint hearing fee assessed at Rs. 60 to be distributed equally in all the cases;

(2) the second appeals by the plaintiff-landlord with regard to suits the value of which exceeded Rs. 500, are decreed, in each case with costs, except that there will be but one joint hearing fee assessed at three gold mohurs, to be distributed pro rata;

(3) second appeals arising out of suits the value of the subject-matter of which did not exceed Rs. 500 and with regard to which application in civil revision's have been filed are dismissed, but without costs;

(4) Civil Revision Cases except No. 244/21 which related to Second Appeal No. 658/21 are allowed, but without any order for costs;

(5) Civil Revision No. 244/21; which was excepted in the previous clause will be dismissed as having abated without any order for costs and

(6) the memorandum of second appeals arising out of suits not exceeding Rs. 500 in value, and with regard to which no

TIRKHA V. SOLHU.E. I. R. CO. LTD. V. GOPIRAM-COURISHANKAR.

applications in civil revision cases were filed, will be treated as applications in civil revisions and be allowed as such, without any order for costs.

The order for costs governs all the Courts.

Ross, J.—I agree.

Z. K. Defendant's appeals dismissed.

Plaintiff's cross-appeals accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. II OF 1923.

May 9, 1923.

Present :—Sir Shadi Lal, K.T., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Martineau.

TIRKHA AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

SOLHU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Memorandum of terms of mortgage—Registration.

An entry in a bahi which recites the terms of a mortgage but is not signed by any of the parties to the alleged mortgage, is not an instrument creating any right within the meaning of section 17 of the Registration Act and does not require registration.

Letters Patent Appeal from an order of Mr. Justice Harrison, passed in Civil Appeal No. 853 of 1922, dated the 30th November 1922, and published as 71 Ind. C.S., 739, remanding the case to the lower Appellate Court (District Judge, Delhi) for decision on the merits.

Lala Amar Nath Chona, for the Appellants.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal under the Letters Patent from an order of a Single Judge, remanding the case to the lower Appellate Court for decision on the merits. The suit is for redemption of a mortgage which plaintiffs allege to have been effected by their predecessors for Rs. 137. They obtained a decree in the First Court, but on appeal the District Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the entry in their account-book which was the basis of the suit was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration. On second appeal the learned Judge in Chambers held that the document in question did not require registration as it had not been executed by any one. We agree with this view. The document is not signed by either of the parties to the alleged mortgage, so that it is clearly not an instrument creating any right, and section 17 of the Registration Act has no application.

It is argued for the appellants that the respondents have changed their cause of action, inasmuch as in their plaint they were suing on the basis of the entry in the account-book, whereas later on their Counsel stated that the mortgage was oral and that the entry in the book was only a memorandum of the transaction. The respondents did not, however, in their plaint describe the entry in the book as a mortgage-deed or say that they were suing on its basis. What they said was, that the house had been mortgaged barue bahi. These words are not very precise and are not necessarily inconsistent with the definite position subsequently taken up that the mortgage on which the suit was based was an oral one and that the entry in the book was merely a memorandum. There is, therefore, in our opinion, no force in the argument as to the cause of action having been changed, and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 370 OF 1922.

May 30, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Justice Macpherson.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY, LIMITED—PETITIONERS

versus

MESSRS. GOPIRAM GOURISHANKAR—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Railways Act (IX of 1860), ss. 72, 77—Carriage of goods—Goods consigned under Risk Note, Form B—Non-delivery—Suit for damages—Notice, whether necessary—Authority to sign Risk Note—Wilful neglect, proof of.

E. I. R. CO. LTD. v. GOPIRAM-GOURISHANKAR.

The provisions of section 77 of the Railways Act apply to a suit to recover compensation for the non-delivery of goods consigned to a Railway Company for carriage.

East Indian Railway Company v. Kali Charan-Ram Prashad, 69 Ind. Cas. 103; 3 P. L. T. 215; (1922) Pat. 145; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 106, dissented from.

Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Jitan Ram-Nirmal Ram, 72 Ind. Cas. 440; 4 P. L. T. 173; (1923) Pat. 82; 1 P. L. R. 169; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 285; 2 Pat. 442, followed. Under section 72 of the Railways Act a consignor of goods is bound by the provisions of a Risk Note signed by a person who actually delivered the goods to the Railway Company. [p. 644, col. 2.]

Where goods are consigned to a Railway Company for carriage under Risk Note, Form B, and the Company is sued for compensation for non-delivery of the goods, if the Company proves loss of the goods, the burden is on the plaintiff to establish that the loss was due either to the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration or to theft by, or to the wilful neglect of its servants. [p. 644, col. 2.]

Civil revision from a decision of the Small Cause Court Judge, Gaya, dated the 11th July 1922.

Mr. N. C. Sinha, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. S. Dyal and B. K. Prashad, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—In this case interference is sought by the East Indian Railway Company under section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act with the decision, dated the 11th July 1922, of the Small Cause Court of Gaya, whereby that Court decreed the opposite party's suit against the petitioner Company for Rs. 541-8, being the value of loss of one bale of cloth Rs. 399-1, profit thereon, Rs. 25 n interest at 12 per cent, Rs. 41, with costs Rs. 64-6, or a total of Rs. 529-7, on the ground that it is not according to law.

The opposite party consigned by rail from Ahmadabad to Gaya thirteen bales of cloth of which twelve bales were delivered to the plaintiff by the petitioner Company at their Station at Gaya on the 30th April 1921, and one bale has never been delivered. The suit was framed as one for non-delivery of that bale, which was alleged to be due to the unlawful negligence of the Bombay Baroda and South Indian Railway, ^{and} _{or} the East Indian Railway or their servants or theft by their servants; advisedly, loss was not alleged and no evidence of negligence or theft was adduced. The defence was, first, that the claim was barred by sections 77, 80 and 140 of the Railways Act; secondly, that the bale in suit was lost, and that the loss was not due to the wilful negligence of or theft by the servants of the Company and, finally, that the consignment was booked under Risk Note, Form B, on condition of a specially reduced rate of freight so that the Railway Company was not liable for loss or non-delivery. The suit was decreed against the petitioner Company only.

The Judge, relying upon a dictum in East Indian Railway Company v. Kali Charan-Ram Prashad (1), held that no notice under section 77 of the Railways Act was necessary, a suit on the ground of non-delivery only not being barred by that provision. The evidence on behalf of the East Indian Railway Company was that the full consignment started safely from Moghul Sarai by night train and that when the train arrived at Majhwar, the next stop, the Guard found the doors of the wagon open, the seal thereon broken and some goods missing therefrom, including the bale not delivered to the opposite party, but the Judge held that the defendants would not escape liability even if this story be accepted because the wagon was not locked and the seal put on it was a nominal one and did not secure the safety of the goods. He found accordingly that the petitioner Company "did not exercise due diligence which can be expected from a carrier for the safe arrival of goods at their destination, it being proved that the wagons were not locked; further that the Risk Note had not been properly proved since it had been shown 'that the man who signed it had any authority from the consignor to execute such a document on his behalf,' and finally that the loss contemplated by the Risk Note had not been established by the evidence and there was reason to think that the loss was caused by negligence of the Railway servants."

The first contention on behalf of the petitioner Company is that the provisions of section 77 of the Railways Act apply and render inadmissible in law the claim to compensation for the loss of the bale since it was not preferred in writing to the

(1) 69 Ind. Cas. 103; 3 P. L. T. 215; (1922) Pat. 145; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 106.

R. I. R. CO. LTD. v. G. PIRAM-GOURISHANKAR.

Railway Administration within the period allowed by the section. In view of the decision of a Bench of this Court in Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Jitan Ram-Nirmal Ram (2), Mr. Shiveshwar Dayal on behalf of the opposite party concedes; that this contention of law cannot here be successfully met.

This would appear to conclude the matter, but Mr. Shiveshwar Dayal urges that the decree under examination should not be set aside since two important considerations which he advances, should be regarded as disentitling the petitioner Company to relief. The first of these is the delay, extending from the 11th July till the 24th November, which occurred in filing the application for revision. Now, in this regard each case must be examined with reference to its own circumstances, and as it appears that in the present instance nearly eight weeks were, owing to defective arrangements in the Copying Department at Gaya, taken up in securing a copy of the judgment and decree, and as even an appeal, if it had lain, would have been in time, the delay is to my mind certainly not so culpable that on that account the Court should in the exercise of its discretion refrain from interference when there has been a serious error of law.

In the second place, it is contended that this Court should not interfere with a decision of the Small Cause Court when the defence is, as in this instance, only a technical one: the petitioner Company, it is argued, have no grievance on the merits inasmuch as it has been found that the loss of one bale was due to the wilful negligence of their servants.

Now the judgment is obscure in places and generally does not inspire confidence; in particular, it is impossible not to feel that the finding is distorted by a further important error of law and by misappreciation of the evidence arising from the learned Judge's misapprehension already referred to of the legal significance of the term 'loss.' In the first place, it is not definitely found that the defence story as to the time and manner of loss of the bale is not true, as indeed it seems to be. Again, the finding that the Risk Note has not been properly proved, since it has not been shown "that the man who signed it had any authority from the consignor to execute such a document on his behalf" is palpably a mistake of law since under section 72 it is sufficient if the person who delivers the goods to the Railway Administration, signs the Risk Note. Not only did the karpardaz of the consignor who delivered the goods sign the Risk Note, but he did so in circumstances which would imply his principal's authority to do so. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the Risk Note is valid against the opposite party.

There remains only the question of wilful negligence. Now, the Risk Note being valid and the petitioner Company having proved loss, the burden was on the opposite party to establish that the loss of the package was due either to the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration or to theft by or to the wilful neglect of its servants, and if the loss was due to robbery from a running train, it is specifically excluded from the category of wilful neglect. The findings which have been already quoted fall far short of wilful neglect and indeed as the opposite party offered no evidence on the point a finding even of neglect could only be based on the admission that the Railway wagon was not locked. Such a finding would not take the case out of the Risk Note and, moreover, as the wagon was sealed an inference even of neglect would not be safe in the absence of evidence of the ordinary course of business in such matters. As the opposite party has failed altogether to prove wilful neglect on the part of the petitioner Company or its servants the suit in view of the Risk Note also falls on the merits.

But, even if the case on the merits had been considerably more favourable to the opposite party, this Court would have felt constrained to give full effect to section 77 of the Railways Act, in a case where the opposite party deliberately attempted to evade its operation.

The application is allowed with costs. The decree of the Small Cause Court is set aside and the suit is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Application allowed.

(2) 72 Ind. Cas. 440; 4 P. L. T. 1731 (1923) Pat. 824; 1 P. L. R. 169; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 285; 2 Pat. 442.

GANGA PURI v. MOHAN LAL.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 527 OF 1919.

February 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol and
Mr. Justice Martineau.Baba GANGA PURI, Chela, AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVE OF BHAWANI GIR,
DECEASED—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MOHAN LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 92—Suit by trustee to enforce his right to possession of trust properties, nature of—Suit against trespasser —Sanction of Collector, whether necessary.

A suit by a trustee to enforce his right as trustee to the possession of trust properties does not fall within the purview of section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Budree Das Mukim v. Chooni Lal Johurry, 33 C. 789 at p. 808; 10 C. W. N. 581, relied on.

Section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to a suit brought against trespassers.

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Lahore, dated the 13th December 1918.

Mr. M. S. Bhagat and Lala Amin Chand Mahta, for the Appellant.

Lala Tirath Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The property in dispute in the present case was also the subject-matter of a previous suit which was brought by three barbers of Lahore on behalf of the barber community for the ejectment of Shiv Charan, who was the manager of the property. Shiv Charan died during the pendency of that suit, and his minor sons and widow were brought on the record as his representatives. The First Court decided that case in the plaintiffs' favour, but on appeal the Divisional Judge, Mr. Agnew, on the 18th February 1914 dismissed the suit, holding that the property was wakf, that Shiv Charan was a constructive trustee, and that under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, the suit was not maintainable without the permission of the Collector. The persons who had brought that suit and one other then applied to the Collector for permission to bring a suit, but they subsequently withdrew the application.

In the present case the defendants are the same persons who were impleaded as Shiv Charan's representatives in the previous case, but the plaintiff is one Bhawani Gir, who alleges that after the death of Shiv Charan he was appointed by the brotherhood of the barbers of Lahore as Mahant of the institution to which the property is attached, that he is entitled to possession of the property, and that the defendants are trespassers.

The Subordinate Judge has held that the plaintiff, being a nominee of the barber community, can have no greater rights than the community itself on whose behalf the former suit was brought, and that as the former suit was continued against the present defendants after Shiv Charan's death, and it had been admitted in the application to the Collector that the defendants were Pujaris and representatives of Shiv Charan, the plaintiff cannot now treat them as trespassers. He has accordingly dismissed the suit as being, like the former one, not maintainable without the Collector's permission. The plaintiff has appealed and the appeal must succeed.

The plaintiff is suing, not for the purpose of protecting the interests of the public, but in order to enforce his own right as a Mahant or trustee, and a suit of this nature does not fall within the purview of section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, as was held by Woodroffe, J., in Budree Das Mukim v. Chooni Lal Johurry (1), where on page 808 the learned Judge said:—"In my opinion the present suit, so far as it is brought by the plaintiffs in their individual capacity as trustees to enforce their individual claim to be such trustees of the temple in suit, is not within the scope of the section. The public may be interested in seeing that their alleged appointees have the administration of this trust, but this right of the public and of the plaintiffs, qua members of that public, is not the same as the right of the plaintiffs considered not as members of the public, but as trustees suing to enforce their own personal right of management."

Further, it is admitted that section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not apply to a suit brought against trespassers, as the plaintiff alleges the defendants to be, and we cannot agree with the lower Court that the plaintiff is in any way precluded

(1) 33 C. 789 at p. 808; 10 C. W. N. 581.

RAGHUBIR SINGH v. JODHA SINGH.

from suing them as trespassers. In the first place, he was not a plaintiff in the former suit, nor did he join in making the application to the Collector, and, in the second place, the present defendants were impleaded in the former suit merely as the legal representatives of Shiv Charan and not in their personal capacities.

Mr. Agnew's judgment is no bar to the present suit, and we hold that the suit is not one to which section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code applies. We accordingly accept the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Court, and remand the case to that Court under O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code, for decision on the merits. The Court-fee paid on the memorandum of appeal will be refunded and other costs will be costs in the case.

Z. K.

*Appeal accepted.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 351 OF 1921.

March 20, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Lindsay and
Mr. Justice Daniels.RAGHUBIR SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTSversusJODHA SINGH AND ANOTHER—*PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 36—Pre-emption decree—Vendee not in possession of property—Payment of pre-emption money—Formal possession, whether necessary—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 82—Pre-emption decree—Pre-empted property under mortgage—Redemption with money paid by pre-emptor—Possession of vendee, nature of.

In a pre-emption suit, if the pre-empted property is in the possession of a mortgagee, the vendee being only the owner of the equity of redemption, it is not necessary for the pre-emptor, after he has paid the pre-emptive price, to apply for formal possession of the property. His title is complete on payment of the price. O. XXI, r. 36, Civil Procedure Code, has no application to such a case. [p. 647, col. 2.]

Sita Ram Pande v. Madho Pande, 23 Ind. Cas 876; 12 A.L. J. 521, relied on.

Where in the case of pre-emption of sale of property subject to a mortgage, the vendee, on being paid the pre-emption money, redeems the mortgage and takes possession of the property, he will, on the analogy of section 82 of the Trusts Act, be considered to hold the property on behalf of the pre-emptor. [p. 647, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Farrukhabad, dated the 10th December 1920.

Dr. S. N. Sen and Mr. U. S. Bajpai, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal in a suit for possession brought by the plaintiffs-respondents, Jodha Singh and Dilla Singh. The land in suit originally belonged to one Murat Singh who mortgaged it for Rs. 300 with possession on 19th May 1891 to one Ganga Ram. Ganga Ram remained in possession as mortgagee till the year 1918 but the rights of the mortgagor were the subject of various transfers which it will be necessary to specify.

On 12th December 1903 Murat Singh sold his equity of redemption to the defendants-appellants, Raghubir Singh and Gajraj Singh, for a sum of Rs. 1,300. Rs. 300 of this amount was left with the vendees for payment to the mortgagee, Ganga Ram, to pay off his mortgage. One Bharat Singh instituted a pre-emption suit in respect of this sale of the equity of redemption and obtained a decree against the defendants on 25th January 1905. Under this decree the whole of the purchase-money, Rs. 1,300, was made payable to the defendants though Rs. 300 of it was really for payment to the mortgagee, Ganga Ram. Bharat Singh, the successful pre-emptor, deposited the entire amount in Court within the time allowed by the decree and the amount was withdrawn by the defendants. As, however, the defendants were not in possession of the property Bharat Singh did not think it necessary to take out any formal execution of his decree. The contention of the defendants is that Bharat Singh and his successors-in-interest have lost their entire interest in the property by not doing so.

In order to pay the amount of Rs. 1,300 under the pre-emption decree Bharat Singh executed a mortgage in favour of one Meharban Singh. The present plaintiffs instituted a pre-emption or pre-mortgage suit on the basis of this mortgage, obtained a decree and stepped into the shoes of Meharban Singh. This was on 6th June 1906. They then sued on the mortgage, brought the equity of redemption to sale and purchased it themselves. They have thus succeeded to the rights of Bharat Singh. The mortgage suit was brought in the year 1917 but the plaintiffs did not get formal possession of the property till February 1919. In the meantime, on January 1918, the defendants had paid off the three hundred rupees due to Ganga Ram under his mortgage and have recovered possession of the property. The plaintiffs on their purchase being completed brought the present suit for possession against them.

RACHUBIR SINGH v. JODHA SINGH.

The suit was dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge on the ground that Bharat Singh not having executed his pre-emption decree the defendants had been in adverse possession of the equity of redemption for over twelve years. The learned District Judge pointed out that there could be no adverse possession of the equity of redemption under the circumstances and that as the plaintiffs or their predecessor, Bharat Singh, could not have got possession while Ganga Ram's mortgage subsisted it was not necessary for them to go through the formality of executing the pre-emption decree. He accordingly decreed the suit. The defendants appeal to this Court and put forward the same contentions which they advanced in the Court below. They do not indeed now contend that there was any adverse possession of the equity of redemption by them against Bharat Singh. Their contention is that it was absolutely necessary for Bharat Singh to put his pre-emption decree into execution and that as he failed to do so his right in the property absolutely ceased at the conclusion of twelve years from the date of his decree.

The respondents rely, among other grounds, on the provisions of O. XX, r. 14, which prescribes the form of pre-emption decree. That rule lays down that the decree shall direct that on payment into Court of the purchase price the defendants shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of the payment;

It is quite clear that in this case no delivery of possession could take place as the defendants themselves were not in possession. Under the rule, therefore, it must be held that when the plaintiff had complied with the terms of the decree his title was complete. The same point was considered by a learned Judge of this Court in the case of Sita Ram Pande v. Madho Pande (1). That was also a case in which no possession could be delivered the pre-emptor being himself in possession in another capacity. The argument was put forward that unless he applied for formal delivery of possession under O. XXI, r. 36, he obtained no right as proprietor in virtue of his decree. That contention was, we think, rightly repelled by the Court. In this case if, after complying with the condition of the pre-emption decree, Bharat Singh had proceeded to redeem Ganga Ram's mortgage it is clear that his right to do so could not have been disputed. The reason why he did not do so almost certainly was that the portion of the sale price which was specially ear-marked for re-payment of this mortgage had been paid for by him to the defendants in the pre-emption suit.

The rights of the case are entirely with the plaintiffs. The defendants having obtained the full price for the property are now seeking to retain the property as well. The very money with which they redeemed Ganga Ram's mortgage was money left with them for the purpose of redeeming that mortgage. Under these circumstances, it is reasonable to hold that from the time they redeemed the mortgage they have held possession on behalf of the plaintiffs on the analogy of section 82 of the Indian Trusts Act. On both these grounds we affirm the decision of the Court below and dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

M. A. A. Appeal dismissed.
(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 876; 12 A. L. J. 521.

FIRM GOBIND SAHAI-RUP LAL, v. GURDAS MAL, BHAGWATI SHUKUL, v. RAM JATAN TEWARI.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 438 OF 1922.

January 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

THE FIRM GOBIND SAHAI-RUP LAL,
THROUGH ITS MANAGER RUP LAL—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

GURDAS MAL, AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 148—
Ex parte decree set aside conditionally on payment of costs by certain date—Failure to make payment within time—Extension of time—Power of Court.*

Where an application to set aside a decree ex parte is allowed conditionally on the applicant paying a certain sum by a certain date to the plaintiff as damages and payment is not made by due date, the Court has jurisdiction under section 148 of the Civil Procedure Code to extend the time fixed.

Jagarnath Sahi v. Kamta Prashad, 23 Ind. Cas. 138; 36 A. 77; 12 A. L. J. 38, relied on.

Petition, under section 44 Act IX of 1919, for revision of an order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Gujrat, dated the 8th May 1922, granting application for cancellation of the ex parte decree.

Lale Ram Chand Manchanda, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Anant Ram, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The only authority on the point at issue which is cited before me is against the petitioners. This is Jagarnath Sahi v. Kamta Prashad (1) in which a Division Bench ruled that when an application to set aside a decree ex parte has been allowed conditionally on the applicant paying a certain sum by a certain date to the plaintiff as damages and payment is not made by due date, the Court has jurisdiction, under section 148, Code of Civil Procedure, to extend the time fixed.

I agree with this interpretation of the law and reject the petition with costs.

Z. K.

Petition rejected.

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 138; 36 A. 77; 12 A. L. J. 38.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 85 OF 192

November 29, 1922.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Stuart.

BHAGWATI SHUKUL—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

RAM JATAN TEWARI AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

*Hindu Law—Widow—Marriage of daughter—
Gift to son-in-law—Legal necessity.*

It is the duty of a Hindu mother to provide husband for her daughter and for this purpose she has power to make a gift of property to her son-in-law whenever it is necessary.

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to extent of a Hindu widow's right of alienation in this respect. If the property is of large value, probably the alienation of more than a quarter would not be upheld. But where the property is very small in value and other circumstances, such as, blindness of the girl, also require it the alienation of the whole even will be a sheer legal necessity. [p. 649, col. 2.]

Churaman Sahu v. Gopi Sahu, 1 Ind. Cas. 945; 37 C. 13 C. W. N. 994; 10 C. L. J. 545 and Ramasami Ayyar v. Vengidusami Ayyar, 22 M. 11; 8 M. L. J. 170; 8 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 79, referred to.

Letters Patent Appeal from the following judgment of Mr. Justice Ryves, confirming a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Basti, who reversed a decree of the Munsif:—

“Permanand and Krishnanand were two brothers separate in estate. Krishnanand died long ago leaving him surviving a widow, Musammal Mohna, whose daughter was married to Ram Jatan Tewari, defendant No. 1. It was said by the defence that they had a son, Ram Man Tewari, who was defendant No. 2, but both the Courts have found that Ram Man was not the son of Musammal Oreha so he can be disregarded. The plaintiff is the grandson of Permanand. The property in suit belonged to Krishnanand. On his death his widow, Musammal Mohna, became the heir. She made a deed of gift or shankalapnama, dated the 23rd of August 1904, in favour of Ram Jatan by which she transferred to him the entire property which she inherited from her husband with full proprietary rights. Musammal Mohna Devi died in September 1908. The suit was brought by Bhagwati Shukul in 1918 to recover possession of the whole of this property on the ground that the gift by Musammât Mohna to her son-in-law was invalid after her life.

BHAGWATI SHUKUL, v. RAM JATAN TEWARI:

"Various defences were raised but the only one that need be considered for the purposes of this appeal was that the gift, under the circumstances, was not justified.

"The Trial Court found that Musammât Oreha was blind and a cripple and that in order to get her married it was necessary to supply her with a handsome dowry. It held, therefore, that there was legal necessity for the gift but only to the extent of one-third of the value of the property. It, therefore, decreed the plaintiff's suit to that extent. Both parties appealed. The lower Appellate Court has allowed the appeal of the defendants and has dismissed the suit altogether. The plaintiff comes here in second appeal.

"Three points are taken. First, that the gift to the daughter on the occasion of her marriage is justified provided that it is reasonable in amount and does not exceed, at the most, one-quarter of the property; but that there is no justification for a gift to the bridegroom. Secondly, that, under the terms of the deed itself, it must be held that a portion, at any rate, was reserved for the use of Musammât Mohna herself and that the entire estate was not, therefore, really given away, and, thirdly, that if the mother brought about an unsuitable match of her blind and cripple daughter, that that would be paritically equivalent to selling the daughter in marriage, and, as such, would be opposed to public policy. On this last point I see no indication that this line was taken in either of the Courts below and certainly there are no findings arrived at on which it can be supported. It is found that Musammât Oreha was blind and a cripple. It is also found that her husband had already been married to another wife but the crucial finding of the Court below, it seems to me, is, that it being the duty of the mother to provide a husband for her daughter, the alienation was made for "a sheer legal necessity." Stress was laid on the case of Churaman Sahu v. Gopi Sahu (1). That was a case of a gift by a widow of a portion of immoveable property of her husband to her daughter on the occasion of her gauna ceremony. This and some other cases that have been quoted all refer to gifts made to the daughter. In the case of Ramasami Ayyar v. Vengidusami Ayyar (2), it was held that a gift made to a son-in-law, under similar circumstances of a portion of the property, was binding on the reversioners. In the case of Churaman Sahu v. Gopi Sahu (1), reference is made to an old case decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council (vide page 7). There it is stated that Lord Gifford laid down "that a Hindu widow" had, "for certain purposes a clear authority to dispose of her husband's property, and might do it for religious purposes, including dowry to a daughter" but that it was impossible to define the extent and limit of her power of disposing it but "it must depend upon the circumstances of the disposition whenever such disposition shall be made and must be consistent with the law regulating such disposition." Now, although the general rule seems to be that a gift to the daughter shall not exceed one-quarter, some commentators have held (see bottom of page 5 and top of page 6 of the Calcutta decision) "that the word 'quarter' is here used, not in its plain sense, but simply to enjoy in the allowance of as much as will suffice for the marriage of the sisters."

It seems to me that no hard and fast rule can be laid down. If the property is of large value, probably the alienation of more than a quarter would not be upheld. But where the property is very small in value,—here it is valued at Rs. 500 only—and where under the circumstances the marriage of the girl into a suitable Brahman family, having regard to her blindness and infirmity, necessitated the spending of the equivalent in value of that property, then in the words of the lower Court the alienation was "a sheer legal necessity."

The second point is based on some words in the deed of gift generally to the effect that the donee will look after and support the widow in her lifetime and perform her funeral ceremonies on her death. The property is given out and out to the son-

(1) 1 Ind. Cas. 945; 37 C. 1; 13 C.W.N. 994; 10 C.L.J. 545.

(2) 22 M. 113; 8 M. L. J. 170; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 79.

CHANDO v. MIRAN BAKHSH.

in-law without any sort of reservation and there is no charge on it for her support. The learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court, who is certainly better able to appreciate the meaning of this document than I am, has come to the conclusion that the words in the deed which the learned Munsif read as a provision for maintenance in favour of Musammât Mohna were incapable of being interpreted in that way. It is perhaps significant to note that, although the widow died as long ago as 1908, the suit to set aside the gift was not brought till 10 years afterwards. In my opinion the finding of fact arrived at, namely, that in order to get the girl married, it was "a sheer necessity" for Musammât Mohna to provide a dowry of Rs. 500 or its equivalent by the gift of the property, concludes this appeal. I, therefore, dismiss it with costs.

His appeal was dismissed under O. XLI, r. 11, Civil Procedure Code."

Mr. Harmandan Prasad, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—We are of opinion that the learned Judge decided this case rightly. We, therefore, dismiss the appeal.

M. D. J. & N. H. Appeal dismissed.

LAEORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL

No. 2607 OF 1922.

March 13, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Ffiorde.

Musammât CHANDO AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

MIRAN BAKHSH AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS MAULA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 23, O. XLIII, r. 1 (4)—Order of remand involving question of custom—Appeal, whether lies.

There can be no appeal from an order of remand passed under O. XLI, r. 23, of the Civil Procedure Code where the question involved is one of custom. [p. 651, col. 1.]

Sawan Singh v. Mothu, 23 Ind. Cas. 817; 85 P. R. 1914; 162 P. L. R. 1914; 120 P. W. R. 1914, followed.

Umri v. Shah Mohammad, 68 Ind. Cas. 849; 3 I. 218; 4 L. L. J. 359; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 178 (F. B.), referred to.

Miscellaneous second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 8th July 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Samrala, District Ludhiana, dated the 12th April 1922.

Messrs. J. M. Mackay and M. Obedulla for the Appellants.

Messrs. M. D. Malhotra and Gulzari, Lal Sahgal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Musammât Chando is the widow of Imam Bakhsh who is adna malik of the land in suit. Plaintiffs-respondents are the ala maliks. Musammât Chando made a gift of a part of the land to her daughter Musammât Kariman and she sold another portion of the land to Ghulam Qadir. The plaintiffs brought two suits for a declaration that these alienations would not affect their rights as reversioners after the death of Musammât Chando. The First Court dismissed the suits holding that the ala maliks had no locus standi to sue. The lower Appellate Court held that as the land would revert to the ala maliks on the extinction of the line of the adna malik, therefore, the ala maliks had by custom a right to contest the alienations. It, therefore, accepted the appeals and remanded the cases to the lower Court for re-decision on other points.

One point which was raised before the District Judge was that the suits were barred by time. The learned District Judge has not discussed this point, but has merely stated that both the suits are within time. It is admitted before us that the suit regarding the sale which took place in 1919 is within time, but it was contended that the suit as regards the gift having been brought more than six years after it was made is barred by time under Art. 120 of the Limitation Act. Now, if the learned District Judge's decision is correct, that the plaintiffs are the persons entitled to the possession of the land after the death of Musammât Chando, the limitation for the suits is that provided by Art. 125 of the Limitation Act. If this Article is applicable to the suit as regards the gift is also within time. The decision of the learned District Judge is that by custom the plaintiffs have locus standi to sue, and it has been objected on behalf of the respondents that, as the question is one of custom, and the appellants have not obtained a certificate from the lower Appellate Court, no appeal is competent. It was held by a Division Bench of the Chief Court in the case reported as Sawan Singh v. Mothu (1), that there can be no appeal from an order of remand under O. XXI, r. 23, of the Code of Civil Procedure where the question involved is one of custom. The ratio decidendi there was that as the appellant would have a right of second appeal from the decree of the Appellate Court only if he were to obtain a certificate under sub-section (3) of section 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, it could not be said definitely that an appeal would lie from the decree of the Appellate Court. Having regard to that decision the present appeals are not competent. The question of custom can no doubt be agitated in second appeal from the final decree if a certificate is obtained. The case reported as Sawan Singh v. Mothu (1) was considered by a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Umri v. Shah Mohammad (2). Two of the Judges of the Full Bench differed from the view expressed in Sawan Singh v. Mothu (1), but the decision of the Full Bench proceeded on other grounds and Sawan Singh v. Mothu (1) was not overruled.

KUMAR SAINTHWAR v. BISHUN MOHAN SAHAI.

We, therefore, follow it and dismiss the appeals with costs.

Z. K.

Appeals dismissed.

(1). 23 Ind. Cas. 817; 85 P. R. 1914; 162 P. L. R. 1914; 120 P. W. R. 1914.

(2) 68 Ind. Cas. 849; 3 L. 218; 4 L. L. J. 359; (1922) A. I. R. (L) 178 (F. B.).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 1732 & 1733
OF 1921.

November 13, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Stuart and Mr. Justice Ryves.

KUMAR SAINTHWAR—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT
versus

BISHUN MOHAN SAHAI AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Occupancy rights, mortgage of—Relinquishment in favour of landlord—Redemption.

Where an occupancy tenant relinquishes his holding in favour of the zemindar, the zemindar becomes the transferee of any mortgagor's right, which might have been created on it and is entitled to redeem the mortgage. [p. 652, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Gorakhpur.

Mr. Dang, for the Appellant.

Mr. Shankar Saran, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Bodhai, who is an occupancy tenant, mortgaged his occupancy holding for Rs. 99, in favour of one Bachchan Saithwar, on the 31st March 1896. On the 10th June 1922 Bodhai relinquished his holding in favour of the zemindars-respondents. The zemindars then sued to eject the mortgagees, and, although they got a decree, failed to execute it, with the result that the mortgagees remained in possession.

The zemindars then brought a suit to redeem the mortgage and they got a decree, the Courts below allowing them to redeem the mortgage on payment of Rs. 523 within the time stated in the decree of the Courts below.

The mortgagees appeal. Three points have been taken.

(1) That the relinquishment of Bodhai was in favour only of some of the zemindars of the village and was not a complete relinquishment. This point was not taken in the written statement. No issue was raised upon it and, of course, no evidence was led on the subject. It is taken for the first time in appeal and there are no materials on which it could be disposed of in the way in which the appellant wishes. We do not think the Court below ought (to have allowed it?) to be raised for the first time in appeal. We see, however, no reason to differ from the Court below in its conclusion on the point.

DAVID SUTHERLAND CLARK v. MRS. ROSE GRIMSHAW.

The next point is to the effect that the zemindars are not entitled to redeem this mortgage. It is admitted that the mortgage is still in existence; therefore, there must be somebody who is entitled to redeem it. It has been held by this Court that in a case of this kind where an occupancy tenant relinquishes his holding in favour of the zemindar, the zemindar becomes the transferee of any mortgagor's right, which might have been created on it. The zemindar, therefore, is entitled to redeem.

The last point taken is that the amount fixed by the Court below should have been Rs. 599 and not Rs. 523. This argument is based on the assumption that a particular compromise was come to between the parties in a former litigation in which the amount was fixed at Rs. 599. The Court below has found that that compromise has nothing to do with the present case.

Under the circumstances, none of these pleas raised has any force.

The result is the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

M. D. J.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 875 OF 1921.

February 8, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raouf and Mr. Justice Campbell.

DAVID SUTHERLAND CLARK—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MRS. ROSE GRIMSHAW—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 25 (3)—Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 2 (5), Sch. I, Art. 15—Written promise to pay barred debt, requisites of—Promise, whether bond.

A document sufficiently complies with the provisions of section 25 (3) of the Contract Act, if it is signed by the person to be charged, and refers to the debt in such a way as to identify it, and contains a promise to pay wholly or in part the debt referred to therein, or expresses an intention to pay which can be construed to be a promise. [p. 654, col. 1.]

Appa Rao v. Suryaprahasa Rao, 23 M. 941 9 M. L. J. 330; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 459, relied on.

A written promise to pay a barred debt is not a bond within the meaning of the Stamp Act and is not required by any of the provisions of the Act to be stamped. [p. 653, col. 2.]

Defendant pleaded in answer to a suit on a pro-note that the suit was barred by time. Plaintiff produced certain letters written by the defendant containing a clear promise to pay the debt. The suit was within limitation from the date of these letters, although the debt had become barred before the letters were written:

Held, that having regard to the provisions of section 25 (3) of the Contract Act the suit must be held to be within limitation. [p. 654, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Lahore, dated 4th January 1921, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Lahore, dated 17th May 1920.

Mr. Des Raj Sawhney, for the Appellant.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal has arisen out of a suit for the recovery of Rs. 3,000 on a pro-note. The following relevant facts may be stated to disclose the nature of the question that requires decision in this appeal:—

The plaintiff, Mr. David Sutherland Clark, lent Rs. 4,200 to one Mr. W. H. E. Fellows under a pro-note dated the 11th of October 1901. Out of this amount Mr. Fellows paid Rs. 1,200 on the 11th of October 1913. The balance due remained unpaid and Mr. Fellows died in 1918. By his Will he had appointed the defendant Mrs. Rose Grimshaw as his executrix. The defendant having obtained Probate of the Will succeeded to the assets of Mr. Fellows. On a demand being made by the plaintiff the defendant wrote to him on the 2nd December 1918 promising to pay the balance of the debt as soon as she could. Again, on the 20th December 1918, she wrote to Mr. O. M. Chiene, the Vakil of the plaintiff, again promising to pay the debt in the following words:—"I certainly intend to pay the debt claimed by your client Mr. D. S. Clark."

On the 20th January 1918 she wrote to Mr. Chiene asking him to send the promissory-note to Mr. A. G. Clark so that she might see it. A copy of the pro-note was sent for her perusal on receipt of which she again wrote to Mr. Chiene on the 26th of

DAVID SUTHERLAND CLARK v. MRS. ROSE GRIMSHAW.

February 1919 in the following terms:—

"Sir,
Your letter dated 5th February received with copy of pro-note. I accept it to be a true copy and hope to pay the money very soon."

In spite of these promises she failed to pay the debt and the plaintiff had to institute a suit for the recovery thereof. He filed his plaint on the 15th of December 1919, and in paragraph 4 thereof he specifically stated that the defendant by her letters, dated the 2nd of December 1918, and the 20th of December 1918, had admitted the claim of the plaintiff. In paragraph 7 it was stated that in addition to the admissions contained in the letters dated the 2nd of December 1918, and the 20th of December 1918 the fact that Mr. Fellows had paid interest up to May 1918 brought the suit within limitation.

The suit was resisted mainly on the ground that it was barred by limitation. In a half-hearted way the defendant questioned the genuineness of the pro-note also. The Trial Court framed two issues, namely:

(1) Was the pro-note in suit executed by the late Mr. Fellows, and was it so executed for consideration?

(2) Is the suit within time?

In support of his claim the plaintiff filed a number of letters written to him by Mr. Fellows from time to time acknowledging the debt and paying interest from time to time. He went into the witness-box and proved all the facts stated in the plaint. Mr. Gillmore, Deputy Registrar of the Lahore High Court, was called as witness and he swore that the pro-note was in Mr. Fellow's handwriting. The defendant made a statement before the Court. On the pro-note for Rs. 4,200 being shown to her she admitted that the handwriting looked like that of Mr. Fellows, but she said that she did not admit the pro-note and demanded proof of its execution. On being questioned as to her statement contained in her letter dated the 20th December 1918 she said:—"In my letter of the 20th December 1918 I wrote to say I would pay the amount due on the pro-note, because Mr. Clark wrote to say he held a pro-note of Mr. Fellows. Mr. Grimshaw was ill and I, therefore, said I would pay. I again agreed to pay in my letter of the 26th February 1919, but took too much upon myself."

Taking the evidence into consideration, the Trial Court held that the pro-note was sufficiently proved and that as it was established by the evidence of Mr. Clark that he had received interest right up to May 1918, the suit was within time.

The defendant preferred an appeal to the lower Appellate Court with the result that the suit of the plaintiff was held to be barred by time. The lower Appellate Court hesitated to hold upon the evidence of Mr. Clark alone that interest had been paid by Mr. Fellows. The suit having been dismissed in appeal the plaintiff has preferred this second appeal through his Counsel, Mr. Des Raj Sawhney.

On the facts being stated by the learned Counsel it at once became clear to us that, having regard to the several promises made by the defendant in her letters to Mr. Clark and to his Vakil at Allahabad, the case came within the provisions of section 25 (3) of the Indian Contract Act. We, therefore, called upon Mr. Tek Chand, the learned Advocate for the defendant, to show cause why the appeal should not be decreed. With regard to the applicability of section 25 (3) of the Indian Contract Act the only argument addressed by the learned Advocate was that the letters containing the promise to pay ought to have been stamped as a bond and because they were not so stamped they were not admissible in evidence. This argument ignored the circumstance that the letters had been admitted in evidence in the First Court without any objection. We are not prepared to accept the contention that the letters did require a stamp under Act II of 1899; but, even if they did, the present contention cannot be raised in second appeal as section 36 of the Indian Stamp Act provides that "where an instrument has been admitted in evidence, such admission shall not... be called in question at any stage of the same suit or proceeding on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped." The real ground, however, upon which we repel the objection taken by Mr. Tek Chand is that a written promise to pay a barred debt is not required by any of the provisions under the Indian Stamp Act to be stamped. We cannot hold that a promise to pay a barred debt is a bond within the meaning of the Indian Stamp Act. Without, therefore, going into the other matters discussed in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court we hold that the suit is within time with reference to the provisions of section 25 (3) of the Indian Contract Act. In this view we are supported by a decision of the Madras High Court in the case of Appa Rao v. Suryaprakasa Rao (1). The facts of that case and the rule laid down by the learned Judges are summed up in the head-note which runs thus:—

PUDAI SINGH v. BRIJ MANGAL.

"In defence to a suit for rent a tenant pleaded that a portion of the claim was barred by limitation. Plaintiff relied on a letter which had been signed by defendant, after the disputed portion had become barred, and in which the defendant, after referring to the periods in respect of which the arrears of rent were due, said 'I shall send by the end of Vysakha month:'"

"Held, that the document contained the ingredients required by section 25, clause (3), of the Contract Act, and that the claim was not barred by limitation.

"A document sufficiently complies with section 25 of the Contract Act when it is signed by the person to be charged, and refers to the debt in such a way as to identify it, and contains a promise to pay wholly or in part the debt referred to therein, or expresses an intention to pay which can be construed to be a 'promise'. To create a 'promise' within the meaning of the section it is not necessary that there should be an accepted proposal reduced to writing, a written proposal, accepted before action, becoming by the definition clause, a promise when accepted."

In that case the suit was not specially based on a new contract brought about by the promise to pay. It was a suit for rent which was resisted on the ground of limitation. The plaintiff had, however, filed a letter in which the defendant had made promise to send the rent due by the end of Vysakha month and the learned Judges held that the suit for the rent was within time. In the present case also the suit was based upon the promissory-note, but the plaintiff had filed the letters containing the promise made by the defendant to pay the debt. The decision in the Madras case is a complete reply to the various arguments put forward on behalf of the respondent.

We, therefore, accept the appeal, set aside the decision of the lower Appellate Court and restore the decree passed by the Trial Court with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 384 OF 1923

April 5, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh.

PUDAI SINGH—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

BRIJ MANGAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF
AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 63. (5)—Secondary evidence—"Seen," meaning of—Illiterate witness.

Under s. 63 (5) of the Evidence Act secondary evidence of the contents of a document must be given by a person who has seen the original. If a document is read over to a man because he cannot read it himself, and he signs it and signs it as containing what has been read over to him, he may be said within the meaning of section 63 of the Evidence Act to have "seen" the contents of the document. [p. 655; col. 2.]

Ghure v. Chattrapal Singh 23 Ind. Cas. 11; 12 A. L. J. 239, explained.

Second appeal against the decree of the Judge of the Court of Small Causes, exercising the powers of a Subordinate Judge, Allahabad, dated the 7th of December 1922.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—I have heard the whole of the evidence of the witness called by the plaintiff read. I find myself unable to say, either that his evidence was inadmissible or irrelevant or necessarily incredible. No body objected to its admissibility and, what is more, the defendants' Counsel cross-examined the man at some length. He was illiterate, but the story he told was that, being on business apparently as a debtor, at the

(1) 23 M. 94; 9 M. L. J. 330; 8 Ind. Dec. (N.).

JAI GOPAL, SINGH v. MUNA LAL.

mortgagee's premises, he and certain other persons were asked to attest this document of which he gave a fair account. It may be a pure invention but that is the business of the Trial Court to decide. The Trial Court has decided that it is true. I do not know how else a litigant can give the contents of a missing document except by calling a witness who swears both to its existence and to its contents, and the fact that the man is unable to read is merely a fact which goes to the credibility of his oath that he remembers the transaction because there are many people in this world who are unable to read and yet have excellent and accurate memories about things which they are asked or expected to remember. This witness swore that he attested the document and remembered the transaction and the substantial and relevant contents of the document. I do not know whether I should have believed him or not, but both Courts have in fact believed his evidence. The defendants evidently thinking that there was a case to be answered took an entirely different line in the Court below to that which they take here, (what is called confession and avoidance) and endeavoured to prove by a carefully prepared stamped and respectable-looking document that the actual mortgage was entered into on a piece of paper which they swore to by one only of the members of the joint family and not by the two. Both Courts have rejected this story as a wicked fabrication; and not unnaturally, it frequently does and ought to do, a dishonest case in an attempt to prove a negative has strengthened the general view of the Courts in deciding a somewhat weak affirmative case produced by the plaintiff and there the matter ends. Both Courts have found the mortgage proved and it is sought to upset the decision on a so-called point of law. The point of law may be simply stated. Secondary evidence of the contents of a document must be given by a person who has seen the original. As Mr. Justice Tudball says in a case cited to me "seen" in this connection cannot mean the mere transmission of the object to the retina of the eye, because I can see a great many documents from a distance in this Court which I cannot profess to see in the sense of seeing their contents. I take it, if a document is read over to a man, because he cannot read himself, and he thereupon signs it, and signs it as containing what has been read over to him, he may be said, within the meaning of section 63 of the Indian Evidence Act, to have seen the contents of that document. It is a question of the weight or credibility of his testimony and a question whether he comes within the section. The case cited to me which is said to support this appeal is a case which to my mind does not apply. In that case, Ghure v. Chatrapal Singh (1), Mr. Justice Tudball held that, under circumstances not unlike the present, statement of the marginal witness was not admissible. That clearly does not apply here because if there was any objection to the admissibility of this witness's evidence it has been entirely waived by the cross-examination of the witness which was indulged in by the defendants in order to break him down and get the Judge to disbelieve him and it is well established that the parties must be judged by the method with which they conduct their cases; but if it means that under no circumstances illiterate person can give the contents of a document which has been read out to him and the contents of which he professes to remember, I think, I should have great difficulty in following that decision. It seems to me it is a pure question of fact. The plaintiff has succeeded in satisfying both Courts. The appeal is dismissed.

M. A. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 11; 12 A. L. J. 239.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 58 OF 1920.

February 2, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Fforde.

JAI GOPAL, SINGH—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

MUNA LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 22—Appeal barred by time—Cross-objections, whether can be heard.

RAM CHANDRA V. MUHAMMAD NUR.

An appeal must be properly before the Court in order that cross-objections may be heard.

Where an appeal is barred by time neither the appeal nor the cross-objections are properly before the Court, and the Court has no power to proceed with either.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Hissar, dated the 25th August 1919, varying that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Hissar, dated the 31st May 1918.

Lala Badri Das, R. B., for the Appellant.
Mr. C. H. Oertel, and Sardar Hazara Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the Court of first instance gave judgment for the plaintiff for possession of the land in dispute upon payment of a certain sum of money within a definite period. Against this judgment plaintiff appealed and defendant filed cross-objections.

It was held by the First Appellate Court on the preliminary point raised by defendant, that the appeal was late, but, proceeding to dispose of the case on the merits, on the assumption that such finding was wrong, the learned District Judge dismissed the plaintiff's appeal and allowed the defendants' cross-objections.

The matter now comes before us on second appeal by plaintiff. Counsel for the appellant now submits that his appeal in the Court of the District Judge was barred by time and should have been dismissed on that ground.

Respondents' Counsel admits that the appeal was late but urges that the cross-objections could nevertheless be heard and that the order of the District Judge is valid in so far as the cross-objections are concerned.

We cannot accept this view. It is clear that an appeal must be properly before the Court in order that cross-objections may be heard. As the appeal in question was admittedly barred by time, neither the appeal nor the cross-objections were properly before the Court, and accordingly the Court had no power to proceed with the matter. We must, therefore, accept the appeal and restore the decree of the Court of first instance. The plaintiff must deposit the price on or before the 31st

March 1923. In the event of default his suit shall stand dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 380 OF 1922.

April 4, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

RAM CHANDRA AND ANOTHER—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Haji MUHAMMAD NUR AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu law—Joint family—Simple money decree against father—Family property sold in execution—Sons, whether can recover their share.

Where in execution of a simple money decree against the father, the family property is sold by auction, the sons cannot recover their share of it unless they can show that the debt for which the property was sold was incurred for illegal or immoral purposes. [p. 657, col. 2.]

Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126; 21 C. W. N. 6981; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213 (P. C.) and Chat Ram v. Ram Singh, 67 Ind. Cas. 569; 44 A. 368; 3 P. L. T. 363; 31 M. L. J. 50; 43 M. L. J. 98; 16 L. W. 89; (1922) M. W. N. 455; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 64; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 247; 3 P. L. R. 1922; 24 Bom. L. R. 123; 27 C. W. N. 150; 49 I. A. 228; 21 A. L. J. 114; 37 C. L. J. 79 (P. C.), distinguished.

Sripat Singh Dugar v. Prodyat Kumar Tagore, 39 Ind. Cas. 252; 15 A. L. J. 147; 32 M. L. J. 133; (1917) M. W. N. 193; 21 C. W. N. 442; 25 C. L. J. 220; 21 M. L. T. 222; 19 Bom. L. R. 290; 44 C. 524; 44 I. A. 1 (P. C.), Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall, 1 I. A. 321; 14 B. L. R. 187; 22 W. R. 56; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 380 (P. C.), followed.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Benares, dated the 25th of January 1922.

Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Appellants.

Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit brought by the two minor sons of Suraj Prasad for a declaration that they are the owners of a two-thirds share in the house in dispute which was sold at auction in execution of a simple money-decree against the father. It appears that Suraj Prasad executed a simple money-bond on the 6th May 1913 in order to pay interest on a previous mortgage-deed. A suit was brought by the obligee on the basis of the bond and a decree was obtained against Suraj Prasad. In execution of that decree the house in question was attached and was put up for sale and purchased by the decree-holder himself, namely, Pahlad Dass. In spite of getting a formal delivery of possession Pahlad Dass was dispossessed and he had to bring a separate suit for the possession of the house which was decreed in 1919. On the 2nd June 1919 Pahlad Dass executed a sale-deed of the property in question in favour of Janki Pande which sale was pre-empted by Haji Muhammad Nur, the present respondent. Haji Muhammad Nur obtained a pre-emption decree on the 27th March 1920 and has been in possession of the house since. The present suit was brought by the sons on the allegation that the debt, to recover which the property was sold at auction, was without any legal necessity and that in fact it was tainted with immorality.

RAM CHANDRA v. MUHAMMAD NUR.

The Court of first instance found that the house was the ancestral property of the family and that the sons not having been made a party to the previous litigation their interest in the house was not affected. It accordingly decreed the claim, exempting a two-thirds share of the house from the operation of the sale.

On appeal the learned District Judge finding that the debt had not been tainted with immorality, set aside the decree of the First Court and dismissed the suit in toto.

The plaintiffs come up in second appeal to this Court, and on their behalf it is contended, on the authority of the cases of Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1), and

Chet Ram v. Ram Singh (2), that the son's interest cannot be affected by the previous sale proceedings, we are of opinion that neither of the two cases relied upon by the learned Counsel for the appellants supports that contention. It was remarked by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Sripat Singh Dugar v. Pradyot Kumar Tagore (3) that by the Mitakshara Law: "A judgment against the father of the family cannot be executed against the whole of the Mitakshara property, if the debt in respect of which the judgment has been obtained was a debt incurred for illegal or immoral purposes. In every other event it is open to the execution creditor to sell the whole of the estate in satisfaction of the judgment obtained against the father alone." In the present case the rights of third parties have come into existence inasmuch as the property was sold by public auction in execution of a simple money-decree passing not only the interest of the father but that of the whole family; and subsequently the auction-purchaser transferred it by sale which has been pre-empted by the principal respondent. The sons cannot now question the auction-sale unless they can show that the simple money-debt was illegal or tainted with immorality. We need only refer to an earlier pronouncement of their Lordships in the case of Girdharee Lall v. Kantoo Lall (4) that, "where joint ancestral property has passed out of a joint family either under a conveyance executed by a father in consideration of an antecedent debt or in order to raise money to pay off an antecedent debt, or under a sale in execution of a decree for the father's debt, the sons ... cannot recover that property unless they show that the debts were contracted for immoral purposes, and

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213 (P. C.).

(2) 67 Ind. Cas. 569; 44 A. 368; 3 P. L. T. 363; 31 M. L. T. 50; 43 M. L. J. 98; 16 L. W. 89; (1922) M. W. N. 455; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 64; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 247; 3 P. L. R. 1922; 24 Bom. L. R. 123; 27 C. W. N. 150; 49 I. A. 228; 21 A. L. J. 114; 37 C. L. J. 79 (P. C.).

(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 252; 15 A. L. J. 147; 32 M. L. J. 133; (1917) M. W. N. 193; 21 C. W. N. 442; 25 C. L. J. 220; 21 M. L. T. 222; 19 Bom. L. R. 290; 44 C. 524; 44 I. A. 1 (P. C.).

(4) 1 I. A. 321; 14 B. L. R. 187; 22 W. R. 561; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 380 (P. C.).

LEKH RAJ V.INDER MAL.

that the purchasers had notice that they were so contracted."

The comment made on this pronouncement by Sir John Stanley in the case of Chindradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad (5), and recently approved by the Privy Council, was to the effect that this proposition deals with the cases in which ancestral property has passed out of the family and with no other cases. Even in the case of Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1), their Lordships remarked,—

"A perusal of the numerous authorities will show that where a joint family property has been sold out and out, or where a decree in execution of the mortgage has been obtained against the property, and rights have thus sprung up with regard to the joint family estate, these rights are not to be defeated by the members of the joint family simply questioning the transaction entered into by its head."

We may also point out that in the case of Chet Ram v. Ram Singh (2) their Lordships laid special stress on the circumstances that that case was a singularly clear one because it was not affected by other considerations such as the property having been publicly sold and there were no rights of auction purchasers to be considered. We are supported in this view by the Bombay High Court in the case of Hanmant Kashinath Joshi v. Ganesh Annaji Pujari (6) and by the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court in the case of Bharat Singh v. Sarsuti Singh (7). The appeal accordingly fails and is hereby dismissed with costs including fees in this Court on the higher scale.

M. A. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(5) 1 Ind. Cas. 479; 31 A. 176; 6 A. L. J. 263.

(6) 51 Ind. Cas. 612; 43 B. 612; 21 Bom. L. R.

435.

(7) 60 Ind. Cas. 137; 7 O. L. J. 459; 23 O. C.

244.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1478 OF 1922.

January 15, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

LEKH RAJ AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS
versus

INDER MAL AND ANOTHER—DEFEND-ANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), s. 7—Pre-emption—Custom—Mohalla Bagrian of Kaithal in Karnal District—Proof of custom.

Where a town is divided into sub-divisions the pre-emptor must prove affirmatively the existence of the custom of pre-emption in the particular sub-division in which the property in dispute is situate and the onus is not discharged by proof of the custom in the neighbouring sub-divisions. [p. 659, col. 1.]

Mela Ram v. Bando, 12 Ind. Cas. 859; 59 P. R. 1911; 198 P. W. R. 1911; 48 P. L. R. 1912, Prabh Dial v. Bhikhoo Mal, 61 Ind. Cas. 822; 3 L. L. J. 387, followed.

A judgment based upon a compromise or confession though of some probative force, cannot be placed on the same footing as one in which after contest a custom is held to be proved or negatived. [p. 659, col. 2.]

Imperial Oil Soap and General Mills Co., Limited, Delhi v. M. Masbah-ud-din, 61 Ind. Cas. 325; 2 L. 83, followed.

The custom of pre-emption does not exist in Mohalla Bagrian of the town of Kaithal in the Karnal District. [p. 660, col. 1.]

Jai Devi v. Naubat Rai, 71 P. R. 1905; 129 P. L. R. 1905; 104 P. W. R. 1905, Muhammad Husain v. Ghulam Muhammad, 10 Ind. Cas. 240; 78 P. R. 1911; 138 P. L. R. 1911; 241 P. W. R. 1911, Bul Chand v. Lekhu, 12 Ind. Cas. 435; 139 P. W. R. 1911; 242 P. L. R. 1911, referred to.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 11th March 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Kaithal, dated the 13th June 1921.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellants.

Lala Jagan Nath, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal against a decision of the District Judge of Karnal, dated the 11th March 1922, dismissing the plaintiffs' suit for possession by pre-emption in respect of a house situate in Mohalla Bagarian in the town of Kaithal in the Karnal District. The contentions raised by the defendant were that the house was not situate in Mohalla Bagarian, that the custom of pre-emption did not prevail in the Mohalla in question and that the price of Rs. 900 mentioned in the sale-deed was neither actually paid nor fixed in good faith. The Trial

LEKH RAJ V. INDER MAL.

Court found against the defendant on all these points and decreed the plaintiffs' claim. On appeal the District Judge, however, was of opinion that the plaintiffs had failed to establish that the custom of pre-emption prevailed in Mohalla Bagarian, and he accordingly dismissed the suit. The plaintiffs have now come up in second appeal to this Court through Mr. Shamair Chand after obtaining a certificate from the District Judge, while Mr. Jagan Nath has appeared on behalf of the respondents.

The sale question for determination in this appeal is whether the custom of pre-emption prevails in the Mohalla of Kaithal where the house sold is situate. In support of the contention that the custom of pre-emption prevails in the Mohalla in question, the learned Counsel for the appellants relies upon two things. Firstly, reliance is placed upon certain published judgments of this Court from which it appears that the custom of pre-emption exists in some of the neighbouring sub-divisions. In one of the judgments there is an expression of opinion to the effect that pre-emption prevails very generally throughout the town of Kaithal. It is argued that, in these circumstances, the onus of proving the non-existence of the custom of pre-emption in this Mohalla is upon the defendant and that he has failed to discharge this onus. I am unable to agree in this contention. As held in Mela Ram v. Bando (1) a case which has been cited with approval in another recent case reported as Prabh Dial v. Bhukhoo Mal (2) it may now be taken as settled that where a town is divided into sub-divisions, the pre-emptor must prove affirmatively the existence of the custom of pre-emption in the particular sub-division in which the property is situate and that the onus is not discharged by proof of the custom in the neighbouring sub-divisions. The two authorities, Jai Devi v. Naubat Rai (3) Muhammad Husain v. Ghulam Muhammad (4) relating to Mohalla Tayyab and Mohalla Pansarian in the town of Kaithal, as also the sale-deed of 1883 relating to Mohalla Boran to which reference has been made in the course of arguments, are consequently not of any great help to the plaintiffs. As to the general prevalence of the custom of pre-emption in the town, reference may be made to Bul Chand v. Lekhu (5) in which it was found that the custom of pre-emption did not exist in Mohalla Marhat Khan, another sub-division of the same town. The observations made by the learned Judge in Jai Devi v. Naubat Rai (3) that pre-emption prevails very generally in the town are, therefore, not strictly in accordance with the facts.

Next, reliance has been placed on a decision by Lala Amrit Lal, Munsif, dated the 16th December 1913, in the case of Durga Parshad v. Sita Ram by which the claim of the plaintiff for possession of a house by pre-emption in this very Mohalla was decreed. It is argued that this is a very strong piece of evidence in favour of the plaintiffs and that it completely shifts the onus of proof on the defendants. A reference to the written statement filed by the defendants in that case, however, makes it quite clear that there was no contest between the parties as to the right of pre-emption, the vendee having admitted that the pre-emptor in that case was entitled to claim the house and it is clear, as laid down in Imperial Oil Soap & General Mills Co., Limited, Delhi v. M. Misbah-ud-din (6) that a judgment, based upon a compromise or confession though of some probative force, cannot be placed on the same footing as one in which after contest a custom is held to be proved or negated.

The next piece of evidence upon which reliance has been placed is a judgment of Lala Achru Ram, dated the 9th October 1920, in the case of Joti Ram v. Hisari. This case also relates to Mohalla Bagarian, but it will be observed that the judgment in that case practically proceeds on the basis of the earlier judgment of 1913 in which the right of pre-emption was admitted.

(1) 12 Ind. Cas. 859; 59 P. R. 1911; 198 P. W. R. 1911; 48 P. L. R. 1912

(2) 61 Ind. Cas. 822; 3 L. L. J. 387.

(3) 71 P. R. 1905; 129 P. L. R. 1905; 104 P. W. R. 1905.

(4) 10 Ind. Cas. 240; 78 P. R. 1911; 138 P. L. R. 1911; 241 P. W. R. 1911.

(5) 12 Ind. Cas. 435; 139 P. W. R. 1911; 242 P. L. R. 1911.

(6) 61 Ind. Cas. 325; 2 L. 83.

JAGAN NATH v. ABDUL HAKIM.

The defendant, on the other hand, has produced some evidence to show that many sales have taken place in this Mohalla without the exercise of the right of pre-emption. In these circumstances, I do not think that one or two solitary instances of the admission of the prevalence of the custom supported by a few instances in the neighbouring sub-divisions are sufficient to discharge the onus of proving the existence of the custom in Mohalla Bagarian which lay heavily upon the plaintiffs. In my opinion, the District Judge was right in holding that the plaintiffs had failed to establish the prevalence of the custom in this Mohalla, and I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K.

*Appeal dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 721 OF 1921.

July 20, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Martineau.

JAGAN NATH—PLAINTIFF—

PETITIONER

versus

ABDUL HAKIM AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151, O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte decree, setting aside of—Mistake as to date of hearing.

A Court has no jurisdiction, apart from O. IX, r. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, to set aside an ex parte decree made by itself. The mere fact that the Court thinks it possible that the defendant might have made a mistake about the date of hearing of the suit is not sufficient.

Civil revision from the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 20th June 1921.

Mr. B. N. Kapur, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—An ex parte decree was passed by the Subordinate Judge on the 4th August 1920. The next day the defendant Abdul Hakim applied to have it set aside on the ground that he had thought that the 7th August was the date fixed for the hearing. He produced only one witness, who did not prove that Abdul Hakim's allegation was correct, and the Subordinate Judge accordingly dismissed the application. On appeal the District Judge set aside the ex parte decree on the ground that although the defendant had not been able to adduce any evidence in support of his allegation, his statement might be true. The plaintiff has applied for revision of the District Judge's order and I think his application must be accepted.

The defendant did not go into the witness-box to give evidence in support of the allegation made in his application, nor did he produce his Pleader, who had represented him at the previous hearing. He has also not explained how he happened to come to the Court on the 5th August (the date on which he filed his application) if he thought the case had been fixed for the 7th.

The District Judge was not competent to set aside the ex parte decree under O. IX r. 13, Civil Procedure Code, unless he was satisfied that the defendant was prevented by some sufficient cause from appearing on the 4th August. It is clear that he was not satisfied on the point, but only thought it possible that the defendant might have made a mistake about the date.

In Gadi Neelaveni v. Marapparedtigari Narayana Reddi (1) it has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that a Court has no power, apart from the provisions of O. IX, r. 13, to set aside an ex parte decree made by itself, there being no inherent power to do so under section 151.

I must, therefore, hold that the order of the District Judge was not one which he could legally pass, when the defendant had failed to satisfy him as to the truth of his allegation, and I accordingly accept this application, set aside the order of the District Judge, and restore the order of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the application for setting aside the ex parte decree. The petitioner will bear his own costs.

W. C. A. & N. H. Application accepted.

(1) 53 Ind. Cas. 847; 37 M. L. J. 599; 26 M. L. T. 377; 10 L. W. 696; (1920) M. W. N. 19; 43 M. 94 (F. B.).

SARJUG PRASAD V. HARISHCHANDRA.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 116
OF 1921.

April 18, 1923.

Present:—MR. Justice Das and MR. Justice
Kulwant Sahay.Babu SARJUG PRASAD MISSIR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versusHARISHCHANDRA CHAUDHURI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Mortgage—Mortgagees, prior and subsequent—Decree obtained by prior mortgagee—Subsequent mortgagee not made party, effect of—Release of property from mortgage-lien, effect of—Apportionment—Equity of redemption, whether extinguished by mortgage decree.

A decree obtained by a prior mortgagee on the basis of his mortgage is not binding on a subsequent mortgagee who was not made a party to the suit on the prior mortgage and does not affect his right of redemption. [p. 664, col. 1.]

A prior mortgagee cannot by releasing a portion of the mortgaged property from his mortgage-lien throw the entire burden of his mortgage-debt on the remaining portion so as to affect a subsequent mortgagee with whom that portion is mortgaged. [p. 664, col. 2.]

The equity of redemption in a mortgaged property is not extinguished merely by the passing of a decree on the mortgage. It subsists until the sale is held and the sale-proceeds are distributed. [p. 664, col. 2.]

Bibijan Bibi v. Sachi Bewah, 31 C. 863; 8 C. W. N. 684; Muhammad Musa v. Babu Aidal Singh, 65 Ind. Cas. 801; 3 P.L.T. 232; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat) 92, relied on.

Appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 28th February 1921.

Messrs. Hasan Imam, A. T. Sen and Harnarayan Pd. for the Appellants.

Messrs. C. C. Das and Shorosh Ch. Mitter, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs against the decree of the District Judge of Darbhanga, dated the 28th February 1921, whereby he declared that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem the mortgage of the defendant first party on payment of the full amount of the decree passed in their favour on the basis of the mortgage of the 15th August 1884. The facts giving rise to the present litigation are as follows: One Sadiq Ali Khan had 5 annas 17 gandas 2 kawries share in Mauza Athar, Parganna Ahilwar, Tazul No. 335. On the 26th of July 1877 Sadiq Ali Khan executed a mortgage in favour of one Balbhadar Prashad Sahu and Matuk Lal Sahu for a sum of Rs. 49,970 mortgaging 4 annas share of the said Mauza Athar and other properties. A suit was brought on the basis of the said mortgage and an ex parte decree was passed on the 10th of September 1883. In execution of this decree it appears that Sir Lachhimeshar Singh, the Maharaja of Darbhanga, purchased the 4 annas of Mauza Athar. The exact date of this purchase does not appear from any document on the record.

On the 15th of August 1884 Sadiq Ali Khan executed another mortgage in favour of Awadh Narayan Chaudhuri, father of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, for a sum of Rs. 2,000 and amongst other properties he mortgaged his entire share of 5 annas 17 gandas 2 kawries of Mouza Athar.

On the 21st March 1885 Sadiq Ali Khan executed a third mortgage in favour of Lalji Lal Sahu for a sum of Rs. 90,000 whereby he mortgaged 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries of Mauza Athar and a large number of other properties. On the 14th December 1885 a suit was brought to enforce this third mortgage and a decree was passed thereon on the 15th of February 1886 for a sum of Rs. 1,04,250.

On the 12th September 1898 the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, the sons of Awadh Narayan Chaudhuri, who was the mortgagee under the bond of the 15th of August 1884 brought Suit No. 77 of 1898 to enforce the above mortgage. In this suit Lalji Lal was not made a party, but the Maharaja of Darbhanga was made a party on the ground of his purchase of 4 annas share of Mauza Athar in execution of the decree of the first mortgagee. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2, that is, the plaintiffs to the Suit No. 77 of 1898, released the 4 annas share of Mauza Athar on the objection of the Maharaja of Darbhanga and they obtained an ex parte decree for the sale of 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries of Athar. This decree was passed on the 10th of May 1899 but it was subsequently set aside. A fresh decree for sale of 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries of Athar was passed in favour of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 on the 2nd August 1905. There was an appeal to the Calcutta High Court against this decree, but the appeal was dismissed on the 1st of April 1908.

SARJUG PRASAD V. HARISHCHANDRA.

Lalji Lal took out several executions of his decree of the 15th February 1886. On the 16th of May 1892 a petition was filed on behalf of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in one of the execution cases of Lalji Lal which is Exhibit 7 in this case. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in this petition stated that amongst other properties, 1 anna 17 gandas 10 kawries share in Mauza Athar had been put up for sale in the execution case of Lalji Lal v. Sadiq Ali Khan, judgment-debtor. They submitted that the said share was first mortgaged to Lalji Lal and thereafter to them under a bond dated the 15th August 1884 without their having any knowledge of the mortgage of Lalji Lal. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2, therefore, prayed that at first other properties might be advertised for sale and that if the sale proceeds thereof proved insufficient to pay off the decretal amount, then the 1 anna 17 gandas 10 kawries of Athar might be sold. Along with this petition, they produced their own bond of 1884. Now, in this petition the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 wrongly stated that the mortgage of Lalji Lal was prior to their own mortgage. As a matter of fact, their mortgage was dated the 15th of August 1884 and Lalji Lal's mortgage was dated the 21st of March 1885. They filed this petition in the execution case of Lalji Lal and if they had taken the trouble to look into the records of that execution case, they would at once have come to know that the mortgage of Lalji Lal was subsequent to their own mortgage. However, it appears that at the time this petition of the 16th of May 1892 was filed, there was no execution case of Lalji Lal pending, it having been struck off on a prior date, and the order made by the Court upon this petition was: "The case referred to in this petition has already been struck off. Ordered: file this petition with the record and return the bond."

The present plaintiff's and one Babu Ram Prashad had a money-decree dated the 21st of February 1895 against Lalji Lal and in execution of this decree the plaintiffs and Ram Prashad attached the decree of Lalji Lal against Sadiq Ali Khan dated the 15th February 1886 and on the 21st of April 1904 they purchased the said decree in execution of their own decree. On the 2nd April 1904 the plaintiffs and Ram Prashad, as purchasers of the decree of the 15th of February 1886, applied for execution of that decree and for sale of 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries of Athar and other properties. The sale was held on the 15th February 1907 and the plaintiffs became the purchaser of the said 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries of Athar. By a private partition between the plaintiffs and Ram Prasad, the whole of this share has been allotted to the plaintiffs.

The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 took out execution of their decree of the 2nd of August 1905 and attempted to sell the 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries of Athar which had been purchased by the plaintiffs and this led to the institution of the present suit, wherein the plaintiffs prayed for a declaration that they were not bound by the bond of the 15th of August 1884 and the decree of 2nd August 1905 obtained by the defendants Nos. 1 and 2; and that the said bond and decree were null and void as against them. They prayed in the alternative that if the Court found the plaintiffs to be liable under the bond of the 15th August 1884 it might be held that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem the said mortgage as against the defendants and they prayed that, having regard to the fact that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had released 4 annas share of Mauza Athar from their mortgage, lien in favour of the Maharaja of Darbhanga, the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem the 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share of the village on payment of the proportionate amount of the mortgage-money.

The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 filed a written statement alleging inter alia that they had no notice of the mortgage of the 21st of March 1885 in favour of Lalji Lal; that as regards the 4 annas share of Athar released by them in favour of the Maharaja of Darbhanga, the fact was that the said Maharaja was the first mortgagee in respect of the said 4 annas share; and that the said Maharaja purchased the said 4 annas share in execution of his decree upon the mortgage and, therefore, they had no right to sell the said 4 annas share in execution of their own decree. They further alleged that as they were prior mortgagees, the plaintiffs had only the right to redeem.

SARJUG PRASAD v. HARISH CHANDRA.

The learned District Judge has held that the defendants had no knowledge of the mortgage-bond of the 21st March 1885 in favour of Lalji Lal at the time they instituted their suit on the basis of their bond of the 15th of August 1884 and that, therefore, the decree on the basis of the latter bond was binding upon the plaintiffs and that it was a valid decree. He further held that the effect of the defendants not making plaintiffs partites in their suit was that the plaintiffs' right of redemption is still in existence. He also held that the plaintiffs could redeem only on payment of the full amount of the sum now due under the decree of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, and he has accordingly made a decree to that effect.

The plaintiffs prefer this appeal and the substantial questions raised by the learned Counsel on their behalf are that the learned District Judge was wrong in holding that the plaintiffs were bound to pay the entire amount due under the decree of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in order to redeem the 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share of Athar purchased by them; and that he was further wrong in holding that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had no knowledge of the mortgage of Lalji Lal. In my opinion the grounds taken by the learned Counsel are well founded and ought to prevail.

As regards the knowledge of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, the plaintiffs produced a copy of the petition filed on behalf of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in the execution case of Lalji Lal on the 16th of May 1892 referred to above which has been marked as Exhibit 7 in this case. The learned Judge has held that the petition has not been properly proved and the reasons given by him are that no proper attempt was made to get the original thereof, that it has not been shown that the petition was a bona fide petition, and that the petition makes an incorrect statement of fact inasmuch as it alleges that the mortgage of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was subsequent to that of Lalji Lal's mortgage. Now the plaintiffs filed the certified copy before the District Judge and asked him to send for the original thereof from the record-room. The petition did not give the number of the case in which it was filed and the plaintiffs, who were not parties to the execution case in which it was filed, were not in a position to give further details as regards the record in which it was to be found. They did all they could, namely, to produce the certified copy and to ask the Court to send for the original thereof. The learned Judge made a requisition for the original, but the requisition was not complied with on the ground that the date of disposal of the case was not given in the copy of the petition and that, on looking into the index of the year 1892, no number of the execution case in which it was filed, was to be found. For this the plaintiffs cannot be found fault with. They were not in a position to give further details than what was available to them from the certified copy and the evidence of the plaintiffs' witnesses No. 1, Booni Lal Das, and No. 4, Ram Ashray Prashad, is, in my opinion, sufficient to prove that the original could not be traced and that the copy produced was a copy of the petition, filed on behalf of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2. No doubt, the petition made a mis-statement of fact inasmuch as it stated that the bond of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was subsequent in date to that of Lalji Lal, but that only shows want of due care on the part of the defendants' advisers who could easily have found out, on a reference to the execution case, that Lalji Lal's bond was subsequent to the defendants' bond. This fact cannot go to throw any doubt as regards the bona fides of the petition. In fact, there does not appear any reason to hold that the petition was not a bona fide one. There were a large number of other properties to be sold in execution of Lalji Lal's decree and the prayer made was a proper and natural one, viz., that the property mortgaged to the defendants might be sold after the sale of the other properties. No one else was interested in making a false statement and filing an application to that effect. It must, therefore, be considered to be a bona fide application filed on behalf of the defendants and it must be held that they had knowledge of a mortgage in favour of Lalji Lal, but they did not pursue their enquiry far enough as they ought to have done. Under the circumstances, the conclusion is irresistible that they had notice of Lalji Lal's mortgage before they instituted their suit on 12th September 1898.

SARJUG PRASAD v. HARISHCHANDRA.

But even assuming that the defendants had no notice of Lalji Lal's mortgage, I do not think that their position is in any way altered. The fact remains that Lalji Lal was a subsequent mortgagee and he was not impleaded as a party in the suit brought by the defendants to enforce their prior mortgage. The result was that the decree obtained by the defendants on the basis of their mortgage was not binding upon Lalji Lal, and the plaintiffs, who now stand in the shoes of Lalji Lal, have still the right of redemption left in them.

The next question which arises for determination is on what terms are the plaintiffs entitled to redeem. This raises the question as to whether the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 were justified in releasing the 4 annas share of Athar in favour of the Maharaja of Darbhanga in their Suit No. 77 of 1898. Now the position is that there was a first mortgage of 4 annas of Mouza Athar in the year 1877 in favour of Balbhadar Sahu and others. There was a second mortgage of the entire 5 annas 17 gandas 2 kawries of Athar in the year 1884, in favour of the ancestors of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2. Then there was a third mortgage of 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share of Mouza Athar in favour of Lalji Lal, the predecessor in interest of the plaintiffs. The first mortgagee obtained his decree on the 10th of September 1883. The second mortgagee obtained his decree on the 2nd of August 1905 without impleading the third mortgagee and the third mortgagee obtained his decree on the 15th of February 1886. There is no evidence to show that at the time of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2's mortgage the 4 annas share of Mouza Athar had already been sold and purchased by the Maharaja of Darbhanga in execution of the decree under the first mortgage. All that we find is a statement in the judgment of the High Court of Calcutta passed on the 1st April 1908 in the appeal against the decree dated the 2nd August 1905 to the effect that the name of the Maharaja of Darbhanga was subsequently omitted from the record as it was found that he had been a purchaser of the 4 annas share of mortgaged property in favour of Awadh Narayan. This is no evidence as against the plaintiffs of the fact, that 4 annas share had already been purchased by the Maharaja of Darbhanga before the second mortgage of the defendants. As the plaintiffs were not made parties to the suit of the defendants, as they ought to have been, the statement in the judgment of the High Court referred to above cannot be used as evidence against them. As it has not been shown as against the plaintiffs that the defendants were justified in law in releasing the 4 annas share of Athar, it must be held that the plaintiffs are entitled to call upon the defendants to show in their presence that the release was a legal and valid one. All that we have got on the record is that at the time of the second mortgage of the defendants, a decree had already been passed on the basis of the first mortgage, but that would not extinguish the right of the mortgagor. As has been held by the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Bibijan Bibi v. Sachi Bewah (1), and by this Court in the case of Muhammad Musa v. Babu Aidal Singh (2), the equity of redemption is not extinguished by merely passing of the decree in a mortgage suit. The equity of redemption subsists until the sale is held and the sale proceeds are distributed. Therefore, in the absence of any evidence to show that the 4 annas share of Mouza Athar could not be sold by the defendants in execution of their mortgage-decree, it must be held that the defendants having released a portion of the mortgaged property from their mortgage lien, they are bound to apportion the mortgage debt upon the remaining portion which is now in the hands of the plaintiffs. They cannot, by releasing a portion of the mortgaged property,

(1) 31 C. 863; 8 C. W. N. 684.

(2) 65 Ind. Cas. 801; 3 P. L. T. 232; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat. 92.

HADAYAT KHAN v. SHAHAMAND.

throw the entire burden of the mortgage-debt on the remaining portion so as to affect third parties. That the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 were not in possession of all the facts of the first mortgage and were not justified in releasing the 4 annas, is evident from the fact that even in their written statement in the present suit they stated that the first mortgage was in favour of the Maharaja of Darbhanga, whereas it was in favour of one Balbhadar Prashad Sahu. It must, therefore, follow that the plaintiffs are entitled to redeem 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share of Mauza Athar on payment of the mortgage-money, principal with interest, at the rate stipulated in the mortgage-bond from the date of the mortgage up to the date of redemption which can be legitimately apportioned upon the 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share purchased by them.

The result is, that this appeal is allowed and it is declared that the plaintiffs are entitled to redeem 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share of Mauza Athar on payment of the amount of principal and interest from the date of the bond up to the date of redemption at the rate stipulated in the bond proportionate to the 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share of Mouza Athar. In other words, the amount which the plaintiffs are bound to pay in order to redeem 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries of Athar will bear the same proportion to the entire amount, principal with interest at the bond rate up to the date of payment as 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries bears to 5 annas 17 gandas 2 kawries. The decree of the lower Court will be varied accordingly. The plaintiffs shall get six months from this date within which they should pay the sum found due, and if the plaintiffs fail to redeem within the said period, the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 will be entitled to sell the 1 anna 17 gandas 2 kawries share of Athar free of the lien of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs-appellants are entitled to the costs of this appeal.

Das, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1883

OF 1919.

January 24, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice LeRossignol and Mr. Justice Harrison.

HADAYAT KHAN AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHAHAMAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Adverse possession—Shamilat—Partition—Land to continue joint till certain harvest, effect of—Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887) s. 121.

It is quite possible that a partition of shamilat should be made and possession of the several lots be given and taken and that no formal instrument of partition be prepared, in which case the giving and taking of possession by the several sharers of their several lots would be held to be the date on which the joint holding ceased to be joint and became severalty. [p. 666, col. 1.]

Where, however, on the termination of partition proceedings, a deed of partition was drawn up under the directions of the Revenue Officer conducting the partition, and in obedience to the provisions of section 121 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act it was provided in the deed that partition should take effect from the following kharij:

Held, that the land remained joint till that harvest and that even if the sharers took possession of the plots allotted to them before the harvest, their possession up to that date was merely the possession of co-sharers in separate possession of portions of the joint estate, and did not become adverse to each other till after the harvest. [p. 666, col. 1.]

Khudad v. Alamgir, 116 P. R. 1900, Lahera v. Mahji, 50 Ind. Cas. 550.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jhang, at Sargodha, dated the 22nd May 1919, affirming that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Jhang, dated the 31st January 1919.

Dr. G. C. Narang, for the Appellants.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question in this and the connected appeals is whether the suits are within time. The brief facts are that shamilat was partitioned in 1904-05, and the defendants were allotted shares in spite of the contention of the present plaintiff that the defendants held no share in shamilat.

These suits were brought on the 16th January 1917, and the Courts below have held that the defendants have been in adverse possession since the 31st August 1904 where the proceedings in partition were completed before the Revenue Officer, and that the suits were brought more than 12 years after that date. It is necessary to consider what the expression "completion of partition proceedings" means. It means simply that all disputes raised before the Revenue Officer had been decided by him but up to that date the joint estates remained joint. The parties had not been even inducted into the several shares which it was proposed to allot to them under the scheme of any partition, and apparently no formal order of that kind was ever passed. After appeals to the Settlement Officer and applications for revision to the Financial Commissioner had been rejected the Revenue Officer gave orders for the drawing up of the deed of partition and the deed of partition was accordingly drawn up on the 1st December 1905; and in obedience to the provisions of section 121 of the Land Revenue Act it was provided in that deed that the partition should take effect from Kharif 1905. It is, of course, quite possible that a partition should be made, and possession of the several lots be given and taken, and that no formal instrument of partition be prepared, in which case no doubt the giving and taking of possession by the several sharers of their several lots would be held to be the date on which the joint holding ceased to be joint and became severalty. The present, however, is not such a case. There were no doubt proceedings taken with a view to effect partition long before Kharif 1905, but those proceedings culminated and found their ultimate result and expression in the instrument of partition and that instrument provided that the land should remain joint up to Kharif 1905, and become severalty only in that harvest. From this it follows that even if the sharers took possession of the plots allotted to them before Kharif 1905 their possession up to that date was merely the possession of co-sharers in separate possession of portions of the joint estate.

UTTAMRAM v. BAI KUSHAL.

We have been referred to Khudad v. Alamgir (1) but that judgment is based on quite different facts and the remarks therein made are irrelevant to the matter before us. Lakhera v. Mahji (2) has also been referred to, but it is not clear whether in that case the plaintiffs had any share in the shamilat at all. If they had no share in the shamilat these partition could not invest them with a right which did not exist before partition. In this case the parties in order to convert their joint holding into several holdings had recourse to the Revenue Authorities, and the partition was effected in accordance with the order of the Revenue Officer. That order must be read as a whole and an integral portion of that order was that the land should remain joint property up to Kharif 1905, and should, from that date, be split up into the several portions allotted to the parties.

For these reasons, we accept this and the connected appeals, and remand the cases under O. XLI, r. 23 to the Trial Court for disposal on the merits.

Costs to follow final event.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 785 OF 1921.

September 26, 1922.

Present.—Sir Lallubhai Shah, Kt., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

TRIBHUVAN UTTAMRAM AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

BAI KUSHAL AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Agreement conferring pre-emption right—Registration.

An agreement conferring a right of pre-emption does not create any right in immovable property, and is enforceable without being registered. [p. 667, col. 2.]

Kashi Kunbi v. Sumer Kunbi, 5 Ind. Cas. 234; 32 A. 206; 7 A. L. J. 206, followed.

Ramasami Pattar v. Chinnan Asari, 24 M. 449 at p. 461, dissented from.

Second Appeal from the decision of the Extra Assistant Judge, Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 451 of 1919, reversing the decree passed by the Subordinate Judge, at Borad, in Civil Suit No. 300 of 1917.

(1) 116 P. R. 1900.

(2) 50 Ind. Cas. 550.

UTTAMRAM V. BAI KUSHAL.

Mr. R. J. Thakor, for the Appellants.

Mr. H. V. Divatia, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts which have given rise to this second appeal are these. One Girjashankar made a Will in respect of his properties on September 3, 1907, and he appointed the present plaintiffs as executors under that Will. He died in October 1907. Thereafter, in 1908, a suit was filed by his widow against the present plaintiffs and the present defendant No. 1, who is the sister of Girjashankar. In that suit there was a compromise. In accordance with that compromise, a decree was passed, in favour of the then plaintiff, i.e., the widow of Girjashankar, so far as it related to the suit. The rest of the agreement being outside the scope of the suit was not incorporated in the decree. The present defendant No. 1 sold the properties in suit to defendant No. 2 in April 1917.

Thereupon the plaintiffs filed the present suit in December 1917 with a view to enforce the agreement relating to their right of pre-emption in respect of the two houses in suit.

The defendants raised various defences one of which was that the agreement under which the plaintiffs claimed the right of pre-emption required to be registered, and that as it was not registered, it was inadmissible in evidence.

The Trial Court overruled this plea, and on other points, which need not be detailed, the learned Subordinate Judge decided in favour of the plaintiffs. It accordingly passed a decree in their favour, holding in effect that on the plaintiffs paying Rs. 650 in Court for payment to defendant No. 2, the properties were to be conveyed to the plaintiffs.

The defendants appealed, and in appeal the learned Assistant Judge came to the conclusion that the agreement required to be registered, and accordingly dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. The learned Judge also remarked that even if he had confirmed the decree of the Trial Court, he would have found it necessary to remand the case for findings on the issues relating to the validity of the bequest in the Will relating to dharmada.

The plaintiffs have appealed to this Court, and the point as to registration has been argued before us. It is urged on behalf of the plaintiffs that the agreement does not require registration, and that the decree of the Trial Court is right. The agreement as to pre-emption is in these terms:—"If the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 wish to sell the houses situate at Singlav, they should first sell them to trustees Nos. 2 to 6 at the market-value, that is to say, first right in respect of safil is to be reserved for them and accordingly they have been given by this document a right in respect of safil." The plaintiff and defendant No. 1 referred to in the agreement are the widow and the sister of Girjashankar. The lower Appellate Court has relied upon the decision in Kashi Kunbi v. Sumer Kunbi (1) in support of its view and the same decision has been relied upon before us on behalf of the respondents. On behalf of the appellants reliance is placed in support of the argument that the agreement does not require registration upon the remark in Ramasami Pattar v. Chinman Asari (2).

Apart from the authorities, we think that this agreement is an agreement between the parties which could be enforced by the present plaintiffs, and that it does not create any right in immoveable property. It cannot stand on any footing higher than an agreement to sell immoveable property. In terms and in effect it is merely an agreement to sell to certain persons in case the widow or the sister wished to sell the houses which they got under the compromise. It would, in any case, when the occasion for pre-emption would arise, be enforced as an agreement, and the plaintiffs in the present suit seek to enforce that agreement against the owner (defendant No. 1) and the purchaser from her (defendant No. 2).

In the case of Ramasami Pattar v. Chinman Asari (2), to which we have referred, Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., observes as follows:—

"In cases in which the right of pre-emption springs from a contract it rests only upon a covenant which does not run with the land. Being only a species of contract

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 234; 32 A. 206; 7 A. L. J. 206.

(2) 24 M. 449 at p. 461.

NAZAR V. PARAS.

for the sale of immoveable property the contract of pre-emption stands on no higher footing than a contract for the sale of immoveable property and does not of itself create any interest in or charge on the immoveable property which is subject to the right of pre-emption—vide, section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act. Until the contract is carried out by specific performance either by act of parties or decree of Court, the pre-emptor acquires no title to or interest in such property which alone can extinguish the mortgagor's right of redemption though he may have a right to call for a conveyance of the property."

This view is no doubt in conflict with the decision in Kashi Kunbi v. Sumer Kunbi (1). We have considered the ratio decidendi in this case, and with great respect we are unable to concur in the view taken in that case that an agreement, such as we have here, requires registration. We are not concerned in the present case with the question as to whether the compromise, so far as it related to the title of the various parties to the immoveable property and so far as it has not been incorporated in the decree, required registration or not. We are only concerned with the question as to whether this particular agreement relating to the right of pre-emption requires registration. On that point, as we have already indicated, the agreement could be proved without registration, and there can be no doubt in that view of the matter that the present plaintiffs are entitled to the decree which was passed in their favour by the Trial Court.

We should like to make it clear that we agree with the lower Appellate Court that "the properties pre-empted should be only those that are sold by Exhibit 17, and that the present plaintiffs should take them only in their capacity of trustees or executors of Girjashankar's Will so that they will be bound to fulfil the directions in the Will." It is hardly necessary to add this because, in any case, the present plaintiffs are bound to fulfil their obligations with respect to that property as executors under the Will when they get the property in suit.

There is one other point as to which we may add a word. The lower Appellate Court has expressed the opinion that a remand would have been necessary in order to determine in this suit whether certain bequests were not void on account of uncertainty and vagueness. That is a point which does not arise in the present suit. It is entirely outside the scope of the suit, and the question as to whether any property which the executors may hold should be used as directed in the Will, or that there is any intestacy in respect of any part of that property, is a question which cannot possibly be considered in this suit.

In the result, therefore, we allow the appeal, reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the Trial Court with costs here and in the lower Appellate Court on the defendants.

W. C. A. & N. H.

Appeal allowed

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 259 OF 1923.

May 22, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

NAZAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammal PARAS—PLAINTIFF
JALAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Public policy—Consideration for stifling prosecution in non-compoundable offence, whether recoverable.

Where an offence which is non-compoundable is compounded, the complainant cannot recover by civil action anything that the accused has undertaken to pay, such an agreement being void as opposed to public policy. [p. 670, col. 1.]

Shah Rahman v. Ismail Khan, 82 P. R. 1904, Ghulam Mohi-ud-din v. Deoki Nand, 22 Ind. Cas. 393; 39 P. R. 1914; 54 P. L. R. 1914; 57 P. W. R. 1914, Nujebar Rahman v. Mukhtashed Husain, 15 Ind. Cas. 259; 40 C. 113; 16 C. W. N. 854, relied on.

Where during the investigation of a case of theft a panchayat was held and some of the persons who were suspected of the theft agreed to pay a certain sum of money to the complainant, as a consequence of which the investigation was dropped:

NAZAR V. PARAS.

Held, that the agreement by the suspected persons to pay a sum of money to the complainant was unlawful as being opposed to public policy and the complainant, therefore, could not recover the money.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 16th November 1922, affirming that of the Honorary Munsif, First Class, Karnal, dated the 8th December 1921.

Messrs. Shamair Chand and Sagar Chand, for the Appellants.

Lala Jagan Nath, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are as follows:—

On the 28th July 1920 one Rahim Bakhsh reported at the Thana that three buffaloes belonging to his relative Musammat Paras had been stolen. On the 18th September 1920 Musammat Paras sent a complaint to the same effect to the Superintendent of Police in which she named seven persons as the thieves. On the 9th October 1920 she presented a similar complaint in Court. The complaint was sent to the Zaildar for preliminary enquiry and he reported that it was true. It was then sent to the Police who submitted a final report on the 4th April 1921 in consequence of which the case was treated as untraced. On the 20th April 1921 Musammat Paras renewed her complaint to the Court and wanted to know what had happened to her former complaint. The Magistrate after considering the record of the Police enquiry dismissed this last complaint under section 203, Code of Criminal Procedure, on the 23rd May 1921.

On the 19th August 1921 Musammat Paras filed a suit against 11 persons on the following allegations:—

A year ago defendants Nos. 1 to 7 stole three buffaloes belonging to the plaintiff. The plaintiff put in a complaint which the Magistrate sent to the Zaildar. The Zaildar after investigation reported that the complaint was true. The Magistrate ordered the Sub-Inspector to challan defendants Nos. 1 to 7. On this defendants Nos. 1 to 7 in fear of the Sub-Inspector convened a Panchayat and in front of the Panchayat promised to pay the plaintiff Rs. 600 as the price of buffaloes. Defendants Nos. 8 to 10 stood surety for the payment. On this undertaking a compromise was arrived at and on this compromise being effected the plaintiffs complaint was dismissed.

The Trial Court found that six of the ten defendants were liable, three as principals and three as sureties. It was held that after the theft of the plaintiff's buffaloes a Panchayat was convened, at which the three principal defendants promised to pay the price of the animals and the other three agreed to stand sureties, that the case was not challaned on account of its having been disposed of by the Panchayat, and that the defendants were liable to make good their promise to the plaintiff. A decree for Rs. 450 was passed in favour of the plaintiff.

The defendants appealed to the District Judge. They attacked the finding on the merits and also pleaded that the alleged agreement was not enforceable as being contrary to public policy since the consideration was the stifling of a prosecution in a non-compoundable offence.

The learned District Judge on the second plea held that it was not clear that the promise of the defendants avoided a prosecution and that, from the point of view of public policy, it was preferable that thieves should be forced to pay the value of stolen property rather than that they should escape entirely. On the merits, he agreed with the Court below and expressed his belief in evidence that the Panchayat had decided that the three principal defendants were either to take an oath as to their innocence or to pay the price of the buffaloes at Rs. 150 each. He further found that the Panchayat had been held about November 1920.

In second appeal by the defendants it is urged again that the alleged agreement was void under section 23 of the Indian Contract Act, and it is pointed out that that section renders void not only every agreement for which the consideration is unlawful but every agreement of which the object is unlawful. It is urged that the object of the agreement with which the suit is concerned was palpably to stifle the prosecution of the defendants by putting an end to the Police enquiry.

On behalf of the plaintiff-respondent it is represented that in India a complainant who has lost property by means of a criminal act, can pursue his civil remedy apart from any criminal proceedings provided that there is no agreement not to prosecute and that all that the plaintiff did was to pursue her civil remedy before the Panchayat without entering into any agreement to abstain from criminal proceedings. There is no attempt made to support the learned District Judge's expression of opinion that it is in the interests of public policy that thieves should be forced to pay the value of stolen goods rather than they should escape altogether. It is to be noted in this connection that the question whether the present defendants were the actual thieves was not put in issue and there is no specific finding by the learned District Judge, apart from his remark just quoted, that they were the thieves. The law is clear that when an offence is non-compoundable but is compounded the complainant cannot recover by civil action anything that the accused has undertaken to pay (e. g., Shah Rahman v. Ismail Khan (1), Ghulam Mohi-ud-din v. Deoki Nanl (2) and Nujebar Rahman v. Muktashad Husain (3)).

RAMACHANDRULU V. VENKATA NARASIMHA.

In the present case the plaint, of which an abstract is given above, is perfectly clear that the agreement alleged in it was made with the object of stifling the prosecution and the plaintiff must be held to her pleadings. Admittedly, the agreement was come to during the investigation of a criminal complaint lodged by the plaintiff against the defendants-appellants and others. It was not a case where the plaintiff had put aside her criminal remedy for the time being and had commenced by pursuing her civil remedy. The fact, too, that the agreement took place in front of a Panchayat is significant. What was the reason for holding a Panchayat if the plaintiff was merely prosecuting a civil remedy? The Panchayat is proved to have been held as part of the Police investigation and the evidence that the three principal defendants, Nazari Dossu and Rahmat, were called upon either to take an oath that they were innocent, or to pay the plaintiff the value of the stolen animals shows unmistakably what the object of the arrangement was.

(1) 82 P. R. 1904.

(2) 22 Ind. Cas. 393; 39 P. R. 1914; 54 P. L. R. 1914; 57 P. W. R. 1914.

(3) 15 Ind. Cas. 259; 40 C. 113; 16 C. W. N. 854.

I hold that the agreement was void within the meaning of section 23 and that the plaintiffs' suit for that reason should have been dismissed. I accept the appeal, set aside the decrees of the Courts below and dismissed the suit, but order the parties to bear their own costs throughout.

Z. K. & N. H.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDERS.

NOS. 172 AND 173 OF 1920.

January 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and
Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

GOLCONDA RAMACHANDRULU AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS—APPELLANTS

versus

INUGANTI VENKATA NARASIMHA
ROW GARU AND OTHERS—COUNTER-PETITIONERS NOS. 2 TO 4—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Wrongful exclusion of tenant—Rent-suit, dismissal of—Subsequent suit for possession and mesne profits by tenant—Landholder's right to claim deduction for rent.

In calculating the mesne profits to be allowed to a tenant in a suit by him against the landholder for wrongful exclusion, the landholder is entitled to deduct from such profits the rent payable to him during the period of exclusion, notwithstanding that a suit by him for rent in the Revenue Court was dismissed on the ground that the relation of landlord and tenant was not subsisting between the parties.

Appeals against an order of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Ellore, dated the 13th March 1920, in Appeal Suits Nos. 32 and 33 of 1920 (Appeal Suits Nos. 327 and 328 of 1919, Sub-Court, Ellore) respectively, preferred against an order of the Court of District Munsif, Ellore, dated the 1st August 1919, in Civil Miscellaneous Petition Nos. 3401 of 1918 and 3402 of 1918 respectively in the Original Suits Nos. 935 and 966 of 1913 respectively.

Mr. P. Narayana Murthi, for the Appellants.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Respondents.

BANARSI DAS V. RAMZAN.

JUDGMENT.—The point argued in the appeal is that which has been dealt with as the third point by the lower Appellate Court, whether in calculating the profits allowed to the petitioners for the period of their exclusion from the land, the rent payable to the respondents-landholders should be deducted. We agree with the reasons given by the lower Appellate Court for its conclusion against the petitioners and need only refer to the fact dealt with in the judgment under appeal that after the decision of the District Munsif in these proceedings the respondents sued as landholders under the Madras Estates Land Act for rent and their suit was dismissed. It is urged that this is conclusive against their claim to deduct rent from the profits they have to pay to the petitioners. We do not agree. The suit in the Revenue Court was founded on an allegation clearly unsustainable, that the relation of landlord and tenant was subsisting between the parties during the period in question. The failure of the suit on the ground that this relation was not so subsisting can have no effect on the decision as to the amount of the damages payable, the proper basis for that decision being the amount of the profits, which would have been realized if the petitioner's enjoyment of the land in virtue of their title as occupancy raiyats liable to pay rent, had continued. It is not shown how the respondents' conduct in bringing this suit in the Revenue Court creates an estoppel or otherwise debars them from their present claim. In these circumstances, the appeal against the appellate order fails and is dismissed with costs.

This judgment applies also to A. A. A. O. No. 173 of 1920, which is similarly dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 142 OF 1922.

January 24, 1923.

Present :—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief

Justice, and Mr. Justice Ffordë.

BANARSI DAS—DECREE-HOLDER—

APPELLANT

Versus

RAMZAN AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT—

DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 48, O. XX, r. 11—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 175—Execution of decree—Compromise—Agreement to pay by instalments, effect of—Limitation.

Where both parties to a decree agree to an order being passed directing the payment of the decree by instalments and act upon it, they are precluded from contending subsequently that the order was an improper one. [p. 672, col. 2.]

Akbar Khan v. Dina Nath, 200 P. R. 1889, followed.

Nanak Chand v. Anant Ram, 26 P. R. 1894, referred to.

In execution of a decree the parties agreed that the amount of the decree should be paid by certain instalments. The Court accepted the arrangement and dismissed the application for execution which was then pending. Some of the instalments were paid, but default having then been made in the payment of others, the decree-holder again applied for execution:

Held, that the order passed by the Court on the agreement of the parties to pay the decretal amount by instalments was in substance an order under r. 11 of O. XX of the Civil Procedure Code and fell within the purview of clause (2) of section 48 of the Code, thus extending the period of limitation contained in clause (1) of the section. [p. 672, col. 2.]

Letters Patent Appeal from the order of Mr. Justice Broadway passed in Civil Appeal No. 2030 of 1920, dated 16th May 1922, and published as 72 Ind. Cas. 477, affirming that of the District Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 21st April 1920.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. D. Kureshi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a proceeding in execution of a money decree, and the main question for determination is whether the application made by the decree-holder on the 10th February 1919 was barred by the rule of limitation contained in section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code. The facts which are relevant to the question of limitation are as follows :—On the 20th March 1906 the appellant obtained a decree against the respondent for Rs. 79-14-3 and costs. On the 7th August 1907 the decree-holder proceeded to execute his decree and applied to the Court for the attachment and sale of certain lands belonging to the judgment-debtor. The usual notice issued to the latter, and on the 28th August he obtained time in order to come to a settlement with the decree-holder.

BANARSI DAS v. RAMZAN.

On the 18th November 1907 an application containing the terms of a compromise arrived at between the parties was presented to the Court. According to this compromise the decretal amount was to be paid by half-yearly instalments of Rs. 50 each and in the event of default in the payment of four successive instalments the decree-holder was at liberty to recover the entire sum at once. The Court to which the above application was presented recorded the statements of both the parties verifying the terms of the compromise and then passed an order by which the case was struck off in accordance with the compromise and the decree-holder was directed to act on the new contract.

It appears that the parties thereafter acted in accordance with this compromise, and that the judgment-debtor paid several instalments on the dates specified therein. He did not, however, discharge the whole of the debt, with the result that on the 10th February 1919 the decree-holder, made the present application for execution.

Now, section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 provides that where an application to execute a decree has been made no order for the execution of the same decree shall be made upon any fresh application presented after the expiration of twelve years from (a) the date of the decree sought to be executed, or, (b) where the decree or any subsequent order directs any payment of money or the delivery of any property to be made at a certain date or at recurring periods, the date of the default in making the payment or delivery in respect of which the applicant seeks to execute the decree. There can be no doubt that if the date of the decree is the terminus a quo the present application for execution is barred by time. It is, however, contended that the order made by the Court on the 18th November 1907 amounts to an order directing payment of the decretal amount by instalments and that the case comes within the purview of clause (b) of the aforesaid section. It is incontrovertible that the parties agreed that the decretal amount should be paid by instalments, and it appears that the Court accepted the compromise and consequently passed an order striking off the execution proceedings. If that had not been the intention of the Court, it would have proceeded to execute the decree in accordance with the application made by the decree-holder on the 7th August 1907. It is true that the order was not explicit in its terms, and that it did not mention section 210 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 (corresponding to O. XX, r. 11, of the present Code) which empowered the Court to make an order after the passing of the decree for payment of the decretal amount by instalments; but we are clear that the Court when accepting the request of the parties intended that the decretal amount should be payable by instalments and that the order which it passed was in essence and substance one made under section 210 of the Civil Procedure Code. It will be observed that the order in question is similar to that passed in Akbar Khan v. Dya Nath (1) which was held to extend the period of limitation prescribed by section 230 of the old Code, corresponding to section 48 of the new Code.

The learned Counsel for the respondent argues that Art. 175 of the Indian Limitation Act requires that an order directing payment by instalments should be made upon an application presented within six months from the date of the decree and that if it is made upon an application presented after the expiry of the prescribed period, it is ineffectual to enlarge limitation for the execution of the decree. This contention may be accepted, but at the same time it has been repeatedly laid down that, where both parties have agreed to such an order being passed and have acted upon it, they are precluded from contending that it was an improper order vide inter alia Nawabzada Muhammad Akbar Khan v. Dya Nath (1). Indeed, the judgment of the Division Bench in Nana Chaud v. Anant Ram (2) which has been strongly relied upon in support of the view that the order in question cannot be treated as one passed under section 210, Civil Procedure Code, because it was made after the expiry of the period prescribed by Art. 175 of the Limitation Act, also lays down in express terms that "where the parties have agreed to an alteration in the decree, either party may be estopped from questioning hereafter the validity of such alteration." The learned Judges, however, held in that case that neither party had, as a matter of fact, agreed to the alteration of the decree and that the Court also did not consent to such an alteration. The facts in the present case are, however, different as stated above, the parties undoubtedly entered into a compromise by which the decree was made payable by instalments and the Court accepted that arrangement and passed an order which substantially complied with the requirements of section 210. Further, both the parties acted upon that arrangement and they cannot be allowed to say that the order was not properly made.

(1) 200 P. R. 1889.

(2) 26 P. R. 1894.

DASONDHI, BADAR BAKHSH.

In view of this finding it is unnecessary to adjudicate upon the contention that a subsequent order passed by the Court in 1912 operates as res judicata and precludes the judgment-debtor from agitating the question that no valid order was passed making the decretal amount payable by instalments. We accordingly hold that the application for execution is not barred by limitation and, accepting the appeal, we remand the case to the Court of first instance and direct it to dispose of the application in accordance with law. The respondent must pay the costs incurred by the appellant in all the Courts.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2498 OF 1919.

January 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and
Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.DASONDHI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

BADAR BAKHSH AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 77 (3)
(i)—Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887), s. 158 (2) (vi)—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Suit by landlord for declaration of right to receive batar—Suit for correction of revenue entry.

There is no foundation for the idea that suits brought under the Specific Relief Act are ipso facto entertainable only by Civil Courts. Where a suit falls within the purview of any clause of section 77 (3) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, that suit must be heard by a Revenue Court, whether or not so far as the form of the suit or the particular remedy prayed for is concerned the suit also falls within the purview of any section of the Specific Relief Act. [P. 674, cols. 1 & 2.]

Ibrahim v. Akbar, 34 Ind. Cas. 209; 58 P. L. R. 1917; 104 P. W. R. 1910, followed.

Kahmun v. Hasnam, 7 Ind. Cas. 717; 73 P. R. 1910; 103 P. W. R. 1910; 144 P. L. R. 1910, dissented from.

A suit by a landlord against a tenant for declaration that he is entitled to take batar instead of a cash malikana from the tenant falls under section 77 (3) (i) of the Punjab Tenancy Act and is exclusively triable by a Revenue Court. [P. 674, col. 1.]

Ganu v. Karim Khan, 33 P. R. 1908 (F. B.); 83 P. W. R. 1908; 171 P. L. R. 1908 and Sawan Singh v. Kahmun, 55 Ind. Cas. 739, relied on.

Obiter dictum:—A suit for the correction of a revenue entry is triable by a Revenue Court alone and the jurisdiction of a Civil Court to try such a suit is barred under section 158 (2) (vi) of the Punjab Land Revenue Act. [P. 674, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshmarpur and Kangra Districts, dated the 15th August 1919, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Garhshankar, District Hoshmarpur, dated the 10th March 1919.

Lala Anant Ram Khosla, for Mr. R. Obbard, for the Appellant.

Lala Gobind Ram for Lala Faqir Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit between certain landlords and tenants for a declaration that the former were entitled to take batar instead of a cash malikana in respect of certain lands. The suit having been decreed by both the Courts below, the defendants-tenants have come up in second appeal to this Court. The sole question for determination involved in this appeal is whether the suit was or was not cognizable by a Civil Court. It is urged that the case falls within the purview of section 77 (3) (b) or (i) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, and that it is exclusively triable by the Revenue Courts. In our opinion clause (b) has no application to this case as the suit is obviously not one for an addition to or abatement of rent under section 28 or for commutation of rent. We are, however, clearly of opinion that the case falls under section 77 (3) (i) being a suit between a landlord and a tenant arising out of the conditions on which a tenancy is held. In Gamu v. Karim Khan (1) it was held by a Full Bench of the Chief Court that a suit for a declaration that occupancy tenants are not liable to pay haq bina dues was cognizable by the Revenue Courts only. This judgment was recently followed by Mr. Justice Broadway in the case reported as Sawan Singh v. Rahman (2) in which it was laid down that a suit for a declaration that the plaintiffs are not liable to pay rent as entered in the Revenue Records fall within the purview of section 77 (3) (i) of the Punjab Tenancy Act and was exclusively triable by a Revenue Court. The learned District Judge, following Rahmun v. Hasham (3), has held that as the suit is one for a declaration under the Specific Relief Act it is triable by a Civil Court only. This judgment, however, has specifically been dissented from and should now be considered to have been practically overruled by a Full Bench of the Chief Court in the case reported as Ibrahim v. Akbar (4), in which it has been laid down "that there is no foundation for the idea that suits brought under the Specific Relief Act are ipso facto entertainable only by Civil Courts; and that...where a suit falls within the purview of any clause of section 77 (3), Punjab Tenancy Act, that suit must be heard by a Revenue Court, whether or not so far as the form of the suit, or the particular remedy prayed for, is concerned, the suit also falls within the purview of any section of the Specific Relief Act." The learned Counsel for the respondents has not been able to distinguish the present case from the cases relied on by the opposite party, and the only contention put forward by him is that the suit is one for the correction of a revenue entry and that, as such, it is triable by a Civil Court alone. We are unable to agree with him in this contention. A reference to the plaint makes it quite clear that the suit is one of an entirely different nature, and is not a suit for the correction of a revenue entry but one for a declaration that the plaintiffs are entitled to receive rent in kind and not in cash. But even if the contention that the suit is one for the correction of a revenue entry be sound, we think that it would be triable by a Revenue Court alone, and that the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts would be barred under section 158 (2) (vi) of the Land Revenue Act. We have no hesitation in holding that the case falls within the purview of section 77 (3) (i) of the Punjab Tenancy Act and that the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to hear the suit.

DASONDHI V. BADAR BAKHS.

Under section 100 of the Punjab Tenancy Act this Court has the power to order that a decree passed by a Civil Court be registered as a decree of a Revenue Court. No cause against the registration of the decree of the Court of first instance in a Revenue Court with jurisdiction has been shown and such registration does not appear to be prejudicial to either side.

We, therefore, accept the appeal and, setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court, order that the decree of the Court of first instance be registered as that of an Assistant Collector of the first grade, District Hoshiarpur, and that the memorandum of appeal be returned to the appellant for presentation in the Revenue Appellate Court. Under the peculiar circumstances of the case, we do not make any order as to costs in this Court or in the Court of the District Judge.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 33 P. R. 1908 (F. B.); 83 P. W. R. 1908; 171 P. L. R. 1908.

(2) 55 Ind. Cas. 739.

(3) 7 Ind. Cas. 717; 73 P. R. 1910; 103 P. W. R. 1910; 144 P. L. R. 1910.

(4) 34 Ind. Cas. 209; 58 P. L. R. 1917; 104 P. W. R. 1916.

GUL AHMAD V. GHULAM RABANI KHAN.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 123 OF 1921.
April 30, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Pison, J. C.

GUL AHMAD—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER
versusGHULAM RABANI KHAN AND OTHERS
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Custom—Succession—Pagwand—Whole blood whether excludes half—Presumption—Swathis of Mansehra Tahsil, Hazara District.

Where the chundawand rule prevails, the whole blood would certainly exclude half-blood, but the converse would not necessarily follow; sons might succeed to their father's estate under the pagwand rule and still a full brother might succeed to his brother's estate in preference to a half brother. All that can be said is that, where the relationship through mothers has been ignored in the former case, Courts should not be surprised to find it ignored in the latter also. [p. 676, col. 2.]

Sardar Bahksh v. Ahmad Yar, 150 P. R. 1888, relied on.

A pagwand system of succession can be found co-existing with a system under which the whole blood excludes the half in succession to a brother's estate. [p. 677, col. 1.]

The presumption, if any, arising from the pagwand rule of succession, in favour of the rule that the half-blood should succeed along with the whole, is a very weak one and is easily rebutted. [p. 677, col. 2.]

The whole blood invariably excludes the half where the descendants of a common ancestor have split up into groups according to uterine descent. [p. 677, col. 1.]

The normal custom among Swathis of the Mansehra Tahsil, District Hazara, is for whole brothers to succeed solely to the estate of a deceased brother to the exclusion of half brothers. [p. 678, col. 2.]

Petition for revision of an order of the Additional Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 10th May 1921, set aside an order of the Munsif, First Class, Mansehra, dated the 20th December 1920.

Lala Dewan Chand, R. S., for the Petitioner.

Lala Rim Labhaya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—After hearing the arguments of Counsel in this case I adjourned it for orders in order to collect as far as possible all the authorities relating to the important question of custom involved in this case. I have now had an opportunity of studying most of the rulings which have passed relating to the tribe to which the parties belong.

The parties are Swathis of Shinkyari in the Mansehra Tehsil of the Hazara District. They are the descendants of Abdul Karim who had 14 sons by three different wives. A pedigree-table* of the family is appended to this judgment. The three wives of Abdul Karim were Musammat Kafiya, Musammat Sarfraz Begam and Musammat Bibi Fatima. It will be convenient to allude to the descendants of each wife as branches Nos. 1, 2 and 3, respectively. The estate in suit is that left by Ali Akbar, a member of branch No. 2, who died in January 1910. The estate in question is under mortgage and the suit relates only to the equity of redemption. The plaintiff, Gul Ahmad, is a member of the same branch. The defendants are the members of the 3rd branch, the descendants of Musammat Bibi Fatima, the members of the first branch have not disclosed any interest in the land in suit. The suit is one for possession of the mortgage rights. The Revenue Authorities, holding that in succession to a brother's estate there was no distinction between the half and the whole blood, attested a mutation in favour of the surviving descendant of both branches Nos. 2 and 3. The plaintiff claims that he is entitled to succeed exclusively to the estate of Ali Akbar on the ground that the whole blood excludes the half. The Trial Court decreed the suit holding that the plaintiff had established the custom which he alleged. On appeal to the Divisional Court, after a remand had been made for further enquiry upon the question of custom, it was found that the whole and the half blood succeeded equally to a brother's estate, and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff then applied to this Court upon the revisional side, and I have taken up the question on revision as an important one of law and custom.

It was argued by Counsel for the petitioner at the outset of the case that it had not been proved that the normal rule of succession to a father's estate among Swathis of the Mansehra Tehsil was pagwand or per capita. At a later stage, however, it was conceded by the learned Counsel that when the question of succession to a father's estate only was involved the normal rule of succession was pagwand. His present arguments may be summarized as follows:—

* See page 679 for Pedigree-table [Ed.]

GUL AHMAD v. GHULAM RABANI KHAN.

1. No presumption arises from the pagwand system that the half-blood succeeds equally in succession to a brother's estate but that, on the contrary, Muhammadan Law recognises at the same time the pagwand system of succession by sons to a father and yet excludes the half-blood in succession by collaterals.

2. Even if a general custom excluding half-blood is not proved a special custom exists in this family, the original ancestor having made a separate distribution of his estate to each of the three branches of his descendants.

3. In any case, the members of each branch have fallen into groups, and there is a consensus of authority, even in the Punjab, that when groups exist, inheritance does not pass outside the group.

It is laid down in paragraph 26 of Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law of the Punjab that where the property of a common ancestor was distributed according to the rule of pagwand (per capita) there is a presumption that the whole-blood and the half-blood succeed together. This dictum is based largely upon the Full Bench ruling published as Ghulam Muhammad v. Muhammad Bakhsh (1) where all the precedents relating to the question were reviewed at great length. There appears to me to be a prevalent disposition among the Courts of this Province to extend the principle there enunciated to an extent which is neither justified by the terms in which it is expressed, or by the precedents on which it is based. All that is laid down is that a presumption arises until the contrary is proved. In other words, the presumption is one which can be rebutted. There has been a tendency, as shown by a recent case in the Peshawar District, where the same question of custom was involved, to assume that some rule exists by which pagwand distribution necessarily and in all cases implies that the whole and the half-blood succeed equally not only to a father's, but also to a brother's estate. The ruling of the Judicial Commissioner of this Province published as Judicial Record No. 21 is nevertheless clear authority for the view that a pagwand system can be found co-existing with the system under which the whole-blood excludes the half in succession to a brother's estate. I have recently had occasion to deal with the same question at some length in the case of the Gigiani tribe of the Peshawar District in Civil Appeal No. 79/44 of 1923, Sajdar Khan v. Muhammad Zaman Khan, the ruling in which is now under publication.* In that case it was found that sons succeed per capita to a father's estate, but that whole brothers alone succeed to a brother's estate. It is indeed very clearly laid down, even in the Full Bench ruling Ghulam Muhammad v. Muhammad Bakhsh (1), that the presumption referred to in Rattigan's Digest is one of fact and open to rebuttal. I cannot help thinking that the soundest enunciation of the principle is that which was given in an older ruling, Sardar Bakhsh v. Ahmed Yar (2) where the Court remarked: "No doubt where the chundawand rule prevails the whole blood would certainly exclude the half-blood, but the converse would not necessarily follow; sons might succeed to their father's estate under the pagwand rule and still a full brother might succeed to his brother's estate in preference to a half brother. All that can be said is that where the relationship through mothers had been ignored in the former case, we should not be surprised to find it ignored in the latter also. We could hardly draw any strong presumption that it is so ignored. It is also to be noticed that the Chief Court of the Punjab have, at least in one comparatively recent ruling, treated the presumption accepted in Ghulam Muhammad v. Muhammad Bakhsh (1) as a distinctly weak presumption. Khuda Yar v. Ahmad (3) is an instance of this. I confess that I am doubtful if there is really any presumption at all. It is certainly one which can be so easily rebutted that though the onus of rebuttal may lie in the first instance on the party alleging that the whole blood excludes the half, that onus immediately shifts on the discovery of any evidence impugning the presumption. It will, therefore, be a question of evidence in the present case as to whether there is ground for believing

(2) 150 P. R. 1888.

(3) 51 Ind. Cas. 298; 33 P. R. 1919.

*Since published on p. 577 of this Vol., ante.—[Ed.]

(1) 4 P. R. 1891 (F. B.).

GUL AHMAD V. GHULAM RABANI KHAN.

that either among the Swathi tribe as a whole, or in this family in particular, the whole-blood ordinarily excludes the half in succession to a brother's estate. There are, again, many authorities for the view that, among all tribes and especially among Swathis of the Mansehra Tahsil, the whole-blood invariably excludes the half where the descendants of a common ancestor have split up into groups according to uterine descent. The following cases decided among Swathis of the Mansehra Tahsil have been quoted. In the case Gulzaman v. Ahmad Khan, decided by the Divisional Judge on the 19th of May 1906, it was clearly held that a pagwand distribution did not necessarily imply that the half and the whole-blood succeeded equally and that, as it had been shown that the whole brothers in that case had been associated with the deceased the half brothers could not succeed. In another case decided by the Divisional Judge Abdul Qasim v. Mirhamza (Swathis of Dhariel close to the village with which we are now concerned) it was held that the full blood excludes the half. In a case among the Sayids of the Mansehra Tehsil Ghulam Haidar Shah v. Ahmad Shah, decided in 1914, a pagwand system of distribution was found to co-exist with the system by which the whole brothers excluded the half brothers when a brother's estate was in issue. The learned Divisional Judge in the present case had based his conclusion on the custom recorded in Answers 44 and 65 of Watson's Tribal Custom of the Hazara District. That record naturally carries considerable weight, as Answer 65 deals particularly with the case of succession to a brother's estate and states categorically that succession to a brother's estate follows chundawand or pagwand according to the prevailing custom, and that no distinction is drawn between associated and unassociated brothers. It is remarkable, however, that that record of custom is, so far as I can discover, the sole authority for that view. I think that the learned Divisional Judge has omitted to notice that the vernacular riwaj-i-am which was prepared at the same time as Watson's Customary Law, states very distinctly that when a proprietor dies without issue, his estate goes to full brothers or nephews in preference to step-brothers. This in itself would seem to me to rebut the presumption derived from Watson's Customary Law, and I have already shown that the presumption to be drawn from the existence of the pagwand system is a comparatively weak one. The trend of all judicial precedents which I have examined, is in favour of the custom as recited in the "riwaj-i-am." Kalandar Khan v. Najaf Khan (4) shows that a father among Swathis of Balakot can interfere with the normal pagwand distribution by making an unequal distribution among his sons. It would also appear that the custom of separation into groups by uterine descent is particularly prevalent among Swathis of the Mansehra Tahsil, and this fact has, no doubt, influenced the general question of custom. I should be inclined to say that a system by which the whole-blood normally excludes the half in succession to a brother's estate has grown up and become consolidated for two main reasons. One is the tendency which I have already noticed for descendants to form separate groups by uterine descent and the other is the fact that the exclusion of half-blood is in accordance with Muhamadan Law. In the case among the Gigianis, which I have alluded to above. I had occasion to refer to the tendency of Courts to assume that the reference of a question of custom to the test of Muhamadan Law implies that the custom alleged cannot be a genuine and tribal custom. I have pointed out in that case that there is nothing in the least incompatible with a true statement of custom in the reference of this custom to the test of Muhamadan Law. I had not, at that time, noticed the Punjab Chief Court ruling Daya Ram v. Sohail Singh (5), which is an important authority for the same view. It was remarked in that case by Mr. Justice Chatterji: "The principle to be borne in mind then is that whenever there is a gap in the Customary Law which cannot be filled otherwise, it must be filled by reference to the personal law of the litigating parties. This rule underlies all applications of Customary Law to the concrete facts of a case." I am not prepared to say in the present case that this test is the ultimate ratio decidendi, but if there were a doubt as to the custom governing the parties or if that custom appeared to be in a state of flux, I should have no hesitation in referring to the principles of Muhammadan Law as a guide. In the present case, however, there does not appear to me to be really any reasonable doubt upon the custom quite apart from the fact of its consonance with Muhammadan Law. All the precedents which I have been shown, confirm me in the view that the normal rule of succession among Swathis is that the whole-blood excludes the half in succession to a brother's estate. I have already remarked that the adoption of this custom is particularly marked in the cases where descendants have split up into groups by uterine descent. It appears to me, further, that in the present case we have very clear indications of a splitting up of this nature. In the first place, it is an admitted fact that the first branch of Abdul Karim's descendants, that of Musammal Bibi Kafiya has completely separated from the other two branches. This, of course, does not conclusively prove that branches Nos. 2 and 3 have separated inter se but it at least raises some presumption of general disruption. The learned Divisional Judge has alluded to two instances which appear to me to show conclusively that branches Nos. 2 and 3 have also separated. He refers to the fact that when Ismail, a member of branch No. 3, died, the other descendants of Musammal Fatima succeeded. He admits that this is certainly a precedent for the whole-blood excluding the half-blood, but I think that he has missed the point that we are not only considering a precedent for the general custom but also the facts of separation of branches. The other instance referred to is succession to the estate of Hazaratullah of branch No. 2. In that case Ali Akbar of branch No. 2 alone succeeded. The learned Divisional Judge describes this instance as inconclusive on the ground that the other full heirs were excluded equally with the half blood. I cannot agree, however, that this instance is thereby inconclusive. On the contrary, it appears to me to show very clearly that the only question considered was the relative claims if members of branch No. 2 and the members of branch No. 3 do not appear ever to have disclosed the smallest claim or interest in the estate of Hazaratullah. It may further be remarked that I have not been shown one single instance in this family where members of both branches have succeeded to the estate of a member of one particular branch. I can hardly imagine a clearer instance of a family which has been shown definitely to have split up into groups by uterine descent. Even, therefore if I did not hold, as I do, that the normal custom among Swathis is for whole brothers to succeed solely to a deceased brother's estate, I must hold that in the present case the branches of the family have split up into groups by uterine descent and should follow the consensus of authority for the view that, where such groups exist, succession is invariably confined to the group. On the above findings, therefore, the plaintiff's contention must prevail that he is entitled to succeed alone to the estate of the deceased Ali Akbar to the exclusion of the defendants, as members of a different branch of the family.

(4) 23 P. R. 1893.

(5) 110 P. R. 1906; 31 P. L. R. 1907; 59 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.).

OUL AHMAD V. GHULAM RABANI KHAN.

The point of limitation has been raised again by the learned Counsel for the respondents. It has been found by the Divisional Court that Art. 144 of the Limitation Act applies to this suit, as it is one for constructive possession. The learned Counsel for the respondents argues that it is really one for a declaration and is governed by Art. 120. I must agree, however, with the view taken by the learned Divisional Judge. Art. 144 covers any interest in land and this must clearly include an interest such as the equity of redemption. I agree, therefore, that the suit is within time.

On the above findings, the plaintiff's suit must succeed. I, therefore, set aside the order of the Divisional Court dismissing the suit and restore the order of the Trial Court granting the plaintiff a decree for possession of the mortgagee rights of the land in suit. The defendants will pay the costs of the plaintiff throughout.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

ASA SINGH v. JAGJIT SINGH.

PEDIGREE-TABLE.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 846 OF 1921.

July 24, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Campbell.

ASA SINGH—DEFENDANT—

PETITIONER

versus

JAGJIT SINGH AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 151, 152—Amendment of decree—Error in decree following error in plaint—Court, jurisdiction of, to amend decree—Inherent power.

Where an error in a decree is due to following a similar error in the plaint, a Court has jurisdiction under section 152 of the Civil Procedure Code to amend the decree, as such error is one arising by accidental slip or omission. Apart from section 152, section 151 enables a Court to alter a decree when it does not correctly express what the Court actually decided or intended to decide. [p. 681, col. 2.]

Civil revision against the decree of the District Judge, Hissar, dated 14th June 1921.

Mr. Jagan Nath, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. M. L. Puri and L. C. Soni, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The circumstances of this petition for revision are as follows:—Jagjit Singh and others sued to pre-empt certain land sold by Ranjit Singh to Asa Singh. The sale was by a registered-deed and the subject of the sale was certain undivided shares in certain joint holdings. The plaint alluded to the sale-deed, a copy of which was attached to it and also to the fard patwari and to the mutation in favour of the vendee. The total area sold according to the deed worked out at 671 bighas 18 biswas. In the heading of the plaint was given what purported to be a detail of each of the holdings from which a share was sold with field numbers and areas, but certain field numbers were omitted and the total area specified in the heading of the plaint amounted to about 401 bighas only.

The plaintiffs were given a decree by the final order in appeal to the District Judge and in execution thereof obtained possession of the whole of the land sold, 671 bighas 18 biswas. The order in the District Judge's judgment was that the plaintiffs should obtain possession by pre-emption of the land in suit.

ASA SINGH v. JAGJIT SINGH.

The decree specified the land entered in the heading of the plaint by the field numbers given therein.

After possession had been transferred in execution, an objection was put in by the vendee who applied for restoration of the excess over 401 bighas. No final order was passed on this application by the First Court. The decree-holders put in an application for amendment of their decree and they were referred by the First Court to the District Judge since his was the decree in suit. They applied accordingly to the District Judge and he has amended the decree so as to include in it all the land contained in the sale-deed.

Against this order the vendee appealed to this Court and the Division Bench before whom the appeal was laid decided that no appeal was competent and directed notice to issue on the revision side.

Counsel for the vendee has commenced by claiming that he can re-agitate the question of whether an appeal lies, and he has quoted a number of rulings to the effect that an appeal can lie against an amended decree in the same way as against any other decree.

[All his rulings, however, make it clear that there can be no appeal against an order amending a decree, and this is plain by what Asa Singh's appeal was. The Court-fee paid was not that chargeable on an appeal against the decree, but was Rs. 2 for an appeal against an order. The heading of the appeal stated it to be one under section 38 of the Punjab Courts Act. The notes made by Counsel on the record in response to queries from the office show that he was appealing from the order. Up to the present no additional Court-fee has been paid or tendered and there is no appeal from the decree before me. In any case, the appeal which was preferred must be taken to have been dismissed by the Division Bench.

Taking the application as a revision, the question is whether the District Judge had jurisdiction to pass the order. It is contended that the amendment was under section 152 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that this section applies only to the correction of clerical errors made by the Court itself and has no concern with mistakes of the parties. In support of this argument a ruling of the Allahabad High Court, Ram Chander Sarup v. Mazhar Hussain (1) is quoted, the facts of which bear no resemblance to those of the present case, but there are several authorities to the contrary.

In Somasundaram Chettyar v. Rama Krishna Kaair Velasami (2) Madras High Court held that the Court had power to amend clerical errors which had crept into a decree by following similar errors in the plaint, without causing the pleadings in which the errors first appeared to be amended. The error there dealt with was one of description of the boundaries of the property in suit.

[Narayanasami v. Natesa (3) is a ruling on section 206 of the former Code which is less wide in its terms than the present section 152. The High Court refused to interfere on revision with the correction of an error in the decree which rendered it incapable of execution. The error in fact had been made in the plaint but it was held to be so palpable that to disallow its correction could be simply to put an obstacle in the way of plaintiff's executing his decree. One of the Judges of the Bench considered that the proper remedy of the plaintiff was to apply for review for the correction of an obvious error in the judgment, but he held that the only error of jurisdiction by the Court below was to proceed under one section of the Code instead of another and that it did not thereby assume a jurisdiction which it did not possess. He considered, therefore, that there should be no interference on revision.

In Pherozsha Pestonji v. Sun Mills, Ltd. (4) a judgment also delivered under the old Code, the plaintiff sued for specific performance of a contract by payment of Rs. 4,475 and was given a decree "for specific performance as prayed with costs." The correct sum was Rs. 4,775 and on a motion to rectify the decree it was ordered that the decree should be rectified. It was held that the objections to the proposed amendment were merely technical, that it was of little consequence that the error arose from the plaintiff's own mistake in his plaint and that a perusal of the contract

- (1) 51 Ind. Cas. 55; 1 U. P. L. R. (A) 69.
- (2) 22 Ind. Cas. 774; 15 M. L. T. 102; (1914) M. W. N. 107.
- (3) 16 M. 424; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1002.
- (4) 22 B. 370; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 830.

ASA SINGH v. JAGJIT SINGH.

which had been referred to in the plaint showed that the prayer for the specific performance and the prayer for payment of Rs. 4,475 were inconsistent.

It was remarked that procedure is merely subservient to justice and that the intention of the learned Judge who granted the decree was to direct specific performance of that particular contract.

In Mahaboo Begum Sahiba v. Lal Begum Sahiba (5), a very short judgment, it was laid down that a clerical error admittedly having been made in the plaint, a Court had power to rectify it in whatever subsequent record it was repeated by slip or inadvertence or mistake.

In Sheo Balak Phathak v. Sukhdal (6) there was a suit for possession of a two-anna share in certain land. In the final prayer for relief the word "pie" was used for "anna". Subsequently, in decreeing the claim, the Trial Court described the property in suit in its judgment as a two-pie share and the same description was repeated in the decree. The Trial Court was asked to amend the decree but refused on the ground that it was not at variance with the judgment and that the error sought to be amended was brought about by plaintiff himself. The High Court accepted a revision application by the decree-holder, stated that section 152 clearly applied and that the clerical error in the plaint was due to an accidental slip, and ordered that it should be amended throughout the record beginning with the plaint down to the decree.

In Basantl v. Kunj Bihari Lal (7) in a decree for sale on a mortgage both the mortgage-deed and the decree misdescribed the property as muafi. The Court below held that it was prevented by reason of this misdescription from putting the property to sale in execution. The High Court allowed the decree to be amended remarking that it was the duty of the Court to see that all errors were amended when there was no question of doubt and that the misdescription had not deceived the opposite party in any way.

[The present case was a suit for pre-emption and it is an elementary proposition that would be pre-emptor cannot claim pre-emption of a portion of the property sold but must sue to take over the whole bargain. There can be no doubt that both Courts considered that they were dealing with the whole sale and it is impossible to believe that the defendants were under any contrary impression. The decree as amended is now in accordance with the intention of the Court which passed it, and the rulings above quoted are ample authority for holding that the amendment was competent under section 152 as an error arising in the decree from some accidental slip or omission.

Apart from section 152, the present Code contains section 151, the provisions of which did not appear in the former Code, and I venture to think that in any imaginable case section 151 would enable a Court to alter a decree when it does not correctly express what the Court actually decided or intended to decide. Thus, it can reasonably be argued that any rulings delivered before the enactment of the present Code, which may appear to restrict the power of amendment are in point of fact out of date.

[Finally, in Ghasita v. Sultan (8) this Court declined to interfere on revision with a decree which, though based on an error of law, did substantial justice between the parties, and on the finding that the plaintiffs were entitled to pre-empt the sale, which is now secure from all attack, the decree as amended does such substantial justice, while the unamended decree did not.

For these reasons I dismiss the petition with costs.

W. C. A. Petition dismissed.

(8) 11 Ind. Cas. 445; 93 P. R. 1911; 151 P. W. R. 1911; 228 P. L. R. 1911.

(5) 62 Ind. Cas. 652; 14 L. W. 445.

(6) 23 Ind. Cas. 344; 12 A. L. J. 185.

(7) 44 Ind. Cas. 998; 16 A. L. J. 262.

GULMIRAN V. ABDUL RAHIM KHAN.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FURTHER CIVIL APPEAL No. 88-49 OF 1921.

April 12, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Pipon, J. C.

GULMIRAN AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ABDUL RAHIM KHAN, AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 38, 45—Mortgagee—Redemption—Payment to one co-mortgagee, whether discharges mortgage—Specification of shares, effect of—Presumption.

Courts in India have always recognised that equity demands that the redemption of mortgages shall be facilitated. [p. 678, col. 1.]

It has always been regarded as a matter of public policy that the restoration of land to its original owner and the release of land from the burden of incumbrances are in themselves desirable, and an insistence on the proposition that a mortgagor is obliged to satisfy separately every one of a number of co-mortgagees, may operate to effect a clog on the equity of redemption. It would in many cases have the effect of forcing a mortgagor into Court as his only means of ensuring redemption. [p. 687, col. 1.]

At the same time the least fraud between the mortgagor and one of several co-mortgagees with the intention of defeating the rights of the latter would deprive the mortgagor of his right to obtain release by a single payment. This would be a question of fact in each case, and it must be accepted that a principle of equity which allows one of several co-mortgagees to give a valid discharge must be qualified throughout by the equally equitable condition that there has been no attempt to defeat or prejudice the rights of other persons. [p. 687, col. 1.]

The mere specification of shares among the mortgagees themselves does not necessarily affect the mortgagor. For the mortgagor to be affected it must be shown not only that the shares of the mortgagees have been specified, but that the essence of the contract between them and the mortgagor was that he should redeem according to those shares. In the absence of a direct contract to this effect, it must be assumed that the liability of the mortgagor is joint and not several as regards the whole body of co-mortgagees. [p. 687, col. 2.]

Section 38 of the Contract Act applies to an offer which has been accepted as well as to an offer which has been refused; but whether section 38 of the Contract Act applies to payment to one of several joint mortgagees or not, the rule of equity applicable to India is that, in the absence of fraud or an intention to defeat the rights of other mortgagees, payment to a single mortgagee, discharges the mortgagor. The mere specification of the shares held by the mortgagees in a Revenue Record is not sufficient in itself to warrant the assumption that the mortgagor is bound by the division of those shares, and it lies upon the mortgagees to show that a definite contract subsisted between the parties which recognised this division. [p. 687, col. 2; p. 688, col. 1.]

Barber Maran v. Ramana Goundan, 20 M. 461; 7 M. L. J. 269; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 327 and Mannava Annapurnamma v. Uppala Akharyao, 19 Ind. Cas. 12; 36 M. 544; 13 M. L. T. 268; (1913) M. W. N. 328; 24 M. L. J. 333 (F. B.), approved of. Mathra Das v. Nizam Din, 41 Ind. Cas. 921; 68 P. R. 1917; 107 P. L. R. 1917; 81 P. W. R. 1917 (F. B.), dissented from.

Jagat Tarini Dasi v. Naba Gopal Chaki, 34 C. 305; 5 C. L. J. 270, Sitaram v. Shridhar, 27 B. 292; 5 Bom. L. R. 91, Parbhu Ram Pandey v. Jhalo Kuer, 42 Ind. Cas. 408; 2 P. L. J. 520; (1917) Pat. 258; 4 P. L. W. 57 and Ram Chandra v. Goswami Rajjan Lal, 5 Ind. Cas. 129; 32 A. 164; 7 A. L. J. 99, considered.

Further appeal from the judgment and decree passed by the Divisional Judge, Derajat, dated the 1st August 1921, whereby the judgment and decree passed by the District Judge, Bannu, dated the 14th April 1921, was set aside.

Mr. Saaddudin Khan, K. S., for the Appellants.

Kazi Ahmad Khan for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This suit relates to an area of 143 kanals 17 marlas situated in the village of Adamzai in the Bannu District. It had been mortgaged in 1918 by Gulmiran and others to the descendants of Dostai Khan for Rs. 1192. On the 26th of May 1919 a mutation was attested showing the land as redeemed from the mortgagees. The mortgagees, on the 8th of February 1921, instituted the present suit for two alternative reliefs, (1) a declaration that the mortgage was still subsisting and had not been redeemed, and (2) for possession of the land in suit in the capacity of mortgagees. The Trial Court found that the mortgage-debt had been paid to Kalu Khan, one of the mortgagees, and that such payment was a valid discharge of the mortgage-debt as against the other mortgagees, and on these findings dismissed the suit. The Divisional Judge, on appeal, remanded the case for further inquiry on the fact of the alleged payment of the mortgage-debt to Kalu Khan. After a return to the order of remand had been made, the Divisional Judge found (1) that the defendants had failed to prove that the money had been paid to Kalu Khan, and (2) that even if the money had been so paid, the payment to one of several joint mortgagees did not constitute a valid redemption of the mortgage. On these findings he granted the plaintiffs a decree for possession as mortgagees of the land in suit. The defendants-mortgagors have lodged a further appeal in this Court.

GULMIRAN V. ABDUL RAHIM KHAN.

The first ground of appeal appears to be based on a misconception. The validity of the decree for possession is attacked on the ground that the suit was one for a declaration only. This, however, is not correct. In the plaint the two alternative reliefs, declaration and possession, were clearly sued for, and there was no legal bar against the passing of a decree for possession.

There are two questions to be dealt with on this appeal; (1) the question of fact as to whether or not the money was paid by the mortgagors to Kalu Khan, and (2) the question of law as to whether such payment, if proved, was a valid discharge of the mortgage-debt.

1. As against the Revenue Record showing the mortgage to have been redeemed, it lies upon the plaintiffs to show that no redemption took place. The proceedings taken on mutation are important in this case. On the 17th of January 1919 the patwari entered up a report showing that one of the mortgagors Gulmiran reported that the money had been paid over to the mortgagees. This report was signed by Allahdad Khan, one of the present plaintiffs, and also by a Lambardar, Saudad Khan. The mutation came up for attestation before the Tahsildar on the 26th of May 1919. On that occasion Kazi Khan, one of the mortgagees, was shown to have appeared and denied that he and his brothers had received the mortgage-money. The order of the Tahsildar continues that the proprietor Gulmiran had, nevertheless, paid the money to Kalu Khan. It is a question in dispute between the parties as to whether the Tahsildar in making this remark was recording a fact which he had ascertained from other sources, or whether he was recording the statement made to him by Kazi Khan. However this may be, he concluding his order by saying that the question as to the effect of this payment was one to be decided between the mortgagees themselves and that the land was actually redeemed. He accordingly accepted mutation and entered up redemption. Now, it is clear that the signature of Allahdad Khan upon the original report carries very great weight. It is objected that Allahdad Khan was not himself at the time one of the mortgagees as his father Saiwar Khan was then alive. I am unable to see, however, that this in any way detracts from the value of the inference to be drawn from his signature. It is not a question of one of the mortgagees being estopped by his own action, but a question of evidence as to facts. Whether or not Allahdad Khan was himself one of the mortgagees at the time, he was vitally interested in the transaction. He would have succeeded to the rights of his father as mortgagee, and he actually has succeeded since that date. Further, he is a literate man, and the entry is attested not by his thumb impression, but by his signature. He has, again, in his statement, while denying that he intended to verify the entry of redemption, admitted that he read over that entry before he signed it. As against this, his explanation is, to my mind, most unconvincing. He alleges that another mutation was simultaneously put before him in which a certain land was redeemed from one Zober, and that he signed the report with which this suit is concerned on the impression that it related to the other mortgage with which this suit is not concerned. It seems to me impossible to accept this explanation. As he had himself read over the report, I fail to understand how he could have been duped in such an obvious manner as has been alleged. The report was also verified by a Lambardar, Saudad Khan, who has, as a witness, attested his verification. He is no doubt hostile to the plaintiffs, but it is perfectly clear that both he and Allahdad Khan actually verified that report. The explanation now put forward by the plaintiff involved the assumption that there was an elaborate plot concocted to enter up a false mutation of redemption. The Divisional Judge appears to think that this is what actually occurred. I cannot, however, agree with this view. There appears to me everything to show that the report was a genuine one, and that it was verified by Allahdad Khan, one of the present plaintiffs, with full knowledge of its import. We next comes to the proceedings before the Tahsildar on the 26th of May 1919. I have mentioned above that the interpretation of the wording of that order is in dispute. I can myself only read it as implying that it was Kazi Khan who stated to the Tahsildar that Gulmiran had paid the money to Kalu Khan. Kazi Khan was clearly present at the time, as shown by the order itself. The wording of the order implies, to my mind, beyond a shadow of doubt that the Tahsildar was recording a fact which Kazi Khan had stated to him. Here, again, I am unable to accept the very far fetched explanation that there was again an elaborate plot concocted to which the attesting officer allowed himself to become a party either by collusion or by carelessness. There appears to me to have been a distinct and a public admission that the money had been paid over to Kalu Khan. This view is, again, corroborated by the fact that the mortgagees, in spite of the entry against their, never appealed against the mutation either to the Collector or to the Revenue Commissioner. In view of the large sum of money involved and of the great prejudice to their rights by the existence of the mutation which they allege now to have been fraudulent and unwarranted, it is inconceivable that they should have omitted to press their rights on appeal with a view to getting that mutation annulled. There is, indeed, only one explanation, to my mind, of their conduct, and that is that they believed, at the time that as Kalu Khan had actually received the money, they had no case to resist redemption as against the mortgagors, and that they then considered that the dispute was one to be settled as against Kalu Khan himself. They did not even come into Court with a suit until nearly two years after the date of the mutation, and the obvious inference is that they have done so now because they have been since advised that payment to one of several mortgagees does not constitute a valid redemption. There is, again, the important fact that possession of the land in suit appears to have changed hands since the mutation. It is admitted that the mortgagors, and not the mortgagees, are now paying the revenue. Two explanations of this fact have been put forward by the plaintiffs. One is, that the payment of revenue by the mortgagors arises out of an agreement made by Gulmiran in 1918 and recorded in mutation under which, on redemption of one-sixth of the land, he contracted to pay the revenue in future. I have examined that mutation and I am unable to see that it in any way bears the construction alleged. It does not show that Gulmiran undertook the payment of revenue at all; on the contrary, it lays down that the revenue will be paid by the mortgagees who are to pay Gulmiran one-sixth of the grain produced by the land. The explanation seems to me far fetched and unsound. The alternative explanation put forward is that, once the mutation of redemption had been attested, the Village Revenue Officers were obliged to recover the revenue from the persons shown to be in possession, and could no longer demand it from the mortgagees. But we find that, apart from the attested mutation, the mortgagors are now shown in possession in the khasra girdwari and this is extremely strong evidence to show that their possession was actual and not merely nominal. The explanation, again, is not consistent with the first one which I have dealt with. I hold that possession was actually transferred and that this is an additional and cogent reason for holding that redemption actually took place. On the question of fact I must disagree with the finding of the Divisional Court, and I hold that the mortgagee debt of Rs. 1192 has been paid by the mortgagors to Kalu Khan, one of the mortgagees.

GULMIRAN V. ABDUL RAHIM KHAN.

(2) The question of law to be decided is whether this payment to one mortgagee only is binding upon the other mortgagees and has the effect of redeeming the mortgage. The question is one of considerable importance and by no means free from difficulty. The Trial Court, in holding that the payment constituted a valid discharge of the mortgage, followed the well-known Madras ruling in the case of Barber Maran v. Ramanna Goundan (1) passed in 1897 and published as Barber Maran v. Ramana Coundan (1). The Divisional

(1) 20 M. 461; 7 M. L. J. 269; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 327.

GULMIRAN v. ABDUL RAHIM KHAN.

Judge has pointed out that this ruling has not been followed by other Courts and has quoted Mathra Das v. Nizam Din (2) as confirming the view that payment to one of several joint mortgagees does not discharge the debt. The views which have been taken from time to time by different High Courts of India upon this subject are interesting and, to a large extent, conflicting. The conclusion arrived at by the High Court of Madras in the ruling quoted above was based principally upon the interpretation of section 38 of the Contract Act. The tenor of that section is that when a promisor has made an offer of performance to one of several joint promisees, such an offer has the same legal consequences as an offer to all of them. The view taken in that case was that an offer which has been accepted cannot be distinguished, so far as regards its legal consequences, from an offer which has been refused. Section 38 distinctly refers in its first paragraph to an offer which has not been accepted. The concluding words of this section, however, do not qualify the word "offer" by any condition of non-acceptance and run as follows:—"An offer to one of several joint promisees has the same legal consequences as an offer to all of them." That view is prima facie a perfectly logical one. It may be said that if a mere offer discharges from liability, an accepted offer a fortiori operates in the same manner. The same question came again before a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case published as Mannava Annapurnamma v. Uppala Akkayya (3) where the majority of the Judges composing the Full Bench upheld the decision of Barber Maran v. Ramana Goundan (1). The Chief Justice, Sir Arnold White, however, dissented. It is noticeable that, in his judgment, he admitted that the last paragraph of section 38 of the Contract Act was general and was not restricted to an offer which had not been accepted. This point is of interest as the Punjab Chief Court in the later rulings which upheld the conclusions then arrived at by Sir Arnold White have based their findings primarily upon the argument that section 38 throughout can only refer to an offer which has not been accepted, and that it has no application to a payment actually made. The position with regard to section 38 of the Contract Act is well expressed in the judgment of Sankaran Nair, J., who was one of the majority composing the Full Bench in the Madras ruling now under consideration. He said that: "It is difficult to impute an intention to the Legislature that the promisor was entitled to make the offer though the promisee was not entitled to accept it. It seems clear that if the promisor was entitled to offer payment to one of the promisees, which the latter was entitled to accept, the promisor cannot be held to be liable to pay over again to the other promisees what he has already paid. The payment, therefore, must be treated as a complete discharge." A somewhat similar question came before the Calcutta High Court in Jagat Tarini Dasi v. Naba Gopal Chaki (4) a ruling of 1907. That ruling however, is by no means conclusive, as it dealt primarily with the question as to whether the heirs of a deceased promisee were themselves joint promisees within the meaning of section 38 of the Contract Act. The view taken was that heirs constituted one corporate heir and were connected together with unity of interest and unity of title. The Bombay High Court in a ruling of 1903, published as Sitaram v. Shridhar (5), doubted the correctness of Barber Maran v. Ramana Goundan (1). The learned Judges, however, stated that it was not necessary for them to express any opinion on the correctness of that decision as they were dealing with the question of the rights of heirs. They held that heirs were not joint promisees, and that one heir could not enforce a mortgage without the concurrence of the rest so as to give a valid discharge to the mortgagor. I think that this ruling can only be regarded as leaving undisturbed the general principle enunciated in Barber Maran v. Ramana Goundan (1) while holding that that principle is inapplicable to heirs. The Punjab Chief Court, however, has been more definite in its complete divergence from the views held by the Madras

(2) 41 Ind. Cas. 921; 68 P. R. 1917 107 P. L. R. 1917 81 P. W. R. 1917 (F. B.).

(3) 19 Ind. Cas. 121; 36 M. 544; 13 M. L. T. (1913) M. W. N. 328; 24 M. L. J. 333 (F. B.).

(4) 34 C. 3051 5 C. L. J. 270.

(5) 27 B. 2921 5 Bom. L. R. 91.

GULMIRAN V. ABDUL RAHIM KHAN.

High Court. The chief authority in this respect quoted from the Punjab is Mathra Das v. Nizam Din (2). The learned Judges adduced two reasons for differing from the Madras view. One was that section 38 of the Contract Act could not apply because it referred to an offer refused only, and not to an offer accepted, and the second was the view that the case was governed by section 45 of the Contract Act. Now, with all due respect to the learned Judges, I think that the view that section 38 can only apply where the offer is not accepted, is one which involves a severe strain upon the language of the Code and also an illogical chain of reasoning. Further, I have already remarked that the learned Chief Justice of the Madras High Court, in dissenting from the view that payment to one of several joint promisees constituted a valid discharge for all; himself admitted that the concluding paragraph of section 38 was of general application and must refer to an offer accepted as well as to an offer refused. Again, the learned Counsel for the respondents before me, while attacking the principle enunciated by the Madras High Court and supporting the conclusion arrived at by the Punjab Chief Court, has also admitted very frankly that he cannot agree with the view taken by the latter regarding section 38. He argues that we must exclude section 38 from consideration altogether, and rely upon the principles of equity, a point with which I shall deal later. As regards the application of section 45 of the Contract Act, Sir Arnold White similarly excluded that section from the grounds on which he based his view. He says in his judgment: "section 45 which deals with the devolution of rights where a person has made a promise to two or more persons jointly, throws very little, if any, light on the question we have to decide. The section prescribes the way in which the rights are to devolve, but says nothing as to how these rights are affected by a transaction between the promisor and one of the promisees." It appears to me that this is the only tenable view, and that section 45 does not assist us at all in arriving at a decision on the question as to whether payment to one of several promisees has the same effect as payment to all. It would seem, therefore, that the conclusion arrived at in Mathra Das v. Nizam Din (2) rests upon very slender foundation. The view taken by the Patna High Court is of a particular interest in the present case, as Counsel on both sides would seem to admit that the view taken by the learned Judges of that Court is really the soundest, inasmuch as it refers the question at issue solely to the test of equity. I have been referred by Counsel for the appellants to the ruling of 1917 published as Parbhu Ram Pandey v. Jhalo Kuer (6). If we are to exclude altogether, as a basis for determination, the provisions of sections 38 and section 45 of the Contract Act, it is argued by the learned Counsel for the respondents that the rule of equity applicable in England is that one of joint creditors cannot give a valid discharge. The learned Counsel argues that there has, on this point, been a conflict between Common Law and Equity in England, the Common Law principle being that there is a valid release by a single creditor unless fraud is proved, and the equity principle being that tenants-in-common can claim in equity that one of them cannot, destroy the right of others by releasing a debtor to a tenancy-in-common. It is contended, and no doubt rightly, that co-mortgagees constitute not a joint tenancy, but a tenancy-in-common. If, however, we are to decide the present question on the principles of equity, I am much inclined to doubt if the principle enunciated as the equitable principle accepted in England necessarily applies in India, and necessarily applies to the case of a mortgage of agricultural land such as that with which we are now dealing. In the first place, it is stated categorically in the judgment published as Parbhu Ram Pandey v. Jhalo Kuer (6), "the law is that one joint creditor in equity can give a valid receipt to a debtor in full discharge of the claims of himself and of the other joint creditors." It was, therefore, conceded by that High Court that the equitable principle applicable in India was not that which has been put forward by the learned Counsel for the respondents. Further, there cannot be the least doubt that Courts in India have always recognised that equity demands that the redemption of mortgages shall be facilitated. An illustration of this principle may be found in the doctrine that contracts arrived at between parties to a mortgage which constitute an inequitable clog upon redemption, may be set aside by Courts. It has always been regarded as a matter of public policy that the restoration of land to its original owner and the release of land from the burden of incumbrances are in themselves desirable. It is tolerably clear that an insistence upon the proposition that a mortgagor is obliged to satisfy separately every one of a number of co-mortgagees, may operate to effect a clog on the equity of redemption. It would certainly allow the mortgagees in many cases to force a mortgagor into Court as his only method of ensuring redemption. There is no doubt, at the same time, that the least fraud between the mortgagor and one of the several co-mortgagees with the intention of defeating the rights of the latter at once deprives the mortgagor of his right to obtain release by a single payment. This would be a question of fact in each particular case, and it must be accepted that a principle of equity which allows one of several mortgagees to give a valid discharge must be qualified throughout by the equally equitable condition that there has been no attempt to defeat or prejudice the rights of other persons.

(6) 42 Ind. Cas. 408; 2 P. L. J. 520; (1917) Pat. 258; 41 P. L. W. 57.

GULMIRAN V. ABDUL RAHIM KHAN.

I have also to consider, however, another position taken up by the respondents, and that is that there can in no case be a valid discharge by payment to one of several mortgagees when the separate shares of such mortgagees have been specified. This argument is based upon the principle laid down by the Allahabad High Court in Ram Chandra v. Goswami Rajjan Lal (7). In the present case there is no deed of mortgage, but the contract is embodied in the mutation attested by the Revenue Authorities. That mutation gives specific shares of each mortgagee. Now, it appears to me that the principle enunciated by the Allahabad High Court had been expressed in considerably too wide terms. I am unable to see that the mere specification of shares among the mortgagees necessarily affects the mortgagor at all. For the mortgagor to be affected it must be shown not only that the shares of the mortgagees have been specified, but that the essence of the contract between them and the mortgagor was that he should redeem according to those shares. It is indeed a little difficult to distinguish the position of co-mortgagees on specified shares from a contract made in severalty with a number of mortgagees. Now, if there was a mortgage-deed which definitely showed that the mortgagor had entered into a contract recognising the specification of the mortgagees' share, and implying any separate liability to each, there would be much force in the respondents' contention that payment in the present case to one of them would not constitute a valid discharge as against all. When, however, we are dealing with a mortgage the terms of which have been embodied only in the mutation proceedings, there is nothing whatever to show that the mortgagor himself was any party to the method by which the mortgagees allotted their respective rights inter se. There is no doubt that this question would be regarded by the Revenue Authorities as one which concerned the mortgagees alone, and that they would be allowed to specify such shares without any reference to the mortgagor's acceptance of each, and that all that would be necessary for the admission of the mortgage to the Revenue Record would be the acknowledgment of the mortgagor of his liability for the total amount. In fact, I would go so far as to say that, in the absence of a direct contract to the contrary, it must be assumed that the liability of the mortgagor is joint and not several as regards the whole body of co-mortgagees. I am, therefore, unable in the present case to accept the contention that, if we once accept the general principle that payment to one mortgagee constitutes a valid discharge of the debt, that principle is affected merely because the shares of the mortgagees in the debt are specified in the Revenue Record.

It is now possible to sum up the conclusions arrived at. I hold that section 38 of the Contract Act applies to an offer which has been accepted as well as to an offer which has been refused; further, that, whether section 38 of the Contract Act applies to payment to one of several joint mortgagees or not, the rule of equity applicable in India is that, in the absence of fraud or an intention to defeat the rights of other mortgagees, payment to a single mortgagee discharges the mortgagor. I hold, further that the mere specification of shares held by the mortgagees in a Revenue Record is not sufficient in itself to warrant the assumption that the mortgagor is bound by the division of those shares, and that it lies upon mortgagees to show that a definite contract subsisted between the parties which recognised such division. I must, therefore, disagree with the findings arrived at by the Divisional Court on both the points for determination in this case. I hold that the mortgage-debt was duly paid to one of the mortgagees Kalu Khan and that the effect of the payment was to redeem the mortgage from all. I, therefore, accept this appeal and, restoring the order of the First Court, dismiss the suit with costs. The plaintiffs will pay the defendants' costs on this appeal.

SOHBAT KUAR v. RAJ DEVI.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

Appeal against the judgment and decree of the District Judge, Gonda, dated the 8th August 1922, upholding the judgment and decree of the Assistant Collector, First Class, Gonda, dated the 11th July 1921.

Mr. Moti Lal Saksena, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal in a suit for profits under section 108 (15) of the Oudh Rent Act. The only substantial plea is that the parties were members of a joint family and, therefore, no suit for profits lies. This fact I am asked to decide purely on the basis of the presumption under the Hindu Law, in spite of the fact that the defendant's witnesses said nothing about it, but, on the contrary, gave evidence to show that the plaintiff had received a part of her profits. Even, however, if the fact were established I am of opinion that this is not a good answer to the suit. My attention is drawn to an old ruling of the Allahabad High Court that a suit for profits under section 93 of the Rent Act of 1881 did not lie by one member of a joint Hindu family against another Chandi Prasad v. Jwala Prasad (1). Whatever may have been the case under the N.-W. P. Rent Act I am of opinion that the same rule does not apply to the Oudh Rent Act. Section 108 is only concerned with the question whether the parties are recorded co-sharers. If the plaintiff is a recorded co-sharer, recorded in respect of a specific share as is the case here, she is entitled to maintain a suit for profits. I accordingly dismiss the appeal under O. XII, r. II.

W. C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) A. W. N. (1899) 206.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

RENT APPEAL NO. 8 OF 1922.

December 22, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Daniels A. J. C.

Mussammat SOHBAT KUAR, AND

ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat RAJ DEVI—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT

*Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 108 (15)—
Suit by member of joint Hindu family against another for profits, whether maintainable.*

*A suit, for profits under section 108 (15) of the Oudh Rent Act, brought by one member of a joint Hindu family against another is maintainable, if the plaintiff is a recorded co-sharer, recorded in respect of a specific share.

EMPEROR . INAYAT.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 1011 OF 1922.

January 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

EMPEROR—PETITIONER

VERSUS

INAYAT—ACCUSED—RESPONDENT.

Press and Registration of Books Act (XXV of 1867), ss. 4, 14—False statement in making declaration, what constitutes.

A false statement in a declaration which is not made and subscribed before a Magistrate as provided by section 4 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, cannot be said to have been made "in making a declaration" within the meaning of section 14 of the Act. [p. 690, cols. 1 & 2.]

The mere presentation of a declaration to a Magistrate is not equivalent to making it before him within the meaning of section 4 of the Act. Therefore, it is no offence to merely present a false written statement or declaration to a Magistrate. [p. 690, col. 2.]

Case reported by the District Magistrate, Lahore, with his No. 2150, dated the 18th May 1922.

FACTS.—The accused in this case filed a set of three declarations under section 4 of the Indian Press Act, No. XXV of 1867.

In these declarations, marked Exhibits P B, C and D on the file, he stated that he had a Press for printing at Lahore called the Naqqash Press.

On an enquiry it was found that the statements in the declarations as to accused's having any such Press as the Naqqash Press were false.

A complaint against him was lodged in the Court of the Additional District Magistrate, who, after a comprehensive trial under section 14 of the Act, found the accused guilty of making a false statement in the declarations, convicted and sentenced him to imprisonment till the rising of the Court and to fine of Rs. 100 only.

GROUND.—1. The punishment awarded is manifestly inadequate and meagre, it is only nominal and does not meet the ends of justice.

2. The accused actually committed a triple offence under section 4 read with section 14 of the Press Act by making palpably false statements in the declarations which he never believed to be true.

3. The punishment provided and contemplated by the Legislature for a single offence of the kind is up to Rs. 5,000 fine coupled with imprisonment up to two years.

4. The action of the accused in thus making false declaration was deliberate and was intended to save him from the operation of the penal provisions of the Press Act. The security of Rs. 2,000 of the Press with which he was connected and which printed the Siasat newspaper had recently been forfeited by Government. The Press Act provided for the enhancement of that security up to Rs. 10,000. To avoid having to deposit enhanced security and the chance of that enhanced security being forfeited together with the machines of the old Press on the occasion of a possible further order of confiscation by the Local Government, the accused with full deliberation filed a false declaration which, if duly accepted, would allow the District Magistrate to demand only Rs. 2,000 security. The fact that the Press Act has since been repealed cannot be taken into consideration.

The inadequacy and impropriety of the sentence being noticed on my examination of the record of the case under section 435 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is forwarded under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, for the orders of the High Court with a recommendation for the enhancement of the sentence such as their Lordships may think fit in the interests of justice.

Kanwar Dalip Singh, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Ghulam Mohi-ud-Din, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—Syed Inayat was convicted under section 14 of the Press Act (XXV of 1867, as modified up to the 1st of July 1890) of making a false statement; and sentenced to simple imprisonment till rising of the Court, and Rs. 100 fine which was paid. The District Magistrate has made a reference to this Court under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, for enhancement of sentence, while the convict applies for revision on the ground that no offence under section 14 read with section 4 was proved to have been committed by him.

It is admitted that though the accused filed a written declaration in triplicate with a letter in the Court of the District Magistrate he did not make nor subscribe it before him. It is contended;

SITA RAM V. EMPEROR.

therefore, that even if it be conceded that his statement in the said declaration that he had a printing press was not true, he could not be said to have made this false statement in making a declaration; because he never made the declaration before a Magistrate. The Magistrate who tried the accused got over this objection in the following way:—

"It is now to be seen whether the accused by putting in a declaration form in which he stated 'I have a printing press for printing entitled the Naqqas Press situate in Lahore' while he had no such press in his possession, did commit an offence under section 14 of Act XXV of 1867. The section reads as follows:—"Any person who shall, in making any declaration under the authority of this Act, make a statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false, or does not believe to be true, shall on conviction before a Magistrate, etc., etc." The section does not contemplate that the declaration should be complete before a prosecution is lodged, for it must be admitted that the declaration, Exhibits P. B., P. C., and P. D., were not attested or completed before the District Magistrate. It has a wider scope and any false or untrue statement made in the course of making a declaration is made punishable under the section. The forms, Exhibits P. B., P. C., and P. D., duly filled in and presented by the accused amounted to a written statement; and the accused appeared before Mr. Keough, Additional District Magistrate, on the 25th January last and gave particulars of his new Press, whereupon a security of Rs. 2,000 was recommended (vide Exhibit P. H.). Hence I am of opinion that the putting in of a declaration form duly filled in amounts to making a statement while making a declaration; under the Act."

[Now it is obvious; that this interpretation of section 14 outskips its scope, and it is contended that this argument is fallacious, and exception was taken to it in grounds Nos. 7 and 8 of the appeal presented to the learned Sessions Judge; but it appears that the point was not argued before him, as it is not dealt with in his judgment. The only question for determination is whether a false statement in a declaration which is not made and subscribed before a Magistrate as provided by section 4, can be said to have been made 'in making a declaration.' It is quite clear that it is no offence to merely present a false written statement or declaration to a Magistrate, and as admitted by the Magistrate to present a written declaration to a Magistrate is not equivalent to making it before him. As the petitioner made no declaration before a Magistrate it cannot possibly be said that he made a false statement in the course of making a declaration before a Magistrate. Section 14 contemplates a false statement made in making a declaration which may consist of several statements as in the present case. Therefore, if no declaration is made and subscribed at all before a Magistrate, it cannot be said that the accused made a false statement in making a declaration before him. I am, therefore, of opinion, that the accused petitioner committed no offence under section 14 of the said Act and could not be convicted. It may be remarked here that there is nothing on the record to show that the petitioner made a statement before the Additional District Magistrate or gave him any particulars of his new press. No particulars of the press are given in the form Exhibit P. H., which was filled up by the Additional District Magistrate.

[Therefore, I accept the petition and set aside the conviction. The fine will be refunded. This disposes of the reference also made by the learned District Magistrate.

Petition accepted;

Conviction set aside.

Z. F.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 162 OF 1923.

April 13, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

SITA RAM AND ANOTHER—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 439, 476—Magistrate ordering prosecution under

EMPEROR v. SARWAN SINGH.

s. 476—Revision by District Magistrate—Jurisdiction.

Where an order to prosecute a person is passed by a Magistrate under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to interfere, it is only when sanction to prosecute has been granted under section 195, that the District Magistrate has such powers.

Criminal revision against an order of the District Magistrate, Etawah, dated the 31st January 1923.

Mr. N. C. Vaish, for the Applicants.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order passed under section 476 directing the prosecution of the accused under section 205 of the Indian Penal Code. The application has been pressed on the facts only, but there is no doubt on the Magistrate's order that a prima facie case is made out against the applicants. It appears that the complainant had filed a list of witnesses and the case had been adjourned for their evidence. On the adjourned date the two applicants, Sita Ram and Ram Lal, appeared as witnesses, and in their evidence gave their names as Radha Kishen and Pershadi Lal, respectively, these being the two witnesses for whose evidence the case had been adjourned. The Trying Magistrate took action under section 476 of the Indian Penal Code. The case came before the District Magistrate who passed an order purporting to uphold the Trying Magistrate's order but to alter the charge from one under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code to one under section 205 of the Indian Penal Code, on an application for revision presented by the accused. If the Trial Court had granted sanction under section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure it would, no doubt, have been within the power of the District Magistrate, as the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie, to uphold or modify that sanction, but where an order has been passed under section 476 the District Magistrate has no power to alter it. The order of the District Magistrate was, therefore, ultra vires and I set it aside and restore the order passed by the District Magistrate. It will, however, be open to the Court which tries the case to frame a charge under section 205 of the Indian Penal Code if the evidence discloses an offence under that section.

M. A. A.

Order set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 633 OF 1922.

November 9, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Harrison.

EMPEROR—APPELLANT

versus

SARWAN SINGH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED
—RESPONDENTS.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 216, offence under, when complete—"Harbour," meaning of.

There is no time limit for the completion of an offence under section 216 of the Penal Code, which is complete as soon as it is committed, and it is immaterial whether the evasion of apprehension of the offender lasts six hours or six years. [p. 691, col. 2; p. 693, col. 1.]

The word "harbour" in section 216 of the Penal Code includes "the assisting of a person in any way to evade apprehension," and is not confined to providing shelter, food and clothing. [p. 692, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal from the order of the Sessions Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 18th May 1922, reversing that of the Magistrate First Class, Ludhiana, dated the 10th April 1922.

The Government Pleader, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. N. Kapur, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Five men, Hardit Singh, Sarwan Singh, Dewa Singh, Partap Singh and Santa Singh, were convicted by a First Class Magistrate under section 216, Indian Penal Code, of harbouring one Sham Singh, an offender whose apprehension had been ordered, by assisting him to evade that apprehension, and also under section 353, Indian Penal Code, of using criminal force to deter public servants, namely, the Police Officers who were endeavouring to arrest Sham Singh, from the discharge of their duties. They were also ordered on release from jail to execute bonds under section 106, Criminal Procedure Code.

They appealed to the Sessions Judge of Ludhiana and their appeals were accepted.

EMPEROR V. SARWAN SINGH.

and from that order accepting the appeals the Government Advocate has presented an appeal to this Court asking to have it set aside and the order of conviction restored.

Now, it is clearly established that on the 21st March 1922, between 10 and 11 o'clock a party of Police went to the village Manoki to arrest this man Sham Singh against whom a warrant had been issued under section 17 (2) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XIV of 1908). When they arrived in the village it was discovered that he was in the house of one Sucha Singh and they proceeded there, the Sub-Inspector, Umar Bakhsh, staying outside the house with some of his men and sending in two Head Constables, Balwant Singh and Kirpal Singh. They found the five accused surrounding Sham Singh in an inner kothri all being armed with lathis. Balwant Singh called out that he had come to arrest Sham Singh and that he had a warrant, whereupon these five men replied that they would not allow the arrest to take place, and came out of the house guarding and surrounding Sham Singh, and in order to intimidate the Police they raised their lathis in a threatening manner. When they came out of the street the Police made another unsuccessful effort to arrest Sham Singh, and a large body-guard then joined the accused, consisting of some 20 men who came from a Diwan which was in progress at the time, and these men, who were armed with kirpans and lathis, together with the original five, escorted Sham Singh to the Diwan. The Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Hilton, was in the village at the time, and he called up Hardit Singh who appears to have been the ring-leader amongst the accused. On the Deputy Commissioner ordering him to allow Sham Singh to be arrested he replied that they would not do so until the Diwan had been completed and that then, after 4 o'clock, the accused would be given up and as a matter of fact the accused was given up.

On these facts it is perfectly clear that the accused have committed the offence described in section 216, Indian Penal Code, of harbouring an offender, for the word "harbour" does not only mean to provide shelter, food and clothing but includes "the assisting of a person in any way to evade apprehension," and it cannot seriously be contended that, on these facts, the accused did not commit this offence. We are of opinion, however, that what the accused did in guarding Sham Singh, in threatening the Police and in preventing his arrest was all one and the same transaction and cannot be split up. This being so, and as the Government Advocate does not press for a further conviction under section 353, it is unnecessary to consider whether this offence has or has not been committed. We, therefore, accept the appeal in so far as to restore the order of the Trying Magistrate, which is absolutely correct, under section 216 and maintain the sentences passed under that section of three months' rigorous imprisonment. The remainder of his order which concerns section 354 and the giving of security under section 106, Criminal Procedure Code, which does not apply after a conviction under section 216 only, will not be carried out.

We think it right to point out that the judgment of the Sessions Judge is perverse and does not represent the facts correctly. The whole impression conveyed by this judgment is that two high contracting parties, the Deputy Commissioner and spokesman of the accused, discussed the question of the handing over of Sham Singh; that the Deputy Commissioner came to terms with this spokesman and agreed that the arrest should be delayed; that each high contracting party conceded a certain portion of its demands or, rather, to be accurate, that the Crown made a concession and agreed to delay the arrest until it suited the convenience of the person against whom the warrant had been issued, to give himself up and until it suited his friends to agree to his doing so. In fact, the judgment states clearly in two places that it was "agreed" that the arrest should be delayed. What actually happened was that the Deputy Commissioner called upon this ringleader to cease breaking the law and to use his influence to prevent his friends doing the same, and, on their defying him, thought it wiser not to try and enforce the order with the wholly inadequate Police force at his command. There can be no sort of doubt that the accused assisted Sham Singh to evade apprehension, and it is nowhere laid down that there is any time limit for the duration of this offence, which is complete as soon as it is committed. It is, therefore, immaterial whether the evasion lasts six hours or six years. We have allowed the fact that the accused peacefully gave up Sham Singh later in the evening to affect the question of sentence, and this is the only effect which it can possibly be allowed to have.

NAGESHAR PRASAD, v. EMPEROR.

W. C. A.

Appeal accepted.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 141 OF 1922.

January 9, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.
NAGESHAR PRASAD AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT.

*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 342—
Failure to examine accused—Grave irregularity—Re-trial.*

The failure by a Magistrate to examine an accused person for the purpose of section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code is a grave irregularity and might, in a suitable case, be in itself a sufficient ground for setting aside a conviction. The fact that the accused was examined and cross-examined as a prosecution witness in a cross-case would not relieve the Magistrate of the duty imposed on him by the above section or lessen the gravity of the irregularity. Where, however, the irregularity is not such as to prevent the Magistrate from arriving at a correct view of the facts and the accused has said all he has had to say in the capacity of a prosecution witness, and no unfair use has been made of any admission made by him as a witness, the High Court will not order a re-trial. [p. 694, cols. 1 & 2.]

Application against the order of the Sessions Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 11th November 1922, upholding the order of the Magistrate, First Class, Fyzabad, dated the 17th October 1922.

Mr. Bindeshri Prasad, for the Applicants.

The Government Pleader and Mr. K. P. Singh, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision. It is not free from difficulty.

The learned Magistrate had before him two cross-cases of riots, and he was ill-advised to mix them up and to dispose of them in a single judgment. Nevertheless, I come to the conclusion that the present applicants had a fair trial and their conviction ought to be sustained. It is not necessary, in dealing with this reference, to go into the facts at all. It is sufficient to say that a lathi fight between two bodies of men took place, and two different versions of the facts were put forward. The Police challenged the present applicants and others. This is one case. The present applicants filed a complaint. This is the other. The learned Magistrate proceeded to hear all the evidence produced for the prosecution and for the defence in both cases, and he then disposed of them both in a single judgment.

I do not think that the fact that he wrote only one judgment is of much consequence. He acquitted them in one case and that case is not before me. He convicted them in the challan case, and the judgment contains a full discussion of the evidence, and is, in every respect, a proper judgment giving reasons for the convictions. But the learned Magistrate fell into two errors, such as are hardly avoidable when two cross-cases are disposed of in the same judgment. The first is, that he has used the evidence of Mohan, Chaukidar, who was examined as D.W. No. 2 in the complaint case, as if he had been a prosecution witness in the challan case. If Mohan had been an important witness this error would have vitiated the whole trial. I have referred to the record and have read the examination of this witness. He said nothing to the point, except that he denied that he himself had taken a lease of the grove which, according to the prosecution, was the scene and object of the riot. The reason this question was put was that Nageshwar, accused, one of the applicants, asserted that Mohan had done so. The only point in his evidence, therefore, was to destroy the effect of this assertion of Nageshwar's. But if Mohan's evidence is cut out, Nageshwar's statement, as an accused person, is still insufficient to prove such a fact, specially when all he said was that "this Ganga Baggal's grove was let, so far as I know, to Mohan, Chaukidar. He was looking after it. I was not at auction." In the judgment it is said that Baldeo's story is only corroborated, as far as the letting of the grove is concerned, by D. W. No. 2. This is an error. Mohan merely denies that he himself took the grove; he has nothing else to say about it. The admission of this evidence, therefore, does not vitiate the convictions. The Magistrate and the Judge would have reached the same conclusions, if they had disregarded Mohan's evidence. It is of no real importance to the prosecution case.

RAM CHANDAR V. EMPEROR.

The next point is one of procedure. The learned Magistrate was bound, under section 312, to question the accused generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution had been examined, for the purpose of enabling them to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against them. All the present applicants had been examined and cross-examined as prosecution witnesses in the cross-cases, and the Magistrate recorded their examination in this form:—

"My sworn evidence in cross-case is correct. I have no more to say."

It is on this point that I feel some difficulty. This procedure is irregular. An accused person ought to be questioned only in the way and for the purpose described in section 312. When he appears in the cross-case as a prosecution witness he is questioned for a different purpose, namely, to establish the guilt of the opposite party, and he is cross-examined with full freedom of putting any question whatever to him. He is not free to refuse to answer any question, which privilege he possesses as an accused person. I desire to state, as strongly as possible, that the procedure followed by the learned Magistrate was utterly wrong and that it might, in a suitable case, be in itself a sufficient ground for setting aside a conviction. In the present case no harm had been done. The accused has said all that he had to say in the capacity of a prosecution witness. No necessary question has been pointed out to me which was not put to the accused. No unfair use has been made of any admission made by the accused person as a witness. The accused themselves did not seem to have considered that they had any grievance. In the original grounds of appeal this point is not taken at all. Even in the subsequent grounds of appeal it is not mentioned explicitly, and evidently it was not brought to the notice of the learned Sessions Judge. Of course, it is a point of law and can be raised at any time. But, on the whole, I do not think I should be justified in ordering a re-trial. The case was tried at considerable length and with great care on the part of the Magistrate. This irregularity was not such as to prevent him from arriving at a correct view of the facts. He had before him, in the shape of depositions a very much fuller statement by each of the accused than a Magistrate usually possesses. The appeal has been carefully considered and has been rejected by the learned Sessions Judge. Therefore, I dismiss the application in revision. But I must not be understood to say that the provisions of section 342 have been properly complied with in this case, or that the procedure followed is anything short of a grave irregularity.

W. C. A.

Application dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 606 OF 1922.

November 30, 1922.

*Present:—*Mr. Justice Stuart.

RAM CHANDAR—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Practice—Criminal appeal—Absence of appellant—Procedure.

When once a criminal appeal has been admitted and a date fixed for its hearing, the Appellate Court is bound to peruse the record and to decide the appeal judicially. It cannot dismiss it for default of appearance.

Queen-Empress v. Poonji, 13 A. 171; A. W. N. (1891) 48; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 107 (F. B.), followed.

Criminal reference made by the Sessions Judge, Aligarh.

FACTS appear from the following

REFERRING ORDER.—"This is an application for revision of the order of Maulvi Muhammad Habibullah Khan, Magistrate of the First Class, dismissing an appeal filed by one Ram Chaudar against the judgment of the Bench of Honorary Magistrates of ALLAH DIN V. EMPEROR.

Hathras. The order passed by the learned Deputy Magistrate is as follows:—'Both the appellant and his Pleader absent. File in default.'

This order of dismissal of an appeal in default is apparently illegal, because there is no provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure for the dismissal of an appeal on account of the non-appearance of the appellant or his Pleader. Having admitted the appeal and fixed a date for its hearing, the Appellate Court is bound to peruse the record and to decide the appeal judicially; Queen-Empress v. Pohpi (1). Under the circumstances, I am bound to report this case for the orders of the Hon'ble High Court with the recommendation that the illegal order passed by the learned Deputy Magistrate be set aside and that he be directed to dispose of the appeal according to law. The Magistrate's explanation, if any, will accompany the record."

JUDGMENT.—I agree with the view taken by the learned Sessions Judge, set aside the order dismissing the appeal and return the appeal to the learned Deputy Magistrate who decided it, or his successor, with directions to dispose of the same according to law.

W. C. A.

Order set aside.

(1) 13 A. 171; A. W. N. (1891) 48; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 107 (F. B.).

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 945 OF 1922.

January 18, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

ALLAH DIN—CONVICT—APPELLANT
versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 300, Exception I; 326—Death caused by single thrust of pen-knife without premeditation—Offence—Grave and sudden provocation.

In connection with the marriage of accused with one Musammal I, a certain ceremony was to be performed on a certain date. On the day so fixed, the accused found one Musammal N taking Musammal I away from her village, and when he remonstrated with her she told him that the ceremony would not take place on that day and abused him. The accused thereupon attacked the women with a pen-knife and inflicted one injury on each in the abdomen, as the result of which Musammal N died, but Musammal I survived:

Held, (1) that the conduct of Musammal N amounted to the giving of grave and sudden provocation within the meaning of Exception I to section 300 of the Penal Code; [p. 696, col. 1.]

(2) that having regard to the facts that the accused acted without premeditation, used only a pen-knife and inflicted each woman only one injury, there was a very strong presumption that he neither intended to cause death nor such bodily injury as he knew to be likely to cause death; [p. 696, col. 1.]

(3) that, however, it must be presumed that the accused intended to cause grievous hurt to the women and was, therefore, guilty of an offence under section 326 of the Penal Code. [p. 696, col. 1.]

Appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Jhelum, dated the 5th October 1922.

JUDGMENT.—Allah Din has been convicted by the Sessions Judge of Jhelum of the murder of Musammal Nek Bakht and of the attempted murder of Musammal Imam Bibi and has been sentenced for the former offence to transportation for life and for the latter to ten years' transportation, the sentences to run concurrently. Appeals were presented to this Court by Counsel who, however, has not attended to argue. We have perused the record. The facts are fully and clearly stated in the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge and need not be repeated.

In our opinion the questions which arise are the following:—

1. Whether Allah Din, appellant, intended to cause the death of Musammal Nek Bakht or, as found by the Sessions Judge, intended to cause such injury as he knew to be likely to cause death.

2. Whether he received such grave and sudden provocation as would reduce the offence from one of murder to one of culpable homicide not amounting to murder.

3. Whether he attempted to murder Musammal Imam Bibi.

Having regard to the facts that Allah Din acted without premeditation, used only a pen-knife and gave each woman only one injury, we think there is a very strong presumption that he neither intended to cause death nor such bodily injury as he knew to be likely to cause death. Upon the second question the learned Sessions Judge admits that there was an altercation between the appellant and the women, that abuse was exchanged, and that provocation was certainly given, but holds that the provocation was not so grave and sudden as to bring the appellant within the first exception in section 300, Indian Penal Code. Now Allah Din had been married to Musammât Imam Bibi and it has been found by the Court below that the ceremony of tabdil parchat was to have taken place on the day of the occurrence in Chakwal. The appellant found Musammât Nek Bakht taking the girl away from Chakwal and when he remonstrated with her, she told him that the girl would not be married to him that day and abused him. Even if she did not say to him that if he wanted to marry anybody he could go and marry his mother, we still think that, under all the circumstances, the provocation given to him was sufficiently grave and sudden to bring him within the first exception in section 300 of the Indian Penal Code. These being our findings, it is clear that the conviction for murder cannot be maintained, nor can the conviction for the attempted murder of Musammât Imam Bibi be maintained. At the same time, we have no difficulty in holding that when Allah Din wounded the women in the abdomen with a pen-knife he certainly intended to cause them grievous hurt, and we, therefore, accept the appeals and, setting aside the convictions and sentences, convict him instead of two offences of voluntarily causing grievous hurt under section 326, Indian Penal Code. Though he had undoubtedly grave provocation, it was a very serious offence for him to stab helpless women in the abdomen with a knife. We consider it necessary to impose a severe sentence, and we sentence him to seven years' rigorous imprisonment including three months solitary confinement for each offence, and direct that the sentences shall run concurrently.

DOUGLAS DONALD, In the matter of.

Z. K. & N. H.

Sentences altered.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL, MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION

No. 41 of 1922.

June 13, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Harrison and

Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

In the matter of MR. DOUGLAS DONALD.

Lunacy Act (IV of 1912), s. 14—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 115, 151—Letters Patent (Lahore), cl. 12—Order by District Magistrate under s. 14—Revision—Remedy.

The Lunacy Act deals specifically and under separate headings with the two branches of proceedings, executive and judicial. [p. 699, col. 2.]

An order passed by a District Magistrate under Part II of the Lunacy Act is a purely executive order and cannot form the subject-matter of a revision application to the High Court, nor has the High Court the power to interfere with such an order under clause 12 of the Letters Patent or in the exercise of its powers of superintendence. [p. 699, col. 2.]

Umes Chandra Gupta v. Emperor, 10 C. W. N. 322; 3 Cr. L. J. 256, referred to.

Any person considering himself aggrieved by an executive order passed by the District Magistrate under section 14, Part II of the Lunacy Act may apply under Part III of the Act for a regular inquiry conducted by a judicial officer. The result of such inquiry is conclusive and overrides and overrules any order which may have been passed summarily by the executive authority. [p. 699, col. 1.]

Application to set aside the order of the District Magistrate, Lahore, dated the 30th March 1922.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

Abdul Raoof, J.—(May 18, 1922).—

This is an application presented by Mr. W. B. O'Connor, Barrister-at-Law, on behalf of Mr. Douglas Donald, and Mr. William Henry Donald under the circumstances summarised below, invoking the powers of revision and superintendence possessed by the High Court under the Civil and Criminal Law and under the Charter Act:—

Mr. Douglas Donald is married to the daughter of one Mrs. Mercer. The husband and wife have been living separately for many years. Mr. Douglas Donald has, however, been making an allowance for his wife's maintenance through Mr. Alexander Mercer of Lahore, which he is said to have stopped lately. He is under the impression that his wife is dead, and that this fact is being kept concealed from him by Mr. and Mrs. Mercer. On the 23rd of

DOUGLAS DONALD, In the matter of.

March 1922, he wrote a threatening letter to Mr. Mercer, and this letter was sent by the latter to Major Fernar, District Magistrate of Lahore, with a covering letter, dated the 26th March 1922, complaining of the behaviour of Mr. Douglas Donald towards him and his wife, expressing apprehension of violence from him and asking for protection. The matter was at once placed in the hands of Lieutenant-Colonel Gregson, Senior Superintendent of Police, Lahore, who, after taking necessary steps, the details of which need not be given, took action under section 13 of the Lunacy Act, IV of 1912, and, believing Mr. Douglas Donald to be a dangerous person by reason of lunacy, produced him before Major Fernar, the District Magistrate of Lahore. The District Magistrate on the 30th March 1922 proceeded to deal with the matter under section 14 of the Lunacy Act, IV of 1912. He examined Mr. Douglas Donald and being of opinion that there were grounds for proceeding further, caused him to be examined by Major Cox, Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum, Lahore. Being satisfied that Mr. Douglas Donald was a dangerous lunatic and a proper person to be detained, he obtained a certificate from Major Cox, and was prepared to make an order for the admission for Mr. Douglas Donald in the Lunatic Asylum, when Mr. William Henry Donald, the brother of the alleged lunatic, entered into a bond undertaking that the lunatic shall be properly taken care of, and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to others. The Magistrate, instead of making a reception order, made over Mr. Douglas Donald to the care of his brother. Three medical certificates testifying to the lunacy of Mr. Douglas Donald have been placed on the record: (1) one dated the 30th March 1922, given by Major Cox, (2) another certificate by the same medical gentleman dated the 31st March 1922, and (3) a certificate dated the 31st March 1922, by Lieutenant-Colonel S. M. Davidson, Civil Surgeon, Lahore.

Against the order of the District Magistrate, dated the 30th March 1922, the present petition has been presented. On the petition being called on for hearing Mr. Jai Lal, the learned Government Advocate appearing on behalf of the Crown, raised a preliminary objection to the hearing of the petition on the ground that the proceeding taken by the learned District Magistrate was not a judicial proceeding, and that the order passed being of a purely executive character an application for its revision cannot be entertained by the High Court.

The Act is divided into four parts. Part I deals with "Preliminary matters." Part II deals with "Reception, Care and Treatment of Lunatics." Chapter II in this part deals with "Reception of Lunatics," and Chapter III provides for the "Care and Treatment." Part III provides for "Judicial Inquisition as to lunacy." Chapter IV in this part lays down "Rules for the conduct of proceedings in lunacy in Presidency towns." Under this Chapter is laid down the procedure relating to the "inquisition" and "rules for the exercise of judicial powers over person and estates of lunatics, management and administration of such estates, etc., etc." Chapter V lays down the "proceedings in lunacy outside Presidency towns." Part IV deals with certain miscellaneous matters.

From the above summary of the provisions of the Act, it appears that the Legislature intended to make a clear distinction between the proceedings which are of a judicial character, and those of a purely executive nature. The order passed by the District Magistrate in this case, therefore, prima facie, does not appear to be of a judicial character. It is, therefore, doubtful whether the High Court can interfere with it in the exercise of its revisional powers. Mr. O'Connor has vehemently contended that where there is a wrong there ought to be a remedy for it, and that this High Court, being the highest Court in this Province, must be possessed of some authority to remedy the wrong done to his clients. He has relied on the provisions of section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code and has contended that under this section the High Court has full powers to entertain this petition for revision. It is clear, however, that this section does not empower the High Court to deal with an order passed by a Magistrate.

The learned Counsel has, in the alternative, contended that the High Court can deal with this matter on its Original Side, and can institute a judicial inquisition as to the alleged lunacy of the petitioner, Douglas Donald, under section 12 of the Letters Patent. The said section provides as follows:—

DOUGLAS DONALD, In the matter of.

"And we do further ordain that the High Court of Judicature at Lahore shall have the like power and authority with respect to the persons and estates of infants, idiots and lunatics within the Provinces of the Punjab and Delhi as that which was vested in the Chief Court of the Punjab immediately before the publication of these presents."

The learned Counsel, however, has failed to show that the Chief Court of the Punjab used to exercise original jurisdiction in matters of lunacy. In any case, it cannot be conceived that the Chief Court could have exercised or this High Court can exercise such power and authority in disregard of the provisions of the Lunacy Act. Section 12 of the Letters Patent relating to the Allahabad High Court lays down almost a similar rule on the subject, but it was held in Jaundha Kuar v. Court of Wards (1), that the High Court had not, under section 12 of the Charter, any original jurisdiction in respect of the persons and estates of lunatics who are natives of India. The learned Judges of the Division Bench, who decided the case, refrained from expressing any opinion respecting their jurisdiction over persons and estates of lunatics who were European British subjects. The section, as it stands, however, does not profess to make any distinction in this respect between the cases of persons who are natives of India, and those who may be European British subjects. It was laid down in that case that under Act XXXV of 1858, the principal Civil Court in the District had jurisdiction to deal with such matters. Under the present Act only the High Court in the Presidency towns are empowered to exercise original jurisdiction in matter of lunacy (see Chapter IV of the Act), and proceedings in lunacy outside Presidency towns under Chapter V of the Act are provided to be taken in District Courts. Section 83 of the Act gives a right of appeal to a High Court from an order made by District Courts under Chapter III. Clause (2) of section 65 provides that—

"Upon the completion of the inquisition, the Court shall determine whether the alleged lunatic is of unsound mind and incapable of managing himself and his affairs, or may come to a special finding that such alleged lunatic is of unsound mind so as to be incapable of managing his affairs, but that he is capable of managing himself and is not dangerous to himself or to others."

This is exactly what the petitioners want this Court to hold. Mr. William Henry Donald may present this application to the District Judge within whose jurisdiction Mr. Douglas Donald, the alleged lunatic resides and ask him to hold a judicial inquisition under Chapter V. He can then apply for the discharge of the lunatic under section 34, which provides that—

"If any lunatic detained in an asylum on a reception order made under sections 7, 10, 14, 15 or 17 is subsequently found on an inquisition under Chapter IV or Chapter V not to be of unsound mind and incapable of managing himself and his affairs, the person in charge of the asylum shall forthwith, on the production of a certified copy of such finding, discharge the alleged lunatic from the asylum."

I take it that the same rule will apply to a case where a lunatic is placed in charge of a friend or a relative under the provisions of section 14 of the Act. The proper course to adopt in this case is to return the petition of Mr. O'Connor so that he may present it to the proper Court. The other alternative which suggests itself to me is that I should refer this case to a larger Bench for decision as the questions raised are of great importance and their decision may have a far reaching effect on the practice of this Court. Having regard to the fact that there appears to be no decided case on this point, I adopt the later course and direct that the papers be laid before the learned Chief Justice with a view that a Bench be constituted to hear the case.

Mr. O'Connor, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Jal Lal, R. B., Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—After hearing Mr.

(1) 4 A. 159; A. W. N. (1881) 172; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 770.

EMPEROR V. PURAN SINGH.

O'Connor for the petitioner and Rai Babadur Jai Lal, Government Advocate, for the Crown, I entirely agree with the view taken by my learned brother in his order of reference. The Act, as pointed out in that order, deals specifically and under separate headings with the two branches of proceedings, executive and judicial. Any person considering himself aggrieved by an executive order passed by the District Magistrate may apply under Part III for a regular inquisition conducted by a judicial officer. The result of such inquisition is conclusive and overrides and overrules any order which may have been passed summarily by the executive authority. This being so, it is impossible to contend, as has been done, that no remedy is provided against an incorrect or improper executive order, and the position is made even clear by section 2 of the Act which expressly provides that nothing in Part II, i.e., that portion which deals with executive orders, shall be deemed to affect the powers of the High Court under Part III. Had the High Court any power of revision of the orders passed under Part II this section would be wholly meaningless and superfluous. Mr. O'Connor has relied on the analogy of the English Law on the subject and has referred us to Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume XIX, (passim). In the English Act on which the Indian is based, the executive authority is described as the judicial authority, an even more unfortunate title than that of District Magistrate for designating an Executive Officer. This 'judicial authority' is a Justice of the Peace and it is his duty to exercise powers similar to those entrusted in this country to the District Magistrate. The machinery for a judicial inquisition is provided in exactly the same way as in the Indian Act and provision is made for quashing a finding on an inquisition just as an appeal to the High Court is allowed from an order passed by a District Judge in India, but as in India, so in England, no provision is made for any sort of appeal or revision to the High Court from an executive or summary order. Beyond showing, therefore, that the executive authority is as unsuitably described in England as in India the English Act assists the petitioner not at all.

It might appear at first sight that all acts of a District Magistrate as such must be open to the revision of the High Court and that when it is desired to exclude such jurisdiction the officer in question would be described as "Collector" or as "Deputy Commissioner" in a Non-Regulation Province. This, however, is not the general practice as is shown by the Police Act, the Arms Act, Explosives Act and many others, and the position with regard to the Police Act is explained in Umes Chandra Gupta v. Emperor (2). Under this Act also the orders passed by the District Magistrate under Part II are purely executive and cannot form the subject-matter of a revision application to this Court. The petition is, therefore, dismissed and the petitioner is directed to seek his remedy, if he wishes to do so, by application to the District Judge under Part III.

Z. K.

Petition dismissed.

(2) 10 C. W. N. 322; 3 Cr. L. J. 256.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 632 OF 1922.

September 19, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Martineau.

EMPEROR—APPELLANT

versus

PURAN SINGH—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Excise Act (I of 1914), s. 24 (3)—Excise Manual, Vol. I, s. 407—Possession of country liquor outside licensed premises—License-holder, right of.

Section 407 of Vol. I of the Excise Manual does not override the provisions of section 24 (3) of the Excise Act. It empowers a license-holder to possess country liquor to any extent on the licensed premises, but does not entitle him to possess more than the ordinary prescribed amount of one seer elsewhere [p. 700, cols. 1 & 2.]

Gokal Chand v. Emperor, 39 Ind. Cas. 489; 16 P. R. 1917 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 521, referred to.

Appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Jhelum, dated the 23rd May 1922.

Mr. D. C. Ralli, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. N. Kapur, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Puran Singh, son of Ganga Singh, a licensed retail vendor of country liquor, was, on the evening of the 19th July 1921, found in possession of a wooden case containing 8 bottles of country liquor at Dhudial Railway Station. His home is at Dhudial but his licensed liquor shop is at Said Kasran. He was convicted of an offence under section 61 of the Excise Act and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 500, or in default undergo 6 months' imprisonment.

HAMIRI V. EMPEROR.

An appeal by him to the Sessions Court proved successful. The learned Sessions Judge did not apparently come to any definite decision on the merits of the case, but accepted the appeal on the ground that as Puran Singh was a licensed vendor of country liquor, he was entitled to be in possession of such liquor at any place without any limit as to quantity. This conclusion he arrived at on the provisions of section 407 of Volume I of the Excise Manual.

The Government has appealed against the acquittal on the ground that the view taken by the learned Sessions Judge of the law applicable to the case is erroneous. In our opinion, the appeal must succeed. Section 407 of Volume I of the Excise Manual can not, and does not, override the provisions of the Excise Act and the learned Sessions Judge has entirely overlooked the provisions of section 24 (3), which are as follows :—

"A licensed vendor shall not have in his possession at any place, other than that authorised by his license, any quantity of any excisable article in excess of such quantity as the Local Government has under section 5 declared to be the limit of sale by retail except under a permit granted by the Collector in that behalf."

In the case of country liquor this quantity has been fixed by the Local Government at one seer by Punjab Government Notification No. 141-A., dated 1st February 1914. Admittedly, if Puran Singh can be held to have been in possession of the case of 8 bottles, he has exceeded this limit and has committed the offence of which he was convicted. We would note that Gokal Chand v. Emperor (1) was applicable to this case and the learned Sessions Judge should have followed it.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 489; 16 P. R. 1917 Cr. 18 Cr. L. J. 521.

Section 407 aforesaid would empower a license-holder to possess country liquor to any extent on the licensed premises, but does not entitle him to possess more than the prescribed amount elsewhere.

We, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the learned Sessions Judge return the appeal to him for a decision on the merits.

M. D. J.

Appeal accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 1044 OF 1922.

October 27, 1922.

Present :—Mr. Justice Harrison.

Musammat HAMIRI—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Opium Act (I of 1878), s. 9—Punjab Excise Manual, r. 37 (d)—"Preparation" and "admixture," meaning of—Opium mixture in process of preparation, possession of—Total weight exceeding prescribed limit—Offence.

The word "preparation" in rule 37 (d) of the Punjab Excise Manual designates a completed or manufactured article and not an article in process of manufacture, the test being whether the stage has been reached at which it can be used. In the same way the word "admixture" refers also to a completed article and can only be applied to a thing after the mixing has been finished, and not earlier [p. 701, col. 2.]

In the intermediate stages of a preparation of opium an offence is committed only if the amount of opium used in the manufacture is more than that permitted by law. [p. 701, col. 2.]

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Karnal, with his No. 1325 of 12th July 1922.

FACTS.—Musammat Hamiri has been convicted under section 9 of the Opium Act (of 1878) and sentenced to Rs. 25 fine. She was found in possession of a solution of opium in water weighing 5 tolas and the Magistrate has found that this is a "preparation" of opium. As the weight exceeds the permitted limit of 2 tolas, it amounts in his opinion to a breach of rule 37 (d) * of the Rules framed under the Act.

* Page 39 of the Punjab Excise Manual.

HAMIRI V. EMPEROR.

There is complete agreement as to the facts. Musammam Hamiri was making a preparation of opium called madhak which is made by placing a small quantity of opium together with barley husks in water and causing the water to evaporate. The madhak when dried is smoked. The quantity of opium in the water was very small, according to Musammam Hamiri as much as would go on a two anna bit, while the Magistrate says 4 or 5 rattis. Admittedly, the amount of opium, of which Hamiri was found in possession was within the legal limit and equally the madhak when prepared would have also been within the legal limit. The conviction is based upon the fact that the weight of the solution exceeds the legal limit of a preparation of opium.

GROUND.—The rule runs as follows:

"37—Any person may without a license at any one time have in his possession—

"(d) preparations or admixtures of pure opium, other than those used for smoking, in any quantity not exceeding in the aggregate two tolas."

The word "preparation" has two meanings (1) abstract, the act of preparing, (2) concrete, the thing prepared. It is in the latter sense that the word is used in rule 37 (d). The substance prepared or preparation in this case is the madhak and the stage at which the mixture of opium, barley husks and water was seized is not a preparation, i.e., not the finished article, but something in course of preparation, not yet prepared.

The word "admixtures" does not help because what was found was a solution. If the weight of the water be excluded, the weight of the admixture is well within the legal limit.

If it is not an offence to possess a certain quantity of opium, it is hard to see why it is an offence to possess the same quantity dissolved in water.

The Public Prosecutor referred by way of analogy to paragraph 139 of the Punjab Excise Manual, which says: "It is possible that the decoctions made from two seers of poppy-heads would be more than three tolas. Thus a man would be guilty of illegal possession of post made from poppy-heads legally possessed. As, however, the post would probably be drunk as soon as it was made, the anomaly is in practice negligible."

As to this the post is the completed preparation or decoction from the poppy-heads, and the point I am considering does not arise that the legal limit of possession is only exceeded at an intermediate stage when the opium cannot possibly be consumed.

I, therefore, recommend that the conviction be set aside.

In case it be held that the solution comes within the wording of the rule, I think the fine should be reduced to a nominal one. The Magistrate was of opinion that it was doubtful whether the term preparation or admixture would apply to the solution.

If he were doubtful he should have given the accused the benefit of the doubt. He also said quite correctly that the case was merely a technical one. He ought not to have inflicted a substantial fine.

Mr. Dalip Singh, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Mr. Dalip Singh has put both sides of the case before me and has discussed the various meanings which can be put on the words "preparation" and "admixture."

As to the word "preparation" I agree with the view taken by the learned Sessions Judge, and hold that here it designates a completed or manufactured article and not an article in process of manufacture, the test being whether the stage has been reached at which it can be used.

So also the word "admixture," in my opinion, refers only to a completed article and can only be applied after the mixing has been finished, and not earlier. It is unnecessary to define the precise difference between an "admixture" and a "preparation." There is a difference, but the articles designated by both words only come within the scope of their respective definitions when they have been prepared or mixed, as the case may be. In the intermediate stages an offence has only been committed if the amount of opium used in the manufacture is more than that permitted by law. I, therefore, accept the application for revision and acquit.

CHUNI LAL v. ISHAR DAS.

Musaminat Hamiri. The fine will be refunded.

M. D. J.

Revision accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 651 OF 1922.

November 29, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway.

CHUNI LAL—PETITIONER

versus

ISHAR DAS—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 438, 523—Enquiry under s. 523, nature of—Revision.

It is not incumbent upon the Magistrate to hold a judicial enquiry upon oath, for the purpose of passing an order under section 523 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The section itself does not make any magisterial enquiry imperative. The Magistrate has to satisfy himself, on such material as is before him, who is entitled to possession of the property concerned, and can pass an order on Police reports and papers alone. [p. 703, col. 2.]

In re Ratanlal Rangildas, 17 B. 748; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 491, Asi v. Emperor, 9 Ind. Cas. 634, Husensha v. Mashaksha, 5 Ind. Cas. 972; 12 Bom. L. R. 232; 11 Cr. L. J. 339, Queen-Empress v. Tribhovan, 9 B. 131; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 88 and Ma Thein Nu v. Ma The Hnit, 57 Ind. Cas. 81; 12 Bur. L. T. 266; 10 L. B. R. 156; 21 Cr. L. J. 561, referred to.

A High Court has jurisdiction to revise orders passed under section 523, Criminal Procedure Code, where a proper case is made out. [p. 704, col. 1.]

Ma Thein Nu v. Ma The Hnit, 57 Ind. Cas. 81; 12 Bur. L. T. 266; 10 L. B. R. 156; 21 Cr. L. J. 561, followed.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Jhelum, with his No. 320 of 24th April 1922.

FACTS.—On 27th July 1921, Chuni Lal, goldsmith, of Pind Dadan Khan, reported to the Police that he had been beaten by Lala Ishar Das, Municipal Commissioner, and five servants of the latter, and robbed of Rs. 1,000. The Police investigated the case and found that it was false, and that the report had been made with the object of depriving Lala Ishar Das of certain gold which he had entrusted to Chuni Lal, to be converted into ornaments. The case was struck off as false on 12th October 1921 by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, who by a separate order of the same date made over to Ishar Das certain gold and ornaments under section 523, Code of Criminal Procedure, directing him "not to change the appearance of the ornaments for six months at least, as Chuni Lal may possibly bring a civil suit."

The gold and ornaments had been recovered from the possession of Chuni Lal during the investigation of the case instituted by him against Ishar Das and others.

Chuni Lal was subsequently prosecuted under section 182, Indian Penal Code, for making a false report and the case is understood to be still pending.

On 3rd November 1921, Chuni Lal filed a complaint against Ishar Das and other under section 395—section 323, Indian Penal Code. The complaint was dismissed after preliminary enquiry on 3rd February 1922, and Chuni Lal's application for revision was dismissed by me in Case No. 19 of 1922, decided on 22nd March 1922.

GROUND.—Chuni Lal has filed an application for revision of the order passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under section 523, Code of Criminal Procedure, on 12th October 1921, on the ground that the gold and ornaments should not have been made over to Ishar Das, as they belonged partly to himself and partly to one of his customers.

I issued notice twice to Ishar Das, directing him to produce the gold and ornaments for my inspection. The notices have not been served, and Chuni Lal alleges that Ishar Das, who is an influential man, is evading service.

It does not appear that the notice is legally necessary before a case is reported to the High Court under section 438, Code of Criminal Procedure. It is clear that the order under section 523, Code of Criminal Procedure, was passed without any independent enquiry, the Magistrate having acted merely on the material contained in the proceedings of the Police. This Court cannot interfere with the order under section 523, Code of Criminal Procedure,

CHUNI LAL, v. ISHAR DAS.

nor can it recover the gold and ornaments made over to Ishar Das. In my opinion, the order under revision was passed on insufficient grounds, and should be set aside, the gold and ornaments being made over to Chuni Lal, from whose possession, they were taken, and Lala Ishar Das being left to file a civil suit for their recovery if he wishes to do so. An alternative course would be to direct the Magistrate to make further enquiry into the case, and take such action under section 523, Code of Criminal Procedure, or otherwise as may appear to be justified by the results of the enquiry.

The records of the case are accordingly submitted to the High Court under section 438, Code of Criminal Procedure, with the recommendation that action may be taken as indicated above.

Mr. Arjan Das, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the 27th July 1921, Chuni Lal, a goldsmith of Pind Dadan Khan, reported to the Police that he had been beaten by Lala Ishar Das, Municipal Commissioner, and some servants of his and had been robbed of Rs. 1,000.

On investigation the Police came to the conclusion that the charge laid was false and that it had been brought with the object of depriving Ishar Das of certain gold which he had made over to Chuni Lal to be converted into ornaments. During the investigation made by the Police Ishar Das had brought this allegation forward and had given a description of certain ornaments which led the Police to take possession of the said ornaments from Chuni Lal's custody. On the 1st October 1921, Chuni Lal applied to the Court asking that the said ornaments be made over to him alleging that some of them belonged to clients of his who were agitating for their return and that the others belonged to him. On the 3rd October 1921 Ishar Das filed an application before the same Magistrate alleging that the articles were his and had been entrusted to Chuni Lal and that in order to be able to misappropriate them Chuni Lal had brought a false case of assault and robbery against him. On the 12th October 1921, on a report made by a Police to the Magistrate stating the facts and giving expression to their opinion that the case brought by Chuni Lal was false, and asking for orders qua the property, the Magistrate, purporting to act under section 523, Criminal Procedure Code, recorded an order directing that the property should be made over to Ishar Das as in the Magistrate's opinion the ornaments belonged to that person. Chuni Lal, being at liberty to take such action in the Civil Court as he considered necessary. On the 3rd November 1921 Chuni Lal filed a complaint against Ishar Das and others under sections 395 and 323, Indian Penal Code, which complaint was dismissed, and an application for revision by him likewise proved ineffectual. He then moved the Sessions Judge attacking the correctness of the order under section 523, Criminal Procedure Code, dated the 12th October 1921. The Sessions Judge came to the conclusion that the order complained against was wrong and had been made without due enquiry. He accordingly reported the matter to this Court under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code.

Before me, Mr. Arjan Das has supported the recommendation of the learned Sessions Judge on behalf of Chuni Lal, while Mr. Nand Lal has endeavoured to support the order of the Magistrate. It was contended first, that an order under section 523 could only be passed after a proper enquiry, whereas the order in the present case was passed on the Police report and papers, and In re Ratanlal Rangildas (1) was cited in support, an authority which was differed from in a case reported as Asi v. Emperor (2). The section itself does not make any magisterial enquiry imperative. It appears that the Magistrate has to satisfy himself, on such material as is before him, who is entitled to possession of the property concerned, Husensha v. Mashaksha (3), and in Queen-Empress v. Tribhovan (4) it appears to have been laid down that the Magistrate would be justified in proceeding on the Police papers, while in Ma Thein Nu v. Ma The

(1) 17 B. 748; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 491.

(2) 9 Ind. Cas. 634.

(3) 5 Ind. Cas. 972; 12 Bom. L. R. 232; 11 Cr. L. J. 339.

(4) 9 B. 131; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 88

CHUNI LAL v. ISHAR DAS.

Hmit (5) it is laid down by Rutledge, J., that it was not incumbent upon the Magistrate to hold a judicial enquiry upon oath. The weight of authority, therefore, appears to be against the contention advanced by Mr. Arjan Das that the order of the Magistrate was wrong as being passed on the Police papers alone and not on any enquiry made by him.

The next question is, whether this Court has jurisdiction to interfere with the order in revision, it being contended by Mr. Nand Lal that no such power existed. The authority already cited, i.e., Ma Thein Nu v. Ma The Hnit (5), and which was referred to by Mr. Nand Lal is, however, opposed to this contention, and I have no doubt that, on a proper case being made out, a High Court has jurisdiction to examine orders passed under section 523, Criminal Procedure Code.

Turning to the case itself, it appears that the Police obtained possession of the property in question in the course of an investigation into an offence which in no way related to this property. Chuni Lal is a goldsmith and admittedly Ishar Das had had dealings with him. There would thus be nothing extraordinary in Ishar Das being able to describe ornaments which could be found in Chuni Lal's shop. The property was not taken possession of by the Police under section 51, nor, under section 54 (4) as urged by Mr. Nand Lal. The property was not taken possession of by the Police under the suspicion of its being stolen property nor at that stage, at any rate, had Chuni Lal been charged with having committed any offence with reference to it. All that had been urged was that he intended at some future date to misappropriate these articles and that he had falsely charged Ishar Das with a criminal offence in order to facilitate the crime contemplated by him.

In these circumstances, I am of opinion that the learned Sessions Judge is right in his view that the property ought not to have been made over to Ishar Das even on the material which was before the Magistrate. The mere fact that Ishar Das was admitted by Chuni Lal to be the owner of one of the bracelets did not necessarily mean that Ishar Das was entitled to possession of the same, for admittedly Ishar Das had given this bracelet to Chuni Lal for certain definite purposes and it is not unlikely that Chuni Lal could claim to retain possession of any articles belonging to Ishar Das until such time as he was paid for work done in connection with them. As, however, Chuni Lal definitely admitted before the Magistrate that one of the bracelets was the property of Ishar Das I maintain the order of the Magistrate qua that bracelet, but direct that the remaining ornaments and gold be forthwith made over to Chuni Lal. In making this order I have not lost sight of Mr. Nand Lal's contention that Chuni Lal has a right to go to the Civil Court to establish his claim to this property. I do not see any reason, however, to place him in the position of having to prove his title, a matter with which these proceedings are not concerned.

M. D. J.

Revision accepted.

(5) 57 Ind. Cas. 81; 12 Bnr. L. T. 266; 10 L. B. R. 156; 21 Cr. L. J. 561

SHANCHI KHAN V. KARAM CHAND.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2245 OF 1921.

July 25, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Martineau.

SHANCHI KHAN—PLAINTIFF

—APPELLANT

versus

KARAM CHAND AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS — RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 144—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (25)—Materials of standing house, transfer of—Suit for possession—Limitation—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Suit dismissed as barred by limitation—Res judicata—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 68—Application to Court against Receiver, dismissal of—Regular suit, maintainability of.

A transfer of the materials of a standing house is a transfer of immoveable property and a suit for possession of such materials is governed by Art. 144 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. [p. 705, col. 2; p. 706, col. 1.]

For a decision to operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, it must be one on the merits; the dismissal of a suit because it was barred by limitation, without considering the merits, would not operate as res judicata. [p. 706, col. 1.]

A person who claims rights to property, taken possession of by the Official Receiver as belonging to an insolvent, and whose claim is disallowed by the Insolvency Court, may bring a regular suit to establish his rights. [p. 706, col. 1.]

Duni Chand v. Muhammad Hussain, 40 Ind. Cas. 220; 22 P. R. 1917; 14 P. W. R. 1917, followed.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Attock, dated the 14th June 1921.

Mr. M. S. Bhagat, for the Appellant.

Mr. Sundar Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for possession of a house which belonged to Amar Das, a non-proprietary resident of Ghurghashti in the Attock District. He was adjudicated an insolvent and on the 23rd December 1913, the materials of the house were sold by the Receiver. They were bought by Bishen Das who, on the 5th December 1914, sold them to the plaintiff. The claim was not disputed by Bishen Das, but was resisted by Amar Das. The Munsif dismissed the suit finding,—

(1) that the real purchaser from Bishen Das was not the plaintiff, but one Ram Saran;

(2) that the suit was barred by limitation, being governed by Art. 120 of the first Schedule to the Limitation Act, as the property sold was not immoveable property;

(3) that it was also barred under section 11, Civil Procedure Code, as an application by the plaintiff to the Insolvency Court to be put into possession of the house had been dismissed on the 8th July 1918, as time-barred, and

(4) that the plaintiff, having once elected to seek his remedy in the Insolvency Court, and having failed in that Court, was not entitled to bring a suit for possession.

The District Judge on appeal found that the purchaser of the house from Bishen Das was the plaintiff and not Ram Saran, but he agreed with the Munsif that the suit was barred by limitation as well as by the rule of res judicata and he, therefore, dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff has presented a second appeal to this Court.

I am unable to agree with the view of the Courts below that the property sold is moveable property. The lower Appellate Court has referred to Muhammad Ismail v. Shams-ud-din (1) in which it was held that the temporary rights of a tenant-at-will to take produce of certain trees were not immoveable property. I do not see any analogy between that case and the present one, as a non-proprietor is the owner of the materials of his house, and his rights in them are not temporary rights such as those which a tenant possesses in respect of trees on the land in his tenancy.

The argument for the respondent is that the materials of the house are the bricks, stones, timber, etc., of which the house is built and that these things are moveable, but this is not the right way of looking at the matter. The property is not to be regarded as split up into its component parts, but it is its existing condition which has to be considered. What was sold was a structure and not a quantity of debris. The materials are attached to the earth, and things attached to the earth are included in the definition of immoveable property given in the General Clauses Act. I hold, therefore, that the property sold to the plaintiff was immoveable property, that the period of limitation is, twelve years, and that the suit is within time.

(1) 58 Ind. Cas. 321; 1 L. 567; 2 U. P. L. R. (L) 164; 2 L. L. J. 684.

AMJAD ALI V. SURESH RANJAN PAL.

The Courts below are clearly wrong in thinking that the District Judge's order, dated the 8th July 1918, dismissing the plaintiff's application for being put into possession of the house, operates as res judicata, as the application was dismissed only because it was barred by limitation, and not on the merits, which were not considered.

The only other question is whether the plaintiff, having sought his remedy in the Insolvency Court and having been unsuccessful there, is competent to bring a suit for possession. The Courts below have relied on some rulings of the Allahabad High Court, which are against the plaintiff but the matter is settled so far as this Court is concerned by Duni Chand v. Muhammad Hussain (2) in which it was held that a person who claims rights to property taken possession of by the Official Receiver as belonging to an insolvent and whose claim has been disallowed by the Insolvency Court, may bring a regular suit to establish his rights.

I accordingly accept the appeal, reverse the decrees of the Courts below, and give the plaintiff a decree for possession of the property in suit. The respondents will pay the plaintiff's costs throughout.

W. C. A. & N. H. Appeal accepted.

(2) 40 Ind. Cas. 220; 22 P. R. 1917; 14 P. W. R. 1917.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION CASES NOS. 1, 2 AND 91
OF 1920.

March 9, 1920.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

AMJAD ALI—PETITIONER

versus

SURESH RANJAN PAL AND OTHERS—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Practice—Notes of arguments by Pleaders—
Court, duty of.

When a case has been fully argued before a Judge, it ought not to be necessary for the Pleaders to submit notes of their arguments. It is the duty of the Judge to take such notes of the arguments as he thinks fit when they are being submitted to the Court; and, if he feels that he has not fully appreciated any part of the arguments which have been submitted to him, it is open to him to call the parties before him so that any further argument may be presented in open Court in the presence of the other side. If it becomes necessary, as in some exceptional case it may become necessary, for the Judge either to require or to receive notes of the Pleader's arguments, such notes ought not to be submitted to the Judge by the Pleader on one side, without first submitting the notes to the Pleader on the other side. If in any case a Pleader desires to submit to the Court the notes of his arguments or of any further argument, which he thinks in the interest of his clients ought to be put before the Court, he should submit them to the Pleader on the other side, so that the latter may have an opportunity of making any remarks or any criticism in respect thereof. But in no case should the arguments be submitted in the form of a draft judgment. [p. 707, col. 2; p. 708, col. 1.]

Civil revision against the orders of the District Judge, Sylhet, under sections 195 and 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Babus M. N. Mukherjee and P. C. Chatterjee, Messrs. A. K. Fazlul Huq and A. S. M. Akram, for the Petitioner in Rule No. 1.

Babu Hemendra Kumar Das, for the Opposite Party.

Babus Dasarathi Sanyal, M. N. Mukherjee and P. C. Chatterjee, Messrs. A. K. Fazlul Huq and A. S. M. Akram, for the Petitioner in Rule No. 2.

Mr. Orr, for the Crown.

Babus M. N. Mukherjee and Benoyendra Nath Palit, for the Petitioner in Rule No. 91.

Babus Atulya Charan Bose and Hemendra Kumar Das, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Sanderson, C. J.—In this matter there are three Rules which were obtained by Mr. Amjad Ali, who is a Pleader, and who has been practising in the District Court of Sylhet and the Courts subordinate thereto since the year 1901. The Rule with which I intend to deal first is No. 2 of 1920. That Rule was granted to show cause why an order, dated the 17th of December 1919, made by the learned District Judge directing the prosecution of Mr. Amjad Ali under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code should not be set aside. The order for the prosecution arose in this way: It appears that there was an appeal pending before the learned Additional Sessions Judge by a man called Kailash Chandra Chaudhuri who had been convicted of some offence. Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal, a learned Pleader, was appearing for the appellant, and Mr. Amjad Ali was appearing on behalf of the Crown. The appeal had been heard and the arguments had been concluded, and, as I understand the facts, these two learned gentlemen asked the learned Additional Sessions Judge to be allowed to submit notes of their arguments: at all events, it does not matter much how it came to pass, it was arranged that these two learned gentlemen should submit notes of their arguments to the learned Additional Sessions Judge. It appears that Mr. Amjad Ali submitted his so-called notes to the learned Additional Sessions Judge without showing them to the learned Pleader on the other side. Then, Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal proceeded to prepare the so-called notes of his arguments for the learned Sessions Judge; and he appears to have done so in the Bar Library, more or less publicly. The learned District Judge has come to the conclusion that those notes were made but were not in fact submitted. Personally, I have not much doubt that they were prepared for the purpose of submission. I do not suppose that any body would contend that the so-called notes of Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal were really notes; they were in the form of a judgment which would have been completed by the learned Additional Sessions Judge attaching his signature thereto. To state the matter quite shortly, without going into detail of what occurred, Mr. Amjad Ali went to the learned District Judge and informed him that Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal wanted or had attempted to hand to the learned Additional Sessions Judge something in the nature of the draft of a judgment, that he (Amjad Ali) had intervened and prevented that from being done. The learned District Judge after making some enquiries directed proceedings to be taken against Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal under the Legal Practitioners Act. He held an enquiry and came to the conclusion that Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal should be acquitted of the charge of professional misconduct which was the basis of those proceedings. He then made the order to which I have referred, namely, the order of the 17th of December 1919, that Mr. Amjad Ali should be prosecuted under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code in respect of certain statements which Mr. Amjad Ali had made during the course of the enquiry under the Legal Practitioners Act against Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal which the learned Judge, to say the least, thought were not correct. The learned Vakil who has appeared for Mr. Amjad Ali has stated this morning in open Court that he could not defend the conduct of Mr. Amjad Ali and on behalf of his client expressed contrition in respect thereof. In view of that expression by the learned Vakil on behalf of Mr. Amjad Ali, and in view of the fact that in consequence of these proceedings Mr. Amjad Ali has been in effect debarred from practising since the middle of December last, and in view of the publicity which has been given by reason of these proceedings, my learned brother and I are of opinion that it is not necessary for the ends of justice that this criminal prosecution under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code should proceed: consequently, we make this Rule absolute and set aside the order.

AMJAD ALI v. SURESH RANJAN PAL.

But before parting with this matter my learned brother and I feel that we ought to express our disapproval of the conduct of Mr. Amjad Ali which I have already mentioned, the learned Vakil appearing for him to-day has not attempted to defend.

With regard to the question of submitting the notes to the learned Additional Sessions Judge, we are of opinion that, when a case has been fully argued, as it was in this case, before a learned Judge, it ought not to be necessary for the learned Pleaders to submit notes of their arguments. It is the duty of the learned Judge to take such notes of the arguments as he thinks fit when they are being submitted to the Court; and, if he feels that he has not fully appreciated any part of the arguments which have been submitted to him, it is open to him to call the parties before him so that any further argument may be presented in open Court in the presence of the other side. If it becomes necessary, as in some exceptional case it may become necessary, for the learned Judge either to require or to receive notes of the learned Pleader's arguments, such notes ought not to be submitted to the learned Judge by the learned Pleader on one side, without first submitting the notes to the learned Pleader on the other side. If in any case a learned Pleader desires to submit to the Court, the notes of his argument or of any further argument, which he thinks in the interest of his client ought to be put before the Court, he should submit them to the Pleader on the other side, so that the latter may have an opportunity of making any remarks or any criticism in respect thereof.

AMJAD ALI V. SURESH RANJAN PAL.

As regards the form of the notes, the learned Vakil, Mr. Sanyal, with his great experience at the Bar, has admitted that the form of the notes presented by Mr. Amjad Ali could not be defended; although it might be said that the so-called notes which he submitted were not perhaps quite such a complete draft of a judgment as the notes which were made by Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal, in my judgment, there is very little difference between the two—both were objectionable and I desire to make it clear that the submission of "notes" in the form of a draft judgment, as in this case, must not be done again. I confess I am somewhat surprised that the learned Judge when he received the so-called notes from Mr. Amjad Ali, if he read them, did not at once return them to the learned Pleader on the ground that they were in a form which should not have been put before a learned Judge.

So much for Rule No. 2.

The next Rule with which I desire to deal is No. 1 of 1920. In that case sanction has been granted to Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal to prosecute Mr. Amjad Ali, the allegation being that he had laid false information before the learned District Judge with regard to the conduct of Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal in relation to the so-called notes which Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal had prepared. That the two learned Pleaders should fall out in the way they did and that it should be thought necessary by one learned Pleader to ask for sanction to prosecute the other learned Pleader in respect of the allegations which he had made before the learned Judge, to my mind, is lamentable. Such proceedings are derogatory to the learned Pleaders themselves and to the honourable profession to which they belong. Such matters as these, if unfortunately they do occur, ordinarily ought not to be the subject-matter of criminal proceedings. They relate to professional conduct and should be settled by some tribunal or person capable of dealing with such matters. In this case Mr. Manmatha Nath Mukherjee appearing on behalf of Mr. Amjad Ali has associated himself with everything, that Mr. Sanyal has said, and the learned Vakil appearing on behalf of Mr. Suresh Ranjan Pal has accepted what Mr. Manmatha Nath Mukherjee said, and he intimates that his client did not want to be vindictive. I was glad to hear that statement. The result is, that this Rule is made absolute.

As regards the last Rule, that was a Rule obtained by Mr. Amjad Ali in connection with proceedings taken against him by Mr. Radha Benode Das, another learned Pleader, who occupied the position of Public Prosecutor: and the main statement complained of by Mr. Radha Benode Das was to the effect that Mr. Amjad Ali had seen Mr. Radha Benode Das whispering to the learned Additional Sessions Judge and the suggestion was, that it was done with a view to influence the learned Judge as to his decision in the appeal by Kailash which was then pending before him. I do not suppose that there is a word of truth in the suggestion and in fact Mr. Manmatha Nath Mukherjee appearing on behalf of Mr. Amjad Ali has withdrawn the suggestion in an unqualified way and more than that he has apologized on behalf of Mr. Amjad Ali in open Court to Mr. Radha Benode Das for having made such suggestion; Mr. Bose appearing on behalf of Mr. Radha Benode Das has, I am glad to say, accepted that withdrawal and apology. In respect of this matter also, although the suggestion which was made against Mr. Radha Benode Das must have been very annoying to a professional gentleman of his position, I really do not think that a Criminal Court is a tribunal to settle a matter of this kind. Surely in a District like Sylhet there must be some tribunal or person capable of settling or dealing with a dispute of this kind without one learned Pleader bringing the other learned Pleader into a Criminal Court. The Rule in this case is also made absolute.

KUNDAN LAL v. ANAND SARUP.

There is only one other matter to which I need refer and that is that Mr. Snayal, the learned Vakil appearing for Mr. Amjad Ali, urged before us that his client had been actuated by no improper motive in what he did. He said that his client had been hasty and had been too anxious to obtain a successful issue in the appeal on behalf of his client. Having regard to the fact that he was appearing on behalf of the Crown in a criminal case, I can only say that, in my judgment, Mr. Amjad Ali did not display that discretion which I should expect to find on the part of a learned Pleader of his standing. I do not think it necessary to say anything more than that, especially having regard to what has already fallen from the learned Vakil, who has appeared for him in this Court, and who has expressed on his behalf contrition for the course which he adopted.

In conclusion, my learned brother and I hope that there will now be an end of these unpleasant matters and that these learned gentlemen will resume their practice and maintain such amicable relations as ought always to exist between the members of an honourable profession.

Walmsley, J.—I agree.

N. H.

Rules made absolute.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1406 OF 1922.

January 26, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Abdul Raouf.

KUNDAN LAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

Bawa ANAND SARUP—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Court-Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (x) (a)—Contract of sale—Contract of exchange—Suit for specific performance—Court-fee payable.

Defendant agreed to transfer certain land to the plaintiff in return for certain land belonging to the plaintiff and Rs. 600 in cash. The defendant failed to carry out the agreement and plaintiff sued for specific performance of the contract or in the alternative for return of the money paid by him to the defendant with interest:

Held, (1) that the contract between the parties was one of sale inasmuch as part of the consideration to be paid by the plaintiff was a sum of money;

Samaratmal Ullamchand v. Govind, 25 B. 696; 3 Bom. L. R. 384, referred to.

(2) that the suit fell within section 7 (x) (a) of the Court-Fees Act and Court-fees were payable on the land, plus Rs. 600, which the plaintiff had agreed to pay to the defendant in exchange for the defendant's land.

Semle:—A suit for the specific performance of a contract of exchange falls under section 7 (x) (a) of the Court-Fees Act.

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Ambala, dated the 9th March 1922, reversing that of the Junior Subordinate Judge, Second, Class, Ambala, dated the 20th December 1921.

Mr. Shamair Chand for Mr. Sagar Chand, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This first appeal from an order of remand has arisen out of a suit for the specific performance of a contract of exchange or in the alternative, for money paid to defendant with interest. The following facts will disclose the nature of the question to be decided in this appeal:—

The defendant promised to transfer the property in dispute to the plaintiff in consideration of some land belonging to the plaintiff and Rs. 600 in cash—Rs. 150 were given as earnest-money to the defendant. The defendant failed to carry out his promise. Thereupon the plaintiff instituted the present suit. He paid the Court-fee on Rs. 230 principal and interest the amount which he claims in the alternative. An objection was taken to the insufficiency of the Court-fee paid on the ground that the plaintiff having assessed the value of the defendant's land at Rs. 1,500, he ought to have further paid the Court-fee on that amount according to section 7 clause (x) (a) of the Court-Fees Act. This objection was given effect to by Mr. Niamat Khan, Subordinate Judge, First Class, Ambala, and the plaintiff was directed to make up the deficiency in the Court-fee by the 23rd November 1921. The plaintiff, however, failed to deposit the Court-fee demanded and his plaint was rejected on the 20th December 1921 by Lala Sant Ram, Junior Subordinate Judge, Second Class.

KUNDAN LAL V. ANAND SARUP.

The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the highest Court-fee of Rs. 17-4 had been paid by him on the alternative relief relating to Rs. 230 and that it was not necessary to pay any more Court-fee. His argument was that the suit was not for the specific performance of a contract of sale as contemplated by section 7, clause (x) of the Court-Fees Act and that it was practically a suit for possession of land. The lower Appellate Court held that two reliefs were separately claimed in the plaint and a Court-fee ought to have been paid separately for each of them. It agreed with the Trial Court as to the amount of Court-fee payable in respect of the claim for the specific performance of the contract of exchange. It, however, held that an exchange was not a sale and that, therefore, section 7, clause (x) was inapplicable. As to the rejection of the plaint the opinion of the lower Appellate Court was that in spite of the non-payment of Court-fee in respect of the first relief, the plaint ought not to have been rejected in respect of the relief claiming Rs. 230, as sufficient Court-fee had been paid on this latter relief. In the result the lower Appellate Court made an order of remand under O. XLI, r. 23 and directed the Trial Court to try the claim in respect of the earnest-money. Against this order of remand the present appeal has been preferred.

The argument put forward before me is that there were two alternative reliefs claimed in the plaint, and that the first relief as to the specific performance of an exchange was really one claiming possession of land and that, therefore, the Court-fee in respect of that relief should be ten times of the jama which would be less than the Court-fee already paid. The revenue assessed on the land claimed is Rs. 14-7 and ten times of this jama would be Rs. 144-6. The fee payable on this amount according to the table given in Schedule I of the Court-Fees Act is Rs. 11-4 which is less than the fee paid on the alternative relief. The learned Vakil has relied on the case of Kashinath Narayan v. Gorinda (1), and it is contended that where a plaintiff sues in the alternative for one of two reliefs the larger of the two reliefs sought determines the amount of the stamp. This ruling certainly does support the contention of the learned Vakil for the plaintiff-appellant, but I am not prepared to accept his contention that the suit is one for possession of land and the Court-fee ought to be paid on ten times of the jama, I cannot agree with the learned Judge of Court below that section 7 (x) of the said Act is not applicable to the present claim. The learned Judge says that the clause (x) (a) of the said section speaks of specific performance of a contract of sale and that an exchange is not a sale. It is, however, clear from the facts above stated that the consideration for the transfer of the land now in dispute was land plus Rs. 600 cash. The transaction, therefore, to the extent of Rs. 600 clearly comes under the definition of sale. A sale according to section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act is a transfer of ownership in exchange for a price paid or promised or part paid and part promised. Even if "price" necessarily means "money" which I am not prepared to hold in this case at least Rs. 600 is the price of part of the land promised to be transferred to the plaintiff. In the case of Samaratmal Uttamchand v. Govind (2) Mr. Justice Chaudharykar remarked that "the word 'price' is capable of being understood either as money or any other recompense." The subject of exchanges is dealt with in Chapter VI of the Transfer of Property Act and an examination of the provisions of sections 118, 119 and 120 shows that the Legislature has put an exchange on the same footing with a sale in almost every respect. For example "a transfer of property in completion of an exchange can be made only in manner provided for the transfer of such property by sale." According to section 120 each party has the rights and is subject to the liabilities of a seller as to that which he gives, and has the rights and is subject to the liabilities of a buyer as to that which he takes. Apparently the framers of clause (x) of section 7 of the Court-Fees Act contemplated that for the purposes of Court-fee under this clause an exchange also would be dealt with as a sale; for otherwise there is no reason why separate provision should not have been made relating to exchange in this clause seeing that separate provisions have been made relating to contract of sale, contract of mortgage, contract of lease and an award. According to sub-clause (a) section 7 (x), Court-fees payable in suits for the specific performance of a contract of sale will be levied according to the amount of the consideration. The amount of consideration in the present suit is the land plus Rs. 600 which the plaintiff has agreed to pay to the defendant in exchange for the defendant's land. Now as the plaintiff himself has estimated the amount of consideration at Rs. 1,500, he ought to have paid the Court-fee as provided in sub-clause (a) of section 7 (x). I must, therefore, dismiss the appeal, but without costs as the respondent is not represented.

(1) 15 B. 82; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 56

(2) 25 B. 696; 3 Bom. L. R. 384.

GHULAM HAIDAR V. MANAGER, SAMADH BABA PHULA SINGH.

While dismissing the appeal I direct the Court to accept the required Court-fee if paid by the plaintiff and to try the whole suit. In case the plaintiff does not pay the additional Court-fee the Court will try the claim relating to the earnest-money as directed by the Appellate Court.

Z. K. & N. H.

*Appeal dismissed.PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITIONS NOS. 137 AND 138 OF 1921.

April 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Papon, J. C.GHULAM HAIDAR AND OTHERS—
PETITIONERS*versus*MANAGER, COMMITTEE SAMADH BABA
PHULA SINGH—RESPONDENTS.

Trusts Act (I of 1882), ss. 1, 64—Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), s. 41, applicability of, to manager of religious endowment—Mahant, whether trustee—Ostensible owner, whether includes Mahant.

A transferee of a property belonging to a charitable religious endowment cannot seek the protection of section 64 of the Trusts Act, inasmuch as (a) the Act has, by virtue of the provisions of section 1, no application to a charitable religious endowment, and (b) the word "trustee" in its restricted and technical sense does not include the manager of a charitable religious endowment. [p. 714, col. 2; p. 715, col. 1.]

Vidya Varuthi Thirtha Swamigal v. Balusami Ayyar, 65 Ind. Cas. 161; (1921) M. W. N. 449; 41 M. L. J. 346; 44 M. 831; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 62; 15 L. W. 78; 30 M. L. T. 66; 3 P. L. T. 245; 48 I. A. 302; 26 C. W. N. 537 (P. C.), referred to.

Section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, in protecting a transferee in good faith from an ostensible owner, lays down the condition precedent that the persons interested in the property must have given their consent, express or implied, to the transfer. [p. 715, col. 2.]

Section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act was intended to apply primarily to cases where an ostensible owner has acquired a title benami. The section cannot have any applicability to the case of a religious endowment where the real owner is the shrine itself, and where it cannot be said that any particular human being has the power to give any consent, express or implied. [p. 715, col. 2.]

Where, therefore, property is vested in a shrine, it is ipso facto excluded from the operation of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, because in such a case, there cannot, in the nature of things, be in existence persons interested in the property, within the meaning of the section who have any legal title to consent to its alienation. [p. 716, col. 1.]

Petitions for revision of an order of the Additional Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 10th May 1921, reversing an order of the Munsif, First Class, Nowshera, dated the 26th October 1920.

GHULAM HAIDAR V. MANAGER, SAMADH BABA PHULA SINGH.

Mr. Hansraj Bhandari, for the Petitioners.

Sardar Raja Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This order will dispose of the two Revisions Nos. 137 and 138. It will be as well to explain briefly the circumstances which have led to the present proceedings. The land in suit in both the cases under revision is a portion of certain land situated in the village of Pir Sabak in the Nowshera Tahsil which was assigned by Maharaja Ranjit Singh for the upkeep of a Sikh Religious Institution. It has been shown that the Maharaja on that occasion expropriated the original proprietors and, to commemorate the death of his General Phula Singh, appropriated no less than two-thirds of the whole village property to a Sikh Religious Institution. A jagir of the revenue of this property was conferred upon the manager of the shrine, and proprietary rights in the land were, so far as the Revenue Record of the Peshawar Settlement made by the British Authorities are concerned, recorded in the name of the manager for the time being. The first manager was Khud Singh, who was succeeded on his death by his disciple Sham Singh. Sham Singh was succeeded by Sobha Singh, one out of his several sons. Sobha Singh was again succeeded by Harnam Singh, who was one of the several sons of Sobha Singh. Harnam Singh made various alienations of the property in question and encumbered the shrine with a considerable volume of debt. On the 13th of April 1916 certain prominent members of the Sikh community instituted a suit praying for the removal of Harnam Singh and the appointment of a committee empowered to deal with the funds of the institution and to nominate a Mahant or manager. The suit was resisted, inter alia, by Harnam Singh on the ground that he had a personal proprietary right in the estate. After protracted proceedings, the case was settled by the Judicial Commissioner's appellate order of the 20th December 1918. By that order Harnam Singh was removed from his position as Mahant and manager of the property, and a committee of five persons was appointed to manage the funds of the institution and to nominate a Mahant subject to certain conditions. At the end of 1919 and the beginning of 1920 the committee so appointed through their agent Bhag Singh (who had been one of the plaintiffs in the suit referred to above) instituted three suits for possession of land sold by Harnam Singh prior to the order of the 20th December 1918 removing him from his position. The three suits were dismissed by the Court of first instance. On appeals by the plaintiffs to the Divisional Court the plaintiffs were granted a decree in each of the three suits. In the case of three of the suits, those brought against Ahmad and Majidgul, the Divisional Judge allowed the transferees compensation for improvements: in the third suit, that brought against Muhammad Yakub and Ghulam Haidar, he disallowed the claim to compensation on the ground that the sale to them had been made not only after the institution of the suit for the removal of Harnam Singh, which impugned his title to alienate, but also after the issue of an interlocutory order prohibiting him from alienation. In two of these cases the defendants have applied for revision to this Court. There has been no petition by Ahmad in respect of the suit against him which related to a sale of 21 kanals and in which the defendant was granted compensation to the extent of Rs. 645. Petitions are lodged by Majidgul and others who have been granted Rs. 100 compensation and by Muhammad Yakub and Ghulam Haidar whose claim to compensation was disallowed.

I have entertained the applications for revision on one point only which is referred to in my order of the 26th of January 1922 at the preliminary hearing, and that is that the defendants-vendees are transferees in good faith without notice of the trust, and that they, therefore, acquired a valid title from the moment of transfer and that they cannot now be ousted. This ground was the only one which was argued before me at the preliminary hearing by the Counsel for the petitioners.

Various other grounds were urged in the memorandum of revision and some attempt has been made to re-open these at the full hearing. I must decline, however, to allow these grounds to be re-opened both because they were definitely abandoned by the petitioners' Counsel at the preliminary hearing and also because they do not in themselves furnish any justifiable reason for interference on revision. For instance, it was conceded at the first hearing that Art. 134 of the Limitation Act was applicable to the present suits and that they were within time. I must, therefore, decline to re-open the question of limitation. Again, the petitioners, Ghulam Haidar and Muhammad Yukub, in their memorandum of revision, raised the question that their claim to compensation for improvements should not have been disallowed. This point, however, was not one argued at the preliminary hearing and it is, in any case, one which I am not prepared to take up. I may note, however, in passing, that there is actually an error in the order of the Divisional Judge on this question. The sale to Ghulam Haidar and Muhammad Yakub was made on the 12th of November 1916, and the learned Divisional Judge alludes to the prohibitory order as having been issued on the 7th of July 1916. There has been, what must be, a clerical mistake in the year. The prohibitory order was, as a matter of fact, issued in July 1917. Apart from this, however, I entirely agree with the view of the learned Divisional Judge that the transferees in that case had ample notice that the suit had been instituted. It was instituted on the 13th of April 1916, or seven months before the sale. Further than this, the plaintiffs had obtained a certificate from the Collector for the institution of the suit on the 18th of September 1914. Now, I cannot possibly believe the contention urged by the petitioners' Counsel that this permission was applied for secretly and that the object of the plaintiffs in that case was to prevent the proprietors of the village being aware of their proceedings. On the contrary, the fact that a suit was threatened and that the whole position and title of Harnam Singh to, encumber the property of the Institution was being impugned, must have been notorious ever since 1914. Proceedings of this nature could not possibly have been kept in the dark. They must have been preceded by considerable discussion and also, it may be assumed, by considerable local feeling.

GHULAM HAIDAR v. MANAGER, SAMADH BABA PHULA SINGH.

The original proprietors of the land and the transferees, who had benefited by Harnam Singh's action, were Muhammadans. It is clear from the record of the suit that they had always very naturally resented the expropriation of the Muhammadan proprietors by the Sikh Rulers, and that they had, on one occasion, endeavoured to set this aside. There was, therefore, not only ordinary local feeling, but a certain amount of religious and racial feeling involved in the case. I should, therefore, in any case, fully agree with the learned Divisional Judge in rejecting the claims of Ghulam Haidar and Muhammad Yakub to compensation, and I have mentioned the reasons for my view in some detail, because the point is also material when considering their claim to resist the present suit as transferees in good faith without notice of the trust.

Another point raised by the petitioners is that the Divisional Judge was not justified in treating the status of Harnam Singh as res judicata by reason of the Judicial Commissioner's order of the 20th December 1918. The present petitioners were not parties to that suit and section 11, Civil Procedure Code, it is argued, would not apply as the title which they derived from Harnam Singh was acquired not subsequently, but prior, to the institution of the suits. There is this much force in the petitioner's contention that section 11, Civil Procedure Code does not apply to persons who hold under a party to a suit in virtue of a transaction made before the decision of that suit. It is no doubt an accepted principle of law that a person cannot, in subsequent litigation, prejudice a title which he has already conferred merely because he himself fails in that litigation to establish his right to make the transfer. At the same time, the question of res judicata was not urged before me at the preliminary hearing, and in any case the point is not really material to the decision of the suit. Whether the question of Harnam Singh's proprietary title is or is not res judicata, it is one which has been made so abundantly clear by evidence and by the circumstances of the case that there is only one finding possible on the point. It has been established beyond any shadow of doubt that Harnam Singh never had any kind or sort of proprietary title in the land in suit.

GHULAM HAIDAR V. MANAGER, SAMADH BABA PHOLA SINGH.

I now turn to the only point which I am prepared to consider on this revision. Counsel for the respondents meets the argument of the petitioners in the first instance by contending that the petitioners are not transferees in good faith. As against this, the petitioner's point to the finding of the Divisional Judge, that they are transferees in good faith, and to the fact that their good faith is stated in the order of the Divisional Court to have been admitted. I am constrained, however, to think that the Divisional Judge, in referring to the defendants as transferees in good faith, must have had in his mind only the cases of Ahmad and Majidgul. It would be very difficult to reconcile his own view that Ghulam Haidar and Muhammad Yakub had full notice of the institution of the suit against Harnam Singh and of the fact that his incompetency to alienate had been challenged, with the finding that they were, nevertheless, transferees in good faith. So far as their position is concerned, I fail to see how it can be argued that by any principle of law or equity they are entitled to resist the present suit.

The general contention that the defendants in both these cases are transferees in good faith without notice of the trust, is supported by the learned Counsel for the petitioners by a number of considerations. The fact that Harnam Singh was recorded as full owner in the Revenue Record has been emphasized. As against this, various facts are cited, on the other side, such as that the "riwaj-i-am" of the village states that the Mahant has no right to alienate except for building necessity; that he is only a "sajjada nashin," and that the "jagir" was sanctioned "ta qiyam samadh". So far as this question is concerned, the Revenue Record must be taken as in favour of the defendants rather than of the plaintiffs as a person who wished to corroborate a particular proprietary title, would refer rather to the jamabandi than to the "riwaj-i-am" or the list of pensions. Another point quoted in favour of the defendants is the litigation which took place in 1908 between one Waziri Mal and Harnam Singh. In that case Harnam Singh attempted to repudiate a mortgage on the ground that the property was "jagir" and inalienable, but it was found by the District Judge that the land was the private property of Sobha Singh and his heir Harnam Singh and was not "jagir" from Government. A general consideration of the evidence, coupled with the fact that the alienation to Majidgul was made some years before the institution of the suit to remove Harnam Singh, tends to show that in his case at least the alienees were acting in good faith and without notice of a trust.

It is, however, for the petitioners to support their contention that in a case where a transferee holds from an ostensible owner in good faith without notice, he has acquired a title from which he cannot be dispossessed by the real owner. In support of this contention the learned Counsel for the petitioners has quoted a ruling of the Madras High Court of 1911 published as Prasanna Venkatachella v. Collector of Trichinopoly (1). He contends that the case is one relating to a public charity and is very parallel to the present suits. It was there held that a transferee was protected by section 64 of the Trusts Act, II of 1882. But I have considerable difficulty in understanding why, in that case, no allusion is made in the judgment to the fact that the Trusts Act, II of 1882, does not refer to public or private religious or charitable endowments. Yet section 1 of the Act is perfectly clear on this point. The exclusion of religious endowments from the operation of the Trusts Act is particularly referred to in the Privy Council ruling Vidya Varuthi Thirtha Swamigal v. Balusami Ayyar (2) to which allusion will be made below. The wording of section 1 of the Trusts Act is so clear and unequivocal, that it appears to me impossible to argue that a transferee of property belonging to a charitable and religious endowment (such as that which undoubtedly owns the property now in suit) can possibly seek the protection of section 64 of the Act. Further, the word "trustee" is not to be applied to the case

(1) 33 Ind. Cas. 45; 38 M. 1064.

(2) 65 Ind. Cas. 161; (1921) M. W. N. 449; 41 M. L. J. 346; 44 M. 831; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 62; 15 L. W. 78; 30 M. L. T. 66; 3 P. L. T. 245; 48 I. A. 302; 26 C. W. N. 537; 24 Bom. L. R. 629; 20 A. L. J. 497; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 123.

GHULAM HAIDAR V. MANAGER, SAMADH BABA PHULA SINGH.

of a Mahant holding the position which was held by Harnam Singh. The whole question of the applicability of the word "trustee" in its restricted and technical sense to the Mahant of a shrine, is dealt with in a comprehensive and instructive manner in the Privy Council ruling cited above. It was, therefore, pointed out that there was no connection between the position of a trust, as known to English Law, and that of a Mahant or manager. That ruling shows that the word 'trustee', when applied to the position of such persons, is used in a colloquial and loose sense and does not bring them under the operation of the law relating to trusts. Their Lordships pointed out as one of their reasons for this view that Religious Institutions were specifically and intentionally excluded from the operation of the Trusts Act, II of 1882. The view there taken overruled various decisions on this question which are alluded to in the judgment, and must also be taken as overruling the view of the Punjab Chief Court in Herr Gian Deo v. Baldeo Das (3). It may be admitted that this view is, to some extent, inconsistent with the application of Art. 134 of the Limitation Act to a suit of the present nature. The question, however, as to whether Art. 134 does, or does not, apply is not one which I am considering in this revision, and does not affect the finding as to the position which was held by Harnam Singh, in the present case. It may also be remarked that the word used to describe his position in various records is consistent with the view that he must be described as a Mahant and manager, rather than a trustee. In one place his predecessor, Khud Singh, is described, as "mohtamim" and in another as "sajjada nashin." Again, the applicability of section 64 of the Trusts Act is based principally upon the consideration that trust property vests in the trustee. As pointed out in the Privy Council ruling already cited, there is no question in the case of a Mahant of the property having vested in him. The argument put forward by the petitioners that a valid title from a trustee in whom the property was vested, accrued to them from the moment of the transfer cannot, therefore, be entertained.

It is contended, however, for the petitioners that, in any case, the principles of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act apply to the present case. The Punjab High Court have held [Basso v. Mir Muhammad (4)] that the principles of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act are consistent with equity and are applicable to cases in the Punjab. This general principle is also to be assumed from various judgments of the Judicial Commissioner of this Province. The weakness of this argument, however, arises from the fact that section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act in protecting a transferee in good faith from an ostensible owner, lays down the condition precedent that the persons interested in the property must have given their consent express or implied. It is argued by the learned Counsel for the petitioners that the plaintiffs in the present case, as members of the Sikh public, gave an implied consent to the transfers by Harnam Singh by their long inaction. He would call them persons interested in the property. Now, this argument appears to me essentially fallacious. There is no reasonable doubt that section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act was intended primarily to apply to cases where an ostensible owner has acquired a title benami. Various rulings have been quoted to show that section 41 protects a transferee in all cases where the real owner has allowed the world at large to think that some one other than himself was the owner of the property, vide, Veerappa Chetti v. Ramaswami Chetti (5); Aziz-un-nisa v. Ashan Ashraf (6); Lalsing v. Parashram (7) and Annada Mohan Roy v. Nilphamari Loan Office Ltd. (8). But all these rulings apply to cases where there has been something in the nature of a benami transaction which the real owner has allowed the transferee and the public at large to treat as conferring a genuine title. I cannot see that

(4) 20 Ind. Cas. 291; 278 P. L. R. 1913; 239 P. W. R. 1913.

(5) 53 Ind. Cas. 579; 43 M. 135; 26 M. L. T. 271; 37 M. L. J. 442; 11 L. W. 232.

(6) 53 Ind. Cas. 970; 22 O. C. 243.

(7) 68 Ind. Cas. 332; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 226.

(8) 65 Ind. Cas. 245; 26 C. W. N. 436.

(3) 127 P. R. 1908; 23 P. W. R. 1908 (F. B.).

AMIR BIBI v. NUR MUHAMMAD.

they have any applicability to the case of a religious endowment where the real owner is the shrine itself and where it cannot possibly be said that any particular human being has the power to give any consent express or implied. The learned Counsel for the petitioners meets this objection by saying that the corollary to such a view is to exclude religious endowments altogether from the operation of section 41. This objection itself seems to me to expose very clearly the inherent weakness of the learned Counsel's position. It is perfectly clear that religious endowments are actually protected from the operation of section 41 and for a very good reason. It is surely clear that no particular member of the public which has an interest as a whole in a Religious Institution, could possibly validate any act of the manager by giving his individual consent. Such an argument has only to be stated to be rejected. It follows a fortiori that no member of the public, if he cannot give an express consent, can give an implied consent. Further, I fail to understand how the present plaintiffs can be given any such position of responsibility towards the institution as the argument of the learned Counsel for the petitioners would seem to assign to them. They are not, as a matter of fact, the same persons who sued in 1916 for the removal of Harnam Singh, though their agent in the present case was one of the plaintiffs in that suit. Even if they were the same persons, their title to sue in 1916 was derived solely from the operation of section 92, Civil Procedure Code. For the purposes of the suit they were persons interested in the endowment. It could not, by any stretch of reasoning, be inferred from this that they are, thereby, the persons interested in the property within the meaning of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act whose consent would protect the transferees from dispossession by the real owner. The real owner, if the word "ownership" can be applied at all to the property in suit, is the shrine itself. I can see nothing illogical in holding that when property is vested in a shrine, it is ipso facto excluded from the operation of section 41, because there are not in existence persons interested in the property within the meaning of that section who have any legal title to consent to its alienation.

I am unable to hold, therefore, that any principle of equity or law in the present case protects the defendants from being ousted at the instance of the managers of the shrine, and I must concur in the conclusions arrived at by the Divisional Judge. These petitions are dismissed with costs.

Z. K. & N. H.

Petitions dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO.
1363 OF 1922.

JANUARY 16, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

Musammam AMIR BIBI—JUDGMENT—DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

NUR MUHAMMAD—DECREE-HOLDER—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 33—Restitution of conjugal rights, decree for—Direction about wife not being sent to jail in execution—Marriage during minority—Enmity.

The tendency of modern legislation is against sending women to jail in civil matters, and the power of sending women to jail in civil matters should, therefore, be sparingly exercised. [p. 717, col. 2.]

A woman who disobeys a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights loses her right to claim maintenance from her husband and this ought, ordinarily, to be considered sufficient punishment for her disobedience. [p. 717, col. 2.]

Bai Parwati v. Mansukh Jetha, 59 Ind. Cas. 361; 44 B. 972; 22 Bom. L. R. 1097, relied on.

Where it was found that a woman against whom a decree had been passed for restitution of conjugal rights had been married while she was still a minor, that her husband had neglected to maintain her for 18 or 19 years, and that there was bitter enmity between the parties:

Held, that this was a fit case in which the Court ought to exercise the power vested in it by O. XXI, r. 33 of the Civil Procedure Code by directing that the wife shall not be sent to jail in execution of the decree. [p. 717, col. 2.]

Miscellaneous second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 4th March 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Jullundur, dated the 14th February 1922.

Dr. Shuja-ud-Din, for the Appellant,

AMIR BIBI v. NUR MUHAMMAD.

JUDGMENT.—These two second appeals have arisen out of proceedings in execution of a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights. The following facts will disclose the nature of the suit and of the question arising for consideration in these appeals:—

Musammat Amir Bibi and Musammat Aziz Bibi are two sisters. They were married to two brothers Nur Muhammad and Ghulam Mohammad, respectively, about 18 or 19 years ago when they were minors. It appears that on their attaining puberty their parents refused to send them to their husbands and they themselves refused to live as the wives of their husbands. Two suits were, therefore, instituted for the restitution of conjugal rights against the two ladies and for an injunction against their father. The suit was resisted on the ground that the plaintiffs had neglected their duties as husbands, that they had not supported their wives, and that bitterness existed between the parties. The suits were, however, decreed and the decision was upheld by the Appellate Court on the 6th November 1920.

The successful plaintiffs put their decrees into execution. The judgment-debtors filed objections to the effect that the decree-holders were in debt, that they were too poor to maintain their wives and that enmity existed between the parties. The Execution Court overruled the objections and made an order directing the judgment-debtors to comply with the decrees within two months. Appeals were preferred to the First Appellate Court and to the High Court; but they were dismissed. The judgment-debtors still persisted in disobeying the decrees passed against them and preferred to go to Jail rather than to go to their husbands. The Munsif accordingly ordered that both Musammat Amir Bibi and Musammat Aziz Bibi be sent to Jail for a period of six months and directed the decree-holders to pay Rs. 15 monthly on account of diet money for each of them. The judgment-debtors appealed. Their appeals have been dismissed. They have consequently come up to this Court in second appeal and Mr. Shuja-ud-Din on their behalf has put forward the following facts for the consideration of the Court and has requested that this Court should exercise the power given under O. XXI, r. 33, Civil Procedure Code, and should order the release of the appellants:—

(1) that the appellants were married while they were minors and had not the marriage been brought about by their father they would have had the right of repudiation on attaining puberty;

(2) that undoubtedly there is enmity between the parties;

(3) that for 18 or 19 years the husbands have been neglecting their wives and have not maintained them;

(4) that the feelings were so bitter that the appellants preferred to go to Jail rather than consent to live with their husbands, and

(5) that they have already been in Jail and this circumstance must have added to the already existing bitterness existing between the parties.

Under ordinary circumstances, this Court would refuse to listen to the objections raised by wives married according to law; but, having regard to the special circumstances of this particular case and the fact that the tendency of modern legislation is against sending women to jail in civil matters, I am prepared to exercise the discretion vested in the Court under O. XXI, r. 33, Civil Procedure Code. Having disobeyed the decree the appellants shall have to maintain themselves and shall not be entitled to make claim against the husbands for maintenance. This, as observed in the case of Bai Parwati v. Mansukh Jetha (1) will be sufficient punishment. Though I am not prepared to go to the length to which the learned Judges who decided the above cited case went, I must hold that according to the tendency of the present times the power of sending women to Jail should be sparingly exercised.

I accordingly accept the appeals and setting aside the decrees of the Court below disallow the prayer of the decree-holders to send the appellants to Jail. I understand that the appellants have already been released from Jail. It is not, therefore, necessary to make any further order in this respect. Having regard to the particular circumstances of this case I direct that the parties should bear their own costs.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 59 Ind. Cas. 361; 44 B. 972; 22 Bom. L. R., 1097.

SUPERINTENDANT OF STAMPS v. CHIMANLAL LALBHAI.BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE NO. 7 OF 1922.

September 26, 1922.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, Kt., Acting Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Crump and Mr. Justice Mulla.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF STAMPS, BOMBAY—PETITIONER

versus

CHIMANLAL LALBHAI AND OTHERS—
OPPONENTS.

Stamp Act (II of 1899), Sch. I, Art. 45—Hindu joint family—Oral partition—Deed transferring shares—Stamp chargeable.

At the time of an oral partition between three brothers who formed a joint Hindu family, certain shares in a Company, which stood in the name of the eldest brother, were not thrown into the hotch-pot. Subsequently, the eldest brother executed two deeds transferring to each of his younger brothers, the number of shares which fell to each, and the question was as to the Stamp duty leviable on the deeds:

Held, that the deeds were chargeable under Art. 45, Schedule I to the Stamp Act, as instruments of partition. [p. 719, col. 2.]

Civil reference made by the Superintendent of Stamps, Bombay, under section 57 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899.

Mr. Kanga, Advocate-General (with him Mr. J. C. Bowen, Government Solicitor), for the Petitioner.

Mr. Jinnah (with him Messrs. Manilal and Kher), for Opponent No. 2.

Mr. Thakor (with him Mr. Manilal and Kher), for Opponents Nos. 1 and 3.

JUDGMENT.

Shah, Ag. C. J.:—This is a reference under section 57 of the Stamp Act of 1899. The question referred to us is:—With what stamp-duty is each of the instruments referred to in paragraph 1 of the reference chargeable? The instruments are Exhibits A and B. They are in form transfers of shares, signed by one of the three brothers in favour of each of the other two brothers respectively. Exhibit A is in respect of 960 shares and Exhibit B is in respect of 830 shares. We have heard arguments on this question on behalf of the Crown and on behalf of the parties interested. We are of opinion that these two instruments Exhibits A and B are chargeable under Art. 45 of Schedule I to the Stamp Act, as instruments of partition.

It appears that a partition among these three brothers was effected in November 1918. There was no deed of partition and the shares in question continued in the name of the eldest brother Chimanbhai. They were in his name before the family was divided in interest, and continued in his name after the severance of interest in 1918. It appears that in 1920 the brothers reduced to writing the terms of the partnership, which apparently was formed soon after this partition, and these shares are referred to in that deed as partnership property.

Thereafter, in 1922, by means of the two instruments in question, the eldest brother Chimanbhai, in whose name the shares stood, sought to effect the transfer of the shares assigned to the share of each of the two other brothers. We are not concerned with 130 shares representing the difference between 960 and 830 shares as appearing in these instruments, because it may be that the value of these shares was otherwise made available at the time of the partition to that brother.

On the one hand, it is contended that Chimanbhai was in the position of a trustee, and that when he sought to transfer these shares to his brothers, he did so as a trustee to the respective beneficiaries, and that the instruments are liable to be stamped under Art. 62, clause (e).

On the other hand, it is urged on behalf of the Crown that the position of the three brothers after the oral partition in November 1918 was that of tenants-in-common, that the property with which we are concerned continued in the name of one of the tenants-in-common, that when Chimanbhai executed these instruments with a view to transfer the shares, he really meant to divide the shares and that the two instruments are in substance instruments of partition. In the alternative, it is argued on behalf of the Crown that the instruments are liable to be charged under Art. 62, clause (a), as simple transfers of shares in an incorporated Company, and not transfers by a trustee in favour of the beneficiaries.

We have come to the conclusion that the theory of Chimanbhai being a trustee for his brothers in respect of these shares cannot be accepted. His position was that of a tenant-in-common holding the property for the benefit of the other tenants-in-common after the partition of 1918. There is nothing to show that these shares were specifically divided at the time of that partition. It is suggested on behalf of the two brothers, Kasturbhai and Naro-tambhai, that the shares were in fact divided and that their brother Chimanbhai was in effect constituted a trustee in respect of their shares from the date of the partition. This plea is not consistent with the recitals in the instruments themselves. The instruments contain the following recital:—

CHINA MAI, v. GUL AHMAD.

"Whereas I am not the absolute owner of the said shares but am only the owner of 960 shares out of the said shares and in respect of the remaining shares, I am only a trustee as a separated co-owner (the separation having been effected by taking the dividends on the said shares in three equal parts) as well as a partner on behalf of the other two partners of the firm of Messrs. Lalbhai Dalpatbhai & Co. which was before the said separation a joint family firm."

When we turn to the partnership deed it appears from the schedule attached to that document that there is a list of the shares given which refers to the full number of 2880 shares and in clause 4 of that document there is a provision that the dividend on the shares in question shall be divided in equal shares between the parties. The fact of equal division of the dividends after the partition, is consistent with the theory of tenancy-in-common among the three brothers or of their being partners. But these recitals do not support the theory that the shares were in fact divided at the time of the partition. No authority has been cited for the proposition that the position of a co-tenant or a co-partner holding the property in his own name, is that of a trustee for the other co-owners or co-partners. It may be that he has certain obligations in respect of the property so held by him towards his co-owners or co-partners and that the co-owners or co-partners would have the right to enforce in a proper manner their rights of ownership to that property. But I am unable to hold that Chimanbhai held the shares in his name as a trustee and that his two brothers were beneficiaries within the meaning of Art. 62, clause (e). In spite of the arguments urged in support of the theory of actual partition of the shares at the date of the partition in 1918 and of the creation of trust in favour of Kasturbhai and his brother, I have no hesitation in rejecting that theory on the facts as appearing in the documents themselves, and on the reference. The next question is as to whether these instruments are properly chargeable under Art. 62, clause (a), or Art. 45. It is by no means easy to decide whether these instruments are properly chargeable under Art. 62 (a) or under Art. 45. In form they are simple transfers and in substance they have the effect of dividing the property which was first a part of the joint family property and thereafter held as property belonging to the tenant-in-common. Having regard to the facts of the case we can treat these instruments fairly as instruments of partition in respect of the shares which were kept in fact undivided at the time of the oral partition between the three brothers.

Crump, J.—I concur.

Mulla, J.—I concur.

W. C. A. & W. H.

Order accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 132 OF 1920.

February 5, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Fride.

CHINA MAI, AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

GUL AHMAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDANTS.

*Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), s. 53—
Fraudulent transfer, setting aside of—Creditor, who is not judgment-creditor, whether can sue.*

There is no warrant for the proposition that a creditor cannot maintain a suit to set aside a deed which is obnoxious to the provisions of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, until he es-

CHINA MAL V. GUL AHMAD.

establishes his debt by obtaining a decree from a Court of Law.

As soon as a person who complains of a transfer coming within the purview of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act proves his debt either by producing a decree in his favour or by any other evidence, oral or documentary, he is entitled to sue, and it is not necessary that he must be a judgment-creditor or should have obtained a lien or charging order on the property transferred by his debtor.

Reese River Silver Mining Company v. Atwell, (1869) 7 Eq. 347; 20 L. T. 163; 17 W. R. 601 and Ishwar Timappa Hegde v. Devar Venkappa Shanbog, 27 B. 146; 5 Bom. L. R. 19, relied on.

The only distinction between a judgment-creditor and an ordinary creditor who seeks to set aside a transfer as fraudulent under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, is that while the former is not bound to bring a representative suit on behalf of all the creditors of the debtor; the latter should bring an action on behalf of the general body of the creditors.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Attock, at Campbellpore, dated the 20th October 1919, affirming that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, First Class, Campbellpore, District Attock, dated the 22nd July 1919.

Mr. M. S. Bhagat, for the Appellants.

Mr. Anant Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 1st November 1918, Munanmad Sher, defendant No. 1, executed a deed of gift by which he transferred the whole of his estate consisting of lands and house property to his minor grandson, Said Ahmad. The plaintiffs, who are some of the creditors of the donor, have brought the action which has led to this second appeal, to set aside the conveyance on the ground that it was made with intent to defeat or delay the creditors. The Subordinate Judge finds, and his finding has not been dissented from by the learned District Judge, that the donor was at the time of the gift indebted to all the plaintiffs and several other persons; and that the transfer was made with the intention of defeating the creditors. Indeed, the donor himself admits that he was heavily involved in debt when he transferred the whole of his property to his minor grandson, and he is unable to give any reason for depriving himself of his estate and conveying it to his grandson who was an infant at that time. His evidence also makes it clear that he has no other property to satisfy the debts of his creditors, and that even after the transfer in question, he himself mortgaged a portion of the property conveyed by the deed in order to discharge the debt due to a creditor. It is, therefore, manifest that he is still the real owner of the estate and that the deed or gift was merely a device for withdrawing the property from the creditors and was intended to be a cloak for retaining the benefit for himself. Now, section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act provides that where the effect of any transfer of immoveable property is to defeat or delay any creditor, and such transfer is made gratuitously, the transfer may be presumed to have been made with intent to defeat or delay the creditor or the transferor. This presumption applies with full force to the transfer which the plaintiffs seek to impeach in the present case.

The Courts below have, however, dismissed the suit on the ground that the creditors have at present no interest in the property, because they are not judgment-creditors and have not attached any of the properties affected by the deed. Now, this view of the law is, in our opinion, erroneous. Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act does not require that the persons complaining of a transfer coming within the purview of that section should obtain decrees proving their debts before they are entitled to set aside the conveyance. There is no warrant for the position that a creditor cannot maintain a suit to set aside a deed as obnoxious to the provisions of the section until he establishes his debt by obtaining a decree from a Court of Law. As soon as the person who complains, proves his debt either by producing a decree in his favour or by any other evidence, oral or documentary, he is entitled to sue; and it is not necessary that he must be a judgment-creditor or should have obtained a lien or charging order on the property transferred by his debtor. This principle was enunciated by Lord Romilly, M. R., in Reese River Silver Mining Company v. Atwell (1), a case decided under the English Statute, 13 Elizabeth, C. 5, on which section 53 is in part based; and the same view has been expressed by a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in Ishwar Timappa Hegde v. Devar Venkappa Shantog (2).

(1) (1869) 7 Eq. 347; 20 L. T. 163; 17 W. R. 601.

CHANDRIKA PRASHAD SINGH v. HIRA LAL.

The only distinction between a judgment-creditor and an ordinary creditor, who seeks to set aside an alienation as fraudulent under section 53, appears to be that, while the former is not bound to bring a representative suit on behalf of all the creditors of the debtor, the latter should bring an action on behalf of the general body of the creditors. The English rule on the subject, as stated in Halsbury's Laws England, Vol. XV, page 89, is to the following effect:—

"In an action to set aside an alienation under the Statute a creditor should sue on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the grantor except where he has recovered judgment for his debt, in which case he can obtain an order declaring the alienation as void against him and containing consequential directions for the satisfaction of his debt alone, without mention of any other creditors or their debts."

We must, therefore, hold that in order to entitle a creditor to bring an action under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act to set aside a transfer it is not necessary that he should be a judgment-creditor or that he should have any lien or charging order on the property comprised in the deed of transfer, and that the plaintiffs, who have brought the action on behalf of all the creditors of the donor, have established all the requirements of the law.

We accordingly accept the appeal and decree the claim with costs throughout.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(2) 27 B. 146; 5 Bom. L. R. 19.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER NO. 151 OF 1922.

May 31, 1923.

Present.—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.
Babu CHANDRIKA PRASHAD SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

Babu HIRA LAL AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XIX, r. 3; O. XXXVIII, r. 5—Affidavit, form of—Responsibility for making affidavit—Attachment before judgment—Principles applicable.

Where an affidavit states that the information deposed to is true to the best of the deponent's knowledge, information and belief, it is imperative that the deponent should state how much of the affidavit is sworn to from his own knowledge and how much is merely sworn to from information which he believes to be true. [p. 723, col. 1.]

Padmabati Das v. Rasik Lal Dhar, 6 Ind. Cas. 666; 37 C. 259, relied on.

An affidavit in support of an interlocutory application may be confined to facts which the deponent is able to depose to of his own knowledge, or it may be one in which statements of his belief may also be admitted if the grounds of his belief are given. But if the affidavit swears to certain facts as true and does not state that the facts deposed to are merely within the belief of the deponent, then it must be taken that the statements, in so far as they are statements of facts, are matters within his own knowledge and not merely matters of belief only, and it will be no excuse, if those facts should turn out to be untrue, to say that he did not intend it to be taken that he was swearing things within his own knowledge and that he merely intended to state what had been stated to him. [p. 722, col. 2; p. 723, col. 1.]

The power given to the Courts, by r. 5 of O. XXXVIII of the Civil Procedure Code, to attach a defendant's property before judgment is not meant to be exercised lightly or without clear proof of the existence of the mischief aimed at in the rule. To attach a defendant's property before his liability has been established by a decree may have the effect of seriously embarrassing him in the conduct of his defence, as the properties could not be alienated even for the purpose of putting him in funds for defending the suit which may eventually prove to have been entirely devoid of merit. This power should be exercised only when the Court is satisfied, not only that the defendant is about to dispose of his property or to remove it from the jurisdiction of the Court, but also that his object in so doing is to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him and so deprive the plaintiff, if successful, of the fruits of victory. [p. 724, cols. 1 & 2.]

Once the Court accepts the view that the de-

CHANDRIKA PRASHAD SINGH v. HIRA LAL.

endant has no intention of alienating his property, there is no longer any power in the Court to grant an order for attachment before judgment, because in such a case it is quite obvious that the essential condition laid down in r. 5 of O. XXXVIII of the Civil Procedure Code has not been fulfilled. [p. 724, col. i.]

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Allahabad, dated the 9th May 1922.

Messrs. Hasan Iman, A. Sami and P. K. Mukherjee, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Jayaswal, S. Dayal and Brij Kishore Prasad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This is an appeal on behalf of the defendants in the suit from an order of the Subordinate Judge of Shahabad ordering attachment before judgment of immoveable property belonging to the defendants. It appears that the plaintiffs sued for recovery back of a deposit of Rs. 1,32,000, or thereabouts, made by them in part performance of a contract to purchase some of the immoveable property of the defendants or in the alternative for specific performance and a conveyance of the property.

The allegations made in the plaint are that there are certain misrepresentations as to incumbrances on the property and that such incumbrances were not disclosed and, therefore, although the plaintiffs are seeking, as an alternative, specific performance, they are really claiming back the deposit made with interest thereon.

The defendants' case is that they are quite willing to transfer the property upon payment of the balance of the purchase price due and they deny the allegations as to the misrepresentations alleged in the plaint. The plaintiffs on the 9th of May of last year applied for attachment before judgment not only of the property in suit but apparently of all the immoveable property belonging to the defendants which is said to have been valued recently by a valuation of the Court at a sum of nearly eight lakhs of rupees.

The evidence necessary in support of an interlocutory application of this sort may be given by affidavit and the only evidence presented on behalf of the plaintiffs on the present application for attachment was an affidavit signed by Har Kishan Das, the a-mukhtar of one of the plaintiffs. The affidavit does not state in terms whether the facts deposed to therein are statements of facts within the deponent's knowledge or whether they are statements made from information and belief. It was contended, in the first place, on behalf of the appellants that an affidavit of this sort was not sufficient for the purposes for which it was required, because there was nothing to show whether the statements made are merely statements on information and belief or whether the deponent swears to the facts mentioned as being within his own knowledge. O. XIX, r. 3, provides that, "Affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the deponent is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications; on which statements of his belief may be admitted: provided that the grounds thereof are stated." It follows, therefore, that in an application of this sort the affidavits may be confined to facts which the deponent is able to depose to of his own knowledge, or it may be one in which statements of his belief may also be admitted if the grounds of his belief are given. But if the affidavit swears to certain facts as true and does not state that the facts deposed to are merely those within the belief of the deponent, then, I apprehend, it must be taken that the statements, in so far as they are statements of fact, are matters within his own knowledge and not merely matters of belief only. It follows, therefore, that the present affidavit is not necessarily bad on the ground that it does not state in terms whether the facts deposed to are facts within the knowledge of the deponent or merely statements of his belief. The case of Padmabati Dasi v. Rasik Lal Dhar (1) was referred to in support of the proposition put forward by the defendants. In that case Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., and Woodroffe, J., stated: "We desire to impress upon those who propose to rely on affidavits that, in future, the provisions of O. XIX, r. 3 must be strictly observed and every affidavit should clearly express how much is a statement of the deponent's knowledge and how much is a statement of his belief, and the grounds of belief must be stated with sufficient particularity to enable the Court to judge whether it would be safe to act on the deponent's belief." In that case, however, as appears from the report, the affidavit which was sworn was one which is in very common use in this country. After stating the facts it continued, "I the defendant-respondent, above-named solemnly affirm and say that what is stated in the foregoing petition is true to the best of my knowledge, information and belief." It must be borne in mind that in making the observations which I have just quoted from their judgment, the learned Judges were dealing with a case where the affidavit states that the information deposed to is true to the best of the deponent's knowledge, information and belief without stating specifically which parts of it are true to his knowledge and which parts are merely stated as his belief from information obtained by him. In such a case it is clearly desirable and imperative that the deponent should state how much of the affidavit is sworn to from his own knowledge, and how much is merely sworn to from information which he believes to be true; but if the affidavit contains no such statement as that to which I have referred but merely alleges certain facts and is signed by the deponent who swears to them, it must, I think, be taken that the statements made by him are represented as statements true to his knowledge. I, therefore, think that in the present case no exception can be taken to the form of the affidavit on that ground. At the same time, I should like to issue a note of warning against litigants, and those who swear affidavits on their behalf that, if they solemnly affirm, as this affidavit does, that certain facts are true without stating that those facts are true only to the best of their information and belief, it will be taken that they are swearing to facts deposed to as being facts within their own knowledge, and it will be no excuse if those facts should turn out untrue to say, "I did not intend it to be taken that I was swearing things within my own knowledge, I merely intended to state what had been stated to me."

CHANDRIKA PRASHAD SINGH v. MIRA LAL.

The learned Subordinate Judge, when the application came before him, had the affidavit of Hari Kishen Das before him on behalf of the plaintiffs and that was the only evidence he had in support of the application. He granted the application, and the defendants contend that the learned Subordinate Judge was not justified upon the evidence before him and in the view he took of the evidence in ordering an attachment of the property before judgment, because, even if one accepts the findings, they are not in themselves sufficient to bring the case within the provisions of O. XXXVIII, r. 5. That rule provides that, "Where at any stage of a suit, the Court is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise, that the defendant with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him (a) is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property, or (b) is about to remove the whole or any part of his property from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court may direct the defendant, within a time to be fixed by it, either to furnish security, in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security."

I turn now to the evidence in support of the application which was before the learned Subordinate Judge. The affidavit in which that evidence was contained reads thus: "I solemnly affirm as follows:—That with a dishonest motive and with a view to deprive the plaintiffs of their dues as well as to obstruct the realization of the decree that may be passed in favour of the plaintiffs the defendants want to dispose of their properties specified in the petition. That in case the properties are disposed of there will be considerable difficulty in realizing the decretal amount, rather the realization would be impossible. An attachment before judgment of the defendants' properties is, therefore, necessary."

That was the whole of the evidence on behalf of the plaintiffs before the learned Subordinate Judge when he had to come to a conclusion whether he should grant an order for attachment before judgment or not. The defendants, on the other hand, put in a petition, verified by an affidavit, in which they stated that it was absolutely untrue that they had any intention of disposing of any portion of their family property, that is to say, the property which it was sought to attach, and that the statement to the contrary made in the affidavit of Har Kishen Das was absolutely malicious. Let us see how the learned Judge dealt with the matter. His judgment is short and it is to this effect: "The learned Counsel for the defendant in support of his petition objects to furnishing security or to attachment of the properties mainly on the ground that there is no intention on the part of the defendant to alienate any portion of the property sought to remain under attachment. This explanation, however, is not sufficient. The main object of the rule aforesaid is to enable the plaintiff to realise the amount of the decree in the event of his obtaining a decree in the suit. The plaintiffs seek for a decree of about 1½ lacs of rupees in the suit. It is to be a money-decree. On behalf of the defendant it is not made out how this decree can be realised if steps are not taken to keep the defendants' property under attachment as contemplated by the above rule." The above rule is O. XXXVIII, r. 5, which is stated at the head of the order. "Nor is it attempted to be shown how the defendant will be prejudiced if his properties remain under attachment when there is no intention on his part to alienate the properties. In this view of the case the rule issued on the defendant will be confirmed and the properties will remain under attachment pendente lite."

CHANDRIKA PRASEAD SINGH v. HIRA LAL.

With great respect to the learned Subordinate Judge, it seems to me that he entirely misapprehended the scope and effect of O. XXXVIII, r. 5. The power given to the Court to attach a defendant's property before judgment was never meant to be exercised lightly or without clear proof of the existence of the mischief aimed at in the rule. To attach a defendant's property before his liability has been established by a decree may have the effect of seriously embarrassing him in the conduct of his defence, as the properties could not be alienated even for the purpose of putting him in funds for defending the suit which may eventually prove to have been entirely devoid of merit. Such a power is only given when the Court is satisfied, not only that the defendant is only about to dispose of his property or to remove it from the jurisdiction of the Court, but also that his object in so doing is to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him and so deprive the plaintiff, if successful, of the fruits of victory. In the present case the learned Subordinate Judge has not stated that he does not believe the defendants when they say that they have no intention of alienating any portion of their property under attachment. All he says is, that this explanation is not sufficient. It seems to me that once you accept the view that the defendants have no intention of alienating their property there is no longer any power in the Court to grant an order for attachment before judgment, because in such a case it is quite obvious that the conditions of O. XXXVIII, r. 5, which require the Court to be satisfied that the defendants are about to dispose of their property with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against them have not been fulfilled. But the learned Judge goes on and gives as a reason for passing the order in question, that it is not made out by the defendants how the decree can be realised if steps are not taken to keep the defendants' property under attachment and further that no attempt has been made to show how the defendants will be prejudiced if their property did remain under attachment when, as they say, there was no intention of parting with it. It was only in this view of the case that the learned Subordinate Judge passed the order. It is perfectly clear that the reasons given by the learned Subordinate Judge for ordering the attachment cannot stand. We might, if we thought fit, refer the case back to him again with certain directions as to the scope and meaning of O. XXXVIII, r. 5; but the evidence is before us and we are competent as a Court of First Appeal to deal with the question raised. To my mind in a matter of this sort the affidavit put forward on behalf of the plaintiffs, contradicted as it is by the defendants, is entirely insufficient to satisfy any Court that the defendants are about to dispose of their property or remove it out of the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against them. The affidavit is couched in the most vague and general terms. The deponent says that with a dishonest motive the defendants want to dispose of their property, and then says that in case the properties are disposed of there will be considerable difficulty in realising the decretal amount. That is all. No particulars of any sort are given as to the defendants having attempted to alienate their property on any occasion, and it is not suggested that anything took place which would lead one to suspect that the defendants had any intention of removing their property from the jurisdiction or putting it out of the power of the Court. Not a word is said as to how the deponent came by his knowledge of the facts which he affirms, and as evidence the affidavit when contradicted appears to me to be practically worthless. The property attached in this case is said to be valued at something like eight lacs of rupees: in fact, it is the whole of the immoveable property of the defendants, whereas the plaintiff's claim is only for something under a lakh and a-half of rupees. This in itself is to my mind a matter which raises some suspicion as to the bona fides of the plaintiffs in the matter, and is a consideration which ought to lead the Court to scrutinise somewhat carefully the evidence upon which the application is based. The defendants, on the other hand, have repudiated entirely any intention of alienating their property or removing it out of the jurisdiction of the Court. The learned Subordinate Judge does not appear to have disbelieved them; but, even assuming that they had no such intention, he has nevertheless ordered the property to be attached. The evidence in the present case entirely fails to satisfy me that any case has been made out for taking what after all is a very drastic step, namely, attaching the property before the plaintiffs have shown any right to succeed in the suit.

ABUL HASAN KHAN V. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF DELHI.

In my opinion this appeal should be allowed, the order of the learned Subordinate Judge set aside, and the property released from attachment.

The appellants are entitled to the costs of the petition before the learned Subordinate Judge and the appeal to this Court.

Let the record be sent down at once to the lower Court.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K. & N. H.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 137 OF 1922.

January 2, 1923.

Present :—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Fforde.
Nawab ABUL HASAN KHAN
—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE OF DELHI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), ss. 3 (13) (a), 189, 193—Street—"Accessible to the public," meaning of—Sanction to build—Condition regulating line of frontage, when can be imposed.

The expression "accessible to the public" in section 3 (13) (a) of the Punjab Municipal Act, means open to all the public in fact, whether by right or permission. [p. 726, col. 2.]

The power to restrict the right of free building by private owners upon private land is conferred upon Municipalities by section 189 of the Punjab Municipal Act. [p. 726, col. 1.]

Under that section a Municipal Committee has no power to enforce conditions regulating the line of frontage unless the intended building abuts on a street. [p. 726, col. 2.]

Under section 193 of the Punjab Municipal Act, a Municipal Committee may refuse permission to build at all; but if permission is granted it can only impose such conditions as are provided for in sub-section (3) of section 189 of the Act. [p. 727, col. 1.]

Letters Patent Appeal against an order of Mr. Justice Broadway, dated the 15th May 1922, in Civil Appeal No. 2394 of 1921; published as 71 Ind. Cas., 775.

Lala Sardha Ram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Dalip Singh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Abul Hassan Khan, applied to the Municipal Committee of Delhi for permission to erect a dwelling house upon certain land of his within the Municipal area.

Permission to build was granted, but was coupled with a condition that the building should be erected "four feet away from the middle of the road." The term "road" is here used to denote a portion of land belonging to one Benarsi Das, separated by a low wall from the land on which appellant desired to build.

ABUL HASAN KHAN v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, OF DELHI

If the appellant had built in accordance with this condition, his structure would have stood a foot or so behind this wall. In point of fact the house was built in contact with the wall and, therefore, in violation of the condition imposed by the Municipality.

The question for our determination is whether or not the Municipal Committee had power to impose this condition. The power to restrict the right of free building by private land owners upon private land is conferred by the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911. Section 189 (1) of the Act provides that no person shall erect a building without the sanction of the Committee. Sub-section (3) provides that the Committee may by bye-law prescribe, inter alia, the requirements to which the building must conform in respect of:—

(i) free passage or way in front of the building;

(ii) space to be left about the building to secure free circulation of air and facilitate scavenging and for the prevention of fire;

(iii) ventilation and the provision and position of drains, privies, latrines, urinals or cesspools;

(iv) level and width of foundation, level of lowest floor, and the stability of the structure; and

(v) the line of frontage with neighbouring buildings, if the building abuts on a street.

The stipulation imposed by the Committee in giving the sanction to build is now impeached on the ground that it is not authorised by the bye-law framed under the provisions of this sub-section.

It has been contended throughout on behalf of the Committee that this restriction does come within the scope of the sub-section; that is to say, that it was imposed for the purpose of regulating the line of frontage with neighbouring buildings which, of course, assumes that the building in question "abuts on a street."

The appellant has throughout maintained that the building does not in fact abut on a street, and that, therefore, the restriction is not within this sub-section and is accordingly invalid. To determine these issues between the contending parties the following questions were framed in the Court of first instance:

(1) Whether the order of the Municipal Committee is ultra vires?

(2) Whether the adjoining open space is not a street?

Section 3 sub-section (13) (a) of the Municipal Act defines "street" as "any road, foot-way, square, Court, alley or passage accessible, whether permanently or temporarily, to the public, whether a thoroughfare or not." The second portion of this sub-section (a) includes a vacant space under certain limitations, but it has been conceded that the ground in question does not come within the description of "vacant space" as thus defined, and accordingly the issue was framed under the first portion of the sub-section.

Now, it is quite clear that the ground in question would come within the definition of street as defined in the first part of section 3 (13) (a) if it could be shown to be "accessible whether permanently or temporarily to the public." "Accessible to the public" means open to all the public in fact, whether by right or permission. The Court of first instance on the evidence before it has found that this ground is not accessible to the public within the meaning of that phrase, and has held accordingly that the ground is not a street. With this decision both the learned Judges on appeal have agreed, and we can see no reason for disturbing this finding of fact. It follows, therefore, that the building does not "abut on a street," and accordingly the condition sought to be imposed is not authorised by sub-section (3) (v) of section 189. The Committee has no power to enforce conditions regulating the line of frontage unless the intended building abuts on a street, and so far, therefore, as that clause in the sub-section is concerned the restriction is ultra vires.

It has been urged by Counsel for the Municipality that the condition imposed may still be authorised by (i) or (ii) of sub-section.

(3) That is to say, that the order to erect the building at a distance of four feet from the middle of the road was made for the purpose of allowing a free passage or way in front of the building, or a space to secure free circulation of air, facilitate scavenging and prevent fire. We cannot accept this contention. It does not appear to have been seriously relied upon in the Courts below, and it is not consistent with the facts of the case.

BALBHADDAR PRASAD V. HAR NARAYAN DAS.

It has been further urged on behalf of the respondents that the Committee has power under section 193 of the Act to sanction any condition it may think fit to impose. This view, also, we cannot accept. Section 193 empowers the Committee to refuse sanction to build, or to grant sanction either absolutely or subject to such modification as it may deem fit in respect of all or any of the matters specified in sub-section (3) of section 189. That is to say, the Committee may refuse permission to build at all; but if permission is granted it can only impose such conditions as are provided for in the sub-section.

Holding, as we do, that the condition imposed by the Committee is ultra vires, we must allow the appeal with costs, affirming the order of the District Judge.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 252 OF 1921.

May 23, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C., and

Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

BALBHADDAR PRASAD TIWARI AND

ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS—

versus

HAR NARAYAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Riparian owners—Sudden change in course of river—Land belonging to one owner joined with that of another—Ownership, transfer of—Principle applicable—Identity of lands not lost, effect of—Dhardhura, custom of, meaning of—Wajib-ul-arz, construction of—Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation (XI of 1825), s. 4 cl. (2).

Where by a sudden change in the course of a river, a piece of land belonging to one riparian owner is cut off and placed in contiguity to that of another riparian owner, the ownership in it is not changed so long as its identity is not destroyed. [p. 729, col. 1.]

The principle of law stated above is one not merely of English Law, nor a principle peculiar to any system of Municipal Law, but it is a principle founded in universal law and justice, and has been embodied in clause (2) of section 4 of the Bengal Alluvion and Diluvion Regulation, [p. 729, col. 2.]

Where a person sets up a custom in derogation of the aforesaid principle he must prove the same by clear, definite and specific evidence. [p. 733, col. 1.]

It is wholly against all principles to uphold a custom by means of possible inferences or even by probable implications. [p. 731, col. 2.]

The word dhardhura is not a term of art signifying necessarily always and under all conditions that the deep stream constitutes a permanent boundary between two estates on the opposite bank of a river. [p. 731, col. 2.]

The wajib-ul-arz of a village on one side of a river contained the following entry: "As between our village and the opposite village D, there is an old boundary formed by the main stream of the river, and as up till now the main stream flows below our village the land of the katri appertains to village D, but when the main stream shall flow below D, we shall be entitled to the land of the katri." The wajib-ul-arz of the village on the opposite bank stated, "The river passes by the extremity of this village and, therefore, when any land on this side of the river is washed away to the other side, the same is taken possession of by the Zemindar on whose side the land falls, i.e., the custom of dhardhura prevails."

Held, (1) that though the usage of dhardhura was expressly mentioned in the wajib-ul-arz, yet the condition of things to which it was applicable was stated in words which may merely connote the acquisition of land by gradual accession, and if that were so, the entry would amount to nothing more than a mere recital of the general law; [p. 731, col. 2.]

(2) that there was nothing to show that the entries in the wajib-ul-arz were explicitly applicable to a case of a transfer of land from one side of the river to the other by a sudden change of the course of the river. [p. 731, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the Third Additional District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 9th May 1921, confirming the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Unao, dated the 15th April 1921.

Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for the Appellants.

Baba Basudeo Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal from the decree of the Third Additional District Judge of Lucknow, dated the 9th May 1921, confirming the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Unao, dated the 15th April 1921, by which the suit of the plaintiff-respondent was decreed. The appeal originally came up for hearing before a Single Judge of this Court, who, by his order dated the 13th

BALBHADDAR PRASAD v. HAR NARAYAN DAS.

November 1921, certified that the case was fit to be heard and decided by a Bench of two Judges. It has accordingly come before us for decision.

The facts of the case are few and simple, but the question for decision in this appeal is not only of considerable importance but is also difficult of solution. The plaintiff is the owner of the villages Reotapur and Mirzapur, Pargana Sikandarpur, in the District of Unao. These two villages are situate on the north side of the river Ganges. The defendants are the proprietors of the villages Keora and Keora Kachar which lie on the south of the river in the Cawnpore District, and under normal conditions the river Ganges forms the boundary between the two estates.

The plaintiff's case is that, by virtue of a custom of dhardhura, the deep stream of the river determines the boundary even when that stream has suddenly changed its course and the land is thrown from one side of the river to the other by the action of the shifting of the deep stream. Thus, the land thrown towards the north of the deep stream becomes the property of the plaintiff and the land thrown towards the south and on being attached to the defendants' villages becomes the property of the defendant. Up to October 1915, the entire area in dispute formed part of the defendants' villages but in November of the same year the river suddenly changed its course and the lands in dispute which formerly belonged to the defendants having been thrown by the shifting of the course of the river towards the north, became attached to the plaintiff's villages. On the basis of the custom mentioned above the plaintiff claims title to those lands measuring about 2470 bighas. His suit has been decreed by both the Courts below. In appeal before us the question for decision is, whether he has succeeded in establishing a valid custom upon which his title to the lands in dispute could rest.

There was a previous litigation between these parties in which the present plaintiff founded his title to the lands in dispute on the same custom of dhardhura on which he relies in the present case. In the first two Courts he was unsuccessful. The finding of those Courts on the question of custom was against him. There was a second appeal in that case. A learned Judge of this Court came to the conclusion that the custom of dhardhura was established. The decisions of the two Courts below were reversed and the suit was remanded to the lower Appellate Court to be re-admitted under its original number and disposed of after taking any additional evidence that it might consider necessary, in accordance with the directions given in that judgment. After having recorded the finding that the custom of dhardhura was proved, as stated above, the learned Judge proceeded to determine the question whether that custom could apply to a permanent island situated between two streams of a river, but the materials on the record not being sufficient to enable him to give a finding on that question the whole suit was remanded as indicated above. On the question set forth in the judgment mentioned above, the Courts below gave a finding in favour of the defendants and adversely to the plaintiff. The result of that finding was that both these Courts dismissed the plaintiff's suit. A second appeal was again preferred by the plaintiff from the last mentioned decree of dismissal and the same learned Judge of this Court, who had heard the previous appeal, also heard the appeal on the second occasion. By the order dated the 13th September 1918, that appeal was dismissed. In agreement with the decisions of the lower Courts the learned Judge recorded the finding that the conclusion is irresistible that the sota was not fordable but regular though a minor stream formed an island between it and the present main stream of the river. It is difficult to conceive on what ground the title to the island was adjudged in favour of the defendants though the finding recorded was that the channels between the island and the shore on the side of the defendants' villages were not fordable. In such circumstances, the title to the island would seem to vest in the Crown (See clause 3 of section 4 of Regulation XI of 1825). Be that as it may, it is perfectly clear that the learned Judge held that the custom of dhardhura as proved in that case was not established to include within it a case in which the defendants' land had formed into a permanent island formed by two streams of the river neither of which was fordable. In fact he recorded his opinion as follows:—“It was held by this Court that there was a custom of dharadhura prevailing between the villages in question but it was inapplicable to a permanent island situated between two streams of a river none of which was fordable." In giving this finding he obviously took into consideration the peculiar characteristics with which the defendant's land had reappeared after the change in the course of the river. This is an element which has an important bearing on the question of custom which we will discuss hereafter.

BALBHADDAR PRASAD V. HAR NARAYAN DAS.

It is not disputed in arguments before us that the identity of the defendant's lands is not lost by the change in the course of the river, in spite of the fact that those lands now lie on the north side of the river instead of the south where they had formed part of the defendants' villages. Indeed, this fact is admitted in paragraph 2 of the plaint and that admission is still adhered to. Now, if there were nothing else to control the case, the title to the lands in suit would not vest in the plaintiff although the river had suddenly changed its course and the lands were cut off from the defendant's villages and were joined by the fluvial action to those of the plaintiff's. In the case of Jaggot Singh v. Brij Nath Kunwar (1). Lord Robertson in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council observed as follows:—"Now the mere fact that a change in a river's course has placed land belonging to A in contiguity to the lands of B could never deprive A of the lands and transfer them to B. And the proposition maintained by the appellant is by several steps nearer than this to paradox; for he contends that if, after temporary aberrations, a river at last leaves the land of A in status quo ante it must be held to be an accession to B, his next neighbour. It is superfluous to say that neither the Statute Law of India nor the general principles of Jurisprudence lend the slightest support to such unreasonable conclusions." We are, therefore, clearly of opinion that, on general principles of law, the plaintiff has no right to the lands in suit. We are also of opinion that not only the plaintiff has no such right but that the title to those lands still vests in the defendants as it admittedly was with them before the change in the course of the river. This would be so according to the law as indicated by Lord Justice James in the case of Felix Lopez v. Muddan Mohun Thakoor (2). In enunciating the rule of English law on the subject, his Lordship quoted from Hale de Jure Maris, p. 15:—"If a subject hath land adjoining the Sea, and the violence of the Sea swallow it up but so that yet there be reasonable marks to continue the notice of it; or though the marks be defaced yet if by situation and extent of quantity and bounding up on the firm land the same can be known or it be by art or industry re-gained, the subject doth not lose his property." "If the mark remain or continue or the extent can reasonably be certain the case is clear." With reference to these quotations Lord Justice James proceeded to make the following observations:—"This principle is one not merely of English Law, nor a principle peculiar to any system of Municipal Law, but it is a principle founded in universal law and justice; that is to say, that whoever has land, wherever it is, whatever may be, the accident to which it has been exposed, whether it be a vineyard which is covered by lava or ashes from a volcano or a field covered by the sea or by a river, the ground, the site, the property remains in the original owner."

The defendants' title to the lands in dispute is not only supported by the general principles of law to which we have already adverted but it is completely covered by the terms of clause 2 of section 4 of Regulation XI of 1825. This Regulation is directly applicable to the case before us for the reason that it was applied to Oudh by the Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876). Clause (1) of section 4 of that Regulation deals with a case where land is gained by gradual accession; but the case before us is admittedly not of gain by gradual accession but is one where the river has suddenly changed its course and the land which before the change lay on the southern bank of the river now lies on the northern bank of it. Clause (2) of that section is as follows:—"The above rule shall not be considered applicable to cases in which a river by a sudden change of its course may break through and intersect an estate without any gradual encroachment, or may by violence of stream separate a considerable piece of land from one estate and join it to another estate without destroying the identity and preventing the recognition of the land so removed. In such cases the land on being clearly recognised shall remain the property of its original owner." We have already pointed out that on the case of both parties the lands in dispute retained their identity as the lands of the defendants which were attached to their village Keora Kachar previous to the sudden change in the course of the deep stream of the river. But the plaintiff says, "I have proved a custom under the provisions of section 2 of the same Regulation which has the effect of making me the owner of what is admittedly the defendants' property." The question for consideration, therefore, is, "Has the plaintiff succeeded in proving such a custom?"

(1) 27 C. 768 at p. 772; 27 I. A. 81; 4 C. W. N. 555; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 699; 14 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 502 (P. C.).

(2) 13 M. I. A. 467 at p. 472; 14 W. R. P. C. 111; 5 B. L. R. 521; 2 Suth. F. C. J. 336; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 594; 20 E. R. 625.

BALBHADDAR PRASAD v. HAR NARAYAN DAS.

Before entering into a discussion of the evidence upon which the plaintiff relies in proof of the custom we think it desirable to say that he must establish a custom which should go to the whole length of abrogating the law under which the defendants' claim title to the lands in suit, and unless that is done, the general law must prevail. That law, as has just now been pointed out, is to be found in the terms of clause (2) of section 4 of Regulation XI of 1825. "Where a custom is proved to exist it supersedes the general law, which, however, still regulates all outside the custom." Ram Nundun Singh v. Janaki Koer (3). The essence of the custom which the plaintiff must establish by clear, definite and specific evidence lies in the element that the identity of the defendants' lands is not destroyed but that, on the other hand, they are clearly recognised as being the defendants' lands. If, therefore, the custom which the plaintiff has sought to prove in this case does not establish specifically that it relates to a case where by a sudden change of the course of the river land is separated from one estate and joined to another, though the change has neither destroyed the identity nor prevented the recognition of the lands so proved, he must fail. This, according to our judgment, is key-note of the position.

The evidence of the custom consists solely of a certain number of wajib-ul-araiz which will be discussed in detail later on. At present it is enough to say that none of these wajib-ul-araiz specifically deals with a case where a sudden change in the course of a river has happened and land is separated from one estate and joined to another thereby "without destroying the identity and preventing the recognition of the land so removed." This conclusion is strengthened by the view taken by the learned Judge of this Court who decided the previous suit between the parties. He held, as previously pointed out, that though the custom of dhardhura was established, yet it did not cover the case where the land had appeared in the form of an island between two streams of the river.

In the Province of the Punjab the custom of deep stream boundary is recognised in three separate forms which differ from one another on a cardinal feature of distinction. In the first form, title to lands which by change in the course of the stream, becomes transferred from one side of the stream to another, is also transferred, though the lands remain intact and are identifiable. In the second form, there is no transfer of ownership when the land transferred is identifiable. The third form makes the bed in the river as the permanent boundary, no matter what changes may take place in the deep stream the title to the soil remains the same. The plaintiff, therefore, having failed to prove that the transfer of title to the lands even when they are identifiable is within the custom his suit must be dismissed.

The finding in favour of the custom recorded by the lower Courts is mainly influenced by the decision of this Court, to which reference has repeatedly been made before. The evidence in support of the custom consists of the entries in the wajib-ul-araiz of several villages, some on the Unao side and others on the Cawnpore

(3) 29 G. 828 at p. 852; 29 L.A. 178; 7 C. W. N. 57; 178 P. R. 1962; 4 Bom. L. R. 664; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 351 (P. C.).

BALBHADDAR PRASAD v. HAR NARAYAN DAS.

side of the river. We now propose to consider these wajib-ul-araz severally. Exhibit 51 is the wajib-ul-arz of the village Mirzapur. Exhibit 52 is the wajib-ul-arz of the village Reotapur. Both these villages are owned by the plaintiff and are on the Unao side of the river. These two wajib-ul-araz have a material bearing on the case because they relate to villages to which the defendants' lands have become attached by the change in the course of the river. The entry relied on in Exhibit 51 is as follows:—

"As between our village and the opposite village Dharamput, District Cawnpore, there is an old boundary formed by the main stream of the river, and as up till now the main stream flows below our village, the land of the katri appertains to village Dharamput; but when the main stream shall flow below Dharamput we shall be entitled to the land of the katri." The entry in Exhibit 52 is word for word the same as in Exhibit 51. The following observations fall to be made in respect of these wajib-ul-araz.

(1) The entry in question is a statement made by the proprietors of the village to which the wajib-ul-arz relates and clearly indicates an assertion of a claim on the part of the village proprietors with regard to land appertaining to the village on the opposite bank when that land comes to be attached to their village by the change of the course of the main stream. (2) The entry does not expressly state any custom. It may well refer only to a statement of law as enunciated in clause (1) of section 4 of Regulation XI of 1825. (3) The entry does not purport to include a case where the transferred land retains its identity. Except Exhibits 51 and 52 there is no other wajib-ul-arz of a village on the Unao side of the river on the record. We have, however, some wajib-ul-arz relating to villages on the Cawnpore side. Exhibit 55 is the wajib-ul-arz of Keora Kachar. This is the defendants' village and the land in suit admittedly formed part of this village prior to the change in the course of the river in November 1915. Exhibit 56 is the wajib-ul-arz of Khushalganj. Exhibit 57 is the wajib-ul-arz of Jhura Nawabganj. Exhibit 58 is the wajib-ul-arz of Bithoor. Exhibit 59 is the wajib-ul-arz of Dharampur. All these villages are situated on the Cawnpore side of the river. Barring Exhibit 55 which relates to the defendants' village as indicated above, the other wajib-ul-arz would seem to be irrelevant to the question of custom which not only by its nature must be local but it must be so as to fall within section 2 read with section 3 of Regulation XI of 1825. They would seem to be more so in the absence of the wajib-ul-arz relating to the villages on the opposite bank of the river, that is, on the Unao side. We are, however, not disposed to reject them on the ground of irrelevancy but will proceed to consider their evidentiary value. The entry in Exhibit 55 is as follows:— "Paragraph 11, relating to the mode of settling the matter of alluvion or diluvion so far as it affects the co-sharers in relation to each other. The river Ganges passes by the extremity of this village and, therefore, when any land on this side of the river is added to the village or is washed away to the other side, the same is taken possession of by the Zemindar on whose side the land falls, i.e., the custom of dhardhura prevails." The entries in Exhibits 56, 57, 58 and 59 are substantially the same as the entry in Exhibit 55. These entries lend themselves to the following criticism:—(1) That though the usage of dhardhura is expressly mentioned in these wajib-ul-araz, yet the condition of things to which it is applicable is stated in words which may merely connote the acquisition of land by gradual accession, and if that is true, the entry would amount to nothing more than a mere recital of the general law. (2) In our judgment, it is the duty of the plaintiff to show that the entry on which he relies is explicitly applicable to a case where land is transferred from one side of the river to the other by a sudden change of the course of the river and not otherwise. It would be wholly against all principles to uphold a custom by means of possible inferences or even by probable implications.

We are not satisfied that dhardhura is a term of art, signifying necessarily always, and under all conditions, that the deep stream constitutes a permanent boundary between two estates on the opposite banks of a river. Indeed, there are reported cases indicating possible variations in the sense of the word dhardhura. In the case of Naseer-ood-deen Ahmed v. Oomedee (4), Justices Ross and Turner made the following observations:—

BAIBHADDAR PRASAD v. HAR NARAYAN DAS.

"It may well be that dhardhura regulates only the rights to land, which may be strictly termed alluvial land, not to land, which is disjoined by a sudden change in the channel of the river, but still preserves its identity; on the other hand, it may be, that the custom will apply to land, which has been so cut off and separated, that, were it not for the operation of the custom, it would remain the property of the original proprietor in accordance with the provisions of the section of Regulation, on which the plaintiffs rely." The decision in the case of Ranee Katiyane v. Sheikh Mahomed Shurf-ood-deen (5) goes to the full length of the opinion which we have taken in the present case. The learned Judges in that case made the following observations:—

"So far as has been shown in the course of the argument, there is no well-established definition of the extent of the custom of dhardhura. It is contended on behalf of the special appellant that the custom extends only to land which may in the strictest sense be termed alluvial land, that is to say, land which is with more or less continuity subject to fluvial action, being in one year submerged, and in another year thrown up or left by the recess of the flood on the one or the other side of the river. It is on behalf of the special appellant denied that the custom operates when by a sudden change in the course of the stream a large tract of land is severed without undergoing any change of site or surface. . . . The lower Appellate Court has assumed that all disputes among riparian proprietors are to be determined by the custom of dhardhura where it is proved to obtain, without considering whether the custom is so extensive as to operate under the circumstances which are alleged by the defendants to exist in this case." In the case of Isree Singh v. Mirza Shurf-ood-deen (6) the point for determination was, whether the custom above-mentioned (dhardhura) regulated only the rights to land strictly alluvial, or was so applicable to land disjoined by a sudden change in the channel of the river, but still preserving its identity. In the case of Sibt Ali v. Munir-ud-din (7) the question was in regard to a custom of dhardhura which would have the effect of passing from one owner to another lands long held and enjoyed and of which the character is in no way altered. The learned Judges in the course of their decision remarked as follows:—

"The question, therefore, in this suit cannot be decided on any general assumption that a custom of dhardhura cannot apply to the lands in suit, but it is necessary that the precise nature and extent of the custom as prevailing in the neighbourhood should be determined on evidence. . . . We remand the case in order that the Judge may try and determine the issue, whether the custom of dhardhura applies to lands gained by gradual accretion only, or to lands which have been separated from a mauza by a sudden change of the stream."

We have already commented that there is no evidence of the custom in question apart from the wajib-ul-araz to which reference has been made before. It is not shown that the custom of dhardhura has ever been acted upon by the owners of the villages on the Cawnpore side or the Unao side under any conditions, much less in the circumstances which form the special characteristics of the lands in suit in this case.

In the form in which the question of custom arises for decision in the present case there is no doubt that it is a question of mixed law and fact as was in the case of Palaniappa Chetty v. Sreemath Deivasikamony Pandara Sannadhi (8). We are, therefore, quite competent to judge as to whether the evidence relied upon in this case in support of the custom establishes all the essentials of a valid custom.

(7) 6 A. 479; A. W. N. (1884) 185; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 101.

(8) 39 Ind. Cas. 722; 40 M. 709; 21 C. W. N. 729; 15 A. L. J. 485; 1 P. L. W. 697; 33 M. L. J. 1; 19 Bom. L. R. 567; 22 M. L. T. 1; (1917) M. W. N. 507; 26 C. L. J. 153; 6 L. W. 222; 44 L. A. 147 (P. C.).

(4) 3 Agra H. C. R. 1.

(5) 3 Agra H. C. R. 189.

(6) 1 N. W. P. H. C. R. 224;

KUPPU REDDI V. MANDALUKA.

As we have pointed out above, the whole fabric of the plaintiff's case rests upon the wajib-ul-araz already commented upon but the weight of a wajib-ul-arz may be very slight or may be considerable according to circumstances [per Lord Hobhouse in the case of Muhammad Imam v. Ali Khan v. Husain Khan (9)]. In the present case the evidence afforded by the wajib-ul-araz is not to our mind clear, definite, precise and certain and if these essentials are lacking, we are constrained to hold against the custom which it was the duty of the plaintiff to establish in this case.

We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the decisions of the Courts below and dismiss the plaintiff's suit with costs throughout.

N. H. Appeal allowed.

(9) 26 C. 81; 25 I. A. 161; 2 C. W. N. 737; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 432; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 656.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2098 OF 1920.

December 15, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and

Mr. Justice Ramesam.

KUPPU REDDI NOOKAYYA (DEAD) AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

MANDALUKA BHEEMANNA AND AN-OTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), s. 3 (2), (5), (11), (15)—Madras Regulation XXV of 1802, ch. 4—Grant by zemindar free of kattubadi prior to 1802—Pre-settlement inam or "estate"—Assignment of inamdar's interest in holding for term of years for money consideration with proviso for surrender—Mortgage or lease—Thirumanam, mean-
of.

A sarva dumbala inam free of kattubadi granted by a landlord prior to his lands being constituted a zemindari by a sannad issued under Regulation XXV of 1802 is not an "estate" within the meaning of section 3 (2) of the Madras Estates Land Act, even though the accounts on which the peishkush on the part of the zemindar was fixed were those taken by a Circuit Committee prior to the grant of the said inam, [p. 735, col. 2; p. 736, col. 1; p. 737, cols. 1 & 2.]

Sri Raja Rao Venkata Surya Mahipati Rama Krishna Rao Bahadur v. Court of Wards, 22 M. 383; 1 Bom. L. R. 277; 3 C. W. N. 415; 26 I. A. 83; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 481; 9 M. L. J. Sup. 1; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 276 (P. C.), Brahmayya v. Achiraju, 70 Ind. Cas. 615; 45 M. 716; (1922) M. W. N. 280; 31 M. L. T. 91; 43 M. L. J. 229; (1922) A. I. R. (M) 373, Suryanarayana v. Palanna, 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 41 M. 1012; 25 M. L. T. 30; 23 C. W. N. 273; 9 L. W. 126; 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 11; 36 M. L. J. 585; 21 Bom. L. R. 547; (1919) M. W. N. 463; 45 I. A. 209 (P. C.), Secretary of State v. Rajah of Venkatagiri, 73 Ind. Cas. 741 Infra; 44 M. 864; 41 M. L. J. 624; (1922) M. W. N. 1; 30 M. L. T. 164; 26 C. W. N. 809; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 168 (P. C.), Venkatarangayya Appa Row v. Poranki Appalarazu, 8 Ind. Cas. 546; 20 M. L. J. 728 at p. 734; 8 M. L. J. 429, Sri Rajah Sobhanadri Appa Rao Bahadur v. Sri Rajah Venkatanarasimha Appa Rao Bahadur, 26 M. 403 at pp. 404, 409; Venkata Narasimha Appa Rao Bahadur v. Sobhanadri Appa Rao Bahadur, 29 M. 52; 8 Bom. L. R. 1; 10 C. W. N. 161; 3 A. L. J. 55; 3 C. L. J. 1; 1 M. L. T. 3; 16 M. L. J. 1; 33 I. A. 46; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 897 (P. C.), Rajah Nilmoney Singh v. The Government, 6 W. R. 121, Nilmoni Singh v. Bahranath Singh, 9 I. A. 104 at p. 121; 9 C. 187; 5 Shome L. R. 68; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 335; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 777 (P. C.) and Secretary of State for India v. Kiribbas Bhupati Harichandan Mahapatra, 26 Ind. Cas. 676; 42 C. 710 at p. 727; 19 C. W. N. 65; 2 L. W. 11; 17 M. L. T. 1; 21 C. L. J. 31; 17 Bom. L. R. 32; 28 M. L. J. 457; 42 I. A. 20 (P. C.), considered.

Both the Madras Regulation XXV of 1802 and the sannads issued under it speak from their dates so that all grants of inam made by zemindars prior to 1802 are prima facie excluded from the Permanent Settlement. [p. 737, col. 2.]

Where in the case of an inam granted by a zemindar prior to 1802 the inamdar assigned his interest in his holding to a third person under a document styled "thirumanam" by which the latter was placed in possession of the holding for a term of years in consideration of certain money payments and was to pay all dues other than extra taxes levied thereafter and was bound at the end of the term to surrender without any separate relinquishment;

Held, (1) that notwithstanding the absence of any provision for payment of a periodical rent, the document was not a mortgage but a lease, [p. 735, cols. 1 & 2.]

Basanti Lal v. Tapeshri Rai, 3 A. 1; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 956, Bengal Indigo Company v. Roghobur Das, 24 C. 272; 1 C. W. N. 83; 23 I. A. 158; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 94; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 848 (P. C.) and Nidha Sah v. Murli Dhar, 25 A. 115; 30 I. A. 54; 5 Bom. L. R. 111; 7 C. W. N. 289; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 435 (P. C.), relied on.

(2) that the lessee was not a raiya holding an "estate" within the meaning of section 3 (2) (15) of the Madras Estates Land Act and had, no occupancy rights in the land. [p. 735, col. 2.]

Chidambara Sivaprakasam Pandara Sannadhigal v. Veerama Reddi, 68 Ind. Cas. 538; 45 M. 586; 16 L. W. 102; 31 M. L. T. 54; (1922) M. W. N. 749; 43 M. L. J. 640; (1922) A. I. R. (F. C.) 292; 37 C. L. J. 199; 27 C. W. N. 245 (P. C.), distinguished,

KUPPU REDDI v. MANDALUKA.

Per Oldfield, J.—The word "payable" in section 3 (11) of the Madras Estates Land Act means "payable according to the terms of the contract between the parties to it," and section 3 (11) and (15) of the Act are applicable whatever the stage or the stages at which those terms, so far as they relate to payment for the use of the land, have to be or have been fulfilled. [p. 735, col. 2.]

Although etymologically a thirumanam document is one executed in discharge, the term thirumanam has acquired a wider meaning as importing merely a settlement. [p. 734, col. 2.]

Second appeal against a decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Cocanada, in Appeal Suit No. 29 of 1919, preferred against a decree of the Court of the Principal District Munsif, Cocanada, in Original Suit No. 496 of 1917.

Messrs. A. Krishnasami Aiyar and N. Rama Rao, for the Appellants.

Messrs. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar and P. Satyanarayana Rao, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Oldfield, J.—The respondent plaintiff an inamdar, holds from second defendant, a zaminidar, under the sannad, Exhibit A, and has assigned an interest in his holding, to first defendant the appellant under Exhibit V. In 1912 the Revenue Officer engaged in the preparation of a Record of Rights for second defendant's estate under Chapter XI, the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), entered first defendant as occupancy raiyat in respect of the holding instead of plaintiff. The question is whether he did so correctly. The answer to this question depends on (1) whether Exhibit V is a mortgage with possession or a lease, (2) whether in the latter alternative first defendant is a raiyat, as the term is defined in section 3, clause (15), Estates Land Act, and (3) whether the inam is pre-settlement and, therefore, an estate and plaintiff a landholder under section 3, clauses (2) and (5).

Exhibit V dated 20th January 1913 is described as a thirumanam document and provides that in accordance with a prior agreement, Exhibit H, the property, which had been placed in first defendant's possession in 1910-11, should remain in it until the end of the year 1917-18 in consideration of a cash payment of Rs. 160 at the date of Exhibit H and other subsequent payments on plaintiff's behalf, in all, Rs. 1,280, that first defendant should pay all dues other than extra taxes, which might be levied hereafter, and should at the end of the term surrender without any separate relinquishment. These, the essential provisions of Exhibit V, are prima facie in accordance with the definition of a lease in section 105 of the Transfer of Property Act; the payment referred to being the price paid or premium. Plaintiff, however, argues that those payments must not be so regarded because they were advances, for which either the property, the possession of which was transferred or the right to that possession was the security and that is alleged with reference to the description of the document and the suggestion that advances prior to its execution were in question.

This argument is unsustainable. For, although etymologically a thirumanam document may mean one executed in discharge, the term thirumanam, as my learned brother with his extensive knowledge of the Telugu District agrees, has acquired a wider meaning, as importing merely a settlement, and, it may be observed, although no details are in evidence, that, as Exhibit H shows, the previous enjoyment of the property was under a document similarly described. There is no evidence of any advances prior to those enumerated in Exhibit V, and it was never alleged in the lower Courts that there were any. Those in Exhibit V, and the cash payment of Rs. 160 were made after and when the agreement, Exhibit H, was executed and the former after possession had been given; and they cannot be regarded as prior debts, which the transfer was intended to secure. There is no power of sale and no provision for accounting. Transfers such as this, for a premium without a periodical rent, are no doubt unusual in this Presidency. But under the description of zarpeshgi transactions, they appear to be well-known in North India and are probably what the portions of the Transfer of Property Act definition relating to price paid and to premium, were meant to apply to. That the distinction between transaction of that kind which are leases and those which are mortgages will be difficult, is illustrated by the statement in Macpherson's Law of Mortgages, 5th Edition, p 8, adopted in the judgment in Basant Lal v. Tapeshri Rai (1) that the mortgage character is established, only when there is a power of redemption reserved to the lessor either expressly or impliedly, so that it distinctly appears that the parties themselves intended the transaction to be of the nature of a mortgage. Plaintiff relies on the fact that, although no such power was reserved in the documents in Bengal Indigo Company v. Roghobur Das (2) the transfers there were regarded by the Privy Council as being "not mere contracts for the cultivation of the land let; but intended also to constitute, and as having constituted a real and valid security to the tenant for the principal sums which he had advanced and the interest thereon. The tenants' possession under those transfers was, in part at least, not that of cultivators only, but that of creditors operating re-payment of the debt due to them by means of their security." But the documents there construed contained what Exhibit V here does not, stipulations for interest on the principal sums paid by the transferees, consistently with those sums being loans there was the judgment, of the High Court shows, "provision about the satisfaction of the money-debt," and in fact, whatever the exact intention, with which these references to security were made, the conclusion against the transferees was not based on the mortgage character of their transfers, but on one section of the Bengal Tenancy Act independently of it. In a later case, Nidha Sah v. Murlidhar (3) in which, although the document was described as a mortgage and was given for prior advances its provisions resembled those of Exhibit V more closely, the Privy Council held that there was no mortgage, but "simply a grant of land for a fixed term free of rent in consideration of a sum made up of past and present advances." In accordance with this decision and with section 105 of the Transfer of Property Act the application of which there is here nothing to conclude, the finding must be that Exhibit V is a lease.

KUPPU REDDI v. MANDALUKA.

The question is next whether first defendant is a raiyat, within the meaning of section 3 (15), Estates Land Act, and as the contention that he holds as mortgagee, not for the purpose of agriculture, has been disallowed, we have to decide first whether the payments in consideration of which Exhibit V was given, were "rent" within the meaning of section 3 (11). The objection taken to their being so is that these provisions refer to the rent as "payable" and to raiyat as holding "on condition of paying" the implication being, it is alleged, that the only payments contemplated are those to be made in future after the beginning of and in the course of the relation between raiyat and landholder. No authority has been adduced in support of this construction and it is neither reasonable nor convenient. For it entails; even in the ordinary cases in which rent is payable periodically, that, if it has been paid on the due date, nothing more being payable for the remainder of the year, the relation of raiyat and landholder will be suspended until more rent falls due. The preferable construction and that by which such anomaly can be avoided, is that "payable" means payable according to the terms of the contract between the parties to it, and that section 3, clauses (11) and (15), are applicable, whatever the stage or stages at which those terms, so far as they relate to payment for the use of the land, have to be or have been fulfilled.

The remaining matter in dispute in connection with the application of section 3 (15) is whether plaintiff's inam is an estate within the meaning of section 3 (2) and plaintiff is a landholder under section 3 (5) of the Estates Land Act. This, it is not disputed in this Court, depends on whether the inam was created before or after the Permanent Settlement in 1802.

The grant, as Exhibits A and B show, was in 1800, and as I agree with my learned brother's treatment of this part of the case, I need say only that no other year is suggested as that, in which the grant was really made, and that, in the absence of any such special consideration as those arising from the terms of the grant or zemindar's sannad.

(1) 3 A. I. 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 956.

(2) 24 C. 272; 1 C. W. N. 83; 23 I. A. 153; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 94; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 848 (P. C.).

(3) 25 A. 115; 30 I. A. 51; 5 B. M. L. R. 111; 7 C. W. N. 289; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 435 (P. C.).

KUPPU REDDI V. MANDALUKA.

in Secretary of State v. Rajah of Venkata-giri (4), there is no reason for refusing effect to section 4, Regulation XXV of 1802, and in view of its unqualified terms no relevancy in the enquiry whether the inam was in fact included in the assets of the zemindari, on which the peshkush was fixed with regard to the Circuit Committee's accounts prepared before 1786.

As the inam is not an estate and first defendant is, therefore, not a raiyat, the second appeal fails and is dismissed with costs on that ground.

Ramesam, J.—The respondent-plaintiff, an inamdar within the ambit of the Pittapur estate, sues for declaration that the first defendant is not an occupancy tenant of his inam. The zemindari of Pittapur was constituted a zemindari by a sannad issued in 1802 under the Regulation XXV of 1802 see Sri Raja Rao Venkata Surya Mahipati Rama Krishna Rao Bahadur v. Court of Wards (5). The grant of the suit inam to the plaintiff's ancestors was made by the then zemindar of Pittapur under a sannad (Exhibit A) and a chekunama (Exhibit B) dated the 22nd June 1800. It was made free of kattubadi and, therefore, purported to be sarva dumbala or absolute.

The first question that arises for decision is whether the Estates Land Act applies to the inam. If the inam is a part of the Pittapur estate, the Act applies to the inam, Brahmayya v. Achiraju (6), apart from the question whether the first defendant is a raiyat. The Courts below are of the opinion that the land was part of the Pittapur estate and on the question whether the first defendant is a raiyat they differed.

On the facts found, I am of opinion that the land is not a part of the Pittapur estate, but a pre-settlement inam excluded from the assets of that zemindari. The question turns upon section 4 of Regulation XXV of 1802. That section excludes from the scope of the Permanent Settlement lakhiraj land (or lands exempt from the payment of public revenue) and all other lands paying only favourable quit rents. In respect of these, the Government reserved to itself the entire exercise of discretion in continuing or abolishing them. Mr. A. Krishnaswami Aiyar, who appeared for the appellant, conceded that what was meant by the words in section 4 above quoted is lands in respect of which the zemindars purported to make grants either absolute or subject to a small kattubadi, though later on, he addressed arguments somewhat inconsistent with this concession and contended that where a grant, though purporting to be absolute, was not binding on the Government, the land was not excluded from the assets of the zemindar.

If a grant, whether absolute or subject to a small kattubadi, was made under circumstances binding on the Government, there was an end of the matter and there was no meaning in the Government reserving to itself the entire exercise of discretion in continuing or abolishing it. It was because almost all such grants were not binding on Government that they reserved to themselves the exercise of discretion in continuing or abolishing them. This is clear from the preamble to Regulation XXXI of 1802 which was relied on by the appellant but which, on close examination, is really against him. The preamble to Regulation shows that it was meant to deal with lands "alienated by the unauthorised encroachments or the present possessors by the clandestine collusion of local officers, or by other fraudulent means." The preamble then proceeds to say "whereas the Permanent Settlement of land tax has been made exclusive of alienated lands of every description." There can be no better statement of the objects and reasons of the Regulation XXV than this, by the Legislature which enacted both the Regulations in the same year. Remembering that lands granted on the condition of paying rent or heavy kattubadi cannot be regarded as alienated at all, it is clear that all alienated lands were intended to be excluded from

(4) 73 Ind. Cas. 741 Infra; 44 M. 864; 41 M. L. J. 624; (1922) M. W. N. 11 30 M. L. T. 164; 26 C. W. N. 809; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 168 (P. C.)

(5) 22 M. 383; 1 Bom. L. R. 277; 3 C. W. N. 415; 26 I. A. 83; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 481; 9 M. L. J. Sup. 11 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 276 (P. C.)

(6) 70 Ind. Cas. 615; 45 M. 716; (1922) M. W. N. 280; 31 M. L. T. 91; 43 M. L. J. 229. (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 373.

KUPPU REDDI v. MANDALUKA.

the scope of the Settlement. Such lands would consist of (1) lands granted on condition of rendering public service hereditary village service inams; (2) saravadumbala inams (3) inams granted on favourable quit rent.

The first class was dealt with by Regulations XXIX of 1802 and VI of 1831 and now by Madras Acts II of 1894 and III of 1895. A portion of the second class was recognised by Regulations XXXI of 1802, i.e., those granted prior to 1768; but their enfranchisement was effected in the Inam Settlement of 1860. The rest of the lands in the second class as well as those in the third class were both recognised and enfranchised in the Inam Settlement of 1860. It is because these were all excluded from the scope of the Settlement that harnams were required to keep lists of them with the purposes for which they were granted, vide section II of Regulation XXIX of 1802 the second clause of it dealing with the first class above mentioned, the third clause dealing with the second class above mentioned and the eighth and tenth clauses dealing with the third class above mentioned among others. The decision in Suryanarayana v. Palanna (7), did not lay down that only inams prior to 1768 could be recognised as inams and that all inams granted after 1768 though before 1802 should be regarded as included in the assets of a zemindari. The Judicial Committee referred to Regulation XXXI of 1802 merely for the purpose of narrating the fact which finally led to the preparation of Oakes' Register in which the subject of the grant was described and their Lordships held that grant of the village meant grant of the soil in addition to the revenue. This is also clear from Secretary of State v. Raja of Venkatagiri (4) where their Lordships described Regulation XXXI of 1802 as one referring entirely to procedure. The main argument of the appellant that, as the accounts, on which the peishcush was fixed were those of the Circuit Committee appointed in 1784, all grants after that date were intended not to be recognised shows the fallacy of the argument based on the Regulation XXXI of 1802, for if the latter argument is correct what becomes of lands granted between 1768 and 1784?

As to the use of the Circuit Committee accounts, they were the accounts nearest in date, available to the State for the purpose of Settlement. If the lands alienated, when the accounts of the Circuit Committee were prepared, were intended to be excluded from the Settlement, the Regulation would have expressly provided for it. Both the Regulation and the sinnads issued under it, as they stand, speak from their dates (1802) and all grants prior to 1802 were prima facie excluded from the Permanent Settlement.

Some reference was made by the appellant to Venkatarangayya Appa Row v. Poranki Appalarazu (8). That case related to an inam granted on condition of rendering private service to the Nuzvid zemindar. The lands in the Nuzvid zemindari held on condition of rendering private service to the zemindar were all dealt with by Mr. Teylor at the Inam Commission and held to be included in the assets of the zemindari. See Sri Rajah Sobhanadri Appa Rao Bahadur v. Sri Rajah Venkatanarasimha Appa Rao Bahadur (9). It is true that the statement that they were resumable was not acted upon by the Courts Sri Rajah Sobhanadri Appa Rao v. Sri Rajah Venkatanarasimha Appa Rao Bahadur (9) affirmed by Venkata Narasimha Appa Rao Bahadur v. Sobhanadri Appa Rao Bahadur (10) but, whether resumable or irresumable that they were included in the assets of the zemindari follows from dictum of Sir Barnes Peacock in Rajah Nilmoney Singh v. The Government (11) approved in Nilamoni Singh v. Bakranath Singh (12). It is on these principles that the decision in Venkata-

(7) 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 41 M. L. J. 1012; 25 M. L. T. 30; 23 C. W. N. 273; 9 L. W. 126; 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 11; 36 M. L. J. 585; 21 Bom. L. R. 547; (1919) M. W. N. 463; 45 I. A. 209 (P. C.).

(8) 8 Ind. Cas. 546; 20 M. L. J. 728 at p. 734; 8 M. L. T. 429.

(9) 26 M. 403 at pp. 404, 409.

(10) 29 M. 52; 8 Bom. L. R. 1; 10 C. W. N. 116; 13 A. L. J. 55; 3 C. L. J. 1; 1 M. L. T. 3; 16 M. L. J. 1; 33 I. A. 46; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 897 (P. C.).

(11) 6 W. R. 121.

(12) 9 I. A. 104 at p. 121; 9 C. 187; 5 Shome L. R. 68; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 335; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 777 (P. C.).

ISHAR V. HUKAM SINGH.

rangayya Appa Row v. Poranki Appalarazu (8) rests. Obviously, the land was not lakhraj. I am not able to agree with the other reason given in it for holding that the land was not lakhraj. The case in Secretary of State for India v. Kirtibas Bhupati Harichandan Mahapatra (13) merely lays down a presumption regarding land within the ambit of zemindari and does not help the appellant where the facts are definitely known and rebut the presumption.

If the land was excluded from the assets of the zemindari, it cannot fall under section 3 (2) (d) as it is a not whole village. It cannot be contended that, apart from the Estates Land Act, the defendant has any occupancy rights. Starting with the position that there is no presumption in favour of the inamdar [Chidambara Sivaprakasa Pandara Sannadhigal v. Veerama Reddi (14) or against him Suryanarayana v. Patanna (7)] it is impossible that the defendant in this case who was let into the land under Exhibit V on condition that he would give up the land at the end of the term [See Suryanarayana v. Patanna (7)] can have the occupancy rights whatever the original grant might be. When the last tenant surrendered the land in 1908, the land came to the possession of the plaintiff who had both *param*s at his disposal and then, the defendant entered on condition of giving up the land at the end of nine years which is a very important condition in all cases not governed by the Estates Land Act [Suryanarayana v. Patanna (7)] and Upadrashta Venkata Sasstrulu v. Divi Seetharamudu (15). The case in Chidambara Sivaprakasa Pandarsannadhigal v. Veerama Reddi (14) was a case where the tenants have been holding the land continuously for over 75 years at unvarying rents; were mortgaging and selling their holdings, and partitioning them among themselves and where there were no muchilikas by tenants stipulating that the land should be surrendered at the end of a particular term, the only muchilikas purporting to contain such terms being found to be forgeries and the tenants obtained compensation from Government when the holdings were acquired.

I, therefore, hold that the plaintiff is entitled to the declaration prayed for. In this view it is unnecessary to discuss the other questions arising in the case.

But I may add that I agree with my learned brother's construction of Exhibit V. In my opinion, Exhibit V evidences a loan and a lease. In the sense that a simple method of recovering the loan was also provided by it. It may be said that Exhibit V also furnishes some security to the creditor (lessee). But there is no security either in the sense that Exhibit V amounts to a simple mortgage on which a suit for sale can be maintained or in the sense that Exhibit V amounts to a usufructuary mortgage. Any how, there was certainly a lease. Probably their Lordships were using the word "security" in this sense in Bengal Indigo Company v. Raghubar Das (2) the decision in which ultimately turned on a special definition of raiyyat in Bengal Tenancy Act.

I agree that the second appeal should be dismissed with cost.

V. N. V.
N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1495 OF 1922.
January 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

ISHAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS
VERSUS

HUKAM SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Custom — Adoption — Descendants of adopted son, succession to natural family.

Under the Customary Law the descendants of an adopted son who has succeeded to the property of his adoptive father, retain their rights (13) 26 Ind. Cas. 676; 42 C. 710 at p. 727; 19 C. W. N. 65; 2 L. W. 11; 17 M. L. T. 1; 21 C. L. J. 31; 17 Bom. L. R. 32; 28 M. L. J. 457; 42 I. A. 20 (P. C.).

(14) 68 Ind. Cas. 538; 45 M. 586; 16 L. W. 102; 31 M. L. T. 54; (1922) M. W. N. 749; 43 M. L. J. 640; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 292; 37 C. L. J. 199; 27 C. W. N. 245 (P. C.).

(15) 51 Ind. Cas. 304; 43 M. 166; 17 A. L. J. 725; 37 M. L. J. 42; 21 Bom. L. R. 25; 26 M. L. T. 175; 30 C. L. J. 441; 10 L. W. 633; 4 C. W. N. 129; 46 I. A. 123 (P. C.).

ISHAR V. HUKAM SINGH.

of succession in the natural family of the adoptee in the presence of and along with the other descendants of that family. [p. 740, col. 2]

Mehra v. Mangal Singh, 27 Ind. Cas. 393; 99 P. R. 1914; 71 P. L. R. 1915; 8 P. W. R. 1915, Mela Singh v. Gurdas, 68 Ind. Cas. 858; 3 L. 362; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 433 (F. B.), Tulsi v. Ram Rakha, 66 P. R. 1908; 110 P. W. R. 1908, referred to.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 22nd March 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Hoshiarpur, dated the 11th November 1921.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this case are Hindu Jats of the village Pandori Sohian in the Hoshiarpur Tahsil, and the following pedigree table clearly indicates the dispute which has culminated in this appeal:—

Harnam Singh, son of Ghandela, a childless male proprietor, died some years ago leaving him surviving a widow Musammal Santi who has now admittedly re-married. On Musammal Santi's re-marriage the property of Harnam Singh was mutated in the names of all the descendants of Dhuman and Bhaga. It appears that Ram Dial, the natural son of Bhaga, was adopted by his uncle, Dhuman, whom he succeeded, and the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are his grandsons. The plaintiffs, who are the descendants of Bhaga, the brother of Dhuman, claim to be entitled to the property on the ground that, as Ram Dial was adopted by Dhuman and succeeded to the latter's property, his descendants have no right to any property which originally descended from his natural father. The defendants denied the falcum and the validity of Ram Dial's adoption, and further contended that, even if the adoption did take place, it was the usual customary appointment of an heir, and as it did not result in completely transferring the appointee from his branch of the family to that of his adoptive father the defendants were entitled to succeed to the property of Harnam Singh along with the plaintiffs. Both the Courts have concurred in holding that Ram Dial was validly adopted by Dhuman, and this being a finding of fact the learned Vakil for the appellants has rightly refrained from challenging this finding in his grounds of appeal to this Court. On the second question, however, the Courts have differed, and the plaintiff's suit having been decreed by the lower Appellate Court, the defendants have now come up in second appeal through Mr. Fakir Chand.

The sole question for determination involved in this appeal is, whether the descendants of an adopted son who has succeeded to the property of his adoptive father can succeed in their grandfather's natural family in the presence of the descendants of the latter's natural family.

No direct authority, exactly on all fours with the present case, has been cited before me by the learned Vakil for the appellants, and it is to be regretted that the other side has not thought fit to put in an appearance though served. The Full Bench ruling reported as Mela Singh v. Gurdas (1) does not deal with this matter and is on an entirely different point. The two authorities relied on by the learned Vakil for the appellants, namely, Jhanda Singh v. Kesar Singh (2) and Dasaundhi v. Chanda Singh (3), are also not in point and have no bearing on the question which is now in issue between the parties. It is clear that the question is not free from difficulty and, in the absence of a direct authority on the point, must be decided in accordance with the general principles of the Customary Law.

(1) 68 Ind. Cas. 858; 3 L. 362; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 433 (F. B.).

ISHAR V. HUKAM SINGH.

In Mehra v. Mangal Singh (4), it was held that property which comes to an appointed heir as such is not ancestral qua the latter's son. It was further held in this case that the customary appointment of an heir was quite different from a ceremonial adoption under the Hindu Law and that such an appointment does not involve the transplanting of a person from one family to another. In the Full Bench ruling, to which reference has already been made, it was observed by the learned Chief Justice, that (1) the customary appointment of an heir in the Punjab is a purely personal relationship resembling the kritrima adoption of the Hindu Law, (2) that it affects the parties thereto only, (3) that the appointed heir does not become the grandson of the appointer's father, and (4) that his son does not become the grandson of the appointer.

In Tulsi v. Ram Rakha (5) it was laid down that in a case of customary appointment of an heir the appointment is personal to him and does not operate to make all his relatives, or even his existing sons, members of the agnatic family of the adopter. Some of the authorities have gone even so far as to say that the appointment of an heir is tantamount to a gift which comes into operation on the death of the appointer and that the property received by the appointee should be regarded in the nature of a bequest. If the appointment of an heir resembles in its incidents with the kritrima form of adoption under the Hindu Law then it is clear that the appointed son does not lose his rights of inheritance in his natural father's family. In Trevelyan's Hindu Law it is stated that a kritrima adoption does not transfer the subject of it from his natural family. It gives him in addition to his rights in that family rights of inheritance to the person actually adopting him and to no one else. His sons acquire no rights of inheritance to his adoptive father. Again, in Mayne's Hindu Law, 8th Edition, page 268, there is the following passage:—"As regards succession the kritrima son loses no rights of inheritance in his natural family. He becomes the son of two fathers to this extent that he takes inheritance of his adoptive father but not that of that father's father or other collateral relations."

These authorities clearly lead to an inference that the relationship created between Ram Dial and Dhuman was a purely personal one and that it did not extend beyond the contracting parties on either side. To use the words of the learned Chief Justice in Mela Singh v. Gurdas (1), the tie of kinship with the natural family was not dissolved and the fiction of blood relationship with the members of the new family had no application to the appointed heir. If this is so, Ram Dial's relationship with his natural family was not entirely cut off, and it is obvious that his descendants cannot be excluded from inheritance in his natural father's family. I am not unmindful of the fact, that this conclusion leads to an apparent injustice inasmuch as the appointee and his descendants will be entitled to a double inheritance. But if the appointment of an heir is tantamount to a bequest, and the appointee is merely a legatee of the property, it is clear that the other members of his natural father's family cannot possibly have any cause for grievance. No special custom has been alleged, much less proved, in this case that in the presence of the descendants of an appointee's natural father the descendants of the appointee are excluded from inheritance in his natural father's family simply because he has succeeded to the property of his adoptive father.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the plaintiffs have failed to establish their claim and that they are not entitled to a decree. The result is that the appeal is accepted and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs throughout.

Z. F.

Appeal accepted.

(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 712; 37 P. R. 1910; 62 P. W. R. 1910; 50 P. L. R. 1910.

(3) 13 Ind. Cas. 421; 45 P. R. 1912; 85 P. W. R. 1912; 71 P. L. R. 1912.

(4) 27 Ind. Cas. 393; 99 P. R. 1914; 71 P. L. R. 1915; 8 P. W. R. 1915.

(5) 66 P. R. 1908; 110 P. W. R. 1908.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

Appeal FROM THE MADRAS HIGH COURT.

July 15, 1921.

Present.—Viscount Cave, Lord Shaw and Mr. Ameer Ali.SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.—APPELLANT*versus*

RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI—

RESPONDENT.

Madras Permanent Settlement Regulation (XXV of 1802), ss. 3, 4—Permanently settled zemindaris—Venkatagiri zemindari—Resumption of inam or lakhiraj lands—Government, powers of.

The reversion in respect of inams or lakhiraj lands situated within the zemindari of Venkatagiri belongs to the zemindar and the Government is not entitled to resume or assess them to public revenue. [p. 744, col. 1.]

Under the sanad granted to the Venkatagiri zemindari in 1802, when it first came under the East India Company, the Government fixed a definite specific assessment on the whole zemindari irrespective of the particular assesses derived from each particular unit of property within the estate and the zemindar, on his side, accepted that arrangement on that special understanding. [p. 746, col. 1.]

In view of section 3 of Regulation XXV of 1802, section 4 of that Regulation has no application to cases of permanently settled zemindaris such as the Venkatagiri zemindari. [p. 746, col. 2.]

Consolidated Appeals from a judgment and four decrees of the High Court (Sir John Wallis, C. J., and Mr. Justice Phillips) in Appeal Suit No. 62 of 1913, dated March 29, 1915 and published as 35 Ind. Cas., 662, affirming four decrees of the District Court of Nellore, in Original Suit 10 of 1910.

JUDGMENT.

Mr. Ameer Ali.—The facts of this litigation take their origin in the early establishment of British Rule in the Madras Presidency. The Rajah of Venkatagiri holds a zemindari of considerable extent in the modern District of Nellore. His ancestors were admittedly in possession of the estate since the Muhammadan times, subject first to the Emperors of Delhi and afterwards on the disruption of the Moghul Empire, to his representatives in the Carnatic, usually styled the Nawabs of Arcot. Besides the payment of a fixed revenue or peshcush, they were bound to maintain an armed force for the assistance of Government in times of disorder or rebellion.

In the year 1792 a Treaty was entered into between the East India Company on the one side, and the Nawab of Arcot on the other, under which the administration of the country was assigned to the British. The arrangement, however, was found not to be satisfactory. It had left the Nawab a considerable amount of authority, which soon gave rise to causes of friction between him and the East India Company. Consequently, in 1801, a fresh Treaty was executed under which the entire administration passed into British hands. In both the Treaties the position of the Rajah of Venkatagiri was maintained, and the revenue he became bound to pay to the East India Company continued to be the same as he had all along paid to the Muhammadan Rulers.

In pursuance of the policy laid down by the Board of Directors, Lord Clive, who was at the time the Governor of Madras, proceeded to persuade the Rajah of Venkatagiri and other Palaiyagars, who occupied a similar position, and whose zemindaris lay chiefly in the Western Arcot, to abandon the system of maintaining an armed force for the assistance of Government. It was pointed out to them by the Governor-in-Council that the duty of maintaining an army for the service of Government imposed a heavy and costly responsibility; the East India Company would henceforward take over all charges for the preservation of law and order and thus relieve the zemindars of an irksome burden. They were, at the same time, assured that their fixed peshcush would remain invariable. The zemindars were thus induced to consent willingly to this arrangement, and in lieu of maintaining any army, which costs them a considerable amount of money, they undertook to pay an additional revenue on their estates, which was added to their peshcush.

Pursuant to this arrangement a sanad was issued, on August 24, 1882, to the zemindar of Venkatagiri and other zemindars occupying a like position, embodying the terms which had been agreed upon. This document is called a 'sanad-i-Milkiyat Istimrar' or deed of permanent property." The word istimrar denotes its character of perpetuity and permanency of revenue. The aggregate peshcush was, in the case of

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA V. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI.

Venkatagiri, put down as 1,11,058 star pagodas.

The clause in the sanad which relates to this particular arrangement is in these terms; "In consideration of your relief which your finances will derive from the relinquishment of your military services and and from the discontinuance of the expenses to which you have on that account been liable, in consideration of also charging itself with the entire protection of territories dependent on its power, the British Government has fixed your annual contribution, including equivalent for the military service and the established peshcush for every year, at the sum of star pagodas 1,11,058, which said amount shall never be liable to changes under any circumstances, and is hereby accordingly declared to be permanent annual demand of Government on your zemindari."

The only reservations in respect of the absolute abandonment on the part of Government of all claim to enhance the consolidated peshcush is contained in clause 5, which runs thus: "The permanent peshcush fixed by this sanad in your zemindari is exclusive of the revenue derived from the manufacture and sale of salt and saltpetre, exclusive of the sayer or duties of every description, the entire administration of which the Government reserves to itself, exclusive of the tax on the sale of spirituous liquors and the intoxicating drugs, exclusive of all lands and russums heretofore appropriated to the support of the Police establishment. The Government reserves to itself the entire exercise of its discretion in continuing or discontinuing temporarily or permanently the articles of all sorts included according to the custom and practice of the country under the several heads above stated."

It is clear, however, that at this time two policies were on foot: one with regard to the powerful zemindars who maintained large armies, with whom a settlement was essential on a separate basis; the other a measure of general assessment in accordance with the instructions issued to the Board of Revenue on September 24, 1799. In the carrying out of this latter policy the Government passed Regulation XXV of

1802, which came into force on July 13, 1802. The preamble of this Regulation is important. It declared: "Whereas it is known to the zemindars, mirasidars, raiyats, and cultivators of lands in territories subject to the Government of Fort St. George, that from the earliest until the present period of time the public assessment of the land revenue has never been fixed; but that, according to the practice of Asiatic Governments, the assessment of the land revenue has fluctuated without any fixed principles for the determination of the amount; and without any security to the zemindars, or other persons, for the continuance of a moderate land tax; that, on the contrary, frequent enquiries have been instituted by the ruling power, whether Hindu or Muhammadan, for the purpose of augmenting the assessment of the land revenue; that it has been customary to regulate such augmentations by the enquiries and opinions of the local officers appointed by the ruling power for the time being; and that in the attainment of an increased revenue on such foundations it has been usual for the Government to deprive the zemindars, and to appoint persons on its own behalf to the management of the zemindaris; thereby reserving to the ruling power the implied right, and the actual exercise of the proprietary possession of all lands whatever; And whereas it is obvious to the said zemindars, mirasidars, raiyats and cultivators of land, that such a mode of administration must be injurious to the permanent prosperity of the country, by obstructing the progress of agriculture, population and wealth; and destructive of the comfort of the individual persons, by diminishing the security of personal freedom, and of private property; Wherefore the British Government, impressed with a deep sense of the injuries arising to the estate, and to its subjects from the operations of such principles, has resolved to remove from its administration so fruitful a source of uncertainty and disquietude; to grant to zemindars and other land-holders, their heirs and successors, a permanent property in their land in all time to come and to fix for ever a moderate assessment of public revenue on such lands, the amount of which shall never be liable to be increased under any circumstances."

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI.

In section 2 it proceeded to enact that: "In conformity to these principles, an assessment shall be fixed on all lands liable to pay revenue to the Government and in consequence of such assessment, the proprietary right of the soil shall become vested in the zemindars, or other proprietors of land and in their heirs and lawful successors for ever."

Section 3 will be referred to later.

Section 4, which forms an important element in the consideration of the present case, is in the following terms:

"The Government having reserved to itself the entire exercise of the discretion in continuing or abolishing, temporarily or permanently, the articles of revenue included, according to the custom and practice of the country, under the several heads of salt and saltpetre of the sayer, or duties by sea or land; of the abkary, or tax on the sale of spirituous liquors and intoxicating drugs; of the excise on articles of consumption; of all taxes personal and professional, as well as those derived from markets, fairs or Bazaars, lakhiraj lands (or lands exempt from the payment of public revenue); and of all other lands paying only favourable quit rents; the permanent assessment of the land tax shall be made exclusively of the said articles now recited."

The drafting of this section can by no means be commended for preciseness or lucidity, but it is clear that the reservations in respect of the power of Government are wider than in the sarads referred to above.

It appears that the Venkatagiri estate, when it came under British Administration, included a large number of inam lands which had been expropriated by the zemindars from time to time for charitable or pious purposes, either free of rent or on favourable rent. Some lands had also been granted to people for services to the estate. In respect of the latter the zemindar had an absolute right of resumption. As regards the others which came within the category of pious grants, his power appears to have been limited; he could resume them only on specific and apparently valid reason.

In 1816 the Government attempted to enforce its rights against the zemindar in respect of some of these alienated lands.

The dispute was as to whether the zemindar was entitled to take possession of them without any liability for the payment of additional revenue, or whether the Government was entitled to the benefit of the resumption and possessed the right to assess revenue on those lands. The dispute was decided in favour of the zemindar—namely, that the Government had no such right as it claimed. Matters remained quiescent from the year 1822, when the action was decided in the Provincial Court, until 1897, when the Government again put forward the same claim as they had done in 1816 and attempted, by their Revenue Officers, to investigate into the title of the grantees who held the lands under the zemindar and to ascertain whether the grants were valid or not, and if they were not, to assess revenue on them. The Raja of Venkatagiri resisted the Government's claim, and after a good deal of correspondence brought in the Court of the District Judge of Nellore the four suits which form the principal foundation of the present consolidated appeal. The fifth suit which has been made a part of the proceedings, was brought against the Government on similar grounds by another person in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of North Arcot in respect of lands lying in another estate.

In paragraph 10 of the plaint the Raja states the nature of the grants and his rights with reference to the alienated lands, and in paragraph 11 he specifies his grounds of objections to the fresh assessment which the Government proposed to make on him. His ground of action is thus stated in the plaint,—

That the Inam Deputy Collector of Nellore, acting under the orders of Government, gave a notice to the plaintiff that he would proceed to investigate the condition of davadyam and dahmadyam inams in the Venkatagiri zemindari which had been granted prior to the Permanent Settlement, and that in order to enable him to do so, the plaintiff should furnish him with a list of such inams containing the particular specified in a statement annexed to the said notice, and that, in spite of the plaintiff's repeated objections to the right of Government to resume such inams in the zemindari of Venkatagiri or deal with the same under the Inam Rules, the said Deputy Collector is proceeding with the investigation".

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA V. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI.

He pleaded res judicata on the basis of the proceedings in 1816, and alleged further that the Government by their own conduct were estopped from claiming the right of assessment. On these grounds he prayed for a declaration that the Secretary of State had no right to resume or assess to public revenue inams or lakhiraj lands situate within the zemindari of Venkatagiri nor any reversionary right therein, or any such right in the inams or lakhiraj lands which has already come in the plaintiff's possession. He also asked for a permanent injunction restraining the Secretary of State and his officers from holding any investigation into the nature of and title to inams or lakhiraj lands within his estate, and from dealing with the same under the Inam Rules sanctioned by the Government on August 9, 1859, or resuming them or assessing them to public revenue.

The Government joined issue with him on the question of the right of Government to resume and assess these expropriated lands; their principal contention being that, under section 4 of Madras Regulation XXV of 1802, the Government had expressly reserved its power and that the provision in the sanad do not prejudice it or take it away.

The other objections in the written statement do not appear to their Lordships material for the purposes of the present judgment.

The District Judge states, in their Lordships' opinion, correctly and concisely the question for determination:

"The main question really to be decided in this suit is, whether the reversion in respect of inams or lakhiraj lands situated within the zemindari of Venkatagiri belongs to the Government, or to the zemindar, and whether the Government is entitled to resume those inams or whether such rights of resumption belongs to the zemindar." In a careful review of the facts, he held in substance that the Venkatagiri zemindari did not fall within the purview of the Regulation, and that consequently the contention of the Government was not maintainable; and he accordingly in the four suits before him made a declaration in favour of the plaintiff's right and granted an injunction as asked for. On appeal to the High Court his decrees have been maintained, although the reasons which the learned Judges of the High Court have assigned for coming to the same conclusion as the First Court do not proceed on the same lines as those followed by the District Judge. In substance, however, there is absolute concurrence between the two Courts.

The Government appears to have failed also in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of North Arcot, and their appeal to the High Court was dismissed.

As their Lordships substantially agree with the conclusion arrived at by the Courts in India, they do not think it necessary to traverse at any great length the grounds upon which the High Court and the District Judge have rested their judgments. It has been argued before the Board that the sanad of the plaintiff could not possibly override the express provisions of the Regulation and that the Executive Government had no power to convey to the grantee—namely, the zemindar—larger rights than the Statute provided. It was urged that the rights of the Crown cannot be taken away by implication, and it was stated that, having regard to the terms of the section already referred to, the Government had absolute power at any time to direct an investigation into the title of the lakhiraj lands to which the plaintiff laid a claim as part and parcel of his estate not liable to assessment by Government. In view of this contention which has been strenuously pressed by learned Counsel for the Government it becomes necessary to examine a little more closely the circumstances which led to the conferment of the sanad on the zemindar of Venkatagiri and the other zemindars who were in the same position with him, and to consider how far the grant is affected by the provisions of Madras Regulation XXV of 1802.

As already observed, the British Authorities appear to have taken in hand as early as September 24, 1799, the regularisation of the land revenue in the Carnatic and to have issued instructions to the Board of Revenue as to the line of action to be taken for the purpose of instituting a general inquiry into the conditions under which the land was held within those territories. Regulation XXV of 1802 was an outcome of the enquiries made under those instructions to the Board of Revenue, but it appears that whilst these inquiries were proceeding with regard to a general settlement of revenue, simultaneously an enquiry was in progress respecting the amount the Venkatagiri estate should in addition to the "established peshcush" pay in lieu of its release from the liability to keep up an army for the service of Government.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA V. RAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI.

Mr. Stratton, the Peshcush Collector of North Arcot, had been deputed to make a thorough enquiry as to the resources of the different polygars, and the report which he submitted to the Government on July 14, 1801, contained all the requisite information, and upon that information the commutation which was granted to the zemindar of Venkatagiri in respect of his military force appear to have been fixed. He sets out in his report the different kinds of inams, some of which the zemindar was at liberty to resume at his own discretion, others which he could not resume without sufficient reason, such as neglect of duty, etc. All these lands appear to have been taken into consideration in arriving at the estimate of the commuted amount.

The sanad to the zemindar of the Venkatagiri was issued, as already stated, on August 24, 1802, by the Governor in Council, Lord Clive, on behalf of the East India Company. The material terms of the sanad have already been referred to.

On the same date Lord Clive addressed a letter to the zemindar in terms which I have little doubt as to the meaning to be attached to the grant. He states first the object with which the sanad was granted, and goes on to say that: "Under the circumstances, the amount which your brave self has to pay annually in future is fixed as follows: In consideration of military service—eighty nine thousand three hundred and eighty five star pagodas. The fixed peshcush (tribute)—twenty one thousand six hundred and seventy three pagodas. Total—one lakh eleven thousand and fifty eight star pagodas." And what follows is important. The document goes on to say: "As the above mentioned amount is the maximum portion of your exalted self's zemindari which should annually be sent to the Government on account of the expenses for general protection, therefore, sanad (deed) of perpetual ownership, to the effect that the sum of one lakh eleven thousand and fifty-eight star pagodas should be paid to Government annually, by the zemindari of your brave self, by way of permanent jama (assessed revenue), is sent to you under the seal and signature of the members of the Government." And again: "Accordingly, having this matter in view all the incomes from the land of Amaram and Katnbadi retained in possession of foot soldiers were not included in the account of the item of the consideration for their service."

On August 25, 1802, a letter was addressed by the Secretary to the Government to the Collector of Western Peshcush, which included the three zemindaris principally concerned—namely, Venkatagiri, Calastry, and Bomrazepollam—making it clear that the revenues that were assessed upon these three zemindaris were deliberately fixed in the case of Venkatagiri at Rs. 1,11,058, to be paid annually by the zemindar. Paragraph 10 of that document is important, and it is in these terms: "To remove from the minds of the zemindars all doubt of the permanency of the present arrangement the Governor-in-Council has called sanad-i-milkiyat istimrar to be prepared under the seal and signature of his Lordship in Council for the purpose of being delivered to the zemindars, kabuliyats corresponding with these sanads are also transmitted, and the Special Commission desire that you will require the zemindars to sign and return them to you duly executed to these kabuliyats you will annex a kistbundy fixing the kists according to the seasons of produce."

In accordance with these instructions from the Government given to the Collector of Western Peshcush, kabuliyats were taken from the zemindars in identical terms; but before executing his kabuliyat the zemindar of Venkatagiri took particular care to have the extent of his zemindari inserted in specific terms in the sanad that was granted. That appears from Mr. Stratton's letter of September 17, 1802. In paragraph 6 that officer states as follows:—

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA V. RAJA OF VENKATAGIRI.

"The Venkatagiri zẽmindar further made objections to sign his kabuliyat until I had specified therein the several districts composing the Venkatagiri zẽmindari; considering this scruple of no material import, I was induced to accede to his request and at his suggestion to recommend to you that the districts under him should be particularised at the back of his sanad, for which purpose it is now accordingly returned."

So far as these documents are concerned, they leave no possible doubt that the Government, represented by the Governor-in-Council on the one side, fixed a definite specific assessment on the whole zẽmindari of Venkatagiri irrespective of the particular assets derived from each particular unit of property within the estate, and that the zẽmindar, on his side, accepted that arrangement on that special understanding. The question now is, whether that action of the Government was, in view of the provisions of Madras Regulation XXV of 1802, valid or otherwise. As already stated, Counsel for the appellant have strongly argued that, in view of the provisions of section 4 of that Regulation, excluding the "lakhiraj lands (or lands exempt from the payment of public revenue) and all other lands paying only favourable quit rents" from the permanent assessment of the land tax, it was not competent for the Governor-in-Council to grant a sanad of the character that is in issue in this case; and much stress is laid upon the instructions that were originally issued in connection with the enquiry into the general resources of the different estates in 1799. It is said that in that document the Government took care to reserve its right on all lands "at present alienated and paying no public revenue which may have been or may be proved to be held under illegal or invalid titles and the revenue of which is not included in the Committee's account."

In respect of this contention two considerations arise—firstly, whether the lands which are now sought to be assessed were in fact paying no public revenue, and, secondly, whether, in view of the provisions of section 3, it is open to the Government to contend that the sanad should not be taken into account in the construction of section 4. Section 3 declares as follows: "where the conditions of the permanent assessment of the revenue may have been adjusted, a sanad-i-milkiyat istimrar, or deed of permanent property, shall be granted on the part of the British Government to all persons being, or constituted to be zẽmindars or proprietors of land and each zẽmindar or proprietor of land shall execute and deliver to the Collector of the District a correspondent kabuliyat. The said sanads and kabuliyats shall contain the conditions and articles of tenure by which the lands shall be held; in all cases of disputed assessment, reference shall be had to the sanads and kabuliyats and judgment shall be given by the Courts of Judicature, in conformity to the conditions under which the agreement may have been formed in each particular case."

The above section lays down a definite rule relative to the principles on which the provisions in the Regulations should be construed. Now the sanad in question contains no reference to the lakhiraj lands within the Venkatagiri zẽmindari. It would follow, therefore, that in the case of this property the provisions of section 4 have no application and that the assessment fixed upon it by virtue of the arrangements adopted in 1802 was upon a basis quite different from that provided in section 4 of the Regulation. In other words, both the assessment and the sanad are outside the Regulation under which the Government claims the right to resume the inam lands within the estate of the plaintiff and to assess them separately.

It should also be observed that, although the Regulation was passed on July 13, 1802, and the sanad was granted to the zẽmindar of Venkatagiri on August 24, the recommendation of the Commission of August 12, 1802, on which the sanad was granted, recommended that the new assessment should be fixed to run from 12th July of that year. After stating the principle on which they were proceeding in fixing the amount to be paid by the zẽmindar in commutation of the military service, in paragraph 40 he says as follows: "If the grounds on which we have now had the honour to propose that the assessment of public revenue should be fixed on the four western zemindaris, including the customary peshcush and equivalent for military service, be approved by your Lordships' in Council, the total amount of revenue derived to the State from those valuable Provinces will exceed the amount of the old peshcush by the sum of 1, 72,296 pagodas, and the aggregate amount of peshcush and the equivalent will, in future, be 2,50,000 pagodas per annum. We conclude the subject by recommending that the permanent assessment of the public revenue on these zemindaris be fixed accordingly at that rate, from the 12th day of July last." This also clearly shows that the arrangement in respect of the four western zemindaris was made independently of the provisions of the Regulation. Another thing has to be observed in connection with this arrangement namely, the difference in the terms of this sanad from the sanads granted to the other zemindars under the Regulation itself.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. FAJAH OF VENKATAGIRI.

In the view their Lordships take of the general evidence in the case they do not consider it necessary to express any opinion on the question raised by the plaintiff that the controversy in dispute is res judicata in consequence of the decision of the Provincial Court in 1822; but it is desirable to point out that since that decision the Government at various times expressly assented to the position which the zemindar had taken up in respect of the inam lands within his estate. Their Lordships will refer only to three documents: first, Exhibit K, a letter of April 24, 1823, addressed by the Secretary to the Board of Revenue to the Chief Secretary to the Government, in which it was stated as follows:—

"The permanent peshcush of the zemindari of Venkatagiri was fixed upon the principles as upon Bomrauze and Calastray, and for the same reasons which induced the Board to state upon a former occasion that they considered the zemindar of Bomrauze not to be entitled to remission on account of certain villages having been taken from him by a decree of Court inasmuch as by the operation of that decree there was taken from him nothing on which his contribution to Government was fixed; they are now of opinion that the zemindar of Venkatagiri is entitled to benefit by the resumption of any villages formerly alienated from his zemindari without question on the part of Government or being liable to assessment on the increase to his resources thereby acquired."

Again, in 1839 the Board of Revenue in a letter addressed to the Chief Secretary to the Government (Exhibit N) stated as follows: The "zemindar now rests his claim on the ground that as his permanent cowle was framed without any reference to its assets, and as it contains no reservation in respect to the right of resuming lakhiraj land, as in the case of the northern and other zemindaris, the right to resume inams or lakhiraj lands in the position of Peddapaloor belongs of right to him and by no means to the Government, and he cites a decree by the Provincial Court of the Northern Division in favour of the zemindar of Venkatagiri in a suit brought by the Collector of Nellore for the recovery of the village under similar circumstances" and in paragraph 7 they say as follows: "On the other hand, the decrees of the Zillah Court of Chittoor and of the Provincial Court of the Centre Division are in favour of the right of Government to resume, in preference to that of the zemindar. But it will be noticed that they contain no allusion to the dissimilarity in the terms of the Permanent Settlement of Calastray and the other western polliems, assuming that the peshcush was fixed as on the zemindaris in the northern, upon the assets, and that Regulation XXXI of 1802 applies to the former as to the latter. By a reference to the kabuliyat of the zemindar of Calastray and to the correspondence which passed at the time a permanent cowle was granted to him, it will be seen at once that the peshcush was not so fixed, and, as already shown, the Regulation above mentioned was not considered to apply to the case of the Venkatagiri zemindar."

On September 3, 1860, the Commissioner of the Division issued certain instructions for the guidance of the Deputy Collectors employed in inam investigation of the North Arcot District, and he correctly laid down the position with regard to the zemindar of Venkatagiri and the other zemindars who stood in the same position in the following terms:—"The private estates will be first noticed. The zemindaris of Kalahastri and Karvetinagar were, like the zemindari of Venkatagiri in the Nellore District, permanently settled in 1803 on the principle of the commutation of the military service tenure attached to them. The peshcush was not fixed on the assets of the estates, but was a proportion of the cost of the zemindar's military establishment, inclusive of Amarams and Kattubandis, diminished by the amount of revenue derived from salt, sayer and abkari, which were reserved by Government. The inams were not excluded by the terms of the Settlement, and the Government have, therefore, no right of reversion in them."

GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN v. SARDAR ALI KHAN.

The Revenue Authorities in that part of the Presidency, in the face of the expression of opinion to which reference has been made here, have attempted to reverse the arrangement expressly entered into in 1802. In their Lordships' opinion this attempt fails.

Some stress was laid on behalf of the appellant on provisions of Madras Regulation XXXI of 1802. It is sufficient, however, to point out that that Regulation refers entirely to procedure appointed for the investigation of the title to hold lands exempted from the payment of revenue. Here the lands which are sought to be resumed were not exempted from the payment of public revenue; the revenue which was paid on the estate included the lands in question and the jama was assessed on the whole estate inclusive of the lakhiraj and inam lands.

For the foregoing reasons their Lordships are of opinion that the judgments and decrees of the Courts in India are right and should be affirmed and that these appeals should be dismissed with costs, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

N. H. Appeals dismissed.
Solicitors for the Appellant:—Solicitor India Office.
Solicitor for the Respondent:—Mr. Douglas Grant.

P ESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 131-20 OF 1921.

April 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. PIPON, J.C.

Sardar GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SARDAR ALI KHAN AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 17—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 53—Amendment of plaint, when to be allowed—Adverse possession—Co-sharers—Overt act—Joint property included in self-acquired property—Partition—Possession, whether to be upheld—Partition Act (IV of 1893), s. 4, applicability of.

Under O. VI, r. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code the powers of a Court in allowing an amendment of a plaint are far wider than was the case under the Code of 1882, and there is in the present Code no provision corresponding to the proviso to section 53 of the Code of 1882. [p. 750, col. 2] p. 751, col. 1.]

An amendment will not, however, be allowed if it converts the suit into one which is not only different from, but is inconsistent with, the plaint as originally lodged, and when the defendant is prejudiced by the amendment. [p. 751, col. 1.]

The main test in such cases is whether the amendment meets the ends of justice by allowing the whole question in dispute to be decided between the parties and to ensure a final decision and to avoid unnecessary litigation. [p. 751, col. 1.]

The possession of one co-sharer cannot become adverse to that of other co-sharers, unless he overtly asserts an exclusive title as against the others. [p. 752, col. 2.]

One of several co-sharers, if he includes a portion of the property in which he has a joint title in other property in which he has an exclusive title, may reasonably anticipate that he will not necessarily be disturbed or be put to unjustifiable expense when partition eventually takes place. Such action on his part, therefore, does not amount to an overt assertion of an exclusive title to that portion of the joint property as against the others. [p. 753, col. 1.]

Section 4 of the Partition Act refers to cases where a share in a dwelling-house belonging to an undivided family has been transferred to a person who is not a member of such family, but even where the section does not apply the principle is that on partition property must, so far as possible, be left in possession of the person in occupation. An Executing Court should have regard to the principles of equity in adjusting the mode of partition. [p. 754, col. 1.]

Basunila Kumar Ghosh v. Moti Lal Ghosh, 11 Ind. Cas. 370; 15 C. W. N. 555 Note; 6 C. L. J. 8 Note, Debi Sahai v. Tara Chand, 44 Ind. Cas. 135; 44 P. W. R. 1918; 22 P. L. R. 1918, Fatleh Chand v. Bilas Rai, 34 Ind. Cas. 587; 61 P. L. R. 1916; 89 P. W. R. 1916; 96 P. R. 1916; 140 P. W. R. 1916, relied on.

First appeal from the order of the Sub-

GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN v. SARDAR ALI KHAN.

Judge, Peshawar, dated the 24th August 1921.

Sardar Raja Singh, for the Appellant.
Lala Dewan Chand, R. S., for Respondents Nos. 1 to 4.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this case are descendants of S. Khanan Khan who died about the year 1880 and who was a member of a prominent Kazibash family residing in Peshawar City. He left 4 sons K. B. Khan Baba Khan, Jan Gul Khan, Ghulam Haidar Khan and Ghulam Hassan Khan. The present litigation arose in the following manner. Ghulam Hassan Khan had stood surety for a loan obtained by one Kala Khan from the firm of Seth Chand Mal-Magan Mal of Peshawar. After his death, which occurred some 9 or 13 years ago, the firm sued him and Kala Khan and obtained decree on the 30th of May 1913. In execution of this decree the 1-4th share owned by Ghulam Hassan Khan in the family estate was attached and sold. On the 8th of June 1917 the decree-holders purchased this share. On the 12th of April 1919 they sold what they had acquired in the execution proceedings to Nawab Ali Khan and his brother Ghulam Hussain Khan who are the sons of K. B. Khan Baba Khan. K. B. Khan Baba Khan was himself alive at the time and had two other sons Sardar Ali Khan and Abbas Ali Khan. Against the purchase of this estate by Nawab Ali Khan and Ghulam Hussain Khan two separate pre-emption suits were filed by their uncles Jangul Khan and Ghulam Haider Khan. During the pendency of these suits, i. e., on the 2nd of July 1920, Ghulam Hussain Khan alone lodged a suit praying for partition of a certain portion of the family property. The property of which he claimed partition was a house known as "trushwala" which can be conveniently called house A, and a house known as "mahar-kulan" which can be conveniently described as house B. It was in these two houses that the share of Ghulam Hassan Khan had been sold in auction and acquired by Seth Chand Mal-Magan Mal and subsequently transferred to Ghulam Hussain Khan and Nawab Ali Khan. In this suit, however, Ghulam Hussain Khan, claimed a 1-4th share of both properties on the ground that he had acquired 1-8th as his share of the purchase from the decree-holders and that the remaining 1-8th had been gifted to him by his father K. B. Khan Baba Khan. He alleged that K. B. Khan Baba Khan had gifted the whole of his 1-4th share to the plaintiff Ghulam Hussain Khan and his brother Nawab Ali Khan in equal shares. Ghulam Hussain Khan in his plaint stated that he was joint with Nawab Ali Khan and that he had no objection to Nawab Ali Khan being made a co-plaintiff. Nawab Ali Khan was added as a co-plaintiff on the 13th of July 1920 and the plaint was amended so as to include a claim for one-half of the two houses, i. e., 1-4th representing the share of Ghulam Hussain Khan which they had purchased, and 1-4th which they alleged had been gifted to them by their father K. B. Khan Baba Khan. A week later, i. e., on the 20th of July 1920, the two pre-emption suits were amicably compromised. It was agreed between the parties that the property purchased by Nawab Ali Khan and Ghulam Hussain Khan from the decree-holders should be treated as acquired for the whole family and that 1-3rd should be retained by the vendees, Nawab Ali Khan and Ghulam Hussain Khan, and that 2-3rds should go to Jangul Khan and Ghulam Haider Khan. This had the effect of dividing the estate of the deceased Ghulam Hassan Khan according to the shares to which his brothers would have normally succeeded. It may be remarked that K. B. Khan Baba Khan and his other two sons made no protest against this solution. On the same day Nawab Ali Khan and Ghulam Hussain Khan put in an application for the amendment of their plaint regarding partition of the property and obtained the leave of the Court to put in an amended plaint on the 2nd of August 1920. In this amended plaint K. B. Khan Baba Khan himself was joined as a plaintiff and the suit was for partition of 1-3rd of the whole of the family estate. Certain additional properties were now added to the plaint. To house A a portion shown on the plan by the letters "alif" "be" "jim" "dal" was added and house B a portion shown as "ha" "wa" "za" "sin." A further entire property was added to the claim in the shape of "seraicha." The defendants in the suit were Ghulam Haider Khan and Jangul Khan. Jangul Khan has not seriously resisted it. Ghulam Haider Khan who resisted the suit, is in actual possession of the properties which were added in the amended plaint, i. e., of the portion "alif, ba, jim, dal" in house A, the portion "ha, wa, za, sin" in house B and the whole of the "seraicha." He has set up a proprietary title to these three portions of the property in suit. The Trial Court has found that the two portions referred to above in houses A and B are not his exclusive property but are the joint property of the family and are liable to partition. It has found that the "seraicha" is the exclusive property of Ghulam Haider Khan and has dismissed the suit respecting it. In execution of the decree the Trial Court has held, overruling an application by Ghulam Haider Khan, that no account of actual possession can be taken in carrying out the partition of houses A and B. Arising out of these findings the following proceedings are now before this Court:—

GHULAM HAIDER KHAN V. BARDAR ALI KHAN.

1. An appeal by Ghulam Haider Khan from the decree for partition as affecting those portions of houses A and B in which he claims an exclusive proprietary title.

2. A cross-objection by the plaintiffs against the dismissal of their suit respecting the "seraicha."

3. An appeal by Ghulam Haider Khan against the refusal of the Executing Court to maintain possession in executing the decree for partition.

Orders on these three proceedings are included in the present judgment.

The first ground upon which the decree is attacked in appeal by Ghulam Haider Khan is that the Trial Court irregularly allowed an amendment of the plaint so as to convert the suit into one of a different and inconsistent character. It is argued that the first plaint implies that K. B. Khan Baba Khan having gifted the whole of his share to his sons Nawab Ali Khan and Ghulam Hussain Khan had no interest left in the property, and that, therefore, he could not sue as a plaintiff at all. It is pointed out that in the amended plaint upon which the suit finally proceeded, all question regarding this gift was dropped, and that Khan Baba Khan and his two sons now come forward in the capacity of joint owners of 1-3rd of the estate which capacity they could not hold as shown by their own pleadings. Much stress is also laid upon the exclusion from the first plaint of the two portions of houses A and B referred to by vernacular letters, as described above and of the "seraicha" which is added to the suit. These arguments, however, appear to me to have little weight when closely examined. The question of the respective titles of Khan Baba Khan and his two sons is not one which in any way affects the defendant or the title upon which he now sets up as a bar to partition. It is, no doubt, true that one of the objects of the original suit was to defeat the claims for pre-emption by showing that the two vendees, Nawab Ali Khan and Ghulam Hussain Khan, were prior to that purchase, already joint co-sharers in the property by reason of a gift from their father. At the same time, the suit had another object and that was to claim actual possession by partition as against the defendant Ghulam Haider Khan who was resisting their claim. That a large portion of the dispute was really one affecting the title of the parties to partition is brought out by the original plea filed by Ghulam Haider Khan himself in which he set up the contention, which he has now abandoned, that Khan Baba Khan had gifted his share not to Nawab Ali Khan and Ghulam Hussain Khan but to himself. It appears to me that the suit for partition could not possibly have been satisfactorily adjudicated upon until every portion of the joint family property had been brought into the suit, and that the Court was not only entitled to allow an amendment of the plaint in order to include such property, but that it would have been justified even on its own motion in requiring the plaint to be amended in order to include such property. There is no doubt that under section 53, Civil Procedure Code of 1882, it might have been urged that the character of the suit could not be changed by an amendment. The proviso to section 53 definitely prohibited a change of this nature. Even, however, under the old law there are rulings, notably Khuda Baksh v. Budhar Mol (1), which go to show that an amendment is not necessarily irregular merely because the character of the relief sought is to some extent changed. Under O. VI, r. 17 of the present Code of Civil Procedure the powers of a Court are far wider in allowing an amendment of a plaint, and there is now no provision corresponding to the proviso to section 53 of the old Code. It is, however, an accepted principle that amendment will not be allowed if it converts the suit into one which is not only different from, but is inconsistent with, the plaint as originally lodged, and when the defendant is prejudiced by the amendment. Now, I am unable to see that either of these conditions can be shown in the present case. There is nothing really inconsistent between the amended and the original plaint, nor can I see that the defendant has in any way been prejudiced. The amendment was made after an issue was framed, but before any evidence had been heard. The main ratio decidendi in such cases is whether the amendment meets the ends of justice by allowing the whole question in dispute to be decided between the parties and to ensure a final decision and avoid unnecessary litigation. It appears to me that these objects are exactly those which have been obtained by an amendment in the present case. The real dispute between the parties is as to what property is joint between them and what property is exclusively owned by the defendant and must be excluded from partition. The object of the suit is to oust the defendant from exclusive possession of disputed portions of the property and the object of the defendant is to resist partition by confirming his exclusive title to those disputed portions. I hold, therefore, that the present suit and the decree passed in it cannot be impugned on the ground that the amendment of the plaint was irregular.

GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN v. SARDAR ALI KHAN.

The next point argued for the appellant, Ghulam Haider Khan, is the question of his exclusive title to the portions of houses A and B which have been designated by letters as shown above. It is admitted that these portions were originally the ancestral property of the family. His title to these properties is urged upon two grounds. One is that he has acquired an inherent title by transfer from the owners, and the other is that his title cannot be impugned by the plaintiffs owing to their own conduct and the operation of the Law of Limitation as affecting adverse possession. I take first the question of inherent title. The appellant contends that he acquired these properties from the joint owners by sale and by gift. He has never, however, been able to specify the circumstances or even the dates of these alleged sales and gifts. He has not even shown what portions were acquired by sale and what by gift. He is entirely without documentary evidence to establish these alleged transfers. I cannot, it is true, agree with the view which appears to have been taken by the Trial Court, that the absence of registered deeds is necessarily fatal in itself to the defendant's contention. If there had been deeds of any kind and if those deeds were unregistered, it would, no doubt, be true that the documents would be inadmissible in evidence and that their existence would, at the same time, exclude oral evidence of the transactions. But when no such documents are alleged to exist, there is no necessary bar to the defendant establishing his title by oral evidence if he can. At the same time, it is perfectly clear that he has failed to establish any such title by oral evidence. It is difficult, in fact, to regard seriously at all his attempt to establish a title by this means.

The appellant's attempt to rest his title upon other considerations is certainly more formidable. He argues, in the first place, that the plaintiffs have themselves admitted his title by their conduct during the litigation. It is pointed out that in the first plaint these two properties were omitted and that in the plans filed the boundary of the properties then sued for was, in one case, described as the property of the defendant and actually covered the lettered portion of house B. I think, however, that it would be difficult to say that there has been any admission of his title by the plaintiffs for this reason. A mere description of this nature is directed only to identifying the property. The argument is frequently put forward that descriptions of this nature operate as an admission of title when a house is described as the house of a particular person, whereas, in actual fact, such descriptions show nothing more than occupation and cannot possibly be regarded as implying proprietary title. It is argued, again, that the parties to the present suit were parties to a fraud practised upon the decree-holders Seth Chand, Mal-Magan Mal, and that the existence of the two additional properties, with which we are now dealing, was deliberately kept secret from the decree-holders in order to avoid their being attached in execution. It is contended that the plaintiffs cannot be heard in support of an alleged title based upon the existence of a fraud to which they were parties. As authorities for this general proposition the learned Counsel for the appellant quotes Sarup Narain v. Madho Singh (2), Ram Lal v. Arur Chand-Jiwan Das (3) and Voddina Kamayya v. Gudisa Mamayya (4). Those cases, however, dealt with facts which are not parallel to those of the present case. They lay down the principle that when a transfer has been made by an instrument intended fraudulently to defeat the legal claims of a third party, one of the parties to the fraud cannot come into Court to base a claim which rests upon a repudiation of that instrument. I am unable to see that we have any conditions of this nature in the present case. In the first place, we are not dealing with any instrument, which the plaintiffs are attempting to repudiate. The most that can be said is that they omitted a certain portion of the property in dealings with a third party with a view to preventing that third party from exercising a lawful lien against it. But I hardly think that the facts warrant even an assumption to this extent. There is nothing to show that there was any kind of active fraud practised upon the decree-holders by the joint action of the plaintiffs and defendant to the present case. The most that can be said is that the decree-holders did not know that the judgment-debtor against whom they were executing, owned property additional to that which they sought to attach. It was not absolutely incumbent upon the present parties to set the decree-holders right in this respect, and even if it can be said that they contributed by silence or by other means to the delusion of the decree-holders in this respect, they cannot thereby be described as parties to a fraud and be prevented, by reason of such a fraud, from urging a title, one against the other, in respect of property which the decree-holders failed to attach. I do not consider, therefore, that the rulings quoted on behalf of the appellant are relevant to the present case or that the plaintiffs are in any way debarred from contending that the properties shown by letters in houses A and B are joint family property in which the judgment-debtor Ghulam Hassan Khan had originally an interest and which interest passed to the other members of the family on his death.

GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN V. SARDAR ALI KHAN.

It is urged, again, for the appellant that he has been admittedly in possession of these properties for more than 12 years and that his possession is shown to be overtly adverse to other alleged co-sharers. The Trial Court has overruled the plea of adverse possession on the general principle that the possession of one co-sharer cannot become adverse to that of other co-sharers. This general principle is, no doubt, qualified by the condition that the possession of a co-sharer can actually become adverse if he overtly asserts an exclusive title as against others. I have to see, therefore, whether any overt assertion of exclusive title can be established in the present case. So far as I can see, the only evidence which we have of any assertion of exclusive title is the fact that the defendant in the case of house B purchased an adjoining property and, in re-constructing the buildings, included the lettered portion of house B in his personally acquired estate. It is argued that such inclusion is in itself an assertion of an exclusive title. It may be said in the case of house property that actual alienation of a particular area by a single co-sharer in possession constitutes an assertion of exclusive title. I have recently dealt with a case in which it was contended that in the case of agricultural land the alienation by a co-sharer of a specific plot constituted an assertion of exclusive title by the mere fact of alienation. I held in that case that such a transfer in the case of agricultural land did not necessarily constitute an assertion of exclusive title, as it was a well-known practice in this Province that such a transfer conferred

(2) 30 Ind. Cas. 253; 2 O. L. J. 399; 18 O. C. 131.

(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 482; 175 P. L. R. 1915; 115 P. W. R. 1915.

(4) 43 Ind. Cas. 352; 32 M. L. J. 484.

GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN V. SARDAR ALI KHAN.

two separate rights upon the alienee; a right to immediate but not to permanent possession, and a right to claim an equal area on eventual partition. An alienee would accept a transfer of this nature because in more than 90 per cent of cases of partition effected by Revenue Authorities actual possession is maintained on partition up to the limit of the occupier's proportionate share. Now, an alienation is a very much stronger form of proprietary conduct than the mere inclusion of a property in another estate to which the occupier has admittedly an exclusive title. The presumption against such inclusion being regarded as the act of an exclusive proprietor is much weakened if it be remembered that a Civil Court as well as a Revenue Authority, on effecting ultimate partition, will, so far as possible, allow possession to be retained. One of the several co-sharers, therefore, if he joins a portion of the property in which he has a joint title, to other property in which he has an exclusive title may always reasonably anticipate that he will not necessarily be disturbed, or be put to unjustifiable expense when partition eventually takes place. It is true that in the present case the Civil Court, has in execution proceedings declined to accept the contention that possession must be maintained as far as possible. In this view, however, as I shall show below, the Executing Court was clearly wrong, and I can see no reason to suppose that the defendant anticipated that, if his title was other than exclusive, he would necessarily be deprived of a portion of the property which he had added to his personal acquisition. Further, it may be remarked that this argument can only apply to one of the two houses now in suit. The lettered portion of house A has not been included in any adjoining property acquired by the defendant. I must hold, therefore, in the present case that there is nothing to show an overt assertion of exclusive ownership on the part of the defendant.

On the above findings the appeal of the defendant fails.

I now turn to the cross-objections by the plaintiffs regarding the "seraicha" which has been found by the Trial Court to be the exclusive property of the defendant and respecting which the suit has been dismissed. This property is a small serai. It was purchased in 1880 in the name of Ghulam Haider Khan alone in an auction-sale held by the Municipality of Peshawar. The title-deed to this serai, therefore, is in the defendant's name alone and the onus of proving that he is, nevertheless, not the exclusive owner must rest heavily on the plaintiffs. This onus they do not appear in any way to have discharged. In fact, there are only two points put forward by them to impugn the presumption. One is that there were certain other deeds executed in 1881 and 1883 in favour of Jangul Khan and Khan Baba Khan, the property dealt with by which was, nevertheless, treated as joint family property. I am unable to see, however, that any particular inference is to be drawn from these deeds and there is no other evidence to support the contention of the plaintiffs. The other point which plaintiffs have argued in these cross-objections is that the defendant in the Trial Court, produced a lease-deed relating to the serai with a view to showing that he had made a lease of it in the capacity of exclusive owner in the year 1908. It is argued that this deed shows unmistakeably signs of having been tampered with, and that it is, therefore, a forgery, and that the deed really related to a lease made in 1912. The Trial Court did not consider it necessary to take up the question as to whether there had or had not been a forgery, and I do not consider that it is necessary for me to re-open it in the present appeal, inasmuch as the production of the deed is quite immaterial to the suit. It is not in the least necessary for the defendant, in my opinion, to prove an adverse possession extending over more than 12 years, as he has proved an exclusive title quite independently of this and as the plaintiffs have been quite unable to rebut the existence of that title. I hold that the Trial Court has correctly dismissed the claim to the "seraicha" and I dismiss the cross-objections of the plaintiffs.

It remains to consider the appeal which has been lodged by the defendant in respect of the order of the Court in execution refusing to allow actual possession to be taken into consideration in carrying out the partition.

GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN V. SARDAR ALI KHAN.

The Trial Court has, it is pointed out, alluded to the inconvenience and injustice which may accrue to the defendant if he is deprived of property of which he is now in possession and upon which he has incurred expense. The Court, nevertheless, considered that it was legally debarred from passing an order to maintain the possession in partition unless the parties themselves consented to such a mode of partition. In this respect it is not seriously contended by the respondents' Counsel that the Court had a discretion far wider than that with which it believed it was invested. It is pointed out, however, for the respondents that what the defendant in this case really demanded was that he should be allowed to retain possession of the whole of the property, the other side being compensated with money. Section 4 of the Partition Act refers to cases where a share in a dwelling-house belonging to an undivided family has been transferred to a person who is not a member of such a family. But at the same time an Executing Court can be governed by principles of equity in adjusting the mode of partition. This is the view taken in Basunta Kumar Ghosh v. Moti Lal Ghosh (5) (a Calcutta ruling), Debi Sahai v. Tara Chand (6) (Punjab) and Fatteh Chand v. Bilas Rai (7). The first of these rulings is an authority for the proposition that even where section 4 of the Partition Act does not apply, it is a well-known principle of equity that property must, so far as possible, be left in possession of the person in occupation. The Punjab ruling also recognises the power of a Court to give effect to actual possession. So far, therefore, as the present Court believed itself to be entirely debarred from considering the question of maintaining the possession of any one of the parties, its order can only be considered as wrong. At the same time, the respondents' contention has this much weight that there may not be, in the present case, any good reason for allowing the defendant to retain possession¹¹ of the whole of those portions of the property which he occupies, or to insist that the plaintiffs must accept monetary compensation instead of actual property. What is required in the present case is an equitable partition of the property itself allowing the defendant, so far as possible, to retain possession of such portions occupied by him as cannot be taken from him without wholly unjustifiable inconvenience and expense. The plaintiffs should receive a portion of the actual property and it will be for the Executing Court to decide whether these portions sufficiently cover their proportionate claims, or whether any adjustment is required in the way of monetary compensation. I, therefore, overrule the order of the Executing Court dated the 7th November 1921 as wrongly decided upon a preliminary point and remand the execution proceedings for a fresh decision. It so happens that the present presiding officer of the Executing Court is Sardar Ali Khan, who is a party to the present appeal as representative of his deceased father K. B. Khan Baba Khan. It will, therefore, be impossible for the execution proceedings to be decided by him. I direct that they be transferred to the Court of the District Judge of Peshawar who will dispose of them in the manner which I have indicated above.

On the above findings, the appeal by Ghulam Haider Khan in the original suit is dismissed with costs. The cross-objections of the plaintiffs in the original suit are also dismissed with costs. The appeal of Ghulam Haider Khan against the order of the 7th of November 1921 in execution is accepted, that order is set aside and the execution proceedings are remanded for fresh decision. The costs of the appellant in the execution appeal to be borne by the respondents.

Z. K.

Order accordingly.

(5) 11 Ind. Cas. 370; 15 C. W. N. 555 Note; 6 C. L. J. 8 Note.

(6) 44 Ind. Cas. 1351; 44 P. W. R. 1918; 22 P. L. R. 1918.

(7) 34 Ind. Cas. 587; 61 P. L. R. 1916; 89 P. W. R. 1916; 96 P. R. 1916; 140 P. W. R. 1916.

DWARKA DAS V. RAHIM BAKHSH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 786
of 1922.

February 20, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway.

DWARKA DAS—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER
versusRAHIM BAKHSH—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115,
O. VII, r. 10, O. XLIII, r. 1 (a)—Order directing return of plaint confirmed on appeal—Revision.*

Where a Trial Court holds that it has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit and its order is upheld on appeal, the order of the Appellate Court is open to revision by the High Court. [p. 756, col. 1.] (Case-law discussed.)

Petition, under section 44 of Act VI of 1913, for revision of the order of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Multan, dated the 28th July 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Multan, dated the 25th May 1922.

Lala Har Gopal, for the Petitioner.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Dwarka Das of Multan sued Rahim Bakhsh of Hoshiarpur District for Rs. 380 alleged to be due by the defendant on account of damages for breach of a contract. An objection was taken by Rahim Bakhsh to the effect that the Court at Multan had no jurisdiction to try the case, inasmuch as the cause of action had arisen wholly in Hoshiarpur. This plea was given effect to by the learned Munsif who dismissed the suit. Against this order of dismissal the plaintiff preferred an appeal to the Subordinate Judge who held that the learned Munsif was wrong in dismissing the suit and should have returned the plaint under O. VII, r. 10, for presentation to the proper Court. Agreeing with the learned Munsif that the Multan Court had no jurisdiction, the learned Subordinate Judge returned the case to the learned Munsif with the direction that action under O. VII, r. 10, Civil Procedure Code should be taken. Against this order the plaintiff has come up to this Court in revision through Mr. Hargopal and I have heard Mr. Fakir Chand for Rahim Bakhsh.

Mr. Fakir Chand has urged that, inasmuch as the learned Subordinate Judge was properly seized of the case, his order is not open to revision by this Court, reliance being placed on Chhubu Mian v. Har Charan Das (1); Arur Singh v. Bua Ditta (2); Dowlat Ram v. Asa Ram (3); Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (4) and Chandu Lal v. Kokamal (5). On the other hand, Mr. Hargopal referred to Jagan Nath-Diwan Chand v. Jagan Nath-Moti Lal (6); Vuppuluri Atchayya v. Sri Kanchumarti Venkata Sectarama Chandra Rao (7); Durga Parshad-Mutsaddi Lal v. Rulia Mal-Dogar Mal (8); Damri Shah-Thakur Ram v. Rulia Mal-Dogar Mal (9); Zamiran v. Fateh Ali (10) and Vishwanath Govind Deshmone v. Rambhat (11). The question is not free from difficulty as the authorities cited are conflicting. In Chhubu Mian v. Har Charan Das (1) Scott-Smith, J., held that an order passed under similar circumstances was not open to revision. In this case Arur Singh v. Bua Ditta (2) was followed which followed Dowlat Ram v. Asa Ram (3). In Jagan Nath-Diwan Chand v. Jagan Nath-Moti Lal (6) the same learned Judge appears to have taken a different view and, following Vuppuluri Atchayya v. Sri Kanchumarti Venkata Sectarama Chandra Rao (7) and Kam Labhaya v. Bishan Das (12), as well as Durga Parshad-Mutsaddi Lal v. Rulia Mal-Dogar Mal (8), he held that while interference in revision is ordinarily inadvisable in such cases, this Court's revisional powers could be exercised in exceptional cases to remedy an injustice, and

(1) 18 Ind. Cas. 529; 119 P. R. 1912; 101 P. L. R. 1913; 48 P. W. R. 1913.

(2) 9 Ind. Cas. 674; 4 P. R. 1911; 45 P. L. R. 1911; 26 P. W. R. 1911.

(3) 46 P. R. 1886.

(4) 11 C. 6; 11 L. A. 237; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 559; Ratique and Jackson's P. C. No. 83; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760 (P. C.).

(5) 61 Ind. Cas. 361; 43 A. 334; 19 A. L. J. 110.

(6) 71 Ind. Cas. 38.

(7) 18 Ind. Cas. 555; 39 M. 195; 13 M. L. T. 60; 24 M. L. J. 112.

(8) 65 Ind. Cas. 282; 4 L. L. J. 176; 29 P. L. R. 1922; (1922) A. L. R. (L) 100.

(9) 64 Ind. Cas. 387; 2 L. L. J. 555; 17 P. L. R. 1922.

(10) 32 C. 146.

(11) 15 B. 148; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 99.

(12) 3 Ind. Cas. 607; 77 P. R. 1909; 124 P. L. R. 1909; 125 P. W. R. 1909.

QADIR BAKHSH V. SHAMAS DIN.

proceeding on that view the learned Judge did interfere in revision. In the present case the question is whether the Multan Courts had jurisdiction to try the case. A reference to the correspondence between the parties seems to indicate that the contract for the supply of coal, a breach of which has resulted in this case, was entered into at Multan and, therefore, it would appear that the learned Munsif was wrong in declining jurisdiction. It is true that the Hoshiarpur Courts also have jurisdiction to deal with the case, but it cannot be denied that a plaintiff has the right to select the forum, and it is certainly a hardship to force him to institute the suit at Hoshiarpur when the Multan Courts have jurisdiction. It is true that their Lordships of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (4) have laid down that a Court having jurisdiction to dispose of a case is at liberty to decide that case wrongly and that a wrong decision would not necessarily render its order open to revision. But that case is to some extent distinguishable inasmuch as the question of jurisdiction did not therein arise, whereas it is just this question of jurisdiction which has to be determined in the present case. I admit that a conflict in the authorities on the point renders the decision a little difficult, but having regard to the most recent pronouncement of this Court, as reported in Jagan Nath-Diwan Chand v. Jagan Nath-Moti Lal (6), I think I would be justified in interfering, and, I, therefore, accept this revision and direct the Court at Multan to receive the plaint and dispose of the suit in accordance with law. In the circumstances, however, I leave the parties to bear their own costs in this Court.

Z. K.

Petition accepted.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL

No. 2154 OF 1921.

November 16, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice FRODWARD.

QADIR BAKHSH—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

VERSUS

SHAMAS DIN—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 23, O. XLIII, r. 1 (u)—Appeal against order of remand—Finding of fact based on misappreciation of case—High Court, interference by.

In an appeal from an order of remand findings of fact cannot be examined in second appeal, but where it appears that the first Appellate Court has failed to appreciate the real question in controversy between the parties, the High Court will interfere and direct a re-hearing of the appeal. [p. 758, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Lyallpur, dated the 5th July 1921, from the Munsif, first Class, Chiniot, District Jhang, dated the 12th January 1920.

Mr. Fakir Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. Feroz-ud din Ahmad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Khuda Bakhsh, son of Muhammad Bakhsh, of Chiniot purchased 8½ marlas of land situate in the town of Chiniot from 26 persons under five deeds of sale. On the 11th January 1919 one Shamas Din, son of Muhammad Yar, filed a pre-emption suit claiming to be entitled to pre-empt this site as against Khuda Bakhsh. On the 3rd February 1919, Khuda Bakhsh appeared in Court and stated that he had, on the 11th January 1919, transferred the entire site to one Qadir Bakhsh and had, therefore, no further interest in the matter. Qadir Bakhsh was accordingly impleaded and as he was a minor his uncle Ibrahim was made his guardian ad litem. On behalf of Qadir Bakhsh it was pleaded that he had purchased the site in question from Khuda Bakhsh and that he had at least an equal right to pre-empt. Shamas Din, the plaintiff, very stoutly contended that the sale to Qadir Bakhsh was a fictitious one and that Khuda Bakhsh was still the real owner of the property. The Trial Court framed issues as to the existence of the custom of pre-emption and whether the plaintiff had a preferential right to pre-empt as against

QADIR BAKHSH v. SHAMAS DIN.

both the vendees. The third issue was as follows :—

"If the plaintiff's plea of superiority fails against Qadir Bakhsh, is the second sale in favour of the latter a fictitious transaction collusively contracted with a view to defeat the plaintiff?"

The fourth and fifth issues related to the market price and the amount paid. It was held that the right of pre-emption existed in that particular quarter of the town of Chinot and that Shamas Din's right to pre-empt was superior to that of Khuda Bakhsh but that Qadir Bakhsh had an equal right. The third issue was decided against the plaintiff, it being held that the sale to Qadir Bakhsh was not a fictitious transaction. The plaintiff's suit was accordingly dismissed, no decision being given with regard to Issues Nos. 4 and 5.

The plaintiff then preferred an appeal to the District Judge who held that the second sale purporting to be in favour of Qadir Bakhsh was really in favour of his uncle Ibrahim and, acting under O. XII, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code, he remanded the case for a fresh decision, at the same time directing that Ibrahim should be made a party. Against this order of remand an appeal was preferred to this Court on behalf of Qadir Bakhsh, minor, under O. XLII, r. 1 (u). The appeal was disposed of on the 31st May 1922, by Mr. Justice Brasher being heard ex parte as neither Shamas Din nor his Counsel appeared. Subsequently, on the 21st July 1922, Mr. Justice Brasher set aside the ex parte order and I have now heard Mr. Fakir Chand on behalf of the appellant, Qadir Bakhsh, and Mr. Feroz-ud-Din Ahmad for the respondent Shamas Din.

Mr. Feroz ud-Din contended that the finding of the District Judge that the sale purporting to be in favour of Qadir Bakhsh was in fact in favour of Ibrahim was a finding of fact which could not be examined in second appeal and referred me to Sawan Singh v. Mothu (1), Waryam Singh v. Harnam Singh

(2) and Honda Ram v. Hotu Ram (3). In Sawan Singh v. Mothu (1) it was held that an appeal against an order of remand under O. XII, r. 23 based solely on a finding of fact is not competent. To the same effect was the decision in Waryam Singh v. Harnam Singh (2) as well as in Honda Ram v. Hotu Ram (3). Sawan Singh v. Mothu (1) was considered by a Full Bench of this Court in a case reported as Umri v. Shah Mohammad (4) but was not overruled. Waryam Singh v. Harnam Singh (2) and Honda Ram v. Hotu Ram (3) do not appear to have been cited before the Full Bench and as I understand the situation it is that, in an appeal from an order of remand, findings of fact cannot be examined by this Court sitting as a Court of second appeal.

Mr. Fakir Chand admitted that the finding of the learned District Judge that Ibrahim was the real vendee in the sale by Khuda Bakhsh is one of fact, but he contended that the District Judge has entirely misunderstood the case and has failed to appreciate the real question in controversy between the parties, and that, therefore, the appeal to him had not been properly tried. He contended, therefore, that, in such circumstances, the appeal should at least be re-heard.

As has been stated above, when Khuda Bakhsh came into Court and alleged that he having sold the land in suit to Qadir Bakhsh, had no further interest in it, the plaintiff clearly asserted that the alleged sale in favour of Qadir Bakhsh was entirely fictitious and ineffectual, Khuda Bakhsh still being the real owner of the land. Nowhere was it pleaded that Ibrahim was the real vendee under the second sale. The Trial Court held the sale was not fictitious and had been made in favour of Qadir Bakhsh. In the grounds of appeal to the District Court the plaintiff reiterated his contention that the sale was in fact no sale at all having been but a fictitious transaction entered into with a view to defeat his right of pre-emption. Nowhere

(2) 48 Ind. Cas. 379; 109 P. R. 1918; 23 P. L. R. 1919.

(3) 59 Ind. Cas. 715; 2 L. 25; 31 P. W. R. 1921; (1922) A. I. R. (L) 97.

(4) 68 Ind. Cas. 849; 3 L. 218; 4 L. L. J. 359; (1922) A. I. R. (L) 178 (F. B.).

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 817; 85 P. R. 1914; 162 P. L. R. 1914; 120 P. W. R. 1914.

GANDA SINGH v. BHAN.

at any time was it alleged by either of the parties that, as a matter of fact, the sale had been effected in favour of Ibrahim. The question as to who was the vendee never having been raised was never put in issue nor was Ibrahim ever made a party. The finding of the learned District Judge thus appears to have been based on misappreciation of the true controversy between the parties and he does not appear to have realised that the question for decision was whether the sale in question was a fictitious one or not. I, therefore, think that, in such circumstances, a re-hearing of the appeal by the District Judge is necessary. In this view I am supported by a case decided by a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court reported in Dibakar Nag v. Mritunjoy Bhattacharya (5).

I, therefore, accept this appeal and, setting aside the order of the learned District Judge, dated the 5th July 1921, return the appeal to the District Court for a re-hearing and a re-decision in accordance with law.

Costs in this Court will follow the event.
W. C. A. & N. H. Appeal accepted.

(5) 13 Ind. Cas. 495.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1422 OF
1922.

January 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

GANDA SINGH—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

BHAN—VENDOR—DEFENDANT FOR SELF
AND AS REPRESENTATIVE OF HIS BROTHER
BANSI DAS, DECEASED—PLAINTIFF—
PRE-EMPTOR—RESPONDENT.

*Pre-emption—Death of pre-emptor after decree, effect of—Sale of land of value of Rs. 100 by unregistered deed, whether liable to pre-emption—
Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17, 49—
Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 58, 91.*

A pre-emption decree cannot be affected by anything which happens after it is made.

Niaz Ali v. Muhammad Ramzan, 37 Ind. Cas. 227; 130 P. R. 1916; 193 P. W. R. 1916, Thamman Singh v. Santa, 53 Ind. Cas. 457; 119 P. R. 1919; 80 P. L. R. 1920 and Aima Singh v. Hem Raj Shah, 59 Ind. Cas. 939, followed.

After a decree had been passed in a pre-emption suit the pre-emptor died and the original vendor was his only legal representative:

Held, that this did not affect the decree which had been passed and did not involve the dismissal of the suit on appeal.

In an appeal against a pre-emption decree the Appellate Court has only to see whether the decree was correct when it was passed.

In the Punjab the law does not require a sale of immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or upwards to be by a registered instrument, but merely prevents an unregistered deed of sale for Rs. 100 or upwards from affecting the property dealt with or from being used as evidence to affect it.

A sale of immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or upwards effected by means of an unregistered deed of sale is, nevertheless, a sale and is liable to pre-emption.

Janki v. Girjadas, 7 A. 482; A. W. N. (1885) 97; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 749 (F. B.), relied on.

In a suit to pre-empt a sale of land sold for Rs. 100, the sale was admitted in the pleadings and the vendee subsequently produced an unregistered deed of sale:

Held, that the sale having been admitted in the pleadings no further proof of it was required under section 58 of the Evidence Act, and the provisions of section 91 of the Act could not, therefore, come into play.

Second appeal from a decree of the Additional District Judge, Lahore, dated the 24th February 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Lahore, dated the 3rd January 1921.

Lala Amar Nath Chona, for Lala Lachhmi Narain, for the Appellant.

Diwan Mehr Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal in a case where both the Courts below have concurred in giving the plaintiff a decree for possession by pre-emption of the property in suit for Rs. 100.

The first contention raised is that the pre-emptor died after the decree and pending the appeal in the lower Appellate Court and that the original vendor himself being his legal representative the suit should now be dismissed on appeal. No valid grounds for this argument have been put forward. It was ruled in Niaz Ali v. Muhammad Ramzan (1) that a pre-emption decree could not be affected by anything which

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 227; 130 P. R. 1916; 193 P. W. R. 1916.

SALIG RAM v. BADHAWA;

happened after it was made, and analogous cases are Thamman Singh v. Santa (2) and Atma Singh v. Hem Raj Shah (3). The Appellate Court has to see whether the decree was correct when it was passed. If the pre-emptor had survived until after the decision of the present appeal and had then died, the property in suit presumably would have gone back to the vendor as his heir.

The second point is that the sale price was Rs. 100, and the sale-deed was unregistered. The fact does not render the transfer something other than a sale within the meaning of the Punjab Pre-emption Act. In Janki v. Girjadat (4) there was a sale which the Transfer of Property Act required to be by registered deed and in spite of there being no such registered deed, a Full Bench held that there had been a pre-emptible sale. In this Province the law does not require a sale of immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100. and upwards to be by registered instrument but merely prevents an unregistered deed of sale for Rs. 100 or upwards from affecting the property dealt with or from being used as evidence to affect it. The pre-emptor in this case did not use the sale-deed and did not wish to use it. It was produced in Court by the vendee, after the sale had been admitted in the pleadings and when, under section 58 of the Evidence Act, no proof was required of the sale. Thus section 91 of the same Act would not come into operation in any case.

The third point raised is as regards limitation. The learned Counsel for the appellant is obliged to concede that no other Article in the circumstances is applicable except Art. 120 which has been applied by the Courts below.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 53 Ind. Cas. 457; 119 P. R. 1919; 80 P. L. R. 1920.

(3) 59 Ind. Cas. 939.

(4) 7 A. 482; A. W. N. (1885) 97; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 749 (F. B.)

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1036 OF 1920.

March 2, 1923.

Present.—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Zaiar Ali.

SALIG RAM—VENDEE—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

BADHAWA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND MANGAL—VENDOR—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENTS.

Custom v. Personal law—Brahmans of Gokalgarh, District Ambala—Burden of proof.

The circumstance that a family or a tribe has departed from its personal law in one respect; for instance, the incompetency of a daughter to inherit her father's property, does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that it has adopted agricultural custom in all other respects. [p. 760, col. 1.]

The initial presumption in the case of Brahmans is that they are governed by their personal law and the onus is on the person who sets up a custom restricting a Brahman proprietor's powers of alienation to establish it. [p. 759, col. 2.]

The Brahmans of Gokalgarh in the Ambala District are not governed by agricultural custom in matters of alienation.

Ambala is, ethnically and by language, more connected with the United Provinces than the Punjab, and the Brahmans of that District follow their personal law and do not observe any custom like that of the agriculturists of the Punjab. [p. 760, col. 1.]

Kapuria v. Mangal, 149 P. R. 1908; 192 P. W. R. 1908, followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ambala, dated the 24th March 1920, reversing that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Ambala, dated the 4th March 1919.

Lala Jagan Nath, for the Appellant.

Mr. Devi Dial, for the Plaintiffs-Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 19th July 1918, one Mangal, a Brahman of Mauza Gokalgarh, in the District of Ambala, sold a plot of land to the defendant, Salig Ram, for Rs. 2,400. The plaintiffs, who are the reversioners of the vendor, contest the sale on the usual grounds, and the only question for determination is whether the Brahmans of Gokalgarh are governed in the matter of alienation by agricultural custom. Now, it is beyond dispute that the initial presumption in the case of Brahman is that they are governed by their personal law, and the onus on the plaintiffs to establish a custom restricting the proprietor's power of alienation.

PUNNU LAL, V. BHOJA RAM.

In support of the custom set up by them the plaintiffs rely upon the fact that almost the whole of the agricultural land in the village belongs to Brahmans who depend mainly on agriculture for their livelihood. They also invite our attention to the oral evidence which shows that a daughter is excluded from succession to the estate of her father; but the circumstance that a family or a tribe has departed from its personal law in one respect, namely, the incompetency of a daughter to inherit her father's property does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that it has adopted agricultural custom in all other respects. It is conceded that there is not a single case, judicial or otherwise, in which the authority of a Brahman proprietor to alienate his ancestral land was ever challenged. On the other hand, we have evidence to the effect that during the last 30 years there have been no less than 130 alienations in this village, and the witnesses for the plaintiffs themselves admit that not a single alienation has been contested by either the son or the reversioner. In these circumstances, we are of the opinion that the plaintiffs on whom the onus rested have failed to establish the custom invoked by them.

It is to be observed that in Kapuria v. Mangal (1), it was held by the Punjab Chief Court that in matters of alienations Brahmans of Mauza Sambaka, in the Ambala District, were governed by the Hindu Law and not by custom. As pointed out in that judgment, Ambala is ethnically and by language more connected with the United Provinces than the Punjab, and the Brahmans of that District follow their personal law and do not observe any custom like that of the agriculturists of the Punjab.

For the aforesaid reasons we accept the appeal and, reversing the decree of the District Judge, restore that of the Court of first instance with costs throughout.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

1) 149 P. R. 1908; 192 P. W. R. 1908.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 208 OF 1922.

April 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Piwon, J. C.

Lala PUNNU LAL AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

Rai Sahib Lala BHOJA RAM AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), ss. 77 (3), (i), 98—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Suit by superior proprietor for declaration of right to recover dues in kind from inferior proprietor, nature of—Suit, whether cognisable by Civil or Revenue Court—Direction under s. 98, whether confers jurisdiction on Civil Court—Jurisdiction, whether can be conferred by consent.

Parties to a suit cannot confer jurisdiction upon any Court by mutual agreement. [p. 762, col. 1.]

A suit for a declaration of the right of a superior proprietor to recover dues in kind from an inferior proprietor is essentially one arising out of the conditions of a tenancy and is excluded from the cognisance of a Civil Court by section 77 (3), (i) of the Punjab Tenancy Act. [p. 762, col. 1.]

Section 98 of the Punjab Tenancy Act refers solely to the action of a Revenue Court. It confers upon the Revenue Court a certain power of making a direction to the parties before it. That direction may bind the parties, but it does not necessarily bind a Civil Court, or confer upon that Court a jurisdiction which it would not otherwise possess. Where a Revenue Court refers the parties to a civil suit under the provisions of section 98 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, the Civil Court does not thereby acquire jurisdiction to hear a suit which it would otherwise be incompetent to entertain under the other provisions of the law. [p. 763, cols. 1 & 2.]

Reference made by the Divisional Judge, Derajat, under his No. 75 Cl. dated the 17th March 1922.

Mr. Udhe Khan, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—The material facts of the case are these. Rai Sahib Bhoja Ram is the superior proprietor or "ala malik" of certain lands situated in Ratta Kulachi in the Dera Ismail Khan District: the defendants Lala Punnu Lal and others are inferior proprietors or "adna maliks" of the same land. Prior to the Settlement of 1903 the "adna maliks" of this village ordinarily paid certain dues to the "ala maliks" in kind. In the Settlement of 1903 these dues were, in the majority of cases, commuted by order of the Collector into cash payment. No order in this respect, however, was actually recorded with regard to the land to which this suit relates. Rai Sahib Bhoja Ram instituted in a Revenue Court a suit for the recovery of arrears of these dues calculated upon certain payments in kind. He based his claim upon an agreement made between the predecessors of the parties on the 21st of August 1879. The defendants repudiated the validity of this agreement and pleaded, inter alia, that the question as to the plaintiff's right to recover dues from them in kind was one which could only be decided by a Civil Court. The Revenue Court in which the suit for these arrears had been lodged, applied under section 98 of the Punjab Tenancy Act, for the sanction of the Collector to refer the plaintiff to a separate suit for the establishment of his claim to recover the dues claimed in kind. The Collector duly granted the sanction. It is not specifically stated in the application of the Revenue Court that the plaintiff be referred to a Civil Court. The order of the Collector, however, refers specifically to a suit in a Civil Court. In any case, sanction was applied for under section 98 of the Tenancy Act, it must be presumed that the Revenue Court intended to refer the plaintiff to a Civil Court. The plaintiff then lodged in a Civil Court the present suit for a declaration that he was entitled to recover from the defendants in kind the dues claimed. A preliminary point was raised by the defendants that the suit was not cognizable by a Civil Court. The Sub-Judge who heard the suit adjudicated upon this plea by a preliminary order holding that he had jurisdiction. Against this order the defendants applied to the Judicial Commissioner for revision. The Judicial Commissioner declined to interfere purely on the ground that the order challenged was of an interlocutory nature and that no revisional proceedings could lie. He did not touch the question as to whether the Sub-Judge was or was not right in holding that he had jurisdiction to determine the suit. The suit has now been determined by the Sub-Judge and the plaintiff granted a decree. The defendants appealed to the Divisional Court and one of the grounds of appeal was that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the claim. The Divisional Judge has come to the conclusion that the declaratory suit was one cognizable only by a Revenue Court and has referred the case to me, under section 100 of the Tenancy Act, for the decree to be registered as that of a Revenue Court. If his recommendation is accepted, the effect of my order would be to oust the jurisdiction both of the Divisional Judge and of my Court and to allow the defendants to appeal to the Court of the Revenue Commissioner.

PUNNU LAL, V. BHOJA RAM.

The case was argued before me yesterday by Mr. Udhe Bhan for the plaintiff and by one of the defendants Lala Punnu Lal who is himself a Pleader. Mr. Udhe Bhan argued that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to try the suit and resisted the recommendation made by the Divisional Court for its registration in a Revenue Court. Lala Punnu Lal for the defendants supported the view of the Divisional Judge in so far as it related to the contention that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction. He opposed, however, the recommendation that the decree should be registered as one of a Revenue Court. In support of his opposition to registration of the decree as that of a Revenue Court he relied, inter alia, upon two arguments (a) that the commutation of dues paid by the inferior proprietors to superior proprietors was a question which a Revenue Officer, as opposed to a Revenue Court, had power to dispose of under section 146 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, and that under section 158 of the said Act a Civil Court could have no jurisdiction in any matter which a Revenue Officer was empowered by the Act to dispose of, or to take cognizance of.

(b) That as the Sub-Judge who heard the suit, was not invested with any powers of a Revenue Court, his decree could not be registered as that of a Revenue Court.

Counsel were heard at some length upon their respective contentions. At to-day's adjourned hearing, however, they stated before me that they had, to this extent, agreed upon the questions involved, so far as they affected the present suit only, that the plaintiff was prepared to admit that the suit was cognizable by a Revenue Court only, and that the defendants would similarly withdraw their opposition to the decree being registered as that of a Revenue Court. At the same time, it must be remembered that parties to a suit cannot confer jurisdiction upon any Court by a mutual agreement, and it is, therefore, necessary for me to adjudicate upon the question of jurisdiction. Further, Mr. Udhe Bhan, while withdrawing his attempt to establish that the Civil Court has jurisdiction so far as the present suit is concerned, continued strenuously to urge upon me the contention which he had already argued, that the Civil Court had full jurisdiction. I deal with this question, therefore, in more detail.

PUNNU LAL v. BHOJA RAM.

It cannot be seriously denied that the original suit was correctly lodged in the Revenue Court and was governed by section 77 (3) (p) of the Punjab Tenancy Act. This, however, would not necessarily imply that a suit for a declaration of the rights of a superior proprietor to recover dues from an inferior proprietor would also be governed by the same provision. This point has, I think, been lost sight of by the Divisional Judge when he quotes section 77 (3) (p) of the Tenancy Act, in support of his view. At the same time, I do not think it can be seriously argued that a suit for a declaration of this nature is not essentially one arising out of the conditions of a tenancy, and that it would not be, in ordinary circumstances, a suit cognizable by a Revenue Court only. This, of course, is without prejudice to the argument put forward by the other side that the suit is not cognizable by a Court at all, whether Civil or Revenue, on the ground that the question for determination is one for disposal by a Revenue Officer under the provisions of section 146 of the Land Revenue Act. But the argument put forward by Mr. Udhe Bhan is really of a different nature. He contends that whether or not a Civil Court would have jurisdiction to decide a suit of this nature, if instituted before it by a party on his own motion, it has, nevertheless, jurisdiction over a suit of any nature, even one cognizable purely by a Revenue Court, when once a valid reference has been made to it under section 98 of the Tenancy Act. In other words, the contention of the learned Counsel is that a Revenue Court has jurisdiction under section 98 to decide that any question of any description which may come before it is more proper for decision by a Civil Court and that, when it decides that such a question is more proper for decision by a Civil Court and when the Collector's sanction is duly given, it is quite immaterial whether or not that question is one upon which a Civil Court could otherwise adjudicate. He goes so far as to argue that a suit cognizable purely by a Revenue Court and excluded from the cognizance of a Civil Court by all other provisions of the Tenancy Act, may nevertheless be tried by a Civil Court whenever the parties are referred to it under section 98 of the Tenancy Act. In support of his view he refers me to the Punjab Chief Court Rules and Orders, Vol. I, section 4 (new Edition) and lays particular stress upon the words of paragraph 7 (2) of the same where the framers of the order say, "Section 98 of the Punjab Tenancy Act and section 117 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act empower Revenue Officers and Courts to refer certain matters to the adjudication of Civil Courts, and when an order has been duly made under either of those sections, the Civil Courts would have jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the matters referred to them." He wishes it to be inferred from this that a Revenue Court has actually the power of conferring jurisdiction upon a Civil Court to try a suit which would otherwise be excluded from that Civil Court's jurisdiction. He has been unable to show me any direct precedent in which such a view has been taken by the highest Civil or Revenue Authority of the Punjab or this Province. He refers me, however, to a ruling of the Financial Commissioner of the Punjab published as Ganga Singh v. Badr-ud din (1). In that case a Revenue Court had referred the parties to a Civil Court upon a certain question of occupancy rights which it would appear was essentially one for the decisions of a Revenue Court. When application for sanction to this reference was made to the Collector, the Collector proceeded to determine and adjudicate upon the suit on its merits as a revenue suit. The Financial Commissioner held that the action of the Collector was ultra vires, the sole question before him for decision being whether or not sanction should be given under section 98 of the Tenancy Act. It may be admitted that there is a certain implication in this order that, although the suit was one triable by a Revenue Court, the latter was, nevertheless, empowered to make a valid reference to a Civil Court under section 98. I doubt, however, if the learned Financial Commissioner fully intended to go as far as the judgment would appear to imply. He was mainly concerned with the action of the Collector in treating a mere application for sanction to make a reference as a proceeding which allowed him to adjudicate upon the merits of the suit. I am by no means sure, therefore, whether this ruling is a clear precedent for the position which the learned Counsel seeks to establish. On the other hand, there appear to me to be many considerations which militate against his view. The learned Divisional Judge is, I think, beside the point when he quotes section 6 of the Civil Procedure Code as applicable to the question. Section 6 refers only to the question of the pecuniary jurisdiction of Civil Courts. Section 9, however, would appear to me to apply. This section runs as follows:—"The Courts shall (subject to the provisions herein contained) have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature excepting suits of which their cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred." Now the jurisdiction of Civil Courts in matters which are cognizable by Revenue Courts is expressly barred by Statute. To admit the validity of Mr. Udhe Bhan's contention we must assume that this bar is removed by section 98 of the Tenancy Act or, in other words, that Revenue Courts have, if they so wish, the power of conferring upon Civil Courts jurisdiction which they would otherwise not possess, purely on the ground that a Revenue Court considers the question "more proper" for decision by a Civil Court. I think that it would be extremely difficult to accept this view. Section 98 refers solely to the action of a Revenue Court. It confers upon the Revenue Court a certain power making a direction to the parties before it. That direction may bind the parties, but I cannot see how it can necessarily bind a Civil Court or confer upon that Court a jurisdiction which it would not otherwise possess. Again, if the contention of the learned Counsel is really a correct exposition of the law, I cannot believe it possible that there would not have been cases both in the Punjab and in the North-West Frontier Province in which the position would not have been clearly defined. I cannot agree that the wording of section 98 is so clear that no ruling upon the point has ever been required. On the contrary, I can state unhesitatingly that, so far as the North-West Frontier Province is concerned, it has been the invariable practice for the question of the respective jurisdictions of a Civil and a Revenue Court to be decided by reference to section 77 of the Tenancy Act, and not by any principle that valid jurisdiction arises by reason of a mere reference under section 98. I must hold, therefore, that when a Revenue Court refers the parties to a civil suit under the provisions of section 98 of the Tenancy Act, the Civil Court does not thereby acquire jurisdiction to hear a suit which it would otherwise be incompetent to entertain under all other provisions of the law. It follows from the above finding that the present decree cannot remain as one passed by a Civil Court. On the withdrawal by the defendants of their opposition to the registration of the decree by a Revenue Court, I need not deal at length with the further questions involved. So far as I am aware, there is no justification for the contention that the decree cannot be registered as that of a Revenue Court, because the Sub-Judge was invested only with civil powers. The other contention raised by the defendants that the jurisdiction of all Courts, either Revenue or Civil, is ousted by the provisions of section 146 and section 158 of the Land Revenue Act, because the matter is one with which a Revenue Officer was empowered to deal, is undoubtedly more formidable. I have, however, once the decree is registered as that of a Revenue Court, no further jurisdiction to adjudicate upon this point. It is one which can be raised by the defendants in their appeal to the Revenue Commissioner to whom an appeal will now lie. I, therefore, accept the recommendation of the Divisional Judge, and under the provisions of section 100 of the GOBIND SARUP v. KULDIP SINGH.

PUNNU LAL v. BHOJA RAM.

Punjab Tenancy Act order the present decree to be registered as the decree of a Revenue Court. The parties will bear their own costs in the present proceeding.

Z. K.

Order accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2838 OF 1918.
(CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS NO. 66 OF 1921.)

January 20, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

GOBIND SARUP AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KULDIP SINGH, MINOR, THROUGH
Musammat SHILA WANTI, HIS MOTHER—
PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—DEFEND-ANTS—RESPONDENTS.

*Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), s. 101—
Merger—Mortgagee acquiring equity of redemption.*

The latter portion of section 101 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply where no intervening incumbrances exist and where a merger of a less estate takes place in a greater estate which is to be distinguished from the merger of a lower in a higher security. Where a mortgagee also becomes the absolute owner of the equity of redemption, the mortgage is extinguished by merger, unless there are any puisne or mesne incumbrances against which the equity of redemption is required to be kept alive. [p. 765, col. 2.]

Bhawani Kumar v. Mathura Prasad Singh, 16 Ind. Cas. 210; 40 C. 89; 16 C. W. N. 985; 12 M. L. T. 352; 23 M. L. J. 311; 16 C. L. J. 606; (1912) M. W. N. 244; 14 Bom. L. R. 1046; 39 I. A. 228 (P. C.); Arumugasundara Maharaja Pillai v. Narasimha Iyer, 29 Ind. Cas. 916; 29 M. L. J. 583; (1915) M. W. N. 397; 2 L. W. 542; 18 M. L. T. 110, Rajah of Kalahasti v. Prayag Dossjee Varu, 35 Ind. Cas. 224; 30 M. L. J. 391; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 92 and Sri Ram v. Ramji Das, 2 Ind. Cas. 949; 59 P. R. 1909; 86 P. L. R. 1909; 94 P. W. R. 1909, relied on.

Khtali Ram v. Gulab Khan, 11 Ind. Cas. 392; 33 P. R. 1911; 190 P. L. R. 1911 and Bur Singh v. Hazara Singh, 63 Ind. Cas. 760; 3 L. 99; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 275, distinguished.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Gurdaspur, at Dailhousie, dated the 28th June 1918, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Gurdaspur, dated the 7th January 1918, Mr. M. L. Puri, for Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a pre-emption suit. The land pre-empted had originally been mortgaged to Ram Chand Khatri and Charan Das Agarwal, but the owner subsequently sold the equity of redemption to Gobind Sarup, son of Ram Chand. The pre-emptor asserted that the son was a benamidar for the father and that the mortgage had merged in the sale. This was denied by Ram Chandra and it was contended on his behalf that the mortgage still subsisted and did not merge in the sale. Section 101 of the Transfer of Property Act, Gokaldas Gopaldas v. Purnamal Premasukhdas (1); Yellapaddi Mahalakshammal v. Sriman Madhva Siddhartha Oonahini Nidhi (2); Khtali Ram v. Gulab Khan (3); Ghanaya v. Pandit Chhajju Ram (4) and Baldeo Parshad v. Uman Shankar (5) were cited in support of this plea. The Trial Court came to the conclusion that the authorities cited were not applicable and that the mortgage merged in the sale because the mortgagee and the purchaser of the equity of redemption were one and the same. In his appeal to the District Judge, Ram Chand raised for the first time the point—which was not mentioned even in the grounds of appeal—that as there was a co-mortgagee with him in the person of Charan Das, the mortgage could not merge in the sale. Having regard to the fact that the name of Charan Das did not appear either in the deed of the sale of the equity of redemption, or in the pleas of the defendant, or in the Revenue Records wherein Ram Chand figured as the sole mortgagee, the learned District Judge presumed that Charan Das had been bought out by Ram Chand. On the question of merger he agreed with the First Court and dismissed the appeal.

(1) 10 C. 1035; 11 I. A. 126; 8 Ind. Jur. 396; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 543; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 692 (P. C.).

(2) 11 Ind. Cas. 865; 35 M. 642; 10 M. L. T. 169; 21 M. L. J. 811; (1922) M. W. N. 24.

(3) 11 Ind. Cas. 392; 33 P. R. 1911; 190 P. L. R. 1911.

(4) 38 P. R. 1894.

(5) 4 Ind. Cas. 810; 32 A. 1; 6 A. L. J. 987.

GOBIND SARUP S. KULDIP SINGH.

In this further appeal to this Court, the defendant-appellants' Counsel, Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, contends (1) that the lower Appellate Court erred in presuming that Charan Das had been bought out, and (2) that in the absence of all evidence to the contrary, the proper inference as to Ram Chand's intention was, that he intended to keep his mortgagee rights alive as evidenced by the fact that he purchased the equity of redemption in the name of his son. Besides the rulings cited by the Trial Court he refers to Dinobundho Shaw Chowdhry v. Jogmaya Dast (6); Gopal Chunder Sreemany v. Herembo Chunder Holdar (7); Girdhar Das v. Ram Aular Singh (8) and Bur Singh v. Hazara Singh (9) and Gour's Law of Transfer of Property, Volume II, page 1284, paragraph 2002. Bakhshi Tek Chand has argued to show that these rulings are not in point and has cited to the contrary Mohesh Lal v. Mohant Bawan Das (10); Bhawant Kumar v. Mathura Prasad Singh (11); Arumugasundara Maharaja Pillai v. Narasimha Iyer (12); Rajah of Kalahasti v. Prayag Dossjee Varu (13); Sri Ram v. Ramji Das (14); Ahmad Shah v. Walidad Khan (15) and Ram Dut Singh v. Balkaran Singh (16) and Dr. Ghose's Law of Mortgages, Volume I, pages 516-17.

As regards (1) we are of opinion that the lower Court was justified in drawing the inference that Charan Das had been bought out, and we need say no more on this point.

As regards (2) the law of merger in this country is codified in section 101 of the Transfer of Property Act, but part 2 of that section does not apply where no intervening incumbrances exist and where a merger of a less estate takes place in a greater estate which is to be distinguished from the merger of a lower in a higher security. In the present case a less estate merged in a greater estate and by purchasing the equity of redemption the mortgagee became the proprietor of the estate and thus the mortgage was extinguished. Bhawant Kumar v. Mathura Prasad Singh (11), which is a Privy Council ruling is one of the authorities on this point. In that case the property mortgaged was sold in execution of a decree obtained by the mortgagee on the mortgage-bond and was purchased by himself. It was held that the purchaser became the proprietor of the estate sold and not merely the purchaser of such right, title and interest in it as the mortgagor might have had.

In Arumugasundara Maharaja Pillai v. Narasimha Iyer (12) it was decided by a Division Bench of the Madras High Court that section 101 of the Transfer of Property Act leaves untouched the general rule of law that when a mortgagee purchases the equity of redemption the encumbrance in this favour is extinguished.

Similarly, a Division Bench of that Court in the case reported as Rajah of Kalahasti v. Prayag Dossjee Varu (13) held that where a mortgagee becomes also absolute owner of the equity of redemption the equitable estate merges in the legal, unless there are any puisne or mesne encumbrances against which the equity is required to be kept alive.

The same view was held by the Punjab Chief Court in Sri Ram v. Ramji Das, (14) where it was decided that when a mortgagee purchases the equity of redemption in respect of the land mortgaged, the mortgagee rights merge in the right of ownership.

Lastly, may be cited the following from Ghose on Mortgages, 5th Edition, Volume I, page 516.—“A merger can take place only when a security comes into immediate contact, so to speak, with the ownership, or, in other words, when they

(6) 29 C. 154; 6 C. W. N. 209; 12 M. L. J. 73; 4 Bom. L. R. 238; 29 I. A. 9 (P. C.).

(7) 16 C. 523; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 345.

(8) 8 C. W. N. 690.

(9) 63 Ind. Cas. 760, 3 L. 99; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 275.

(10) 9 C. 961; 13 C. L. R. 221; 10 I. A. 62; 7 Ind. Jur. 382; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 424; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1291 (P. C.).

(11) 16 Ind. Cas. 210; 40 C. 89; 16 C. W. N. 985; 12 M. L. T. 352; 23 M. L. J. 311; 16 C. L. J. 606; (1912) M. W. N. 244; 14 Bom. L. R. 1046; 39 I. A. 228 (P. C.).

(12) 29 Ind. Cas. 916; 29 M. L. J. 583; (1915) M. W. N. 397; 2 L. W. 542; 18 M. L. T. 110.

(13) 35 Ind. Cas. 224; 30 M. L. J. 391; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 92.

(14) 2 Ind. Cas. 949; 59 P. R. 1909; 86 P. L. R. 1909; 94 P. W. R. 1909.

(15) 98 P. R. 1906; 83 P. L. R. 1906; 63 P. W. R. 1906.

(16) 45 Ind. Cas. 231; 5 O. L. J. 87.

MEHR CHAND V. RAM LAL.

unite without any outstanding interest in a third person."

The authorities said to be the contrary, i.e., Khiali Ram v. Gulab Khan (3) and Girdhar Das v. Ram Autar (8), are distinguishable. In the former the land mortgaged was sold by the widow of the mortgagor who had only a life-estate in the property and, therefore, the sale by her was not held equivalent to a sale by the owner-mortgagor himself. In Girdhar Das v. Ram Autar Singh (8) the facts are not fully stated and, therefore, it cannot be said whether it has any bearing on the facts of the present case.

Having regard to all the authorities reviewed above, we are of opinion that the mortgage was extinguished. Therefore, we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K.

*Appeal dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL

No. 1996 OF 1922.

February 17, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith,MEHR CHAND AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTSversusRAM LAL AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 47, 96—Execution of decree—Order issuing warrant for arrest of judgment-debtor—Appeal, whether lies.

An order issuing a warrant for the arrest of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree is an order under section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and is appealable as a decree under section 96 of the Code.

Ardeshtirji Framji v. Kalyan Das, 3 Ind. Cas. 46; 32 A. 3; 6 A. L. J. 912, relied on.

Miscellaneous first appeal from an order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Gurgaon, dated the 10th July 1922.

Mr. Kanwar Narain, for the Appellants;

Lala Nanwa Mal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the judgment-debtors, Mehr Chand and Hukam Chand, against an order of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, issuing warrants for their arrest in execution of a decree. Lala Nanwa Mal raised a preliminary objection on behalf of the respondents to the effect that no appeal lay and referred to section 104 (1) (b) of the Civil Procedure Code which allows an appeal from an order under any of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure imposing a fine or directing the arrest or detention of any person except where such arrest or detention is in execution of a decree. Mr. Kanwar Narain urges that the order of the lower Court certainly is not appealable as an order under section 104, but that it is appealable as a decree under section 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that it was an order passed under section 47. In my opinion this contention is correct as was held in Ardeshtirji Framji v. Kalyan Das (1).

As regards Mehr Chand, appellant, it is admitted that his father, Mitter Sen, is one of the judgment-debtors. He is the manager of the family to which his son belongs and the Court below has directed a warrant of attachment of moveable and immoveable property to issue against the other judgment-debtors including Mitter Sen. There does not seem to be any reason why Mehr Chand should be arrested at present at all events until it is seen what the result of the attachment of the property belonging to the family is.

As regards Hukam Chand no such reason for not issuing a warrant exists, and the only point urged in the grounds of appeal is that an appeal is pending from the decree sought to be executed, a warrant of arrest should not have issued. The execution of the decree, however, has not been stayed and the mere fact that an appeal is pending is no reason for not enforcing execution by arrest of the judgment-debtor. When Hukam Chand appears before the Court he will have an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be confined in the civil prison, and if he is not satisfied with the order that is passed he will be at liberty to appeal from it.

I accept the present appeal so far as Mehr Chand is concerned and set aside the warrant issued against him. As far as Hukam Chand is concerned the appeal is dismissed.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(1). 3 Ind. Cas. 46; 32 A. 3; 6 A. L. J. 912.

NIHAL, DEVI & CHUNI LAL,

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1916 OF 1921.

January 4, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.Musanimat NIHAL, DEVI AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus*Rai* CHUNI LAL AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Court-Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (iv) (c), Sch. II, Art. 17 (iii)—Suit for declaration that certain property is wakf and that a decree obtained in respect of it shall not affect its nature of—Court-fee payable.

Certain trust property was mortgaged by the trustee to the defendant who obtained a decree on his mortgage and obtained possession of the property. Plaintiffs, who were not parties to the decree, brought a suit for a declaration that the property was public property, that the trustee had no right to mortgage it, and that the decree for possession obtained in respect of it by the defendant was void and inoperative and not liable to execution:

Held, (1) that the suit was in its essence one for a declaration only and that the plaintiff did not disclose any claim for a consequential relief; [p. 768, col. 2.]

(2) that the plaintiffs not being parties to the decree obtained by the defendant on his mortgage, it was not incumbent on them to ask for an injunction prohibiting the defendant from executing the decree; [p. 768, col. 2.]

(3) that, therefore, the suit fell under Art. 17 of Schedule II to the Court-Fees Act and not under section 7 (iv) (c) of the Act. [p. 768, cols. 1 & 2.]

Amin Chand v. Sant Murli Dhar, 19 Ind. Cas. 219; 18 P. R. 1913; 151 P. W. R. 1913; 211 P. L. R. 1913, followed.

(Case-law discussed.)

First appeal from an order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Gurdaspur, dated the 17th March 1921.

Lala Har Gopal, for the Appellants.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against the judgment of the Senior Subordinate Judge of Gurdaspur, dated the 17th of March 1921, rejecting the plaint in the suit on the ground that the Court-fee paid thereon was insufficient. The question before this Court now is whether the view taken by the Senior Subordinate Judge as to the insufficiency of the Court-fee is correct. The suit, according to the plaint, purported to be for a declaration. In the plaint it was set out that Raman Mal alias Sain Lok had been the sarprast or manager of certain property dedicated to the public and had executed a mortgage in favour of Rai Chuni Lal on the 21st of July 1911. The property mortgaged included 2 kanals 11 marlas of the dedicated land now in suit. The plaint went on to recite that Rai Chuni Lal had obtained a decree for possession against Raman Mal and it was prayed that the Court should grant a declaration to the effect that the land in suit was public property and that Raman Mal had no right to mortgage the same in favour of Rai Chuni Lal and that the decree for possession obtained by Rai Chuni Lal on the strength of this mortgage-deed and dated the 21st of August 1920 be declared void and inoperative and not liable to execution qua the property in suit. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the present case fell within the purview of Govind v. Dheklu (1), and returned the plaint in order that a Court-fee be paid thereon according to the jurisdictional value placed on the suit by the plaintiffs, viz., Rs. 6,600. This order was passed on the 3rd of March 1921, and, as the Court-fee was not paid, the plaint was rejected on the 17th of March 1921.

On behalf of the appellants Mr. Har Gopal has urged that the suit, as laid, was purely of a declaratory nature and, therefore, had been properly stamped. For the respondents Mr. Tek Chand contended that the prayer in the plaint, when properly construed, clearly disclosed the fact that the plaintiffs sought an injunction against the execution of the decree, to which the plaintiffs themselves were not parties. Mr. Har Gopal referred to Amin Chand v. Sant Murli Dhar (2); Zinnatunnessa Khatun v. Girindra Nath Mukerjee (3), Shrimant Sagajirao v. S. Smith (4); [both of which cases were followed in Ganesht Lal v. Beni Pershad (5)], Chingacham Vitil Sankaran Nair v. Chingacham Vitil Gopala Menon (6), Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangasamy Pillai (7), and Bua Ditta

(1) 56 Ind. Cas. 550; 19 N. L. R. 15;

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 219; 18 P. R. 1913; 151 P. W. R. 1913; 211 P. L. R. 1913.

(3) 30 C. 788.

(4) 20 B. 736; 10 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 1061.

(5) 9 Ind. Cas. 673; 1 P. R. 1911; 47 P. L. R. 1911; 22 P. W. R. 1911.

(6) 30 M. 18; 1 M. L. T. 412.

(7) 28 Ind. Cas. 79; 38 M. 922; 28 M. L. J. 118; (1915) M. W. N. 118; 17 M. L. T. 154 (F. B.)

NIHAL DEVI v. CHUNI LAL:

v. Ladha Mal (8). On the other hand Mr. Tek Chand rested his case on Harihar Prasad Singh v. Shyam Lal Singh (9), Fulkumari v. Ghanshyam Misra (10), Deokali Koer v. Kedar Nath (11) and Umatul Batul v. Nauji Kuar (12). Fulkumari v. Ghanshyam Misra (10) was reversed on appeal to the Privy Council in the case reported as Phulkumari v. Ghanshyam Misra (13). The facts were different and neither of the authorities affords any assistance.

In Harihar Prasad Singh v. Shyam Lal Singh (9), consequential relief was clearly claimed and Mr. Hari Gopal frankly admits that if, in the present case, consequential relief is found to have been claimed by the plaintiffs his appeal must fail.

Similarly, in Umatul Batul v. Nauji Kuar (12), an injunction was prayed for and this case needs no further discussion.

Deokali Koer v. Kedar Nath (11) was the case chiefly relied on by Mr. Tek Chand who claimed that the facts there were practically identical with the facts of the present case. In that case, however, their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court held that the suit as laid did not fall within the purview of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. The point which is now under consideration was not apparently gone into. It is true that in some respects the relief sought for in the Calcutta case is similar to the relief claimed in the present case but, as pointed out as above, the case was decided on another point.

The present case is in many respects similar to the case reported as Amin Chand v. Sant Murlidhar (2) where the plaintiff claimed to be in possession of a Dharmshala alleged to be wakf property and sued for a declaration that the sale of such property made by the former manager was illegal and that a decree passed for possession of the property on the strength of the sale-deed should have no effect on the said property. It was held that as the plaintiff was not a party to the suit in which the decree was obtained it was not necessary to sue to have the decree set aside as the plaintiff could regard it as a nullity.

In Govind v. Dheklui (1), no doubt it was held that a suit for a declaration that a decree is null and void and for setting it aside is one both for a declaration and for consequential relief and, therefore, is governed by clause (iv) (c) of section 7 of the Court-Fees Act. There, however, as far as can be ascertained from the report, the plaintiff had been a party to the decree sought to be set aside.

In Bua Ditta v. Ladha Mal (8) a Division Bench of this Court appears to have held that when a plaintiff is not a party to the decree sought to be set aside consequential relief, for example, by injunction, need not be claimed. In that case the authorities cited by Mr. Hari Gopal were considered and the principles enunciated in Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangasamy Pillai (7) were approved of.

In our opinion, the plaint, as framed, does not in itself disclose any claim for consequential relief and inasmuch as the plaintiffs are not parties to the decree dated the 21st of August 1920 we do not think it was incumbent on them to ask for an injunction prohibiting the decree-holder from executing the decree. What the plaintiffs seek is a declaration that a small portion of the property included in the decree is property dedicated to the public and as such not liable to be used for other purposes.

We, therefore, accept this appeal and return the case to the Court below with the direction that the plaint be admitted and the case be proceeded with in accordance with law.

The order sending this appeal to a Division Bench did not clearly admit the appeal to a hearing but both parties agreed that the only question involved in the appeal was whether the plaint had been properly stamped and that further notice was not necessary. Costs in this Court will follow the event.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(8) 54 Ind. Cas. 833; 2 U. P. L. R. (1) 371 65 P. W. R. 1920.

(9) 21 Ind. Cas. 404; 40 C. 615.

(10) 31 C. 511.

(11) 15 Ind. Cas. 4271 39 C. 704; 16 C. W. N. 838.

(12) 6 C. L. J. 4271 11 C. W. N. 705.

(13) 35 C. 2021 7 C. L. J. 36; 12 C. W. N. 169; 10 Bom. L. R. 1; 5 A. L. J. 10; 17 M. L. J. 618; 2 M. L. T. 506; 14 Bur. L. R. 41; 35 L. A. 22 (P. C.).

GHULAM HUSSAIN V. EMPEROR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 163 OF 1923.

April 12, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Daniels.

GHULAM HUSSAIN AND OTHERS—

APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

*Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 304, 325—
Culpable homicide—Joint attack by several persons —Offence.*

Where several persons jointly attack another with lathi fracturing his skull and inflicting a number of other injuries which result in his death they are all equally guilty of culpable homicide even though it may not be possible to prove which of them inflicted the fatal blow. [p. 770, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Ram Newaz, 21 Ind. Cas. 663; 35 A. 506; 11 A. L. J. 804; 14 Cr. L. J. 615, relied on.

Criminal appeal against an order of the Sessions Judge, Budaun, dated the 11th January 1923.

Mr. Kamuda Prasad, for the Appellants.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The appellants, Ghulam Hussain, Bida Hussain, Raza Hussain and Maqbul Hussain, are the brothers of one Musammatt Chanda, prostitute. They were charged under section 304 of the Indian Penal Code with culpable homicide in causing the death of one Sukha. The learned Sessions Judge, on the supposed authority of Emperor v. Bhola Singh (1), has altered the charge to one under section 325 and with the concurrence of the assessors as regards three of the accused has convicted them under that section. As regards Raza Hussain the assessors appear to have been impressed by an alibi which he put forward but I agree with the learned Sessions Judge that the evidence in support of this alibi is of no value.

It is common ground that there was considerable previous ill-feeling between Musammatt Chanda and her brothers on the one side and Sukha and the principal witness Inayatullah on the other. Three days before the present occurrence a youth named Tajju who belonged to the party of the deceased had been beaten by the other party near Chanda's house and a report had been made about it. On the day in question, 5th November 1922, Inayatullah and Sukha, according to the prosecution evidence, were passing Musammatt Chanda's house. the four accused were there and Musammatt Chanda incited them to attack the deceased and his companions which they did. It is probable that there was some previous exchange of abuse or verbal quarrel which Inayatullah has suppressed in his evidence. However that may be, Inayatullah was attacked and very badly beaten. The medical evidence shows that he had at least 12 different injuries, the first and most serious of which was on the head. His companion, Sukha, received injuries of which he died in Hospital four days later. The vault of the skull was extensively fractured and broken into five or six pieces as the result of one or more lathi blows. There were four other marks of injury on different parts of Sukha's person. The only injury sustained by any of the accused's party was a contusion on the left temple and a black eye on the person of Ghulam Hussain. Besides the evidence of Inayatullah, the prosecution case is supported by three other witnesses who saw the accused beating the deceased and his companion. The story put forward on behalf of the accused and supported by three witnesses is that one Munna came from the toddy shop near by, abused Musammatt Chanda and threatened to cut off her nose and to beat her brothers. Three of the accused beat him and drove him back to the shop. He then returned with five other persons including Sukha and Inayatullah, all armed with lathis. Inayatullah slapped Musammatt Chanda and on Ghulam Hussain remonstrating hit him on the head knocking him down. Two of his brothers then came out and a fight ensued between them.

I should have been glad of a little more assistance from the learned Judge in the way of detailed comment on the evidence, but I agree with the conclusion at which the learned Judge has arrived that the prosecution evidence is to be preferred to that of the defence. The latter is obviously difficult if not impossible to reconcile with the medical evidence. The witnesses who support the prosecution story apart from Inayatullah are independent witnesses against whom no ground for partiality is established. The suggestion made on behalf of the accused to account for the complainant's party having received some 18 injuries one of which proved fatal as against two small injuries sustained by Ghulam Hussain is that Sukha and Inayatullah were drunk. No question as to this point was put to the Doctor who admitted them to Hospital and the only evidence which goes in any way to support the story is a statement elicited in cross-examination from the Head Constable Asfandiyar Khan who recorded Inayatullah's report. The learned Judge does not refer to this evidence but I cannot help feeling strong doubt as to the truth of the assertion. In the first place, no note of it was made at the time of recording the report and a man who was really drunk could hardly have dictated the detailed report which was made by Inayatullah at the time.

(1) 29 A. 282; A. W. N. (1907) 51; 4 A. L. J. 207; 5 Cr. L. J. 130.

EMPEROR V. HARI DAS MITRA.

I am not sure the learned Judge correctly appreciates the law as regards the liability of several accused who jointly attacked the same person and inflicted fatal injuries on him. The learned Judge refers to the case of Emperor v. Bhola Singh (1) but the judgment in that case has to be read in the light of a more recent case Emperor v. Ram Newaz (2). If several persons jointly attacked the deceased with lathis fracturing his skull and inflicting a number of other injuries they are all equally guilty even though it may not be possible to prove which of them actually inflicted the fatal blow. In the present case it was quite unnecessary for the learned Sessions Judge to have altered the charge. It is, however, unnecessary for me to alter the conviction as no application in revision is before me and an offence under section 325 was certainly committed. For the reasons already given, I dismiss the appeal of all four accused.

M. A. A.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 663; 35 A. 506; 11 A. L. J. 804; 14 Cr. L. J. 615.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 47 OF 1922.

July 5, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Walmsley and Mr. Justice Suhrawardy.

EMPEROR—ACCUSED*versus*

HARI DAS MITRA AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE-PARTIES.

*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 307—
Trial on several charges—Acquittal by Jury—
Magistrate agreeing in respect of graver charges—
Reference on minor charges, propriety of.*

There is nothing to prevent a Judge who has accepted the findings of the Jury in favour of the innocence of the accused in respect of certain graver charges, from making a reference under section 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code with the object of having some of the accused convicted on minor charges, where the prosecution has failed not because of the evidence happening to be false but because of the facts alleged being insufficient to support the graver charges. [p. 771, col. 2.]

Criminal reference made by the Sessions Judge, Khulna.

Babus Dasaratht Sanyal and Hira Lal Chuckerbutty, for the Accused.

Mr. Orr, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Walmsley, J.—This case has been referred under section 307, Criminal Procedure Code, by the Sessions Judge of Khulna.

The story told by the prosecution is as follows:—Two young Brahmin women Jibantara, the wife of Khetra Nath Bhatta-charjee, and Prohabati, a widow, eloped with their lovers, hired a boat and after a week's travelling came to Bajna Bazar. The people of Bajna Bazar guessed what had happened, and thought it their duty to interfere, and they made arrangements for keeping the women, their lovers, and the women's ornaments until some relative could come and assume charge. The arrangement was, that the women and their lovers were taken to the house of Surendra Nath Mondal, the Panchayet, the ornaments were deposited with a shop-keeper named Keshab Chandra Saha and a man named Bijay started to convey information to Jibantara's husband. All these facts are admitted, and in regard to the motive of the Bazar people, the learned Judge has rejected the Police theory that they were seeking unlawful advantages for themselves.

EMPEROR V. HARI DAS MITRA.

During the night one of the lovers complained that some money had been stolen from him: the evidence is very unsatisfactory, but the allegation was a good pretext for a chaukidar to go to the Thana and in the afternoon Sub-Inspector Bipro Das Chakravarty arrived on the scene in a boat. He went first to Surendra's house and then took the women and their boat to Bajna Bazar. Arrived at the Bazar the Sub-Inspector was urgent in demanding the ornaments. His version is, that the very existence of the ornaments was denied, but the defence story that Keshab wanted all the witnesses to the deposit to be present at the return, and also wanted a formal receipt, is the more probable. The Sub-Inspector grew excited, and threatened to search Keshab's shop. Then he says Hari Das caused a disturbance and knocked him down. The Sub-Inspector took refuge in his boat: there he was attacked by an angry mob: the boat was pulled ashore, the women were dragged from it by force, the Sub-Inspector was persuaded to go to Surendra's shop where he was kept in confinement, and the furnishings of the boat were carried off. In desperation he agreed to say nothing about what had happened: then he was allowed to go and nearly all his belongings were restored.

On these allegations the following charges were framed:—

(1) against Hari Das, Abdul Khalifa, Surendra, the Panchayet, Keshab Lal Saha, and Purna Chandra Biswas, under section 147, Indian Penal Code, the common object being stated to be "by show of criminal force to compel Bipro Das Chakravarty, Sub-Inspector of Police, to omit to search Keshab's shop which he was legally entitled to do;

(2) against the same five persons under section 380, Indian Penal Code, for "theft of a bundle of clothes, a box, some beddings, articles of clothing, utensils, etc., in a boat which was used for the custody of property;"

(3) against the same five persons, except Abdul Khan, under section 365, Indian Penal Code, "for abduction of Jibantara and Probhabati with intent to cause them to be secretly and wrongfully confined;"

(4) against Hari Das and Surendra, Panchayet, only under section 365, Indian Penal Code, for abducting "Bipro Das Chakravarty, Police Sub-Inspector, with intent to cause him to be secretly and wrongfully confined;"

(5) against Hari Das alone under section 332, Indian Penal Code, for causing hurt to a public servant, the intention being stated in nearly the same words as in the first charge.

The Jury was unanimous in acquitting all the accused of all the charges but the learned Judge thinks, that Hari Das and Abdul Khalifa should be convicted under section 147, Indian Penal Code, and Hari Das under section 332, Indian Penal Code.

It is deplorable to think of the amount of public time that has been spent in the investigation of these charges. Witnesses were examined on ten days in the Committing Court, and in the Sessions Court, the hearing went on continuously for ten whole days.

So far as the acquittal of Surendra, Purna, and Keshab on all charges, and of Hari Das and Abdul Khalifa, on the charge under section 380, Indian Penal Code and of Hari Das on the charges under section 365, Indian Penal Code, I agree in the view taken by the learned Judge.

In regards to Abdul Khalifa, it is admitted that there is less evidence against him, than against Hari Das, and the evidence about the hour of occurrence leads me to doubt whether persons who did not take a prominent part were likely to be recognised. I think, therefore, that the verdict of the Jury should be upheld in his case also. He is accordingly acquitted.

That leaves only the case of Hari Das for consideration. It is urged with some force, that the learned Judge, having rejected much of the evidence and having accepted the Jury's finding on the grave charges, should not have made a reference with the object of having some of the accused convicted on minor charges. In this case, however, I do not think the argument applies, for here the prosecution has failed, not because the evidence as to what happened is false, but because the facts alleged do not amount to the offences of abduction and theft. The substance of the prosecution case remains unaffected and that is, that a Sub-Inspector of Police was molested, while in exercise of his duties.

EMPEROR V. HARI DAS MITRA:

On this point the difficulties of the prosecution are increased by the words in which the common object under one section and the intention in the other are set out. The prosecution has taken upon itself to prove that Bipra Das, the Sub-Inspector, had a right to search Keshab Saha's shop. It is argued that he had no such right, and that if he had, he was acting contrary to the rules in searching after sunset. This question involves the second position of what the Sub-Inspector was doing in the Bazar. He was brought to Surendra's house, to enquire into a theft from Kali Das, but by the time he reached the Bazar, he had evidently taken the affairs of the women into his hands. It is quite conceivable that they misrepresented the position to him. But, whatever the explanation is, it is clear that he regarded the recovery of the ornaments as one of his first duties: it is also clear that he asked Keshab to produce them and that Keshab did not do so. The Sub-Inspector's right to search the house then depended on the offence which he was investigating and on Keshab's attitude to his demand. On the first point, I feel very doubtful as to whether the women had given the Sub-Inspector cause to believe that there had been theft. He said himself, "They said that the ornaments had been taken without their consent, but I did not understand whether the ornaments had been stolen or taken for safe keeping." I cannot believe, therefore, that the Sub-Inspector was investigating any charge of theft from the women. I am disposed to think that he was anticipating the complaint that was made by the husband of theft by the women when they eloped. The first essential, therefore, was wanting, and in my opinion, the second is equally wanting. I share the learned Judge's view that there was no denial of the deposit: all that happened was that Keshab asked for certain formalities which involved delay.

The result is, that, framed as the charges are, I do not think, that Hari Das can be convicted under either charges and on the account the verdict of the Jury must be upheld in his case also.

I have already alluded to the amount of valuable time, that has been wasted over this case. I believe that the Sub-Inspector was hustled and treated with disrespect, thanks to his own want of tact, but the ingenuity with which the investigating Inspector and Sub-Inspector sought to entangle the accused in charges which the allegations did not support is most regrettable. If there was no one in the Police Department, to curb such misguided zeal, it is surprising that an intelligent Magistrate should have failed to see the facts in true proportion and to realise that the case was one that should be tried in his Court.

The reference is rejected, the verdict of the Jury is upheld and the accused are acquitted.

Suhrawardy, J.—The learned Sessions Judge in his exceedingly fair and lucid charge has expressed his opinion disbelieving the major portion of the story for the prosecution. I have carefully considered the evidence and I think, he has formed a correct estimate of it. To my mind, the whole fracas was due to the ill-judged interference of the Sub-Inspector who showed an unusual zeal in the matter worthy of a better cause. I am not sure that in the interest he took in the case he was actuated by a sense of duty. He went to the spot on receiving information that, it was 'rumoured' that one of the party of new comers had lost Rs. 52. He was not apparently attracted to the Bazar by this rumour, but by the further information, that two run-away young women with valuable jewellery had arrived there in the course of their wandering. It appears he took no notice of the alleged theft of Rs. 52, but immediately, on his arrival interested himself in the affairs of these women. I do not believe that the women voluntarily complained to him, if they ever did, that their ornaments were taken away from them by force or that they were wrongfully confined. I need not go into the facts further as the learned Judge has correctly gauged the whole situation having discarded almost the whole prosecution story as exaggerated and incredible, the learned Judge seems to be of opinion, that at least one fact was certain, that there was an unlawful assembly, one member of which, the accused Hari Das, assaulted the Sub-Inspector. The incident that led to the assault, as related by the prosecution, is also disbelieved by the Judge. In this state of the record, it cannot be said that the verdict of the Jury was perverse; in my opinion it was justified and reasonable.

AZIZ AHMAD v. BUDDHU KHAN.

We are told that the accused were kept in hajat for about five months in connection with this case. I cannot too strongly express my disapproval of the seriousness attached to this case brought on such apparently exaggerated charges because a Police Officer happened to be the complainant.

I agree in rejecting this reference.

N. H.

*Reference rejected;
Accused acquitted.*

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 125 OF 1923.

April 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

AZIZ AHMAD—APPLICANT.

versus

BUDDHU KHAN AND OTHERS—

OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 522—Restoration of property—Trial Court; refusal of, to make order—Appeal—Revision.

The discretion to pass or not to pass an order for restoration of property under section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code is vested in the Trial Court, and where that Court declines to make such an order in the exercise of its discretion, a Court of Appeal or Revision has no jurisdiction to compel it to do so.

Bhagbat Shaha v. Siddique Ostagar, 16 Ind. Cas. 176; 39 C. 1050; 16 C. W. N. 811; 13 Cr. L. J. 608 and Muhammad Din v. Emperor, 48 Ind. Cas. 510; 14 P. R. 1919 Cr.; 20 Cr. L. J. 30; 1 P. W. R. 1919 Cr.; 33 P. L. R. 1919, relied on.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Kumaun, dated the 1st December 1922.

Mr. S. D. Sinha, for the Applicant.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, for the Opposite Parties.

RAHIM SHEIKH v. EMPEROR.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision asking this Court to make, under section 522 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, an order for the restoration of the property which the Trial Court has refused to make. The discretion to pass or not to pass such an order is very clearly vested by the section in the Trial Court which says that the Court may pass such an order if it thinks fit. I know of no case in which a Court of Appeal or Revision has compelled a Court to pass such an order in a case in which in the exercise of its discretion it has declined to do so. Indeed, there is the authority of two High Courts, those of Calcutta and the Punjab, for the view that a Court of Appeal or Revision has no power to do so. This was held by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Bhagbat Shaha v. Siddique Ostagar (1) and by the Punjab High Court in Muhammad Din v. Emperor (2). Even if this Court in revision has power to pass the order applied for there are no such exceptional circumstances in this case as would justify such action. I dismiss the application.

Z. K. Application dismissed.

(1) 16 Ind. Cas. 176; 39 C. 1050; 16 C. W. N. 811; 13 Cr. L. J. 608.

(2) 48 Ind. Cas. 510; 14 P. R. 1919 Cr.; 20 Cr. L. J. 30; 1 P. W. R. 1919 Cr.; 33 P. L. R. 1919.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 327 OF 1923.

April 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Buckland and Mr. Justice Cuming.

RAHIM SHEIKH AND OTHERS—
PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 308—Jury trial—Discharge of Jury—Misconduct—Inherent power of Court—Code, whether exhaustive.

So far as it deals with any point specifically, the Code of Criminal Procedure must be deemed to be exhaustive and the law must be ascertained by reference to its provisions, but where a case arises which obviously demands interference and it is not within those for which the Code specifically provides, it would not be reasonable to say that the Court has not the power to make such order as the ends of justice require. [p. 774, col. 2; p. 775, col. 1.]

RAHIM SHEIKH v. EMPEROR.

Where the question of misconduct on the part of the Jury or other similar sufficient cause arises, the Sessions Judge has inherent power to discharge the Jury and empanel another. [p. 774, col. 2.]

The Criminal Procedure Code does not provide for such circumstances, but the presumption that jurors will discharge their duties without impropriety may explain the omission. [p. 774, col. 2.]

The power to discharge a Jury on such grounds is discretionary, but must not be exercised lightly, nor until the Judge has satisfied himself by such form of enquiry as, in the circumstances, he can adopt that reasonable grounds exist for exercising the power. [p. 774, col. 2.]

Reg. v. Davison, (1860) 8 Cox C. C. 360; 2 F. & F. 250, Reg. v. Ward (1869) 10 Cox C. C. 573; 77 L. T. 220; 16 W. R. 281 and Olu Mahamad v. Emperor, 7 C. W. N. xxxi (31), referred to.

Application against the order of the Sessions Judge, Rajshahi.

Babu Bimal Chandra Das Gupta, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.

Buckland, J.—This application raises a novel point on which there does not appear to be any authority. The petitioners were put on their trial before the learned Sessions Judge of Rajshahi and a Jury upon charges under sections 436 and 34 of the Indian Penal Code, and the trial began on the 28th February last and continued from day to day until the 6th March. On that day when 11 witnesses for the prosecution had been examined the learned Judge recorded in the ordersheet that it had come to his notice that some of the Jury had been seen associating with the man looking after the case for the accused. The learned Judge appears to have held some sort of enquiry the nature of which is not specified though I will assume it was sufficient and that he was reasonably satisfied as to the conclusion at which he arrived, and thereupon stated that he had reason to believe this to be the case, and he consequently ordered the Jury to be discharged and the case to be tried de novo.

These are all the facts with which we have to deal and it is now objected on behalf of the petitioners that the order discharging the Jury and directing the trial to re-commence de novo was made without jurisdiction.

The contention submitted to us is that a case such as this is not provided for by the Code of Criminal Procedure and that sections 282 and 283 are exhaustive as regards discharging a Jury during the continuance of the trial; there are other sections referring to the discharge of a Jury such as section 305; but those are sections which only apply at a later stage. The sections, however, do not profess to deal with the circumstances in which a Jury may be discharged, rather it is the other way and, in the circumstances to which they refer, they state that that course may be pursued.

The argument submitted to us involves the proposition that whatever the stage of the trial may be, however gross the misconduct of a Jury, and however patent to everybody concerned it may appear, there is no remedy but that the trial must continue to run its course to its conclusion, when, it is submitted, it will be open to the Presiding Judge to submit the case to the High Court under section 307, Criminal Procedure Code. So far as a procedure would only bring the administration of justice into disrepute. In my judgment where the question of misconduct on the part of the Jury or other similar sufficient cause arises the Sessions Judge has inherent power to discharge the Jury and empanel another. It is true that the Code does not provide for such circumstances but, on the other hand, the presumption that jurors will discharge their duties without impropriety may explain the omission. The power to discharge a Jury on such grounds is one not to be exercised lightly nor until the Judge has satisfied himself by such form of enquiry as in the circumstances he can adopt that reasonable grounds for exercising such a right exist. The learned Sessions Judge in this case has held an enquiry. With his statement as to that I am satisfied and the power being one that is not covered by any section of the Code of Criminal Procedure I think it suffices to say that the matter is one for the Judge's discretion. So far as it deals with any point specifically, the Code of Criminal Procedure must be deemed to be exhaustive and the law must be ascertained by reference to its provisions.

JHAGRU v. EMPEROR.

but where a case arises which obviously demands interference and it is not within those for which the Code specifying provides, it would not be reasonable to say that the Court had not the power to make such order as the ends of justice require. Holding, therefore, as I do, that the Jury may be discharged in circumstances other than those specifically provided for by the Code, section 308 cannot be held to relate exclusively to the discharge of a Jury in the circumstances stated in the preceding sections. The learned Sessions Judge has in effect made an order under that section though he has not referred to it and there is, therefore, no reason to interfere. In my judgment this Rule must be discharged.

Cuming, J.—Certain persons were on their trial before the Sessions Judge of Rajshahi and some 11 witnesses for the prosecution had been examined. It was then brought to the notice of the learned Judge that some of the Jury had been seen associating with the man who was looking after the defence. The Court held an enquiry and being satisfied as to the truth of the allegation ordered the Jury to be discharged and the accused to be tried de novo with a fresh Jury. The present petitioner, the accused, has moved this Court on the ground that the Judge had no jurisdiction to discharge the Jury and order a de novo trial. He contended that the case was not covered by either section 282 or section 283 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

No doubt, the contention is correct so far that these sections do not provide for the discharge of the Jury for improper conduct during the trial. In England the Judge has the power to discharge the Jury if a necessity arises and whether the necessity has or has not arisen is for the Judge alone to decide and his decision is not open to review. In one case [Reg. v. Ward (1)] this course was followed because one of the Jurors had left the box without leave. Such discharge is not equivalent to a verdict of acquittal and the prisoner can be remanded for a fresh trial [Reg. v. Davison (2).] There is in this country no decided case bearing on this point. In one case tried at the High Court Sessions the Jury before hearing the evidence for the defence wanted to give their verdict. Counsel for the defence pressed for their discharge on the ground of misconduct.* The prosecution objected to the course. The point was not decided as the Advocate-General entered a nolle prosequi Emperor v. Olu Mahamad (3). The learned Vakil for the petitioner contended that the trial should have been allowed to proceed and then apparently that the point that some of the Jury had been associating with the accused's man might be taken in appeal if necessary. The objection to such a course is obvious and in the present case the further difficulty arises that the Jury had been discharged. It, however, seems quite clear that unless the Judge had the power to discharge the Jury in cases of misconduct great difficulties must arise, and in many cases a serious miscarriage of justice and although the Code does not specifically provide for such contingencies it seems clear that the Judge must have such powers.

In this view the order of the learned Sessions Judge was right and I would discharge this Rule.

Z. K.

Rule discharged.

(3) 7 C. W. N. xxxi (31).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 153 OF 1923.

April 11, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Daniels.

JHAGRU AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPONENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 413
—Joint trial—Appealable and non-appealable sentences—Appeal whether lies against non-appealable sentence.

Where several persons are tried jointly and convicted at one trial, some of them receiving appealable and the others non-appealable sentences, the latter do not obtain a right of appeal merely owing to the fact of their joint trial with the others.
Hussain Khan v. Emperor, 39 Ind. Cas. 690; 39 A. 293; 15 A. L. J. 136; 18 Cr. L. J. 546 and Bhola v. Emperor, 40 Ind. Cas. 332; 39 A. 549; 15 A. L. J. 574; 18 Cr. L. J. 684, followed.

(1) (1869) 10 Cox C. C. 573; 17 L. T. 220; 16 W. R. 281.

(2) (1860) 8 Cox C. C. 360; 2 F. & F. 250.

SUPDT. AND REMEMBRANCE LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL v. NARAYAN CHANDRA BANERJEE

Criminal revision against an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Jaunpur, dated the 25th of December 1922.

Mr. Kumuda Prasad, for the Applicants.
The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is a revision on behalf of nineteen persons who were tried jointly with one Jhagru. Jhagru was given an appealable sentence and the applicant were given small sentences of fine against which, they if had not been tried jointly with Jhagru, no appeal lay under the provisions of section 413. The chief point raised by the revision is whether, if a person who is given a sentence which is ordinarily non-appealable is tried jointly with a person who is given a larger sentence, the former obtains a right of appeal which he would otherwise not have. Divergent views have been expressed on this subject but the latest published decisions of this Court, which are referred to by the learned Judge, namely, Husain v. Emperor Khan (1) and Bhola v. Emperor (2), are against the contentions of the applicants. In the latter case Piggott, J., stated that the practice of the Court on the subject must be taken as settled. My own view is in accordance with these decisions and I accordingly decline to accept this plea. I may add that the matter will soon cease to be of importance as section 413 is being altered in the amended Code of Criminal Procedure.

The learned Judge dismissed the appeal of Jhagru who did appeal. He was not, therefore, bound to send up the case of the other accused in revision under the rule laid down in Bhola v. Emperor (2). The appellant contended that he should have done so because of a chance remark at the end of his judgment that it was possible that some of the other accused might be innocent but he was unable to help them. This is not a finding; it is merely a remark as to a possibility in the case of accused whose cases the learned Judge had not considered in detail.

The case is one in which small fines only were imposed and I am not prepared in revision to consider the evidence against each individual accused. I dismiss the application.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

GOVERNMENT APPEAL NO. 4 OF 1923.

May 8, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice C. C. Ghose and Mr. Justice Cuning.

SUPRINTENDENT AND REMEMBRANCE, LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL—

APPELLANT

versus

NARAYAN CHANDRA BANERJEE—

RESPONDENT.

Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884), ss. 209, 353—Gift of land to Municipality on condition that it would erect necessary fencing—Requisition requiring erection of fencing, failure to obey—Offence.

The language of section 209 of the Bengal Municipal Act is only indicative of this, that there is power in a Municipality to require a person to cause a fence to be erected by the side of a tank; but because the power is existent in a Municipality by virtue of statutory provisions, it does not follow that a Municipality cannot accept a condition or enter into a binding engagement that it would erect a certain fencing at its own cost. [p. 779, col. 1.]

Accused made a free gift of certain land to the Howrah Municipality on condition that if at any time it was found necessary to erect a fencing at a certain place the Municipality would erect it at its own cost. Some years later the Municipality issued a requisition under section 209 of the Bengal Municipal Act calling upon the accused to erect the fencing. The accused failed to comply with the requisition and was prosecuted under section 353 of the Bengal Municipal Act.

Held, that the Municipality having accepted a gift of the accused's land on condition that it would erect the fencing at its own cost was bound by the condition and had no power to issue a requisition calling upon the accused to erect it, and that, consequently, the accused was not bound to comply with the requisition. [p. 779, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Howrah.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 690; 39 A. 293; 15 A. L. J. 136; 18 Cr. L. J. 546.
(2) 40 Ind. Cas. 332; 39 A. 549; 15 A. L. J. 574; 18 Cr. L. J. 684.

SUPDT. AND REMEMBRANCE, LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL, V. NARAYAN CHANDRA BANERJEE:

Babu Monmota Nath Mukherji, for the Appellant.—Under the law the owner is bound to put up the fencing and the very important question arises whether by an agreement with the Municipality the accused can contract out of the liability imposed by the Statute. As a question of fact, my case is that there was only an offer and no contract in reality, but even if there was the agreement the accused's liability under the Statute continued and the most that he could do was to put up his fence and realise the cost from the Municipality. The law says that a thing shall be done by the accused and the Municipality cannot alter the law.

[Ghosh, J.—There is no law which says that the Municipality cannot enter into the agreement. There is a provision in the Calcutta Municipal Act enabling the Calcutta Municipality to enter into such agreements.]

[Babu Dasurathi Sanyal—There is a similar provision in the Bengal Municipal Act—section 37].

Section 37 does not help. Under it the Municipality can make contracts for the purposes of the Act—that is all.

Babu Dasurathi Sanyal (with him Babus Debendra Narain Bhattacharjee and Lalit Mohan Sanyal), for the accused.—Under section 37 such contracts can be entered into. See section 69 which defines the purposes for which such contracts can be made: See Halsbury, Vol. XXVII, Art. 389, page 196. In the absence of express words in the Statute such contracts can be made.

There is another point of view from which the case should be considered. An attempt was made to prosecute the accused in 1914 and nothing was done and the present prosecution was barred under section 353 of the Act.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal, against an order of acquittal passed by Mr. B. N. Mukherjee, Magistrate, First Class, Howrah, acquitting the accused in respect of an offence punishable under section 353 of Act III (B. C.) of 1884 of not complying with the terms of a notice under section 209 of the Bengal Municipal Act served on him on the 16th September 1922. The facts which have given rise to this appeal at the instance of Government, shortly stated, are as follows:—The accused was served with a requisition under section 209 of the Municipal Act requiring him to cause a fence to be erected for the protection of passengers and pedestrians on the bank of a tank belonging to the accused. The accused disobeyed this requisition, his grounds being that in 1898 certain land on the side of the tank was made over by him to the Municipality and conditions were imposed by him on the Municipality at the time to the effect that if in future any fencing had to be erected or was required on the side of the tank the Municipality would erect such a fencing at their own costs. Now, it appears to us on examination of the record that the accused, who is one of the heirs of one Girish Chunder Banerjee, proposed sometime in 1898 to the Municipality of Howrah offering to give up a certain strip of land or such part thereof as might be necessary for the purpose of straightening a tortuous portion of a lane called Girish Banerjee Lane, lying between the bank and premises No. 15 Girish Banerjee Lane. It appears from the petition of appeal of the Legal Remembrancer that on the 3rd September 1898 the members of the Works Sub-Committee of the Howrah Municipality recommended to the Municipal Commissioners that the proposal of the heirs of Girish Chunder Banerjee should be accepted. The accused states that on the acceptance of his offer being communicated to him by the Municipality he caused a letter to be written to the Secretary of Howrah Municipality on the 14th December 1898. The contents of this letter have been set out in paragraph 15 of the petition of appeal. In 1914 it appears that owing to erosion of the bank of the tank, the lane in question became dangerous to the wheeled traffic and on the 16th May 1914 Mr. Hopkins, who was then the Chairman of the Howrah Municipality, wrote a letter to the accused asking him to have this tank fenced as early as possible. The accused wrote a letter in reply, dated 20th May 1914, in which he referred the Chairman to the Resolution No. 5 (1) of the Commissioners of the Howrah Municipality dated the 6th October 1898 and a letter dated 14th December 1898 by which he made over a strip of land on the east side of the tank in question on condition, as he alleged, that if any fencing was required on the side of the tank the Municipality would have to erect the same at their own costs. On receipt of this letter it appears that the Municipality caused certain departmental estimates to be prepared for fencing and for acquiring the extra strip of land on the side of the tank but that, inasmuch as the funds did not permit of this work being done at once, the work was left in abeyance. This is clear from paragraphs 10 and 11 of the petition of appeal of the Legal Remembrancer. Some time thereafter, that is, in September 1922, the requisition as referred to above was served on the accused under section 209 of the Bengal Municipal Act. The accused failed and neglected to carry out the works specified in the requisition and he was prosecuted before the Deputy Magistrate of Howrah who by his order dated 5th January 1923 acquitted the accused.

SUPDT. AND REMEMBRANCER, LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL, V. NARAYAN CHANDRA BANERJEE.

On behalf of the appellant it has been contended before us that the letter of the 14th December 1898, relied upon by the accused and a copy whereof has been tendered in evidence, being Exhibit (A), was a copy of a copy of a letter addressed to the Municipality by the accused and as such it was not admissible in evidence. Further, it has been argued that there are no materials from which it can be established that the Municipality had undertaken to fence the tank at their own costs and that assuming that the Municipality had so undertaken, that, by itself, did not and could not absolve the accused of his obligation to carry out the requisition which was served on him under the provisions of section 209 of the Bengal Municipal Act. Now, so far as the materials on the present record go, it is clear that, at any rate, from 1914 onwards, up to date, the accused has been insisting upon this, namely, that the land was originally made a free gift of to the Municipality on conditions such as to be found in the letter of the 14th December 1898. It has been suggested to us that in the archives of the Municipality at Howrah there is no such letter as the letter of the 14th December, set out in paragraph 15 of the petition of appeal purports to be, and that what had really happened was that along with the letter of the 20th May 1914 written in reply to Mr. Hopkin's letter, a letter purporting to have been written on the 14th December 1898, was enclosed and that the accused had obtained a certified copy of that copy which he had enclosed in that letter. Now the document, Exhibit (A), does not by itself purport to be a certified copy of a copy of a letter. The witness to whom this letter was put in the course of his cross-examination does not describe it as a certified copy of a copy of a letter. He states that it is a certified copy of a letter bearing a date of the 14th December 1898 and we find on Exhibit A itself a note by the Magistrate that the letter itself of which it purports to be a copy was admitted by the Pleader for the prosecution.

In the third place, it is clear from the extract of the register of letters received by the Municipality of Howrah in the month of December 1898, that a letter purporting to come from the accused and bearing the date of the 14th December 1898, making a free gift of certain land on certain conditions was received by the Municipality. In the fourth place, it is apparent from the materials on the record that throughout the years 1914, 1915, 1916, and 1917, the accused had been consistently insisting upon the performance by the Municipality of the conditions which he had imposed upon them at the time when he made a free gift of the land to the Municipality in December 1898. Taking all these circumstances together, the cumulative effect thereof is, in our opinion, conclusive of the fact that the Municipality had received a letter such as has been set out in paragraph 15 of the petition of appeal of the Legal Remembrancer and that it is now too late for the Municipality to contend that no such conditions as are to be found in the letter, were ever imposed by the accused at the time when the free gift of the land was made to the Municipality. That being so, it follows, in our opinion, that Exhibit (A) was admissible in evidence and, secondly, that there are abundant materials on the record from which an affirmative conclusion may be drawn that the Municipality accepted a free gift of the land on conditions imposed by the accused. The question now arises whether, having regard to all the facts referred to above, the Municipality in 1922 was entitled by means of the requisition under section 209 of the Bengal Municipal Act, to call upon him to cause a fence to be erected on the side of the tank. The language of the section is only indicative of this, that there is power in the Municipality to require a person to cause a fence to be erected by the side of a tank. But, because the power is existent in the Municipality by virtue of statutory provisions, it does not follow that the Municipality cannot accept conditions such as were imposed by the accused in December 1898 when he made a free gift of certain land to the Municipality. There is nothing in the Municipal Act itself which can remotely suggest that the Municipality is incompetent to enter into a binding engagement of this description. If that is so, the Municipality is not, in our opinion, in the circumstances of a particular case, competent to require the accused to cause a fencing to be erected at his own cost. The circumstance that from the years 1915, 1916, and 1917 the question of sanction of a departmental estimate for the fencing of the tank was on the tapis, cannot be overlooked. It shows, in our opinion that the Municipality at that time was prepared to acquiesce in the contention put forward before it by the accused that the fencing, if it had to be done at all, had to be done at the expense of the Municipality. It was not until it was discovered that the funds did not permit the fencing in question to be erected at once that this prosecution started. On review of the entire circumstances before and after the prosecution started, we are of opinion, that there is no ground for our disturbing the order of acquittal.

KHAZAN SINGH v. KIRPA SINGH.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 1413
OF 1922.

January 12, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Abdul Raof.

KHAZAN SINGH—PETITIONER

versus

KIRPA SINGH AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195, 439—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 182—Sanction for prosecution—Application to Appellate Court—Revision—Offence under s. 182—District Magistrate, power of, to grant sanction.

Where an application under clause (6) of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code is made to an Appellate Court against the order of the First Court refusing or granting a sanction to prosecute, the order of the Appellate Court is open to revision under section 439 of the Code. [p. 780, col. 1.]

Bishen Singh v. Amritsaria, 5 P. R. 1908 Cr. 17 P. W. R. 1908 Cr.; 103 P. L. R. 1908; 7 Cr. L. J. 281, (R. B.) followed.

Sarat Chandra Mandal v. Ram Sash Roy, 69 Ind. Cas. 153; 26 C. W. N. 1016; 36 C. L. J. 265; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 451 23 Cr. L. J. 665, dissented from.

Although Police Officers in a district are generally subordinate to the District Magistrate, that is not the subordination contemplated by clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code. That clause contemplates subordination to some superior Officer of Police. [p. 780, col. 2.]

Ramasory Lall v. Queen-Empress, 27 C. 452; 4 C. W. N. 594; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 297, relied on.

A District Magistrate has, therefore, no power to grant sanction for prosecution under section 195 (1) (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of an offence under section 182 of the Penal Code for giving false information to the Police. [p. 780, col. 2.]

Petition, under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of an order of the Sessions Judge, Ambala, dated the 28th April 1922, refusing to set aside the sanction to prosecute the petitioner, granted by the District Magistrate of the Ambala District, dated the 23rd February 1922.

Mr. Ganpat Rai, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Anant Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a petition for revision under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code against an order of the Sessions Judge, Ambala, refusing to set aside the sanction granted by the District Magistrate of the Ambala District. It appears that one Khazan Singh made a false and malicious report to the Police against Kirpa Singh and others. The First

RAMAN BEHARI ROY V. EMPEROR.

Information Report was dated the 4th November 1921, in which Khazan Singh alleged that his servant Sundar Singh had been assaulted and bound and that Kirpa Singh and others were looting his property. An inquiry was made by the Police into this matter and the facts alleged were found to be false and fabricated. The charge was, therefore, cancelled by the Police. Thereupon an application was made to the District Magistrate under section 195 for sanction to prosecute Khazan Singh under sections 211 and 193. That application was rejected by the District Magistrate who remarked in his order that there would be a good ground for sanctioning the prosecution under section 182 of the Indian Penal Code on a proper application being presented for that purpose. A petition was accordingly made under section 195 for permission to prosecute Khazan Singh under section 182, Indian Penal Code and the District Magistrate made an order granting the sanction prayed for.

Against that order Khazan Singh preferred an appeal to the Sessions Judge of Ambala. His appeal has been rejected by the learned Sessions Judge on the ground that as the District Magistrate is the head of the Ambala District Police his order must be taken to have been made in that capacity and not as a Magistrate and that, therefore, the sanction granted by him can be revoked only by an authority to which the head of the Ambala District Police is subordinate.

Khazan Singh has now come up in revision to this Court. Mr. Anant Ram for the opposite party has taken a preliminary objection to the hearing of the revision on the ground that only one appeal or rather one application in revision is contemplated by sub-section (6) of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code and that the Legislature has not intended in cases not covered by section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, to allow a succession of appeals or applications in revision. In support of this contention he relied upon the case of Sarai Chandra Mandal v. Ram Sassi Roy (1). This view of the Calcutta Court is, however, opposed to the Full Bench decision of the Punjab Chief Court in Bishen Singh v. Amritsar (2). I accordingly overrule the objection and hold that the revision lies under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The next question that I have to decide is whether the District Magistrate had authority to grant sanction in this case as the head of the Police of the Ambala District. In the case of Ramasory Lall v. Queen-Empress (3) it was held that, although Police Officers in a District were generally subordinate to the District Magistrate, the subordination contemplated by section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code was not such subordination. That subordination contemplated some superior Officer of Police. This appears to be the correct view of the law and I must hold that the District Magistrate had no power to grant sanction under section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code. The view taken by the learned Sessions Judge cannot be supported.

I, therefore, accept the revision and revoke the sanction granted by the District Magistrate.

Z K.

Appeal accepted.

(2) 5 P. R. 1908 Cr.; 7 P. W. R. 1908 Cr.; 103 P. L. R. 1908; 7 Cr. L. J. 281 (F. B.).

(3) 27 C. 452; 4 C. W. N. 594; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 297.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 183 OF 1923.

April 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice C. C. Ghose and
Mr. Justice Cuming.

RAMAN BEHARI ROY alias RAMAN
BEHARI DAS — PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

*Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 415, 417—
Despatch of insured cover purporting to contain notes, but in fact empty, whether cheating.*

(1) 69 Ind. Cas. 153; 26 C. W. N. 1016; 36 C. L. J. 265 (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 45; 23 Cr. L. J. 665.

RAMAN BEHARI ROY v. EMPEROR.

Accused sent an insured cover to the complainant through the Post Office purporting to contain a number of Government Currency Notes. On receipt the cover was found to contain only a letter advising the despatch of the notes and some bits of waste paper:

Held, that the conduct of the accused did not amount to cheating inasmuch as the complainant was not subjected to any of the consequences detailed in section 415 of the Penal Code.

Rule against the order of the Deputy Commissioner, Sylhet.

Babus Mainmatha Nath Mukherjee and Nikunja Behary Roy, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Orr, Deputy Legal Remembrancer, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This Rule was issued calling upon the Deputy Commissioner of Sylhet to show cause why the conviction of the petitioner and the sentence passed upon him should not be set aside on the ground that, on the facts alleged by the prosecution, no offence under section 417, Indian Penal Code, has been made out. We have heard Mr. Manmathanath Mookerjee in support of the Rule and Mr. Orr on behalf of the Crown and for the reasons given below, we are of opinion that Mr. Mookerjee's contention must prevail.

The facts alleged by the prosecution, shortly stated, are as follows:—

It is alleged that the accused sent to one Nobin Chandra Chowdhury an insured cover purporting to contain eight Government Currency Notes of Rs. 100 each. The envelope in question, it appears, was handed over by the accused in person to the Post Master at Nilambazar Post Office on the 16th November 1920. The cover was received at the Beliaghata Post Office on the 18th November 1920 and was delivered to an agent of the said Nobin Chandra Chowdhury. On the addressee opening the envelope, the same was found to contain a letter advising the despatch of a sum of Rs. 800 and several bits of waste paper. No Government Currency Notes were found inside the cover. Thereupon the Post Master of the Beliaghata Post Office was communicated with by the addressee and the Police were also called in.

These facts have been found to be correct by the learned Sessions Judge and, as stated above, the argument on behalf of the petitioner is that, assuming that these facts are correct, no offence under section 417, Indian Penal Code has been made out.

Now, in order to find out the ingredients of the offence of cheating, we must turn to section 415, Indian Penal Code. The ingredients required by that section are:—

1. Deception of any person.
2. (a) Fraudulently or dishonestly inducing that person
 - (i) to deliver any property to any person, or
 - (ii) to consent that any person shall retain any property; or

(b) Intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property.

Now, in this case, having regard to the facts found, it is difficult for us to say that the person deceived has been induced to deliver any property to any other person or to consent that the said other person should retain any property, or that the person deceived has been induced to do or omit to do anything which he would not have done or omitted, if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission has caused or was likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation, or property. All that the person deceived has been induced to do is that he has signed a receipt acknowledging the delivery of a cover. He has not acknowledged by that the receipt of any sum of money alleged to be contained in the cover. That being so, we are unable to say that the charge of cheating has been brought home to the accused in the circumstances which appear on the record before us.

The result, therefore, is that the Rule is made absolute. The petitioner will be discharged from his bail bond and the fine, if paid, will be refunded.

Z. K. & N. H.

Rule made absolute.

GANPAT RAI v. EMPEROR.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 1715
OF 1922.

February 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

GANPAT RAI AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—
PETITIONERS

VERSUS

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 257—Discretion of Magistrate to refuse to summon witnesses, extent of—Order directing deposit of expenses of witnesses, legal ty of.

The language of section 257 of the Criminal Procedure Code is imperative, and a Magistrate has no discretion to refuse to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness merely because he thinks that no useful purpose will be served by summoning him as a witness to attend the Court. The person who applies for their attendance is the best Judge of the matter and it is not for the Magistrate to say which witnesses shall and which shall not be of any use to him. The only grounds upon which an application for the summoning of witnesses can be refused are those enumerated in clause (1) of section 257 and a Magistrate is not entitled to refuse the application on any other ground. [p. 783, col. 2.]

Section 257 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code fully empowers a Magistrate trying a case to order that the reasonable expenses required for the attendance of a witness shall be deposited in Court by the person applying for his attendance before the witness is summoned. [p. 782, col. 2.]

Qadu v. Queen-Empress, 7 P. R. 1898 Cr., dis-sented from.

Petition, under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of the order of the District Magistrate, Karnal, dated the 28th November 1922.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Petitioners.

Mr. C. H. Carden Noad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The three petitioners, Mani Ram, Khushi Ram and Ganpat Rai, who were prosecuted under section 108, Criminal Procedure Code, made three separate applications to the District Magistrate of Karnal for the summoning of certain witnesses and production of certain records. The District Magistrate refused to summon some of the witnesses on the ground that the applications for summoning them had been made for the purpose of delay and vexation to those witnesses and some on the ground that no useful purpose would be served by summoning them to attend as witnesses in the Court; while with regard to others he ordered that they could be summoned provided the petitioners deposited a certain sum of money in Court to cover the expenses of their attendance. In regard to the records he ordered that the petitioners should file copies of the documents out of those records upon which they wanted to rely and that if upon a perusal of the copies he found that the production of the original documents was necessary he shall send for those documents.

Against these orders the petitioners have filed an application for revision to this Court, and it has been contended on their behalf that the orders passed by the learned District Magistrate are improper and should be set aside. It will be convenient to deal with the orders passed on each of the applications separately:—

Mani Ram applied on the 27th November 1922, that the following three witnesses should be summoned on his behalf:—

- (1) Lala Beni Parshad, Pleader, Ambala.
- (2) Chaudhari Ghulam Bhik, Pleader Ambala, and
- (3) The Secretary, Provincial Congress Committee, Lahore.

The order of the District Magistrate upon this application was that the witnesses might be summoned provided the petitioner deposited a sum of Rs. 70 in Court to cover the expenses of their attendance. I do not think there is anything unreasonable or improper in this order, and I refuse to set it aside. Section 257 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code fully empowers a Magistrate trying a case to order that reasonable expenses of a witness shall be deposited by the applicant in Court before he is summoned and it has not been shown why the District Magistrate should not have exercised this power in this particular case. Reliance has been placed by Counsel on Qadu v. Queen-Empress (1), in which it was held that an order by a District Magistrate refusing to summon witnesses for the defence without their expenses being paid by the accused should be passed very sparingly, and is an improper order in a case where the accused is unable or unwilling to deposit the money. With all respect to the learned Judge who was responsible for this judgment, I confess I am unable to see any impropriety in such an order. If the rule laid down in this authority was to be literally followed, section 257 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code would become an entirely dead letter. I can hardly conceive of a case where an accused person would willingly deposit the expenses of his witnesses if he knew that he had only to express his unwillingness to entitle him to get his witnesses summoned at the expense of the Government. In my opinion the District Magistrate has not exercised his discretion in an improper or illegal manner, and I am, therefore, unable to interfere with the order in question. It has, however, been urged that Rs. 70 is an unreasonably large sum for the expenses required for the attendance of three witnesses only. It should be observed that two out of the three witnesses summoned are professional gentlemen living in Ambala while the third witness will have to come all the way from Lahore to Karnal. Having regard to the fact that the sum ordered to be deposited includes also the Railway fare of the witnesses summoned, I do not think that Rs. 70 is an unreasonably large amount.

(1) 7 P R. 1898 Cr.

GANPAT RAI V. EMPEROR.

The next case to be considered is that of Ganpat Rai. He summoned 48 witnesses and applied for the production of 21 records. The District Magistrate ordered that in addition to the Railway fare of all persons who will have to come from places other than Karnal itself the petitioner should deposit a sum of Rs. 5 per each witness to cover the expenses of his attendance in Court before the witnesses could be allowed to be summoned. It is urged on behalf of the petitioner that a sum of Rs. 5 for each witness is a little bit too much, but, having regard to the fact that some of the witnesses summoned are Pleaders and some are other respectable gentlemen from the town itself, I do not think that the sum required to be deposited is excessive. It is further urged that it will be impossible for the District Magistrate to examine all the 48 witnesses in one day, and that the petitioner will be put to a great deal of unnecessary expense if he is made to summon all the witnesses for one date and the witnesses have to go back without their statements being recorded on that date. I think there is force in this contention, and I would, therefore, direct that the District Magistrate should summon only so many witnesses for one hearing as he thinks he will be able to examine on that hearing.

Khushi Ram summoned ten witnesses and wanted three records to be produced. The District Magistrate allowed only one witness to be summoned, and rejected the application in respect of the remaining nine witnesses. Counsel for the petitioner has stated before me that he does not want to examine the first four witnesses, namely,

- (1) the Commissioner of the Ambala Division.
- (2) the Tahsildar of Thanesar;
- (3) the Sub-Judge of Hissar; and
- (4) the Excise Inspector of Ambala, and has withdrawn his application so far as these witnesses are concerned. The order of the District Magistrate, therefore, will be maintained with regard to these four witnesses. But I do not see any valid reason why the District Magistrate should have refused to summon the other five witnesses. The language of section 257, Criminal Procedure Code, is imperative and the Magistrate has no discretion to refuse to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness merely because he thinks that no useful purpose will be served by summoning him as a witness to attend the Court. The only grounds upon which an application can be refused are those enumerated in clause (1) of section 257 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the Magistrate is not entitled to refuse the application on any other grounds. The District Magistrate has not refused the application in this case with regard to the five witnesses because he thinks that the application is frivolous or vexatious but on the ground that their evidence will not be of any material use to the applicant. The applicant is the best judge in this matter and it is not for the District Magistrate to say which witnesses shall, and which shall not, be of any use to that accused. I, therefore, allow the revision in so far as to hold that all the witnesses except those who have been given up by the petitioner in this Court shall be summoned by the District Magistrate if he so desires. With regard to the records it has been stated before me that their production is necessary, inasmuch as the petitioner wants to prove his presence in various Courts on the dates when he is alleged to have made certain objectionable speeches, and that the fact of his presence in those Courts is recorded in the records. It should be remembered that copies would be inadmissible in evidence when the original documents are in existence and it will be impossible for the witnesses to make statements as regards facts recorded in those documents unless they are before the Court. In these circumstances, I am of opinion that the records should have been allowed to be produced without the petitioners having been made to undergo the necessary expense of obtaining certified copies.

GANODA DASSYA V. SRIMANTA GHOSH.

I allow the revision and modify the orders of the learned District Magistrate to the extent above specified.

Z. K.

Petition allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 75 OF 1923.

May 11, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Ghose and
Mr. Justice Cuming.

GANODA DASSYA—ACCUSED—

PETITIONER

versus

SRIMANTA GHOSH—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Criminal trial—Witness deaf but able to speak and write—Refusal to examine witness, effect of.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to refuse to examine a witness who is deaf but who is able to speak and write, and such refusal, if prejudicial, vitiates the trial.

Reference by the Sessions Judge, Pabna and Bogra.

Babu Nishitha Nath Ghatak, for the Accused.

JUDGMENT.—This reference has arisen out of a case instituted under the provisions of section 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure by a widow for orders as regards the maintenance of an illegitimate child of hers by one Srimanta Ghosh. The Deputy Magistrate directed that Srimanta Ghosh should pay a sum of Rs. 5 per month for the maintenance of the illegitimate child. Against this order an application for revision was made before the learned Sessions Judge of Pabna and Bogra. The learned Sessions Judge found on examination of the record that the trial had been vitiated by the refusal on the part of the Trying Magistrate to examine a witness who was said to be deaf, but who could speak and write, and further that the evidence in the case had not been recorded in the manner prescribed by the Code.

As regards this last point, it appears to us that the record of the evidence as it stands cannot be described as a memorandum of the evidence which the Magistrate under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure was under an obligation to make. We think that the record of the evidence should have been fuller.

As regards the first point, it appears to us that the Trying Magistrate was clearly wrong in not examining one Nagendra Sircar, who is deaf but who can speak and write. We can see no reason why the examination of this witness should not have been proceeded with and we think that the refusal on the part of the Trying Magistrate to examine this witness has materially prejudiced the petitioner, Srimanta Ghosh. We think, therefore, that the matter should go back for a rehearing of the original petition presented under section 488, Criminal Procedure Code. The Magistrate after taking all the evidence that may be adduced by the parties, will pass orders according to law.

The result is that we accept the reference made by the learned Sessions Judge and set aside the order of the Trying Magistrate and direct a re-hearing in the light of the remarks made above.

Z. K. & N. H.

Reference accepted.

PALA RAM V. NOTIFIED AREA COMMITTEE, KOT ADDU, DISTRICT MUZAFFARGARH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE NO. 9 OF 1922.

March 2, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol and
Mr. Justice Broadway.
PALA RAM—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER
versus

THE NOTIFIED AREA COMMITTEE,
KOT ADDU, DISTRICT MUZAFFAR-
GARH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), s. 242
(1) (a). Notification under—Profession Tax—Naib
Tahsildar, whether follows profession.

A public servant, such as a Tahsildar or a Naib Tahsildar, is appointed to, and holds, an office, and does not carry on a profession or calling such as would bring him within the purview of the Notification of the Punjab Government under section 242 (1) (a) of the Punjab Municipal Act imposing a Profession Tax.

Committee of Notified Area, Una v. Chatar Behari Narain, 44 Ind. Cas. 910; 74 P. L. R. 1918; 74 P. W. R. 1918, referred to.

Case referred under section 84 (2) of the Municipal Act by the Deputy Commissioner, Muzaffargarh, with his No. nil of 1922, for orders of the High Court.

ORDER.—Acting under section 242 of the Punjab Municipal Act, the Punjab Government imposed a Professional Tax in the Kot Addu Notified Area by Notification No. 320, dated 12th May 1915, which is to the following effect:—

“Under the provisions of section 242 (1) (a) of the Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to impose the following Profession Tax within the Notified Area of Kot Addu in the Muzaffargarh District with effect from 1st July 1915.”

“Description of Tax.

“Class of persons to be taxed—All persons exercising any profession or carrying on any trade or calling within the Notified Area of Kot Addu. . . .”

The tax was to be assessed by the Committee of the Notified Area and the assessment was subject to confirmation by the Deputy Commissioner of the Muzaffargarh District. The Committee considered that Lala Pala Ram, Settlement Tehsildar of Kot Addu, was liable to pay the tax and assessed him accordingly. He protested and the Deputy Commissioner of Muzaffargarh referred the question to the High Court under section 84 (2) of the Municipal Act for a decision as to whether the expression “persons exercising any profession or carrying on any trade” covered or included a Naib Tahsildar. The matter came up before Harrison, J., who has referred the question to a Division Bench.

In an unreported case printed as Committee of Notified Area, Una v. Chatar Behari Narain (1) Scott-Smith, J., held that a Munsif could not be said to follow a profession, and this appears to be the only occasion when this point has come up before this Court. It seems to be clear that a Tahsildar or Naib-Tahsildar does not carry on any “trade,” nor can he be said to practice any “calling” in the Notified Area. A profession is defined in Webster’s Dictionary as “the occupation if not mechanical, agricultural, or the like, to which one devotes himself; the business which one professes to understand and to follow for subsistence; calling vocation and employment.”

A Tahsildar or a Naib-Tahsildar can scarcely be considered to carry on a profession in the above sense. It would be more appropriate to describe him as holding an office which term, according to Stroud’s Judicial Dictionary, is “a right to exercise a public or private employment, and to take the fees and emoluments thereunto belonging” and “has been sometimes confined to a public employment regulated by law”; while in Wharton’s Law Lexicon the term “office” is said to be “an employment, either judicial or municipal ‘civil’ military, or ecclesiastical.” A public servant such as a Tahsildar or Naib-Tahsildar is appointed to, and holds, an office and does not, in our opinion, carry on a profession or calling, such as would bring him within the purview of the Notification in question.

Our answer to the reference is, therefore, in the negative.

Z. K. & N. H. Answered in the negative.

(1) 44 Ind. Cas. 910; 74 P. L. R. 1918; 74 P. W. R. 1918.

SANT KAUR v. SHER SINGH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1639 OF 1919.

February 13, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and
Mr. Justice Efoide.Musammal SANT KAUR AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versusSHER SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.Custom—Succession—Collaterals living in another village—Sisters v. Collaterals—Self-acquired property—Jats of Amritsar District—Riwaj-i-am, entry in, value of.Prima facie, the agnates of a deceased person are entitled to a share in his estate even though they live in another village and own no land in the village in which land belonging to the deceased is situate. [p. 787, col. 1.]Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh, 110 P. R. 1906; 31 P. L. R. 1907; 59 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.) and Nanda v. Hira, 41 Ind. Cas. 230; 47 P. R. 1917; 117 P. W. R. 1917, followed.

Among people following Customary Law the position of a sister of a male proprietor without issue cannot be assimilated for purposes of inheritance to that of a daughter, and she must in such matters be regarded as a sister of that proprietor and not as a daughter of his father. [p. 788, col. 1.]

Hamira v. Ram Singh, 134 P. R. 1907; 85 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.), followed.

Among Jats of the Amritsar District the burden is on the sister to prove that she has a right to succeed to the self-acquired property of her brother in preference to his collaterals in the third degree. [p. 788, col. 1.]

(Case-Law discussed.)

An entry in the riwaj-i-am which is not opposed to general custom is a strong piece of evidence in support of the custom mentioned in it. [p. 789, col. 1.]Beg v. Allah Ditta, 38 Ind. Cas. 354; 45 P. R. 1917; 12 P. W. R. 1917; 21 M. L. T. 310; 32 M. L. J. 615; 19 Bom. L. R. 388; 15 A. L. J. 525; 21 C. W. N. 842; 44 C. 749; 26 C. L. J. 175; 44 I. A. 89 (P. C.), followed.

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Lyallpur, dated the 16th July 1919.

Mr. N. C. Pandit, for the Appellants.

Dr. G. C. Narang, Mr. Jivan Lal Kapur and Lala Devi Ditta Mal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The pedigree-table of the parties to the suit out of which the present appeal arises will be found at page 74 of the printed paper-book.

The ancestral home of the parties is in the Amritsar District, but the property in dispute amounting to some 70 squares in area was acquired by Sewa Singh in the Lyallpur District. He died on the 10th October 1918 and was succeeded by his son, Uttam Singh, who died 15 days later on the 25th October 1918. After the death of Uttam Singh mutation of the property in dispute was effected, with the consent of Musammal Sant Kaur and Musammal Dhan Kaur, in their names as well as in the name of Musammal Harbans Kaur, the daughter of Uttam Singh, and in the names of defendants Nos. 3 to 6, the sisters of Uttam Singh and the daughters of Sewa Singh, in equal shares. The plaintiffs, who are brothers and nephews of Sewa Singh, brought the present suit for a declaration that the alienation by way of mutation in favour of defendants, with the exception of Musammal Sant Kaur, should not affect their rights after the death or re-marriage of Musammal Sant Kaur. The lower Court having regard to the answer to question No. 70 in Mr. Craik's Customary Law of the Amritsar District, Art. 24 of Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law, and Hamira v. Ram Singh (1), was of opinion that the onus lay upon the defendants, and holding that they had not discharged it, gave the plaintiffs a decree that the alienation of 4/9ths of the land in dispute in favour of the defendants Nos. 3 to 6 should not affect the plaintiffs' rights of reversion on the death or re-marriage of Musammal Sant Kaur.

The defendants have appealed to this Court, and as there is practically no evidence on the record, the argument has mainly been as to which party the onus probandi lay on. Mr. N. C. Pandit, on behalf of the appellants, laid some stress on the fact that the plaintiffs lived in the Amritsar District, whereas the land which was acquired by Sewa Singh, was in the Lyallpur District where the plaintiffs themselves owned no land. In our opinion this fact in no way affects the plaintiffs' right of succession as agnates of Sewa Singh. It was held in Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh (2) that "it has not been laid down by Lokha v. Hari (3) and other rulings on the point that mere

(1) 134 P. R. 1907; 85 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.).

(2) 110 P. R. 1906; 31 P. L. R. 1907; 59 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.).

(3) 64 P. R. 1893.

SANT KUAR V. SHER SINGH.

community of descent does not give agnates of a deceased land owner a right of succession to acquired land left by him in a village in which they do not own any land." This was followed in Nanda v. Hira (4) where in it was held that "prima facie agnates of a deceased person are entitled to a share in his estate even though they live in another village and own no land in the village in which the land in dispute is situate." We, therefore, hold that the mere fact that the plaintiffs live in the Amritsar District while the land in dispute is in the Lyallpur District does not affect their rights of succession.

The next point urged by Mr. Pandit was in regard to the answer to question No. 70 in Mr. Craik's Customary Law of the Amritsar District. He points out that no instances are given in the answer and that the author on page VI of the preface states that "in the case of" questions in regard to which no particular case in point was cited by the people and no judicial decisions or mutations could be traced, the answers represent nothing more than the personal opinion of the persons consulted and cannot carry the same weight as answers supported by cases." It is, therefore, urged that as there are no instances cited in support of answer to question No. 70 the answer is valueless. In our opinion it cannot be said that no value attaches to this answer, but we agree that the same value does not attach to it as would have attached had there been instances cited in support of it. It certainly does not appear to be opposed to the general principle as laid down in Article 24 of Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law, and, therefore, the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council reported as Beg v. Allah Ditta (5) is in point wherein it was held that an entry in the riwaj-i-am is a strong piece of evidence in support of the custom mentioned therein.

Counsel next referred to Article 24 of Rattigan's Digest and argued that that Article really applied to cases where the property was ancestral. Some of the authorities, however, referred to under that Article deal with cases of acquired property. We have referred to these cases. The first one is Sohna Singh v. Kahan Singh (6) where it was found in a suit the parties to which were Dhariwal Jats of the Faziika Tahsil of the Ferozepore District, that no custom was established by which a sister and her son were entitled to inherit acquired landed property in preference to collaterals descended from the grandfather of the deceased owner. In that case the riwaj-i-am was against the sisters and it was held that they had not proved their claim. Then there is the case of Harnamon v. Santa Singh (7). There the conflicting claims to non-ancestral property of a sister and of a collateral in the 10th degree were considered, and the Judges were of opinion that Hamira v. Ram Singh (1) reinforced by Gurditta v. Jai Singh (8) showed that the onus lay on the sister.

The next case to which we were referred was that of Hussain Bibi v. Nigahia (9) in which it was held that in questions of succession to self-acquired property between collaterals of the 8th degree and sisters, the onus of proving that they have a preferential right is, in the first instance, on the latter. When that case first came up for hearing the Judge in Chambers discussed Article 24 of Rattigan's Digest and also the case of Bholi v. Kahna (10) and said that the question of onus was a somewhat difficult one. In Bholi v. Kahna (10) the parties were Muhammadans and the contest was between sisters and collaterals in the 6th degree and Clark, C. J., was of opinion that under the circumstances the onus was upon the collaterals who lived in another village.

In the case of Hussain Bibi v. Nigahia (9) also the parties were Muhammadans and the

(6) 113 P. R. 1892.

(7) 13 Ind. Cas. 711; 98 P. W. R. 1912; 122 P. L. R. 1912.

(8) 72 P. R. 1907; 31 P. L. R. 1908; 150 P. W. R. 1907.

(9) 55 Ind. Cas. 828; 1 L. J. 70 P. L. R. 1920; 34 P. W. R. 1920; 1 L. L. J. 89.

(10) 1 Ind. Cas. 695; 35 P. R. 1909; 45 P. L. R. 1909; 32 P. W. R. 1909.

(4) 41 Ind. Cas. 230; 47 P. R. 1917; 117 P. W. R. 1917.

(5) 38 Ind. Cas. 354; 45 P. R. 1917; 12 P. W. R. 1917; 21 M. L. T. 310; 32 M. L. J. 615; 19 Bom. L. R. 388; 15 A. L. J. 525; 21 C. W. N. 842; 44 C. 749; 26 C. L. J. 175; 44 L. A. 89 (P. C.).

MURLI MAL v. VAISHNO DITTA.

collaterals were related in the 8th degree, and, therefore, the case of Bholi v. Kahna (10) supported the contention that the onus was upon the collaterals. In the present case, however, the personal law of the parties is the Hindu Law and under it the sisters are not heirs, or in any case they come in after collaterals related so nearly to the deceased as the plaintiffs in the present case. In Bholi v. Kahna (10) and in Hussain Bibi v. Nigahia (9) the parties were Muhammadans, and under their personal law sisters are preferred to collaterals and, therefore, those cases do not help the defendants in the present case. Moreover, in Harnamon v. Santa Singh (7), which followed Hamira v. Ram Singh (1), it was pointed out that the onus in such a case lies generally on the sisters.

Bearing these authorities in mind and also taking into consideration the answer to question No. 70 in Craik's Customary Law of the Amritsar District which certainly is evidence in favour of the plaintiffs, we are constrained to hold that the onus lay on the defendants' sisters, to prove that they have a better claim to succeed to the property in dispute than the plaintiffs.

It was held in Hamira v. Ram Singh (1) that among the parties following Customary Law the position of a sister of a male proprietor without issue cannot be assimilated for purposes of inheritance to that of a daughter, and she must, therefore, in such matters be regarded as a sister of that proprietor and not as a daughter of his father. That case was one where the property was not ancestral and it is, therefore, entirely on all fours with the present case. At page 646* of that volume the Judges said: "We are unable to see that any case is made out for departing from the ordinary order of succession of sisters." In other words they were of opinion that the onus was upon sisters. Mr. N. C. Pandit wished to argue that the decision of the Full Bench was unsound but we declined to allow him to do so.

Defendants-appellants have produced no evidence with the exception of a copy of a judgment of Mr. Rose, Additional Judge of Amritsar, dated the 6th March 1917, which is obviously quite insufficient to shift the onus.

It was finally pointed out by Counsel for the appellants that after the death or re-marriage of Musammam Sant Kaur, Musammam Dhan Kaur, as the mother of the last male owner, Uttam Singh, would succeed to a life-estate. There is no doubt that under Customary Law the mother is entitled to a life-interest and the only point urged against this by Counsel for the respondents is that Musammam Dhan Kaur having consented to the mutation in favour of defendants Nos. 3 to 6 has lost any rights which she might otherwise have had. We are unable to agree with this, no doubt she was willing to allow mutation to be made in favour of her daughters, but if this mutation is held not to confer any rights upon them she may assert her own rights to a life-interest after the death or re-marriage of her daughter-in-law, Musammam Sant Kaur. We, therefore, think that there should be an amendment of the decree by adding the name of Musammam Dhan Kaur after that of Musammam Sant Kaur.

We dismiss the appeal but we direct that the decree be amended to this extent that the alienation of 4/7ths of the land in suit in favour of defendants Nos. 3 to 6 shall have no effect, on plaintiffs' right of reversion after the death or re-marriage of Musammam Sant Kaur and Musammam Dhan Kaur. As the case is a very hard one for the defendants we direct that the parties should bear their own costs in this Court.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FURTHER CIVIL APPEAL No. 42 OF 1922.
April 26, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pison, J. C.

MURLI MAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus—

VAISHNO DITTA AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Court-fees—Partition suit—Appeal—Deficiency in Court-fees—Extension of time—Limitation

MURLI MAL v. VAISHNO DITTA.

Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 149.

A plaint or a memorandum of appeal in a suit for partition must bear ad valorem Court-fees on the value of the share claimed by the plaintiff, whether the latter is out of possession or is in joint possession of the property in dispute. [p. 790, col. 1.]

Tara Chand Mukherji v. Afzal Beg, 13 Ind. Cas. 185; 34 A. 184; 8 A. L. J. 1329, Harcharan Das v. Sukhraj Das, 62 Ind. Cas. 979, dissented from.

As a general principle, it is always advisable in the interests of justice that an appeal should be heard on its merits in preference to being rejected on any technical points of law. [p. 790, col. 2.]

Where there could have been no misapprehension as to the amount of Court-fees payable on a memorandum of appeal, and the memorandum is nevertheless deficiently stamped, the appellant cannot get any indulgence by way of extension of time under section 5 of the Limitation Act or section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 791, col. 1.]

Further appeal from an order of the Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 19th December 1921, affirming that of the District Judge, Peshawar, dated the 29th July 1921.

Mehta, Mangal Sain, for the Appellant.
Mr. Diwan Chand, R. S., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—I have to decide on this appeal the following preliminary points:

(1) whether the Divisional Judge was right in holding that the appeal to his Court required a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 175 and whether he was justified in directing the defendant-appellant to make good the deficiency of Rs. 165;

(2) whether the present appeal to this Court can be filed by the defendant-appellant on a Court-fee of Rs. 10, and

(3) whether if the findings on the above two points go against the appellant, the present appeal to this Court must be rejected as barred by time.

The present suit is one for partition of three properties which are admittedly owned jointly by the parties to the suit. The suit was resisted by defendant No. 1 (the present appellant) on the ground that the parties held joint mortgagee rights in another house, and that partition could only proceed if that house also were included in the property to be partitioned. The two Courts below have concurred in finding that the said house was not the joint property of the parties and in decreeing the plaintiffs' claim to partition of the property in suit. The suit was filed upon an ad valorem Court-fee calculated upon the value of plaintiffs' 1-3rd share in the subject-matter of the suit. The defendant, however, lodged his appeal in the Court of the Divisional Judge on a Court-fee of Rs. 10. He based his alleged right to do this upon the views taken by various High Courts in India that, in a suit for partition, where the plaintiff was already in joint possession of the property sought to be partitioned, the suit was governed by Art. 17, clause (6) of Schedule II of the Court-Fees Act. The learned Divisional Judge considered this question and held that, under the authority of the ruling of this Court published as Judicial Record No. 80, Court-fee must be paid on the value of the share claimed. He held, therefore, that the Court-fee on the appeal by the defendant must be calculated in the same manner, but under section 5 of the Limitation Act and section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code allowed the limitation to be extended and the Court-fee to be made good. He then proceeded to dispose of the appeal on its merits. Now, it is fully admitted by the learned Counsel for the appellant that the Divisional Judge had no alternative but to follow the interpretation of the law applicable to this Province enunciated in the Judicial Record No. 80. He contends, however, that, although the Divisional Court was bound to follow that authority, the present Court is not so bound, and that he is entitled to re-open the question and obtain a fresh adjudication upon this point of law. It cannot be denied that I have, in actual fact, authority to overrule the finding of my predecessor in this Court if sufficient cause for me to do so is shown. The learned Counsel, however, has entirely failed to convince me that there is any valid ground for me to disagree with the finding of this Court passed in the year 1915 and which has been accepted as settled law for this Province for the last eight years. I do not consider it necessary to discuss the various authorities for and against the view which was taken by Mr. Barton in 1915. There was, even then, no conflict of authority in the case of suits in which the plaintiff was actually out of possession of the property. There has always been a consensus of opinion that in such cases an ad valorem Court-fee is paid upon a plaint for partition. The conflict of authority exists in cases where the plaintiff is already in joint enjoyment of the property sought to be partitioned. In support of the contention that a suit of the latter kind is governed by Art. 17 clause (6) of Sch. II of the Court-Fees Act, Tara Chand Mukerji v. Afzal Beg (1) and Harcharan Das v. Sukhraj Das (2), among other authorities, have been quoted. In the ruling of this Court published as 80 Judicial Record, however, very full and complete reasons have been given for disagreeing with those authorities and the case-law upon the subject has been reviewed at length. I am in entire agreement with the finding of my predecessor upon this point, and it need hardly be remarked that I should in any case be slow to overrule a finding which has stood the test of eight years' experience in this Province. I find, therefore, on the first point for determination on this appeal, that the order of the Divisional Judge directing the deficiency in the Court-fee to be made good must stand.

MURLI MAL, v. VAISHNO DITTA.

It follows from the above and it is admitted that it is a necessary corollary to that finding that the Court-fee on the present appeal must follow the Court-fee payable upon the original suit, and that the appeal is, therefore, insufficiently stamped.

Upon the third point as to whether the present appeal must be rejected as barred by time, it is contended by the learned Counsel for the respondents that this is not a case where time can be justifiably extended by the Court under the provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act, or that leave to make good the deficiency can justifiably be granted at this stage of the proceedings under section 149, Civil Procedure Code. The date of the decision of the appeal by the Divisional Court is the 19th of December 1921. The appeal to my Court was instituted on the 16th of March 1922. The appeal was taken up at a preliminary hearing on the 26th of October 1922. It is admitted by the learned Counsel for the appellant that unless time is extended by this Court under the provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act, the appeal is necessarily time-barred. Now, as a general principle it is always advisable in the interests of justice that an appeal should be heard upon its merits in preference to being rejected upon any technical point of law. I am constrained to think, however, that there are considerations in the present case which outweigh the advisability of accepting this principle. The appellant could have been under no misapprehension that, on the case-law as settled for this Province by Mr. Barton's ruling of 1915, an ad valorem Court-fee was payable upon this appeal. Not only was that ruling binding at the time upon all Courts in this Province, other than that of the Judicial Commissioner, but the point was considered and adjudicated upon in definite and unmistakeable terms in the Divisional Court. It has, further, been admitted that the Divisional Court had no alternative but to come to the decision which it came to. If, therefore, I were to extend the period for making good the deficiency in the Court-fee, I should be recognizing a precedent under which any appellant in a case of this nature, could institute an appeal to this Court upon an insufficient Court-fee on the ground that he had always a chance of inducing this Court to overrule the interpretation of the law hitherto accepted for this Province. Cases might arise in which the deficiency was overlooked by the presiding officer or by the responsible officials of the Court and was not brought to their notice by the other side. To hold that an appellant was within his rights in risking the occurrence of such a contingency or in relying upon the faint and unrealizable hope that the Court might lay down a new rule of law in this respect would be nothing more or less than to encourage a continual attempt to deprive the Government of legitimate revenue. Some finality in the interpretation of the law by the highest Court of this Province must be recognised by all concerned. I have not indeed been shown a single case where the interpretation of the law, now in question, has been successfully challenged by this Court, or any other Court in the Province, or even where it has been challenged at all. It appears to me, therefore, impossible in this case to condone the action of the appellant

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 185; 34 A. 184; 8 A. L. J. 1329.

(2) 65 Ind. Cas. 979.

ZIA-UD-DIN v. FAKHAR-UD-DIN.

in deliberately attempting to appeal upon a deficient Court-fee. It appears to me to be one where the appellant has deprived himself of any leniency which could otherwise be extended to him by this Court. I consider that in this case the law must take its course as it now stands and I must decline to extend, under section 5 of the Limitation Act, the time allowed for the institution of this appeal, or to allow the deficiency in the Court-fee to be made good at the present stage under section 149, Civil Procedure Code.

On the above findings the present appeal is barred by time. It is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 227 OF 1923.

February 3, 1923.

Present.—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt.,

Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Fforde.

ZIA-UD-DIN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

FAKHR-UD-DIN AHMAD KHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Denial of landlord's title, what amounts to—Ejectment—Forfeiture—Agricultural tenancy.

In order to succeed in a claim for possession of the lands comprised in a tenancy based on forfeiture resulting from a denial of the landlord's title by the tenant, the landlord must satisfy the Court, first, that there has in fact been a denial of the nature contemplated by law, that is to say, a distinct unequivocal renunciation of the tenancy; secondly, that the denial is in respect of the land sought to be recovered; and thirdly, that the principle of forfeiture is applicable to an interest in land of the nature held by the defendant. [p. 792, col. 1.]

In considering whether what has taken place amounts in law to a denial of the landlord's title, the Court must have regard not only to the language used and the circumstances under which it came to be used, but must also consider what the tenant intended by using the particular words under the particular set of circumstances. [p. 792, col. 2.]

Where a portion of the lands comprised in a tenancy was acquired by Government and in the Acquisition proceeding the tenant put forward the claim that he was the owner of the land acquired with a view to obtain the largest possible share of the compensation awarded:

Held, that this did not amount to a denial of the landlord's title, especially with regard to the remainder of the lands, so as to entitle the landlord to resume the possession on the ground of forfeiture. [p. 792, col. 2.]

Quære.—Whether the principle of forfeiture by denial of the landlord's title applies to an agricultural lease.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 24th October 1919, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Jullundur, dated the 7th April 1919.

Mr. B. D. Kureshi, for the Appellant.

Sheikh Niaz Muhammad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs are the proprietors of certain lands in the village of Dhogri, and the defendant is what is known as a sountjidar, that is, a petty grantee of land who holds for life or for a term of years subject to the performance of certain services to be rendered to the grantors.

The service to be performed in the present case was that the defendant should tend a certain graveyard, and his tenure could only be put an end to on one or more of the following grounds:—

- (1) Death.
- (2) Departure from the place.
- (3) Immorality.
- (4) Failure to tend the graveyard.

The present suit has been brought to terminate the defendant's possession mainly on the ground that he has denied his landlord's title. Other grounds have been alleged but the issues framed upon them have been found in defendant's favour and may, therefore, be dismissed from further consideration.

The only question for our determination is whether or not the plaintiffs are entitled to resume possession of the land granted by reason of a denial of title.

The denial alleged is contained in the grounds of appeal drafted by Counsel employed by the defendant in an appeal in a Land Acquisition case, dated the 4th October 1915. These grounds allege that the de-defendant is the owner of the land acquired in the case. The claim of ownership which is made for the purpose of getting the largest possible compensation for the land acquired, is confined throughout to the particular land then acquired. The expressions made use of by the draftsman are "the land now acquired" "the land acquired in this case," and "the land in suit." These are the expressions relied upon by the plaintiffs as establishing a denial by the tenant of the landlord's title of such a character as to effect a forfeiture within the well-known rule of the Common Law of England which is also expressly enacted in section III (g) of the Indian Transfer of Property Act.

ZIA-UD-DIN V. FAKHAR-UD-DIN.

In order to succeed in their claim for possession based on forfeiture, plaintiffs have to satisfy us;

firstly, that there has in fact been a denial of the nature contemplated by law;

secondly, that the denial is in respect of the land now sought to be recovered; and, thirdly, that the principle of forfeiture is applicable to an interest in land of the nature held by the defendant.

As to the first question, we are of opinion that the expressions used by Counsel in drafting the grounds to a memorandum of appeal do not amount to "a distinct unequivocal renunciation of the tenancy" which is essential to constitute a disclaimer such as the law contemplates. We have to bear in mind not only the nature of the document in which the expressions occur, but also to the nature of the proceedings in regard to which the document was drafted. It was not a pleading in a suit between the parties for possession of the land, but a formal document grounding an appeal against an award fixing the compensation price for land acquired by the Government under certain statutory powers. The parties were both concerned only with getting the highest sum possible for their respective interests in the particular area of land acquired, and Counsel in his discretion must have framed his grounds of appeal with that object only in view. We cannot hold that the expressions used by the Pleader in that document amounted to a renunciation by the client of his character of tenant in respect of the lands now in dispute. In considering whether what has taken place amounts in law to a denial of the landlord's title, the Court must have regard not only to the language used and the circumstances under which it came to be used, but must also consider what the tenant intended by using the particular words under the particular set of circumstances. The intention of the defendant can be more fairly gathered from the attitude he himself adopted throughout the proceedings in question than from the formal grounds framed by his Counsel, and throughout those proceedings the defendant never referred to himself otherwise than as a sounjidar, that is, a tenant of a particular type who renders services in lieu of rent.

Upon the facts of this particular case we are satisfied that the plaintiffs have not proved a denial of title by the defendant so as to entitle them to resume possession on the ground of forfeiture.

It has been further urged by Counsel for the defendant that the principle of forfeiture by denial of the landlord's title does not apply to a tenancy of this kind, as such a tenancy is a lease for agricultural purposes, and is accordingly exempted from the provisions of section III (g) of the Transfer of Property Act by section 117 of that Act which expressly provides that none of the provisions of the Chapter shall apply to such cases. It is argued that in Provinces to which this Act applies, the forfeiture clause has been held not to apply to agricultural holdings, and that, therefore, in a Province to which the Act does not apply agricultural lease-holders should be equally immune. It is urged, on the other hand, that the liability to forfeiture and the exemption of agricultural lease-holders from such forfeiture, are both statutory provisions contained in one and the same enactment; and that where there are no such statutory provisions the ordinary Common Law principle which makes no exception in favour of lettings for agricultural purposes must prevail.

In view, however, of the conclusion we have already come to it is not necessary for the purposes of this appeal to express an opinion on this further question which may be reserved for future decision should the net point come up for determination.

KANDOTH SANKARAM V. KARAYI KUZHAKEPROTH ATCHUTHAN.

For the reasons already expressed, the appeal must be allowed and the suit dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

*Suit dismissed.MADRAS HIGH COURT.

REFERRED CASE No. 24 OF 1922.

March 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Devadoss.

KANDOTH SANKARAN NAIR—

PLAINTIFF—DECREE-HOLDER

versus

KARAYI KUZHAKEPROTH ATCHUTHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—

JUDGMENT—DEBOTS.

Madras Village Courts Act (I of 1889), ss. 66, 67—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 39—Village Court decree—Transfer for execution—District Munsif, power of.

A District Munsif receiving by transfer a decree of a Village Court under section 66 of the Madras Village Courts Act or withdrawing execution of a decree to his own file under section 67 of the Act has no jurisdiction to transfer it for execution to another District Munsif under section 39 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Case stated, under section 113 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, by the Additional District Munsif, Tellicherry, in S. C. Execution Petition No. 364 of 1922, in Suit No. 278 of 1921 on the file of the Court of the Village Panchayat, Tiruvangad, Kottayam Taluk, Malabar.

JUDGMENT.—The question referred to us is whether a District Munsif, receiving by transfer a decree of a Village Court under section 66 of the Madras Act I of 1889 or withdrawing execution of a decree to his own file under section 67 has or has no jurisdiction to transfer it for execution to another District Munsif's Court under section 39 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The learned District Munsif in referring this question has pointed out the great practical inconvenience of a negative answer to it; and we fully appreciate the considerations he has referred to. It is, however, our duty to deal with the matter with reference to the law as it stands. Under section 48 "the decree shall be executed by the Village Court, which passed it, or by a Village Court or District Munsif, to whom it is sent for execution under provisions hereinafter contained." Under section 66 "any decree passed by a Village Court may on the application of the decree-holder, be transmitted for execution to the District Munsif," (who is defined earlier in the Act as the District Munsif within whose jurisdiction the Court is situate) who may execute the same, as if it were a decree passed by himself or may transmit it for execution to the Court of another village in which the defendant is represented to have moveable property and section 67 authorises the District Munsif to take on his own motion the action authorised by section 66. The result of these sections is not, in our opinion, to authorise the District Munsif to send a decree which has been withdrawn to his own file for execution, to another District Munsif for that purpose. There is first no explicit reference to such transmission. There is, next the explicit reference to a particular kind of transmission as open to a District Munsif a transmission to the Court of any other village in which the defendant is represented to have moveable property. In accordance with the ordinary canons of construction reference to this one kind of transmission is against an intention to authorise any other kind of transmission. The Act, as we understand it, is intended to supply a complete Code of Procedure for Village Courts; and there is, therefore, no reason for importing into that procedure the provision of another Statute, the Civil Procedure Code, the less so as the reference to transmission in section 66 is, in our opinion, against such importation.

We may add with reference to the applicability of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code that in the amending Act II of 1920, when it was desired to make one of the provisions, section 60, applicable to the execution of Village Courts' decree, it was so made applicable by a special provision, section 23.

We must answer the reference in the negative. No one has appeared on either side on this reference. Therefore, no order as to costs is necessary.

JIWAN BAKHSH V. MUBINAL, HUG.

V. N. V.

Answered accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL.

No. 3029 OF 1922.

April 21, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway.

H. JIWAN BAKHSH—DECREE-HOLDER—
—APPELLANT.

versus

MUBINAL, HUG—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 48 (1) (b)—Execution of decree—Order in execution placing compromise on record, whether order amending decree—Judgment-debtor, whether bound by compromise.

An order under section 48 (1) (b) of the Civil Procedure Code must be made by the Court which passed the decree and acting as that Court. [p. 795, col. 1.]

Jurawan v. Mahabir Dube, 44 Ind. Cas. 24; 40 A. 198; 16 A. L. J. 71, relied on.

An order made by an Executing Court placing a compromise arrived at between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder on the record does not fall within the purview of section 48 (1) (b) of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 795, col. 1.]

When an arrangement is entered into to pay a decree by instalments and is sanctioned by the Court executing the decree, the arrangement does not alter the original decree which still remains the decree to be executed, so far as the provisions of section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code are concerned. [p. 795, col. 1.]

Nanak Chand v. Anant Ram, 26 P. R. 1894 and Chajju v. Gulab, 61 P. R. 1886, followed.

Nawab Zada Muhammad Akbar Khan v. Dya Nath, 200 P. R. 1889, Mon Mohun Roy v. Durga Churn Goode, 15 C. 502; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 919, Kashiram v. Pandu, 27 B. I. 4 Bom. L. R. 688 (F. B.), Badri Narayan v. Kunj Behari Lal, 18 Ind. Cas. 731; 11 A. L. J. 224; 35 A. 178, Nanku v. Jadu Nath, 57 Ind. Cas. 591, Muhammad Sulaiman v. Jhukki Lal, 11 A. 228; A. W. N. (1889) 53; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 573, Lodd Govinda Doss v. Rajah of Karvetnagar, 30 Ind. Cas. 357; 29 M. L. J. 219 and Lodd Govind-doss Krishna Doss v. Ramdoss Vishnadoss, 28 Ind. Cas. 376; 17 M. L. J. 222; (1915) M. W. N. 225, distinguished.

Miscellaneous first appeal from an order of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Delhi, dated the 23rd October 1922.

Jala Sardha Ram, for the Appellant.

Sheikh Muhammad Monier, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts are briefly as follows:—One Alamgir Khan obtained a mortgage-decree against one Muhammad Mubinal Haq on the 31st March 1909. This decree was assigned to Jiwan Bakhsh some time after the 31st January 1913, the sum then due under the decree was Rs. 8,000 and Jiwan Bakhsh sought to recover this amount in execution.

On the 21st June 1921, he asked that the mortgaged property be brought to sale. The judgment-debtor (Mubinal Haq) contended that no order of execution could issue as the decree was more than 12 years old. Reliance was placed on section 48, Civil Procedure Code. Jiwan Bakhsh claimed that certain compromises entered into in 1914 and 1918 saved the situation but the Court below decided against him and rejected his application for execution. He has come to this Court in appeal through Mr. Sardha Ram while Mr. Muhammad Monier has addressed me on behalf of the respondent.

Mr. Sardha Ram has relied on the proceedings in 1914 and 1918 as saving limitation and has referred to no other order or adjustment. It has to be seen what these proceedings were and what effect they have on the question of limitation.

An application for execution had been dismissed in default on the 6th March 1914, and on the 7th March 1914, an agreement was entered into between the parties whereby the decretal amount was fixed at Rs. 4,150 which sum was to be liquidated as follows:—

Rs. 650 paid already to the decree-holder and the balance of Rs. 3,500 in instalments of

Rs. 1,500 on 15th May 1914;

Rs. 1,000 on 15th July 1914; and

Rs. 1,000 on 31st December 1914, in default of any instalment the whole balance was recoverable at once. Certain persons made themselves sureties for the payments. This compromise was embodied in an application made to the Executing Court and the statements of the parties were recorded and an order passed to the effect that the papers be placed on the record, the parties having compromised.

PURAN v. LALA.

It has been urged that this amounted to an order under section 48 (1) (b), Civil Procedure, Code and, therefore, saved limitation. Now, an order under this section must be made by the Court which made the decree and acting as that Court this was held to be the meaning of this section in Jurawan v. Mahabir Dube (1), and it, therefore, cannot be held that the order placing the compromise on the record was made under that section. I am unable to see that the decree was amended by this order and it is obvious that the Court was sitting as a Court of Execution only.

It was next contended that in any event it was an adjustment which could not be resiled from by the judgment-debtor, and reliance was placed on certain authorities.

In Nawab Zada Muhammad Akbar Khan v. Dya Nath (2), it was held by Rivaz, J., that a judgment-debtor could not be allowed to challenge the validity of an arrangement which was brought about by his own action. The arrangement in question had been proposed by the judgment-debtor himself.

In Sardar v. Fattah Chand (3) the above case was referred to by Rivaz, J., and it was held that it was only in special circumstances that a judgment-debtor would be estopped from pleading that the original decree had not been modified by a subsequent arrangement.

On the other hand, in Nanak Chand v. Anant Ram (4) it was held that when an arrangement had been entered into to pay a decree by instalments and sanctioned by the Court executing the decree the arrangement did not alter the original decree which still remained the decree to be executed. To the same effect is Chajju v. Gulab (5). I am unable to see the applicability of Mon Mohun Roy v. Durga Churn Gooze (6) or Kashiram v. Pandu (7) as in both cases the original decree provided for instalments. The same is the case in Badr Narayan v. Kunj Behari Lal (8). The point of limitation was not in question in Nanku v. Jadu Nath (9); Muhammad Sulatman v. Jhukki Lal (10); Lodd Govinda Doss v. Rajah of Karucnagar (11) or Lodd Govindoss Krishna Doss v. Ramdoss Vishnadoss (12).

It seems to me that the proceedings in 1914 did not alter the decree and that it is the decree of 1909 alone which was to be executed. I further am unable to see any special circumstances or reasons such as existed in Nawab Zada Muhammad Akbar Khan v. Dya Nath (2), which could estop the judgment-debtor from denying that the original decree had not been altered. I, therefore, agree with the Court below so far as the proceedings in 1914 are concerned. In 1918 on the 22nd January after the decree had been executed to some extent a compromise was entered to fixing the amount then due at Rs. 800 which was to be paid in two instalments.

This compromise was placed before the Executing Court which directed it to be placed on the record. Here, again, there was no alteration of the decree and there are no circumstances which can be said to estop the judgment-debtor from maintaining that the original decree alone can be executed.

In this view of the case I dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed,

(9) 57 Ind. Cas. 591.

(10) 11 A. 228; A. W. N. (1889) 53; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 573.

(11) 30 Ind. Cas. 357; 29 M. L. J. 219.

(12) 28 Ind. Cas. 376; 17 M. L. T. 222; (1915) M. W. N. 225.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 368 OF 1922.

December 8, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway.

PURAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

LALA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

Pleading—Appeal, second—Inference from facts—Question of law.

(1) 44 Ind. Cas. 24; 40 A. 198; 16 A. L. J. 71.

(2) 200 P. R. 1889.

(3) 89 P. R. 1894.

(4) 26 P. R. 1894.

(5) 61 P. R. 1886.

(6) 15 C. 502; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 919.

(7) 27 B. 1; 4 Bom. L. R. 688 (F. B.)

(8) 18 Ind. Cas. 731; 11 A. L. J. 224; 35 A. 178.

PURAN V. LALA.

Although a decision by an Appellate Court as to the effect of the evidence produced in a case is final as to the facts, the soundness of conclusions may involve matters of law and may be questioned in second appeal. The proper legal effect of a proved fact is essentially a question of law. [p. 797, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Delhi, dated the 7th November 1921, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, dated the 20th June 1921.

Mr. Ghulam Rasul, for the Appellants.

Mr. Dev Raj Sawhney, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit giving rise to this second appeal was instituted by Puran and Surjan, sons and Chandgi, grandson of Chhote. They are Jats of Shahpur in the Tahsil and District of Delhi. They claimed possession of 8 bighas 7 biswas of land which they said was ancestral and had been in possession of Lala and the two other defendants as non-occupancy tenants under Chhote. They further alleged that the defendants now claimed the property as having been gifted to them by Chhote under a mutation dated the 8th April 1909, and it was pleaded that this gift was without valid necessity and, therefore, not binding on them. The defendants pleaded they had been in possession of the land in suit as owners for a long time and that the gift by Chhote had been made with the consent of the plaintiffs. They further pleaded that the plaintiffs had by their silence acquiesced in the gift, and that the defendants had sunk a well at considerable expense.

The Trial Court found that the oral evidence for the parties was unreliable and that the plaintiffs' actual consent to the gift had not been proved. It was found, however, that the defendants had been in adverse possession for over 12 years and the plaintiffs' suit was accordingly dismissed. They preferred an appeal to the District Judge who, however, agreed with the view taken by the Trial Court and dismissed the appeal. The plaintiffs have now come up to this Court in second appeal through Mr. Ghulam Rasul and I have heard Mr. Dev Raj Sawhney for the defendants-respondents.

The earliest Revenue Records which have been produced show that in 1900-1901 this land was entered as being owned by Chhote, but in the cultivating possession of the defendants. In the rent column it was entered that no rent was paid ba iwaz muawaza irazi (in lieu of compensation in land).

In 1904 a similar entry appeared, the defendants being shown as tenants who paid no rent ba iwaz tabadala and the same entry was repeated in 1905, 1906, the rent column showing that no rent was paid ba ziria tabadala. It is thus established that from 1900 to 1906 the defendants had been in possession as tenants paying no rent. On the 2nd February 1909, Chhote applied to the Revenue Authorities asking that the defendants be entered as owners of this land, and their names be so shown in the proprietary column. The original application has been lost or destroyed but the mutation records show that the transfer of ownership was due to a hibba or gift. This mutation was sanctioned on the 8th April 1909, and Chhote is recorded as having stated that the land in reality (dar asal) belonged to the defendants. From April 1909, therefore, according to the Revenue Records, the possession of the defendants became that of owners. The learned District Judge in agreement with the Trial Court has come to the conclusion that the proceedings in 1909 amounted to a rectification of the Revenue Records and that the gift had been made at a much earlier period. Mr. Ghulam Rasul urged that the Courts below had really set up an entirely new case for the defendants, inasmuch as Lala, defendant, as a witness, had definitely stated that the mutation had taken place some six months after the gift by Chhote. The date of the mutation being known this would mean that the gift had been made some time in August 1908 or within twelve years of the suit which was brought on the 17th December 1920 after the death of Chhote. According to Lala, defendant, Chhote had gifted this land to them in return for assistance rendered to him (Chhote) by the defendants in connection with some land which some person had usurped.

Mr. Dev Raj Sawhney contended that the Courts below having found that the gift had been made as far back as 1900 this was a finding of fact which cannot be examined in second appeal. In reply it is urged that the findings of the learned District Judge are not challenged so far as the actual facts are concerned but that what is attacked are the inferences which have been drawn from those facts. Now, it seems to me that although the defendants pleaded that they had been in possession of this land as owners for a very long period, the statement of Lala cannot and ought not to be ignored where he says that the gift had been made by Chhote some six months prior to the mutation. That he clearly intended to plead that the gift had been made by Chhote a short time prior to the mutation is also borne out by the fact that the defendants endeavoured to prove that the plaintiffs had given their active consent to the gift. This defence to my mind excludes the suggestion that the gift had been effected as far back as 1900. The learned District Judge having found that the defendants were in possession of the land in 1900 without paying any rent and that in 1909 Chhote stated that they were the real owners has inferred from this that the gift must have been effected as far back as 1900, for an inference which I find it a little difficult to make. Assuming that the defendants have been put in possession of this land in 1900 in lieu of services rendered there is nothing extraordinary in Chhote re-paying those services by remitting the rent payable for the said land. Indeed, had he intended to make a complete gift of it there is no reason why he should not have done so at the time and had the necessary entries made in the Revenue Records. It is easy to understand that after the lapse of several years Chhote could be induced to part with proprietary rights as well. In Ramgopal v. Shaniskhaton (1), it was held that while the District Court's decision as to the effect of the evidence must stand final as to the facts, the soundness of conclusions may involve matters of law and may be questioned by a Court of second appeal. Again in Nasir Chandra Pal v. Shukur Shetkh (2), it was held that the proper legal effect of a proved fact is essentially a question of the law; and it seems to me that in this case it is open to me to examine the conclusions arrived

AZIM KHAN v. SEWA SAM.

(1) 20 C. 93; 19 I. A. 228; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 247; 17 Ind. Jur. 38; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 63 (P. C.).
(2) 51 Ind. Cas. 769; 46 C. 189; 9 I. W. 552; 45 I. A. 183; 23 C. W. N. 345 (P. C.).

at by the learned District Judge from the facts found.

I am unable to see that there has been any acquiescence or silence on the part of the plaintiffs, one of whom is still a minor, which would estop the plaintiffs from challenging this gift. Dhanpat Rai v. Guran Ditta Mal (3) cited by Mr. Dev Raj Sawhney does not afford any assistance as the facts are quite different.

The Courts below have concurred in finding that the defendants have sunk a well at a cost of Rs. 1,000. This finding has not been disputed. I, therefore, accept this appeal and decree the plaintiffs' suit and direct that they are entitled to possession of the property on payment of Rs. 1,000 to the defendants. The parties, in the circumstances, will bear their own costs throughout.

W. C. A.

Appeal accepted.

(3) 64 Ind. Cas. 520; 2 L. 258; 10 P. L. R. 1922.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1559 OF 1922.

January 30, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raof.

AZIM KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT.

versus

SEWA RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), s. 4—Pre-emption right, nature of—Qualification for pre-emption whether must be retained till date of suit.

The right of pre-emption in the Punjab is given by the Punjab Pre-emption Act, which provides that on a sale being effected a right of pre-emption arises in favour of certain classes of persons. [p. 798, col. 2.]

Dictum of Shah Din, J. in Dhanna Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh, 4 Ind. Cas. 337; 91 P. R. 1909; 161 P. W. R. 1909; 148 P. L. R. 1909 (F. B.), followed. [p. 798, col. 1.]

A person, therefore, who is entitled to pre-empt a sale on the date of the sale is entitled to enforce his right notwithstanding the fact that on the date on which he brings the pre-emption suit he has lost the qualification which gave him his right. [p. 798, col. 2.]

Sanwal Das v. Gur Parshad, 4 Ind. Cas. 179; 90 P. R. 1909; 159 P. W. R. 1909; 147 P. L. R. 1909, Dhanna Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh, 4 Ind. Cas. 337; 91 P. R. 1909; 161 P. W. R. 1909; 148 P. L. R. 1909 (F. B.) and Hira v. Bansi Lal, 52

AZIM KHAN V. SEWA RAM.

Ind. Cas. 557; 90 P. R. 1919; 27 P. W. R. 1919, followed.

Fateh Singh v. Sant Singh, 27 Ind. Cas. 29; 43 P. R. 1915; 47 P. W. R. 1915; 125 P. L. R. 1915, dissented from.

Janki Prasad v. Ishar Das, 21 A. 374; A. W. N. (1899) 126; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 947, distinguished.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Miranwali, dated the 27th February 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Bhakhar, District Mianwali, dated the 14th November 1921.

Lala Har Gopal, for the Appellant.

Lala Jagan Nath, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal has arisen out of a suit for pre-emption under the following circumstances :—

Wasa Ram sold 10 kanals 15 marlas of land situate in Manza Shahani to Sewa Ram and Niamat Ram for Rs. 250 by a sale-deed dated the 1st of May 1919. The plaintiff Azim Khan instituted this suit for pre-emption on the 30th of April 1920 on the ground that he was an ala malik in the village and as such had a superior right to that of the vendees. He also alleged that the price mentioned in the sale-deed was fictitious and that, as a matter of fact, only Rs. 120 had been paid. The defendants resisted the suit on the main ground that the plaintiff's ancestors had mortgaged their ala malkiyyat right in the village to the ancestors of the defendants more than sixty years ago and as the mortgage had not been redeemed the plaintiff's right of redemption had been extinguished and that the defendants had become the ala maliks. The price entered in the sale-deed was alleged to be genuine and it was further pleaded that the sale-deed had been obtained with the consent of the plaintiff and that the latter had, therefore, lost his right of pre-emption by waiver. Both the Courts below have held the price entered in the sale-deed to be real and have also held that the plaintiff had not waived his right by consenting to the sale. The real question to be decided was whether the plaintiff was still an ala malik in the village or the defendants have become the ala maliks owing to the plaintiff's right of redemption being extinguished by efflux of time. At the date of the sale only 59 years and 2½ months had expired since the date of the mortgage. The plaintiff, therefore, admittedly was an ala malik at the date of the sale. The suit was instituted on the 30th of April 1920 when the sixty years had expired. The Trial Court, relying upon the rulings in Hira v. Bansi Lal (1), Sanwal Das v. Gur Parshad (2) and Dhanna Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh (3), held that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the suit and granted him a decree.

The lower Appellate Court has dismissed the suit holding that, in order to succeed in the pre-emptive suit, the plaintiff ought to have shown that he had a right of pre-emption not only at the date of the sale but also at the date of the suit. In support of this view the learned Judge relied upon the ruling reported as Fateh Singh v. Sant Singh (4). This ruling is mainly based upon the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Janki Prasad v. Ishar Das (5). In the Full Bench ruling reported as Dhanna Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh (3), Mr. Justice Shah Din pointed out that the right of pre-emption in this Province is given by the Pre-emption Act which provides that on a sale being effected the right of pre-emption arises in favour of a certain class of persons. In the Province of Agra the right of pre-emption is based on the rule of justice, equity and good conscience, and the principles applicable to pre-emption cases under the Muhammadan Law are freely applied to pre-emption cases in that Province.

According to Muhammadan Law if a claimant for pre-emption is found to be a stranger at the date of the suit he cannot be given a decree for pre-emption. The ruling in Janki Prasad v. Ishar Das (5) cannot, therefore, apply to cases of pre-emption arising under the Pre-emption Act in this Province. In my opinion the view taken by the Trial Court was correct.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court restore that of the Court of first instance with costs.

Z. K. & N. H.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 52 Ind. Cas. 557; 90 P. R. 1919; 27 P. W. R. 1919.

(2) 4 Ind. Cas. 179; 90 P. R. 1909; 159 P. W. R. 1909; 147 P. L. R. 1909.

(3) 4 Ind. Cas. 337; 91 P. R. 1909; 161 P. W. R. 1909; 148 P. L. R. 1909 (F. B.).

(4) 27 Ind. Cas. 29; 43 P. R. 1915; 47 P. W. R. 1915; 125 P. L. R. 1915.

(5) 21 A. 374; A. W. N. (1899) 126; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 947 (F. B.).

BRIJ RAJ SARAN v. JOTI PRASHAD.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 158 OF 1922.

May 21, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice,
and Mr. Justice Martineau.BRIJ RAJ SARAN, MINOR, THROUGH MUSAMMAT GANPATI DEVI AND ANOTHER
—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JOTI PARSHAD—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 36—Document held to be admissible in appeal—Decision, whether can be questioned in Letters Patent Appeal.

A suit was brought to recover a certain sum of money on the basis of a document which was held by the Trial Court to be a promissory-note, but which was not, as such, properly stamped. On appeal to the High Court it was held by a Single Judge that the document was not a promissory-note and was admissible in evidence on payment of the necessary stamp-duty and penalty. On an appeal being preferred against this decision under the Letters Patent:

Held, that the order of the Single Judge amounted to an admission of the document in evidence within the meaning of section 36 of the Stamp Act, and, consequently, could not be questioned in appeal. [p. 800, col. 1.]

Mongal Sain v. Gobind Das, 139 P. R. 1890, followed.

An appeal under the Letters Patent is a stage of the suit for the purposes of section 36 of the Stamp Act. [p. 800, col. 1.]

Ramasami Chetti v. Ramasami Chetti, 5 M. 220; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 153; and Mela Ram v. Prem Kaur, 71 Ind. Cas. 42; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 143, referred to.

Letters Patent Appeal from an order of Mr. Justice Broadway, passed in Civil Appeal No. 2638 of 1921, dated the 6th June 1922, and published as 68 Ind. Cas., 461, reversing that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Karnal, dated the 7th October 1921.

Pandit Sheo Narain, R. B., and Lala Jagan Nath, for the Appellants.

Mr. Shamair Chand and Lala Fakir Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought for money due on a document bearing a one-anna stamp, which contained a promise to pay Rs. 11,891-15-3 and interest. The plaintiff described the document in the plaint as an agreement, but the defendants pleaded that it was a promissory-note and, being insufficiently stamped, was inadmissible in evidence. The lower Court upheld the defendants' contention, but held that the plaintiff was entitled to fall back on the original transactions entered in his books and as those transactions had taken place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction it returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. On appeal to this Court it has been held by a Single Judge that the document in question is not a promissory-note and he has returned the case to the lower Court for disposal according to law. The present appeal has been preferred from his order under the Letters Patent, and it is contended on behalf of the appellants that the document is a promissory-note and is, therefore, inadmissible in evidence under section 35 of the Stamp Act.

It has, however, first to be seen whether the appellants are not precluded from putting forward this contention by section 36 of the Act, which provides that where an instrument has been admitted in evidence such admission shall not, except as provided in section 67, be called in question at any stage of the same suit or proceeding on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped. In this connection two questions arise for consideration, one whether the instrument on which the suit is based has been admitted in evidence, and the other whether this appeal is a stage of the suit.

With regard to the first point it is urged for the appellants that the instrument, though held by the learned Judge not to be a promissory-note is nevertheless, as an agreement, under-stamped and is not admissible in evidence without payment of the full stamp-duty and the penalty prescribed by section 35. This is true, but throughout the proceedings the only dispute between the parties has been whether or not the instrument is a promissory-note. If it were a promissory-note it would be altogether inadmissible. The decision of the Single Judge lets in the instrument, subject only to the plaintiff paying the prescribed duty and penalty, which it has never been suggested he is not prepared to do. Mongal Sain v. Gobind Das (1) is a case in point. There also the First Court had held that the instrument sued on was a promissory-note and inadmissible in evidence, but the Court of Appeal held that it was not a promissory-note and was admissible on payment of the duty as an agreement. Plowden, J., regarded the instrument as having been admitted in evidence by the Court of Appeal, and ruled that the admission could not be called in question. In our opinion, therefore, the instrument in suit in the present case has, for the purpose of section 36 of the Stamp Act, been admitted in evidence by the judgment now under appeal, even though the full stamp-duty and penalty have yet to be paid.

(1) 139 P. R. 1890.

WALI DAD KHAN V. MANI RAM.

As to the second question, it is not disputed that where an instrument has been admitted in evidence by the Court of first instance section 36 prevents the admission from being called in question in the Court of Appeal. On this point there are several rulings, of which Mela Ram v. Prem Kuar (2) is one of the most recent. It is thus evident that a first appeal is regarded as a stage of the suit for the purpose of section 36. A second appeal was similarly regarded in Ramasami Chetti v. Ramasami Chetti (3), in which it was held that the admission by the lower Appellate Court of a hundi, which the First Court had held to be inadmissible, could not be objected to in second appeal, and the decision in Mangal Satn v. Gobind Das (1), which has been cited above, is to the same effect.

We can see no reason why an appeal under the Letters Patent should not in like manner be considered as a stage of the suit for the purposes of section 36 of the Stamp Act.

We hold, therefore, that, in accordance with the provisions of that section, the appellants are not entitled to call in question the learned Judge's admission in evidence of the document which forms the basis of the suit. The appeal consequently fails and we dismiss it with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 71 Ind. Cas. 421 (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 143.

(3) 5 M. 220; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 153.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 37 OF 1921.

October 23, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Martineau and Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

WALI DAD KHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MANI RAM AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Execution of decree—Money-decree—Judgment-debtor's estate taken over by Court of Wards—Instalments, whether should be allowed.

The mere fact that the estate of a judgment-debtor has been brought under the management of the Court of Wards is not a reason for allowing him to pay by instalments the amount of a money-decree obtained against him.

First appeal from the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Jhang, dated the 5th October 1922.

Mr. C. H. Oertel, for the Appellants.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—A decree for Rs. 5,790 has been passed on a bond executed by the defendants, and all that the latter urge in their appeal is that they should have been allowed instalments. It is pointed out that their estate has this year been brought under the management of the Court of Wards, but this is not a reason for allowing instalments.

The defendants are, as pointed out by the lower Court, not poor and impecunious, but own considerable property, and they have not yet paid a single pie of what they owe to the plaintiffs. The rate of interest charged is moderate, and the lower Court was, in our opinion, right in refusing instalment.

We dismiss the appeal with costs.

W. C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

BHURE MAI, V. EMPEROR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 93 OF 1923.

April 11, 1923.

Present.—Mr Justice Daniels.

BHURE MAI,—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 144, 435, 439—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 188—Order under s. 144—Extension of period by Local Government, limits on—Reasons for extension—Disobedience of order—Offence—Revision—Ground, new, whether can be urged before High Court.

The Local Government when extending the period during which an order under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code is to remain in force, is not concerned with the reasons given by the Magistrate for the order, but with the actual order passed by him, and if the Local Government considers that there is danger to human life, health or safety or a likelihood of a riot or an affray in allowing the act which has been prohibited by the Magistrate, it is perfectly competent under clause (5) of section 144 to extend the period of the order. [p. 801, col. 2; p. 802, col. 1.]

The Legislature has not seen fit to limit the time for which the force of an order under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code may be extended by the Local Government under clause (5) of the section, and under the terms of the clause it is competent to the Local Government to extend the order so long as the danger which it apprehends continues to exist. [p. 802, col. 1.]

There is nothing in clause (5) of section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code which requires the Local Government to state its reasons for extending the period of the order or even to state the fact of a likelihood of a riot or affray or other danger which it apprehends and it is not open to the High Court to add to the section a condition not imposed by the Legislature. [p. 802, col. 1.]

Under section 188 of the Penal Code, if the Court finds that the order, disobedience of which is sought to be punished, was a legal order, it has only to see whether the accused disobeyed the order; and, if so, whether such disobedience caused or tended to cause the effects specified in the second and third paragraphs of the section. [p. 802, col. 2.]

The object of requiring an application for revision to be presented first to the District Magistrate or to the Sessions Judge is, that the High Court in dealing with the matter may have before it a reasoned opinion of the two Courts on the points at issue, and this object will be largely defeated if applicants are allowed to take in the High Court points which they did not press before the lower Appellate Court. [p. 802, col. 1.]

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Bareilly, dated the 23rd of October 1922.

Mr. U. S. Bajpai, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision against the conviction of the applicant for an offence under section 188 of the Indian Penal Code. The charge against the applicant was, that he took part in an unlawful procession which had been prohibited by an order lawfully passed under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The District Magistrate of Bareilly originally issued an order forbidding any procession whatever to pass down certain streets in Bareilly. This order could only remain in force for two months unless the period was extended by the Local Government under sub-section (5). Before the expiry of the period of the order the Local Government passed an order which was duly notified in the Gazette directing that the order should remain in force until cancelled by a Notification in the United Provinces Gazette.

Four grounds of revision have been urged, three of them attacking the legality of the order passed by the Local Government and the fourth alleging that, even if the order was legal, the offence under section 188 was not proved.

The first contention of the applicant is, that the order could only have been extended lawfully with reference to religious processions. The learned Counsel relies on the preamble to the order in which the learned District Magistrate sets forth his reasons for passing it. The District Magistrate considered that as these particular streets were narrow in the extreme, the taking of processions through them might cause constant risk of obstruction, annoyance and injury to persons pursuing their lawful occupations, and that, further, on the occasion of religious festivals there was the added danger of riot or affray. The operative part of the order was, however, a prohibition against any procession of any kind passing down the streets in question. The Local Government was not concerned with the reasons given by the Magistrate but with the actual order passed by him, and if the Local Government considered that there was danger to human life, health or safety or likelihood of a riot or affray in allowing processions to pass down these streets the Local Government was perfectly competent, under sub-section (5), to extend the period of the order and was not limited to any particular kind of procession.

CHANDRIKA KOERI v. BUDHU DUSADH.

The second objection taken is to the form in which the order is passed, namely, that it should remain in force until cancelled by a Notification in the Gazette. Reliance is placed on the heading of the Chapter which refers to temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger, and it is argued that the Local Government had only power to extend the order for a definite and very limited time. The Legislature has, however, not seen fit to limit the time for which the force of the order may be extended and under the terms of the section it was competent to the Local Government to extend the order so long as the danger which it apprehended continued to exist.

The third objection is, that the Local Government in extending the period of the order has not stated the danger which it apprehended and which led to the Notification being issued. Here, again, there is nothing in the section which requires the Local Government to state its reasons or even to state the fact of a likelihood of a riot or affray or other danger which it apprehends, and it is not open to this Court to add to the section a condition not imposed by the Legislature.

The last point pressed is, that it is not shown that the disobedience on the part of the accused caused or tended to cause danger to human life, health or safety or a riot or affray within the meaning of the third paragraph of section 188. This point was not taken in the application in revision presented to the learned Sessions Judge. The object of requiring an application in these cases to be presented first to the lower Appellate Court is that this Court in dealing with the matter may have before it a reasoned opinion of two Courts on the points at issue, and this object will be largely defeated if applicants are allowed to take in this Court points which they did not press in their application in revision in the Court below. Both Courts have, however, as a matter of fact, addressed their minds to this point. The Trial Court considered that organised flouting of standing orders of this nature, and it had no doubt that the disobedience was organised, involved considerable risk of coming into conflict at any rate with the Police, and it would be not difficult to find instances in which such conflict had led to bloodshed. The learned Sessions Judge says that to urge that there was no danger of a riot or affray in the present case appeared to him to be trifling with realities. I may point out, further, that the fine imposed was one which could have been imposed under the second paragraph of the section. It is urged that this paragraph could not apply because the Local Government could only have issued its Notification in the Gazette on the ground that a riot or affray or danger to life, health or safety was apprehended. This is an entirely distinct consideration. The question whether the order was a legal order is an entirely distinct question from the question whether an offence has been committed in disobeying it. If the order promulgated was a legal order the Court has only to see whether the accused disobeyed that order and whether, if so, such disobedience caused or tended to cause the effects specified in the second and third paragraphs of section 188. All the grounds of revision, therefore, fail and I dismiss the application.

The question of sentence was not originally argued but at the time of delivering judgment the learned Counsel asked the Court to reduce the sentences. I do not think, however, that the fines imposed were excessive in the circumstances and I decline to interfere.

Z. K.

Application rejected.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 33 OF 1923.
May 3, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.

CHANDRIKA KOERI—ACCUSED

versus

BUDHU DUSADH—COMPLAINANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 133—Public nuisance—Obstruction to public path—Bona fide claim of right—Jurisdiction—Magistrate issuing rule whether competent to make it absolute on report of another Magistrate.

CNANDRIKA KOERI v. BUDHU DUSADH.

In a proceeding under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code for the purpose of compelling the removal of an obstruction from a public way, where a bona fide question as to the way being public is raised, there is no jurisdiction to make an order under the section, and the question should be left for determination by the Civil Court. To have this effect, however, the claim must be bona fide and not a mere pretence to oust jurisdiction, and it is for the Magistrate to say whether the claim is bona fide or not. [p. 804, col. 1.]

Queen-Empress v. Bissessur Sahu, 17 C. 962; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 914, relied on.

A Magistrate who issues a conditional Rule under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code is competent to make the Rule absolute upon the evidence recorded and report submitted to him by another Magistrate to whom he had referred the matter under the last paragraph of clause (1) of section 133. [p. 804, col. 1.]

In re Narasimha, 9 M. 201; 10 Ind. Jur. 185; 2 Weir 60; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 537, relied on.

Reference made by the Sessions Judge, Shahabad.

JUDGMENT.—This was a reference made to this Court by the Sessions Judge of Shahabad under the provisions of section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The circumstances under which this reference is made are somewhat unusual. It would appear that a certain Budhu Dusadh, Chaukidar of Mauza Atan, complained by petition to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Buxar, purporting to do so under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The complaint was to the effect that one Chandrika Koeri and others had obstructed a public village path by using a portion of it for their khalihans. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate thereupon asked the Sub-Inspector of Police to report, after making an enquiry, as to whether the road was a public road and whether there had been encroachment. It would seem that the Writer Head-Constable held a local enquiry and submitted a report on the 17th December last to the effect that Chandrika and others mentioned had not encroached on the public road and he recommended that no action should be taken. However, on the 4th January, Budhu Dusadh filed a further petition impugning the correctness of the Police report and praying that the Magistrate, that is to say, the Sub-Divisional Officer, should personally hold an enquiry. Apparently, the Sub-Divisional Officer after reading through the petition, passed the following order:—

"I am not satisfied with the report. Draw proceedings under section 133 and fix 21st January 1923 for appearance before the Deputy Magistrate for moving to have the order set aside or modified."

The Deputy Magistrate then proceeded to hold an enquiry. Chandrika Koeri duly appeared and filed a written statement in which he alleged inter alia that he had held his khalihans upon the locality in question for a very long time; that he had acquired a right of easement over the portion of the property, and that the Criminal Court had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter under the provisions of section 133. The Deputy Magistrate found, however, that the path was a public path and that it had been to some extent obstructed by Chandrika Koeri on account of his having placed there his khalihan and also some sugar machine. The Deputy Magistrate made a report to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate recommending Chandrika's prosecution under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code and removal of the obstruction referred to. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate on the 23rd February makes the following order which is now the subject-matter of the present reference:—

"I have read the evidence adduced on both sides and have seen the Deputy Magistrate's report. I am satisfied that there has been an obstruction on a public path.

"The Rule under section 133 is made absolute. Chandrika Koeri and others are ordered to remove the obstruction within a week."

Now, the matter was then taken to the Sessions Judge and two points, both of considerable importance, were argued before him. In the first place, it was urged that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate had no authority to make the Rule absolute upon the evidence recorded and upon a report submitted by the Deputy Magistrate. There is, however, little doubt that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was certainly entitled under the provisions of the section to order, after making the conditional order, the party against whom that order was operative, to appear before either himself or some other Magistrate of the First or Second class. The question, however, as the Sessions

CHANDRIKA KOERI v. BUDHU BUSADH.

Judge points out, is as to what officer should pass the final order, that is to the say, whether it is the Magistrate who issued the conditional Rule or the Magistrate before whom the petitioner was ordered to appear. The learned Sessions Judge refers to the authority of In re Narasimha (1) which seems to lay down that it is not illegal, although it is undesirable, for a First Class Magistrate to call on the officer who reports on a nuisance in his administrative capacity to decide judicially whether there has been a nuisance or not. He deduces, and I think rightly, from this that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was competent to make the conditional Rule absolute upon the evidence recorded and the report submitted to him by the Deputy Magistrate to whom he had referred the matter under the last paragraph of clause (1) of section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The second point which was urged before the learned Sessions Judge appears, however, to present somewhat greater difficulty. It is that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate had no jurisdiction to make the conditional order absolute because there was a bona fide claim by Chandrika Koeri of private right. There is no doubt that in his written statement he put forward this claim and, according to the Sessions Judge, there is equally no doubt that certain witnesses who were examined on behalf of Chandrika depose that Chandrika had had this so-called obstruction on this land for a considerable length of time.

Now, it is laid down, in the case of Queen-Empress v. Bissessur Sahu (2) that in a proceeding under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for the purpose of compelling the removal of an obstruction from a public way where a bona fide question as to the way being public is raised, there is no jurisdiction to make an order under the section and the question should be left for determination by the Civil Court. To have this effect, however, the claim must be bona fide and not mere pretence to oust jurisdiction and it is for the Magistrate to say whether the claim be bona fide or not.

Now, in this case, the Sessions Judge is at some pains carefully to point out that, although it was evidently strongly urged before the Magistrate that there was a claim of right on behalf of Chandrika yet the Magistrate did not come to any finding as to whether it was or was not a bona fide claim. He may have, it is true, and no doubt did, by inference drawn from the fact that he found that the road was a public one and that there had been encroachment, come to the conclusion that Chandrika's claim of right was not substantial, but he did not record any finding at any time as to whether Chandrika's claim was so or a pretence to oust jurisdiction of the Magistrate. The learned Sessions Judge, therefore, considers that this was irregular and that the present order making the Rule absolute should be set aside and that the Magistrate should be directed after notice to both the parties to investigate the complaint de novo and to record a finding as to whether Chandrika's claim is a bona fide one or not; whether it is a correct one is another matter. If his claim is a bona fide claim the matter cannot be dealt with under the provisions of section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If it is not a bona fide claim, but merely a pretext to oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under the provisions of that section, then the fact should be recorded. This reference must, therefore, be accepted. The order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Buxar dated the 23rd February last must be set aside and the matter must be investigated de novo.

Z. K.

Reference accepted.

(1) 9 M. 201; 10 Ind. Jur. 185; 2 Weir 60; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 537.

(2) 17 C. 562; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 914.

HUKUM CHAND v. EMPEROR.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 101 OF 1923.

March 28, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ryves.

HUKUM CHAND—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XL V of 1860), s. 426—Mischief—Removal of earth by tenant in exercise of bona fide right—Dispute of civil nature—Criminal Courts, duty of.

Criminal Courts are not meant to decide questions which are of a civil nature between a landlord and his tenants.

Accused removed some earth from a plot of land belonging to his landlord in the exercise of an alleged customary right under which all residents of the village were entitled to remove earth when they wanted it. He was convicted under section 426 of the Penal Code:

Held, that the dispute, if any, between the accused and his landlord was of a civil nature and the conviction of the accused was not, therefore, justified.

Criminal revision against an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Shahjahanpur, dated the 29th of August 1922.

Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case Hukum Chand was fined Rs. 10 under section 426 of the Indian Penal Code for having removed some earth from two plots of land, one described as banjar and the other a grove, which were in the possession of the zemindar of the village, without his consent. We are not informed as to how much earth was taken.
But evidently there was more than a mere handful or so because in the grounds of appeal in the Court below there is no ground taken to the effect that section 95 of the Indian Penal Code would cover the case.
The gravamen of the charge, of course, is that the applicant took this earth without getting the consent of the zemindar and the zemindar's karinda has brought this charge in support of the sacred rights of the zemindar.
The defence was that the accused was only following the custom of the village and taking earth as every body else did when they wanted it. I do not think that the Criminal Courts were meant to decide questions which are really of a civil nature between the landlord and his tenants.

DEVI DIAL v. EMPEROR.

This is a very petty matter. But, however, to discourage Criminal Courts from taking up such cases, I set aside the conviction and sentence and direct the fine to be refunded if paid.

Z. K.

*Conviction set aside.LAHORE HIGH COURT.CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 1038
OF 1922.

November 27, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau.

DEVI DIAL—CONVICT—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

*Penal Code (Act XL V of 1860), ss. 342, 500—
Defamation—Evidence as to reputation of complainant, admissibility of—Publication, proof of—Prosecution, duty of—Examination of accused, value of.*

In an action for damages for libel or slander evidence may be given in mitigation of damages to show that the plaintiff has a general bad character. [p. 806, col. 1.]

Scott v. Sampson, (1882) 8 Q. B. D. 491; 51 L. J.
Q. B. 380; 46 L. T. 412; 30 W. R. 541; 46 J. P.
408, relied on.

Similarly, in a criminal prosecution where it is essential, in order to constitute the offence of defamation, that the person who makes or publishes the imputation complained of should intend to harm, or know or have reason to believe that the imputation will harm, the reputation of the person concerning whom it is made or published, the question what reputation the complainant has is relevant. [p. 806, col. 2.]

Where the imputation complained of is that the complainant, an official, had compelled the accused to pay him a bribe, the accused is entitled to prove that the complainant has a notoriously bad reputation as a bribe-taker, so that the imputation made as to his having taken a bribe on the particular occasion in question, even if false, could not damage his reputation as he had none to lose. In any case, proof of the complainant's bad reputation would affect the sentence to be passed in case of a conviction. [p. 806, col. 2.]

It is the duty of the prosecution in every case to make out its case by evidence and a gap in the evidence cannot be filled up by any statement made by the accused in his examination under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code. [p.
806, col. 1.]

Moh'deen Abdul Kadir v. Emperor, 27 M. 238;
2 Weir 408; 1 Cr. L. J. 566, relied on.

A Magistrate is not entitled under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code to put questions to the accused if the prosecution has not let in evidence implicating him in the offence with which

DEVI DIAL, v. EMPEROR.

he is charged, and answers to questions put by a Magistrate in contravention of that section are not admissible in evidence against the accused.

[p. 806, col. 2; p. 807, col. 1.]

In re Abibulla Rowethan, 30 Ind. Cas. 447; 39 M. 770; (1915) M. W. N. 413; 2 L. W. 939; 16 Cr. L. J. 623, relied on.

Where in a prosecution for defamation no evidence is let in on behalf of the prosecution to prove the making or the publishing by the accused of the imputation complained of, the accused is entitled to an acquittal, and the prosecution cannot claim to have proved their case by virtue of any admission made by the accused in his examination. [p. 807, col. 1.]

Petition, under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of an order of the Sessions Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 30th June 1922, affirming that of the District Magistrate, Gujranwala, dated the 1st March 1922.

Dr. G. C. Narang, for the Petitioner.

Lala Amar Nath Chona, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order of the Sessions Judge of Gujranwala affirming the conviction of the petitioner for having defamed the complainant, an Extra Assistant Commissioner, by publishing an imputation that the latter had compelled him to pay a bribe of Rs. 1,000 in order to avoid a prosecution for a certain offence.

The grounds urged in support of the application are (1) that the petitioner was not allowed to produce evidence as to the complainant having taken bribes on other occasions and general evidence as to the complainant's reputation, (2) that publication of the libel has not been proved, and (3) that part of the evidence for the defence was not considered by the learned Sessions Judge.

Evidence as to the complainant having taken bribes on specific occasions other than the one which forms the subject of this case would, in my opinion, be irrelevant, but I agree with the arguments that the petitioner was entitled to produce evidence to show that the complainant had the reputation of being a bribe-taker. It is settled law that in an action for damages for libel or slander evidence may be given in mitigation of damages to show that the plaintiff had a general bad character (Scott v. Sampson (1) and Odgers on Libel and

(1) (1882) 8 Q. B. D. 491; 51 L. J. Q. B. 380; 46 L. T. 412; 30 W. R. 541; 46 J. P. 408.

Slander 5th Edition, page 402.) Similarly, in a criminal prosecution where it is essential, in order to constitute the offence of defamation, that the person who makes or publishes the imputation complained of should intend to harm, or know or have reason to believe that the imputation will harm the reputation of the person concerning whom it is made or published, the question what reputation the complainant had is relevant. If the petitioner in the present case were able to prove that the complainant had a notoriously bad reputation as a bribe-taker it might reasonably be argued that the imputation made as to his having taken a bribe on the particular occasion in question, even if false, could not damage his reputation as he had none to lose; and in any case proof of the complainant's bad reputation would affect the sentence to be passed in case of conviction. I hold, therefore, that the evidence which the petitioner wished to adduce in proof of the complainant's bad reputation was wrongly excluded.

It is, however, not necessary to send the case back for that evidence to be recorded as the application for revision must succeed also on the second of the three grounds mentioned above. Admittedly, no evidence was given by the prosecution to prove that the petitioner made or published the imputation complained of, but the Courts below have held the publication to be proved because the petitioner when examined admitted the publication. This is an erroneous view of the law. The prosecution must make out its case by evidence and a gap in the evidence cannot be filled up by any statement made by the accused in his examination under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code. This has been so held in Mohideen Abdul Kadir v. Emperor (2) which is a case exactly in point. Further, it has been held in In re Abibulla Rowethan (3) that the Magistrate is not entitled under section 342 of the Code to put questions to the accused if the prosecution has not let in evidence implicating him in the offence with which he is charged, and

(2) 27 M. 233, 2 Weir 403; 1 Cr. L. J. 556.

(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 417; 39 M. 770; (1915) M. W. N. 413; 2 L. W. 939; 16 Cr. L. J. 623.

KEDAR NATH DEY v. MOHAMED SIDDIK.

that answers to questions put by a Committing Magistrate in contravention of that section are not admissible in evidence against the accused at the trial.

As no evidence has been given to prove that the petitioner made or published the imputation concerning the complainant the conviction cannot be sustained and I accordingly accept the application, set aside the conviction and sentence, and acquit the petitioner. The fine, if paid, will be refunded.

Z. K.

*Application accepted.CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 304 OF 1923.

April 19, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Buckland and Mr. Justice Cuming.

KEDAR NATH DEY—PETITIONER*versusMOHAMED SIDDIK AND OTHERS—*ACCUSED—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal breach of trust—Property in possession of third person—Order directing detention of property, legality of.

In a case of a criminal breach of trust in respect of a motor car which, it appeared, had been sold by the accused to a third person the Magistrate made an order directing that the car should remain in Court until further orders:

Held, that as regards the purchaser of the car there was a gross abuse of the process of a Criminal Court by utilising criminal proceedings to which he was not a party for the detention of property which he had bought and of which he was in possession, whether or not the seller had a right to sell it to him. [p. 807, col. 1.]

Application against an order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, dated the 14th March 1923.

Babu Manmatha Nath Mukherjee, for the Petitioner.

Babu Probode Chandra Chatterjee, for Opposite Party No. 1.

Babu B. B. Mukherjee, for Opposite Party No. 2.

JUDGMENT.

Buckland, J.—This is an application made on behalf of one Kedar Nath Dey against an order of the Chief Presidency

Magistrate, dated the 14th March 1923, directing that a certain motor car should remain in Court until further orders. That order was made in criminal proceedings instituted by Mohamed Siddik against a person of the name of Rigby in which the latter is charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of the motor car. Those criminal proceedings themselves as between the parties are not before us and we are only concerned with the order made against Kedar Nath Dey for the return of the car. But from Siddik's petition of complaint it appears there were arrangements embodied in an agreement between him and Rigby with reference to this motor car. The petition of complaint further states that he learnt on enquiry that Rigby had sold the car to Kedar Nath Dey contrary to the terms of the agreement. The position, therefore, is that there was a dispute about this car resulting in criminal proceedings between Mohamed Siddik and Rigby. Kedar Nath alleges that these proceedings are collusive for the purpose of securing the car from him for the benefit of the parties. That is hardly a matter we can go into, but I may say, without prejudging the criminal proceedings now pending between Mohamed Siddik and Rigby, that from the petition of complaint it is obvious that, even as regards those proceedings, it may be a matter for consideration as to whether or not the questions involved are matters for a Criminal or a Civil Court. But as regards Kedar Nath Dey I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that there has been a gross abuse of the process of a Criminal Court by utilising criminal proceedings to which Kedar Nath Dey is not a party for the detention of property which he professed to have and had admittedly bought, and of which he was in possession, whether or not the seller had a right to sell it to him. I can only suppose the object is to endeavour to obtain the judgment of the Criminal Court upon a question which clearly ought to be determined in a civil suit. The car may be detained for a period of several months in which time it will probably seriously deteriorate. Though the car should not be detained until the conclusion of the criminal case

CHHAPROLIA v. EMPEROR.

I think some order should be made safeguarding the rights of Siddik, if he has any, until the question of the ownership of the car or any other such questions of a civil nature to which the facts may give rise have been decided by a Court competent to deal with them if proceedings are instituted within a reasonable time for that purpose.

The order, therefore, is that on Kedar Nath Dey giving an undertaking in writing to this Court to produce the car whenever called upon to do so either by this Court or by the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate until the proceedings before him have terminated and upon Kedar Nath Dey giving security in the sum of rupees ten thousand by his own bond and by one surety to the satisfaction of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, the car in question will be returned to him.

On the undertaking to this Court being given it will be certified by an officer of this Court to the Chief Presidency Magistrate so that he may act upon such certificate when he has taken the security ordered. When the above directions have been carried out the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate dated the 14th March 1923, directing the car to remain in Court will be set aside and on the criminal proceedings now pending between Siddik and Rigby before the Chief Presidency Magistrate being concluded Kedar Nath Dey will be discharged from his bond and undertaking and his surety also will be discharged. This order is without prejudice to any order that may be made in relation to this car by any Civil Court of competent jurisdiction at any date hereafter.

Cuming, J.—I agree.

B. N.

Order set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 959 of 1922.

January 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

CHHAPROLIA—CONVICT—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 337, 494—Approver—Discharged accomplice—Corroboration of evidence—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 400—Association for habitually committing dacoity—Evidence of accomplice.

An accomplice witness against whom the case has been withdrawn under section 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code is less reliable than one to whom a pardon has been tendered under section 337 of the Code. The latter is pardoned conditionally and has before him, as an inducement to stick to the truth, the constant apprehension that his statement may be used against him in a trial hereafter if he is proved to have given false evidence on any point. Moreover, there is at least one previous statement by which his veracity can be tested. On the other hand, the accomplice witness, who has not received a conditional pardon, is a freer man in the witness-box since he is not pinned down to a previous statement which may be based on tutored material, by the fear of prosecution for perjury if his deposition in Court does not correspond exactly with that previous statement. [p. 809, col. 1.]

In any case, the evidence of an accomplice must be regarded as tainted, particularly of an accomplice who has been discharged under section 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and it must be corroborated in material particulars before it can be acted upon. [p. 809, cols. 1 & 2.]

When persons are charged with belonging to a gang associated for purposes of habitually committing offences, the only direct evidence that can be tendered is that of accomplices. Other witnesses can testify to association on certain isolated occasions, but the man who gives evidence of habitual association for a particular purpose must almost inevitably be an accomplice. [p. 809, col. 2.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the Special Magistrate, First Class, with section 30 powers, Delhi, dated the 31st July 1922.

Diwan Ram Lal, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This judgment will dispose of the separate appeals of 13 persons out of 17 convicted by Lala Gopal Das, Special Magistrate, with section 30 powers, Delhi, of an offence under section 400. Of these persons Gopal Chamar, Shola, Khatik, Badam Khatik, Babbam Khatik, Babu Khatik, and Siyya, Jaga, have appealed through Counsel Mr. Rustumji. The other

CHHAPROLIA V. EMPEROR.

appellants, Harsa, Chhaprolia, Zahria, Belia, Rai Singh, alias Ashrafi Lal, Ajab Singh and Ram Chand have appealed through Jail. Of this second group, the last named is also a Khatik, and the others are members of criminal tribes being described as Bhatu Sansis with the exception of Chhaprolia who is described as a Kanjar Sansi. Of the three persons who have not appealed Harnam is a Kanjar Sansi and Ram Dial and Kala are Bhatu Sansis.

The principal prosecution witnesses are three approvers Jahangir, Bhatu Sansi, Ram Lal, Kanjar Sansi, and Bannun Kanjar Sansi.

These three approvers were not given conditional pardons but the cases against them were withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor with the leave of the Court under section 494, Criminal Procedure Code, and they were then tendered as witnesses. Mr. Rustomji has raised the objection, that they were not competent witnesses, but authority is against him on this point and all that he can point to is the opinion of the minority Judge in the Full Bench decision Queen-Empress v. Hussein Haji (1).

It can, of course, be argued with reason that an accomplice witness, against whom the case has been withdrawn under section 494, is less reliable than one to whom a pardon has been tendered under section 337. The latter is pardoned conditionally and has before him, as an inducement to stick to the truth, the constant apprehension that his statement may be used against him in a trial hereafter if he is proved to have given false evidence on any point. Moreover, there is at least one previous statement by which his veracity can be tested. On the other hand, it might be claimed that the accomplice witness who has not received a conditional pardon is a freer man in the witness-box since he is not pinned down to a previous statement which may be based on tutored material, by the fear of prosecution for perjury if his deposition in Court does not correspond exactly with that previous statement.

In any case, however, an accomplice's evidence must be regarded as tainted, particularly in such a case as is now before me, and it must be corroborated in material particulars before it can be acted upon.

(1) 25 B. 422; 2 Bom. L. R. 1095.

In regard to the extent of corroboration necessary it must be remembered, as the learned Counsel for the Crown has pointed out, that when persons are charged with belonging to a gang, associated for purposes of habitually committing offences, the only direct evidence that can be tendered is that of accomplices. Other witnesses can testify to association on certain isolated occasions, but the man who gives evidence of habitual association for a particular purpose must almost inevitably be an accomplice.

The approver witness is Jahangir who has made a very long statement implicating all the appellants and describing 33 dacoities or thefts committed by the gang of which he himself was the leader. He is corroborated by one or other of the other two approvers in regard to all but five of the occurrences. Twenty-nine of these occurrences have been proved to have taken place by the evidence of independent witnesses who make it quite clear that the offences were committed by a gang. The existence of a gang is fully established, and the discovery of stolen property, which has been duly identified, in the possession or control of the three approvers furnishes satisfactory corroboration of their own statements that they were members of the gang.

In support of the Magistrate's finding, that each of the appellants was an accepted member of the gang, the following evidence is relied upon to corroborate the direct evidence of the approvers:—

1. Proof that certain of them were arrested on the evening of the 14th of June 1921, in a garden at Meerut of which Jahangir, approver, was the lessee, that they endeavoured to escape, when the Police raided the place, that the approvers were present with them, that the next day some stolen property was found in the garden, and that ten days later other stolen valuables were dug up in the garden on information given by one of the approvers.

2. Evidence of association in other places.

3. In the case of two of the appellants direct evidence of participation in a specific offence of dacoity.

4. Evidence of arrest in places other than the garden.

CHHAPROLIA V. EMPEROR.

5. Evidence of previous convictions for theft and kindred offences in the cases of some of the appellants.

6. Evidence that some of the appellants were absconders from Criminal Tribes Settlements.

The incident immediately responsible for the prosecution of the appellants was the capture of Rai Singh, appellant, on the 1st June 1921, in the course of what Jahan-gir, approver, has described as occurrence No. 29. A gang, of which he was a member and some of the members of which carried firearms, attacked and looted some huts on the banks of the Jamna. The people of these and other neighbouring huts gathered and forced the dacoits to retreat across the river. One of the gang, a man named Dalla, was drowned and Rai Singh was so exhausted that his companions had to leave him behind and thus he fell into the hands of the pursuers who made him over to the Police. From Rai Singh was ascertained the name of one of the prosecution witnesses, Chhajju, who confessedly was an accomplice with the gang but who was not placed on trial as having been a member thereof. Chhajju gave information which led to the raid on Meerut garden and to the discovery of stolen property there. Other information was obtained from the approvers and other persons captured in the garden.

Mr. Rustomji, for the appellants above named as his clients, does not contest the evidence of the existence of the gang or of the membership thereof of the approvers and this evidence, in my opinion, is not rebutted by anything on the record. It is to be seen in the case of each appellant whether he is proved to have belonged to the gang. It has been stated already that the evidence of the three accomplice witnesses, whom I have designated approvers implicates all the appellants and what I proceed to discuss is the evidence supporting or contradicting the statements of those three men.

Shola.—This man is a Khatik, and Mr. Rustomji, who appears for him, concedes that the case against him is very strong. He is said to have been, what the learned Counsel for the Crown has described as the head of the disposals branch of the gang. A quantity of stolen property was found in his house which has been proved satisfactorily to represent four offences by evidence to rebut which no attempt has been made. There is also a good deal of evidence of association with the approvers and other appellants against whom I find the charge to be established and there are no reasons for interfering either with the conviction of this man or with the sentence imposed upon him of five years rigorous imprisonment. His appeal is dismissed.

Badam and Babbam.—These are two Khatik brothers who are found by the Magistrate to be step-brothers of Shola. They were not arrested in company of any of the other appellants, and the only evidence of how they were arrested is a statement that they were arrested by the Meerut Police. They are said by Muhammad Din to have been seen by him in the Meerut garden with the other accused, but Muhammad Din is only a boy of 14 and his identification is not to be relied upon implicitly without the support of other independent evidence. Another witness Hira (P. W. No. 72), who has been produced to speak also of association in the Meerut garden does not mention these persons. Two witnesses, Budha and Astam Khan, mention their being seen at Shola's shop in Meerut with the other accused. But if they were relatives of Shola, it is quite possible for them to have been there for innocent purposes, and the mere fact of their relationship cannot create a presumption that they were associated with Shola in crime. The corroborative evidence against these persons in my opinion is insufficient. I accept their appeals, set aside their convictions and sentences and order, that they be released.

Babu.—This man also is a Khatik and was arrested at Shola's shop with Shola and Ram Chand, appellants. The evidence of Muhammad Din that he was seen at the Meerut garden with the other appellants is corroborated by Hira whom there is no reason to disbelieve. It has already been remarked that this Meerut garden is proved to have been the head-quarters of the gang by reason of the discovery in it of the proceeds of several robberies. Another witness, Budha, deposes to having seen the appellant on more than one occasion at

CHHAPROLIA V. EMPEROR.

Shola's shop with other accused persons. He is corroborated by Astam Khan (P. W. No. 91). It is true, as argued by Mr. Rustomji, that the ear-ring found in Babu's possession is not proved to have been stolen property by evidence other than that of the approvers, but there is, in my opinion, sufficient corroboration of the approvers' statements that he was a member of the gang. I dismiss his appeal.

Ram Chand.—This is another Khatik and his case is similar to that of Babu. He was arrested with Shola and Babu at Shola's house. It is true, that Budha (P.W. No. 92) says, that he was not one of the persons whom he saw frequenting Shola's shop; but Hira and Muhammad Din depose to his having been on various occasions in the Meerut garden, and there is no explanation of why he, a Khatik should go there and consort with Sansis. The evidence of the witnesses who prove him to be of good character does not rebut the prosecution case and I dismiss his appeal.

Gopal.—He is a Chamar who is alleged by the approvers to have participated in one substantive offence only. He is stated by Astam Khan (P.W. No. 91) to have been seen at Shola's shop, but this witness is not clear that he was in the company of other accused. Muhammad Din, the boy, says that he used to come to the Meerut garden; but may have been mistaken. The defence is, that Gopal was arrested by mistake for another man named Gopal, and it is conceded by the learned Counsel for the Crown that the corroborative evidence against this man is very slight. I accept his appeal, set aside the conviction and sentence and order that he be released.

Sirya.—He is described as a Jaga and there is direct evidence of his being concerned in a substantive offence under section 395 for which he is under trial in the Sessions Court at Meerut. His defence was mainly directed to proving an alibi in regard to that offence, but, as the learned Magistrate has held, there is no apparent reason for disbelieving the evidence of Musammāt Rammo, Achpal and Musammāt Mathri, who are his own relatives that he was one of the offenders. There is also evidence that he consorted with the approvers and the other accused at Shola's shop and in the garden. There are no grounds for interference with his conviction, but I do not see why he should have been given a more severe sentence than Shola. He is alleged by the approvers to have been a prominent member of the gang, but there is no corroboration of special prominence and he is not a previous convict. I accept his appeal to the extent of reducing the sentence to one of five years' rigorous imprisonment with three months' solitary confinement.

Belia.—According to the approvers this man participated in a large number of offences. He was arrested in the Meerut garden. He is proved to have absconded on the 3rd of August 1920, from a Settlement of Criminal Tribes. There is evidence of association on other occasions and he makes no allegations against the approvers. He has been once on security under section 110 but he is not a previous convict. At the same time, the fact that he absconded from the Settlement corroborates the other evidence that he deliberately devoted himself to a career of crime. There is no reason to interfere with this man's conviction. As regards sentence, he has been classified with other appellants who are previous convicts and I do not appreciate the necessity of giving him a more severe sentence than Shola and Sirya. I accept his appeal to the extent of reducing the sentence to one of five years' rigorous imprisonment with three months' solitary confinement.

Zahrta alias Balwanta.—This man also absconded from a Criminal Tribes Settlement and he also was arrested in the garden. There is corroborative evidence of association on other occasions. He has two previous convictions, one under section 379 and the other under section 392, Indian Penal Code. In his petition of appeal he alleges, that he is old and feeble; but he was medically examined in the Court below and found sound and healthy for his age. There are no grounds for interference with his conviction or with his sentence, and I dismiss his appeal.

EMPEROR V. SHIVLINGAPPA BASAPAA.

Rai Singh alias Ashrafi Lal.—This man, as already stated, was arrested red-handed and his statement to the contrary is not supported by any evidence. He escaped from a Criminal Tribes Settlement with Hansa, appellant, on the 18th May 1921, and the date of his arrest is 1st June. It might be questioned whether in this short time, he could be held to have become a regular member of the gang. On this point there is evidence that Hansa, who was arrested on the 14th June in the garden, stuck to the gang up to the end, and it is a reasonable explanation of the escape of the two men from the Settlement, that they intended to embark upon a systematic career of crime. There is evidence that he was associated with the other accused for a day or two before his capture, and the connection between the approvers and certain articles left behind by the offenders at the time when Rai Singh was captured is established. These circumstances corroborate the approvers' evidence of his membership of the gang, and the fact of his two previous convictions under section 379, Indian Penal Code, is also to be borne in mind. There are no grounds for interference in this case and I dismiss the appeal. His plea of blindness raised in his petition of appeal was dealt with in the lower Court by medical examination. He was found to be developing senile cataract, but at the time of the examination he could see quite well enough for all ordinary purposes.

Hansa.—As stated above, this man absconded from a Criminal Tribes Settlement with Rai Singh on the 18th May 1921. He was arrested in the garden in the raid of the 14th June 1921. There is other evidence of association, notably the statement of Chhajju, (P. W. No 194), who although an accomplice has been independently corroborated in most important details of his evidence. Hansa is a previous convict under section 380, and I consider the approver's evidence to be sufficiently corroborated. I dismiss his appeal.

Chhaprolia.—This appellant absconded from the Dhariwal Criminal Tribes Settlement from the 29th March 1921 on which date he was given leave and did not return. He is a previous convict, having one conviction under section 380. He was arrested in the Meerut garden and there is a good deal of evidence of his association with the approvers and the other appellants on other occasions. The defence evidence produced by him supported the case for the prosecution in that it showed that he was not at the Dhariwal Settlement on the dates of the offences in which he was alleged by the approvers to have participated. He alleged enmity with Jahangir, approver, but failed to prove it. I dismiss his appeal.

Ajab Singh alias Baldeva.—This man has three previous convictions, two under section 379, and one under section 401, Indian Penal Code. When the garden was raided he was found to have hidden in a cook-house and was captured there. According to his own statement he absconded from a Criminal Tribes Settlement, but there is no other evidence to that effect. Several witnesses testify to his association with Jahangir, approver, and the others at the garden and at Shola's shop. He now alleges, that he was on bad terms with the approver Jahangir, but he did not state this in the Court below. The case against him is sufficiently corroborated and I dismiss his appeal.

Z. K.

*Appeal dismissed.BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 29 OF 1922.

August 17, 1922.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR*versusSHIVLINGAPPA BASAPAA—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 407, 422, 439—S. 407, appeal under hearing of—Notice to officer appointed by Local Government not given—Illegality—Acquittal—Revision—High Court, when will interfere.

Where an appeal under section 407, Criminal Procedure Code, is heard by a Magistrate specially empowered to hear such appeals, it is incumbent on the Magistrate to give notice of such hearing under section 422 of the Code, to the officer appointed by the Local Government in that behalf and an omission to give such notice before hearing the appeal cannot be treated as an irregularity. The disposal of such an appeal without notice to the officer is not a legal disposal of the appeal.

GHASITA V. EMPEROR.

Although the High Court will not, under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, ordinarily interfere with an order of acquittal, it will do so where such an order is invalid, as where it is passed in an appeal under section 407 of the Code of the hearing of which the officer appointed by the Local Government in that behalf had no notice.

Criminal reference made by the District Magistrate, Sholapur.

Mr. D. G. Dalvi, for the Accused.

Mr. S. S. Palkar, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case five persons were tried by the Second Class Magistrate of Sholapur and convicted of hurt under section 323, Indian Penal Code. There was a charge under section 147, Indian Penal Code, but as there is some difference between the parties as to what the correct interpretation of the charge as framed was, I do not desire to express any opinion as to whether the charge also related to the offence under section 323, Indian Penal Code, I have referred to the charge to show what the nature of the proceeding was.

The accused appealed to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under section 407, Criminal Procedure Code, who was authorised to hear appeals from the Second Class Magistrates. Without giving any notice to the District Magistrate, he proceeded to decide the appeal, and acquitted the accused. The case has been brought to our notice on a reference by the District Magistrate and the learned Government Pleader has appeared to support the contention that the appeal has not been legally disposed of in so far as it was heard and decided without giving notice to the District Magistrate as required by section 422, Criminal Procedure Code. That section provides that "if the Appellate Court does not dismiss the appeal summarily, it shall cause notice to be given to the appellant or his Pleader, and to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, of the time and place at which such appeal will be heard." The officer appointed by the Local Government in this behalf is the District Magistrate and though this provision would not apply so far as the District Magistrate is concerned when the appeal is filed in his Court, it is clear that under the provisions of section 422, Criminal Procedure Code, the notice of appeal should have been given to the District Magistrate in the present case. The section is imperative and we do not think that the omission to give such a notice could be treated merely as an irregularity. It is true that under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, we do not interfere ordinarily with orders of acquittal; but this is a case in which it is pointed out to us that there has been no legal disposal of the appeal, and the order which is made without a proper hearing cannot be accepted as a valid order. We, therefore, set aside the order of acquittal made by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate and direct that the appeal be heard and disposed of by him according to law.

W. C. A.

Order set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 1537
OF 1922.

February 2, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

GHASITA—CONVICT—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR, THROUGH THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, SIALKOT—

RESPONDENT.

*Punjab Municipal Act (III of 1911), s. 175—
Notice to remove structure—Failure to tender compensation, effect of.*

The language of section 175 of the Punjab Municipal Act indicates that the requisition open to the Municipality is subject to the payment of compensation, that is, the tender of compensation must accompany the notice. This procedure affords the person concerned an opportunity of appealing to the Deputy Commissioner on the subject of the reasonableness of the tender and also for securing an assessment of the value of the obstruction before it ceases to exist.

HATEMALI CHAPRASI v. OSIMADDY

A notice under section 175 of the Punjab Municipal Act calling upon a person to remove a structure unaccompanied with the tender of compensation is bad.

Petition, under section 439 of Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of an order of the District Magistrate, Sialkot, dated the 31st August 1922, modifying that of the Magistrate, Second Class, Sialkot, dated the 19th May 1922.

Mr. J. G. Sethi, for the Petitioner.

Sheikh Niaz Ali, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner was ordered by the Municipal Committee, Sialkot, to demolish a roof. The notice to him issued under section 175 of the Municipal Act of the Punjab which runs.

"The Committee may subject to the payment of reasonable compensation, by notice require the owner...to remove."

The petitioner has been convicted for failing to comply with this notice and urges that the conviction is bad inasmuch as no compensation was assessed far less paid before or simultaneously with the service of the notice.

In my opinion the contention has force. Respondent has referred to Nauna Mal v. Municipal Board of Hathras (1) and to Chippal v. Municipal Committee of Simla (2), but these authorities are not in pari materia and refer to other Statutes of which the language differs from that of the Municipal Act now under consideration.

The language of section 175 indicates that the requisition open to the Municipality is subject to the payment of compensation; i. e., the tender of compensation must accompany the notice.

This procedure affords the person concerned an opportunity for appealing to the Deputy Commissioner on the subject of the reasonableness of the tender and also for securing an assessment of the value of the obstruction before it ceases to exist.

I accept the petition and acquit the petitioner. The fine, if already recovered, shall be remitted.

Z. K.

Petition accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 328 OF 1923.

May 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice C. C. Ghose and Mr. Justice Cuming.

HATEMALI CHAPRASI—PETITIONER

versus

OSIMADDY AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145, proceedings under—Evidence, necessity of.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make an order under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code without any evidence being adduced before him.

Babu Suresh Chandra Taluqdar, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—In this case, as the record shows, there was no evidence adduced at all before the Magistrate. That being so, the order of the Magistrate holding that the second party is entitled to possession of the property in dispute is one which must be set aside. It has been repeatedly held by this Court that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make an order under this section without any evidence being adduced before him.

Accordingly the order complained of is set aside.

The Rule is accordingly made absolute.

Z. K.

Rule made absolute.

(1) 20 Ind. Cas. 4051, 11 A. L. J. 486; 14 Cr. L. J. 421; 35 A. 375.

(2) 24 P. R. 1890 Cr.

PIR BUKHSH V. EMPEROR.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 923 OF 1922.

January 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Muti Sagar.

PIR BUKHSH—CONVICT—APPELLANT

VERSUS

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 401—Associating for habitually committing theft, requisites of—Proof.

To sustain a conviction on a charge under section 401 of the Penal Code, it is necessary to prove,—

(1) that there existed a gang of persons;
(2) that those persons were associated for the purpose of committing theft or robbery;
(3) that theft or robbery was to be committed habitually; and

(4) that the accused was a member of such gang. [p. 816, cols. 1 & 2.]

Beja v. Emperor, 26 Ind. Cas. 625; 13 P. R. 1914 Cr.; 16 Cr. L. J. 33; 223 P. L. R. 1915; 63 P. W. R. 1913 Cr., followed.

The associating and the purpose of the association may be proved by direct evidence, such as that the accused or the accused and others met and determined to join together for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery. In the absence of direct evidence, the associating and the purpose of the association may be established by proof of acts from which these may reasonably be inferred. [p. 816, col. 2.]

Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiri Pottigadu, 2 Ind. Cas. 307; 32 M. 179; 9 Cr. L. J. 567; 5 M. L. T. 100, relied on.

For instance, the commission of a large number of thefts by the accused within a comparatively short time gives rise to an inference that they must have been associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft. [p. 816, col. 2.]

Appeal from an order of the Additional District Magistrate, Delhi, dated the 4th September 1922.

Dr. Sir Muhammad Iqbal, Kt., for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—These are four appeals from a judgment of the Additional District Magistrate of Delhi, dated the 4th September 1922, convicting the four appellants of the offence of being members of a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft, and sentencing them under section 401 of the Indian Penal Code to various terms of imprisonment.

Thirteen persons were originally charged with this offence and sent up for trial by the Police under section 401, Indian Penal Code. Out of these 13, one Shah Nawaz Khan eventually turned an approver, and was accordingly discharged. Another person, Sakhawat, who is alleged to have come to Delhi from Rohtak with the approver, was found by the learned Magistrate not to be a member of the gang and was also discharged. The following six persons, Yara, Chand Khan, Rahmat Ullah, Bahadur Ali, Ibban and Ganneshi were eventually acquitted because the purchasers of the stolen property were not able to satisfactorily identify them and also because it was not satisfactorily proved that they were habitual thieves. The remaining five persons, namely, Wahad Yar, Munshi Lal, Muhammad Khan, Munshi (Nabi Karim) and Pir Bukhsh were convicted and sentenced to imprisonments as follows:—

Wahad Yar to five years' rigorous imprisonment, including three months' solitary confinement; also to Police surveillance for two years after release.

Munshi Lal to three years' rigorous imprisonment, including two months' solitary confinement.

Mohammad Khan to three years' rigorous imprisonment, including two months' solitary confinement.

Munshi (Nabi Karim) to five years' rigorous imprisonment, including three months' solitary confinement also to Police surveillance for two years after release.

Pir Bukhsh to three years' rigorous imprisonment, including two months' solitary confinement.

From these convictions four separate appeals have been filed three through the Jail Authorities and one through Dr. Iqbal who has addressed me on behalf of Pir Bukhsh.

No appeal has been filed by Munshi (Nabi Karim). The convictions are founded mainly upon the evidence of the approver, who has given a detailed history of the various thefts in which he and his associates were implicated and the sole question for determination is whether his evidence is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence on the record. It appears that in the course of a month-and-a-half, from the 1st of March to the 15th of April 1922, twenty-seven thefts were committed in the City of Delhi in which the present appellants with certain other persons, who have either been discharged or acquitted for want of proof, took part. Pir Bukhsh is alleged to have taken part in sixteen thefts, Muhammad Khan in twelve, Wahad

PIR BUKHSH V. EMPEROR:

Yar in four and Munshi in three. There is ample evidence on the record in support of the fact that all of these thefts were committed and that all the four appellants along with the approver were implicated therein. A number of stolen articles have been recovered and have been produced in evidence. These stolen articles have been sufficiently identified by the victims of the various thefts and there is no reason why the testimony of these witnesses should not be believed. It is alleged by the prosecution that the thieves were carrying on a systematic trade in the stolen articles. Most of the persons to whom the things were sold have been traced and produced in evidence. They have testified to their having purchased those articles from the appellants, and I am satisfied that they are stating the truth. It is unnecessary to refer in this judgment to the various witnesses who have identified the stolen articles or who have identified the accused. It is sufficient to say that their evidence is quite convincing and fully establishes the identity of the accused. It is contended by Dr. Iqbal that most of these thefts were not reported to the Police and that the evidence as to the identification of the stolen articles is not satisfactory. I do not think there is any force in this contention. The thefts which these accused committed, were petty thefts and the victims may not have thought it worth their while to report them to the Police. As to the identification of the stolen articles the evidence, as already observed, is quite satisfactory and fully establishes the guilt of the accused. In my opinion the testimony of the approver has been sufficiently corroborated in material particulars and the conclusion at which the learned Magistrate has arrived is correct.

The next question to be considered is whether the appellants or any of them belonged to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft. It has been laid down in Beja v. Emperor (1) that to sustain a conviction on a charge under section 401, Indian Penal Code, it is necessary to prove:

(1) that there existed a gang of persons;

(2) that those persons were associated for the purpose of committing theft or robbery;

(3) that theft or robbery was to be committed habitually;

(4) that the accused was a member of such gang, and the question for decision is whether the prosecution have succeeded in establishing that the appellants were associated together for these purposes. In Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiri Polligadu (2) it was held that the associating and the purpose of the association may be proved by direct evidence such as that the accused or the accused and others met and determined to join together for the purpose of habitually committing an offence. In the absence of direct evidence, the associating and the purpose of the association may be established by proof of acts from which these may be reasonably inferred. In the present case in addition to the direct evidence of the proprietors of the various Chandukhanas where these accused used to meet together there is the evidence of this latter character, namely, the large number of thefts committed by these accused within a comparatively short time which necessarily gives rise to an inference that the appellants must have been associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft. In my opinion this proof is sufficient for the conviction of the appellants under section 401, Indian Penal Code, and I dismiss the appeals.

Z. K.

Appeals dismissed.

(2) 2 Ind. Cas. 307; 32 M. 179; 9 Cr. L. J. 567; 5 M. L. T. 100.

(1) 26 Ind. Cas. 625; 13 P. R. 1914 Cr.; 16 Cr. L. J. 331 223 P. L. R. 1915; 63 P. W. R. 1913 Cr.

MUHAMMAD DIN v. ILAM DIN.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 751 OF 1921.

January 26, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Martineau.

MUHAMMAD DIN—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

*versus*ILAM DIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act (IX of 1918), s. 11, applicability of—Plaintiff who has ceased to be a soldier on date of suit, whether can claim benefit of section.

Under section 11 of the Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act the time during which a plaintiff has been serving under War conditions is to be excluded in computing the period of limitation for the suit only in a case in which the plaintiff is an Indian Soldier. The section does not apply to the case of a plaintiff who has been a Soldier but has ceased to be one at the time when he brings his suit.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 27th December 1920, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Gujrat, dated the 31st August 1920.

Dr. Shuja-ud-Din, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal arises out of a suit for pre-emption. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour but the lower Appellate Court reversed it on the ground that the suit was barred by limitation, having been instituted more than one year after the date on which the vendee got possession of the land and also more than one year after the date of the mutation.

The contention on behalf of the appellant is that under section 11 of Act IX of 1918 the time during which he was serving under War conditions, namely, from the date of the sale to the 7th June 1919, is to be excluded in computing the period of limitation and that, therefore, the suit which was instituted on the 21st November 1919 is within time. But under section 11 of Act IX of 1918 the time during which a plaintiff has been serving under War conditions is to be excluded only in a case in which the plaintiff is an Indian Soldier. In this case the plaintiff is not a Soldier as he was discharged from the Army in June 1919 before the suit was instituted.

DEOK RAM v. DULI CHAND.

Section 11 of the Act does not apply to the case of a plaintiff who has formerly been a Soldier but has ceased to be one at the time when he brings his suit. The time during which the appellant was serving under War conditions cannot, therefore, be excluded and the suit is time-barred.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

*Appeal dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 948 OF 1922.

November 9, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway.

DEOK RAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

*versus*DULI CHAND AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Pleadings—Appeal—New case.

The Zemindars of a village sued for possession of a house alleging that it was a Thakardwara, where the villagers worshipped and that it had recently been unlawfully taken possession of by the defendant. The suit was dismissed on the finding that the place had long ceased to be a Thakardwara and that the defendant had been in adverse possession for over twelve years. In appeal the plaintiffs gave up their previous position and sought to urge that on the house ceasing to be a Thakardwara, it became shamilat or common property of the village and that, therefore, the possession of the defendant could not be adverse.

Held, that this amounted to setting up an entirely new case which could not be permitted to be done in appeal.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 31st January 1922, affirming that of the Mansif, Sonapat, dated the 24th January 1921.

Mr. Nanwa Mal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Deok Ram and others, zemindars of Mauza Lahrara, Tahsil Sonapat, in the District of Rohtak, instituted a suit against Duli Chand for possession of a house, alleging that it was an asthal or thakardwara where the villagers worshipped and that the de defendants had taken unlawful possession of it some ten days before suit and had commenced building thereon. The defendants contended that the property in question was theirs and that they had been in possession for a very long period. The Trial Court found that it had been a thakarwara at one time and that one Lachman Das had been in charge of it but that the defendants had proved that Lachhman Das died in 1892 and that soon after his death the idols had been removed from the house after which the defendants and their predecessors had taken possession of it and been in possession ever since, the possession extending to a period of over 12 years. The suit was accordingly dismissed and the plaintiff preferred an appeal to the District Court in which all the grounds attacked the findings of the learned Munsif as to the property having ceased to be used for religious purposes for a period of 12 years. At the time of arguments the learned Vakil for the appellants admitted that Lachhman Das had died in 1892. He then wished to argue that as soon as the property ceased to be the subject of dedication for religious purposes it became shamilat or common property of the whole village and that, therefore, the possession of the defendants could not be adverse. The learned District Judge held that this was setting up an entirely new case which he refused to allow. Without examining the other grounds of appeal he affirmed the decree of the Court of first instance. The plaintiffs have now come up to this Court in second appeal through Mr. Nanwa Mal.

AMIR V. KAHAN CHAND.

It is urged by Mr. Nanwa Mal, Counsel for the appellants, that the judgment of the learned District Judge does not comply with the provisions of O. XXI, r. 31, Civil Procedure Code. While admitting that the judgment under appeal might have been more detailed, it seems to me that no grounds have been made out for my interference in second appeal. As I read the judgment, the learned District Judge agreed with the learned Munsif in holding that the possession of the defendants had existed for a period of over 12 years. The plaintiffs case from the outset had been that the property in suit was still the subject of religious dedication and had only recently been unlawfully taken possession of. The appellants' learned Vakil obviously gave up that position and sought to attack the defendants upon an entirely new and different ground. The cause of action was clearly not the same and the decision of the learned District Judge was, in my opinion, correct. I accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2118 OF 1918.

May 16, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau and
Mr. Justice Harrison.AMIR AND DAULAT, SONS AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF SARANG, DECEASED
—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS.

VERSUS

Mali KAHAN CHAND, FOR LAKHPAT
RAI FOR SELF AND MINOR GHULAM
MUHAMMAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Hindu manager, alienation by—Declaratory suit by co-parceners, whether competent—Decree for possession on payment of Court-fees—Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by manager, suit to set aside—Purchase-money partly raised for binding purposes—Decree, form of.

A Hindu co-parcener is not competent to sue for a mere declaration, that a sale of the family property by the manager is not binding on the family. He must sue for possession as well. Nevertheless, even if he has asked for a mere declaratory decree, he can be given a decree for possession on his payment of the necessary Court-fees.

In a suit by a Hindu co-parcener to set aside an alienation made by the manager, where part of the purchase-money is found to have been raised for purposes binding on the family, the Court should make the decree for possession conditional on the payment of the amount.

Koer Hasmat Rai v. Sunder Das, 11 C. 396; 10 Ind. Jur. 26; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1013, followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, dated the 15th April 1918, setting aside the decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, dated the 23rd July 1917.

Mr. Mohammad Rafi, for the Appellants
Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This judgment will dispose of three appeals Nos. 2118, 2119 and 2176 of 1918, which arise out of two suits brought by the plaintiffs for a declaration that two sales of land effected by Kanhaya Lal, the father of one plaintiff and the grandfather of the other, in 1905 and 1909, respectively, shall not affect their reversionary rights. The sale of 1905 was for Rs. 2,720 in favour of Devi Das and Gurditta Ram, whose rights afterwards passed under pre-emption decrees to the appellants in Appeal No. 2119. The sale of 1909 was for Rs. 4,500 in favour of Jalal and Muhammad Shah, whose rights have passed under a pre-emption decree to Sarang and Ghulam Ali Shah, the appellants in Appeals Nos. 2118 and 2176. The land sold is ancestral, as it is shown in the settlement Records as held by Kanhaya Lal's father Devi Das. The plaintiffs contended that sales were invalid under Hindu Law and custom, although they alleged that they followed custom. The Subordinate Judge found that they followed Hindu Law, and the correctness of this finding is not now disputed. On the question of necessity he found that Kanhaya Lal was heavily in debt, that he had to part with the land in order to discharge the debts and that the debts were not shown to be tainted with immorality. He accordingly dismissed both the suits.

AMIR V. KAHAN CHAND.

On appeal the District Judge, after pointing out that the purposes for which the land was sold were not mentioned in the deeds, found that necessity for the sales was not proved, and he accepted the appeals and passed decrees in the plaintiff's favour. Second appeals have been filed in this Court.

It is contended for the appellants that the lower Appellate Court has ignored the evidence adduced by them to prove Kanhaya Lal's indebtedness, but this contention is not borne out by a perusal of the lower Appellate Court's judgment. The learned District Judge enumerated the various circumstances mentioned by the First Court as showing necessity, but found that no part of the evidence connected the consideration for the sales with any family necessity or just antecedent debts. Counsel for the appellants lays stress principally on the fact that Kanhaya Lal was prosecuted in an embezzlement case, which began sometime in 1905, and contends that he incurred heavy expenditure in defending himself. But it is by no means clear whether the defraying of the expenses in that case was one of the purposes for which the sales were effected. Devi Das, one of the vendees in the sale of 1905, advanced money to Kanhaya Lal for the case, but it was not till November 1905 that he began making the advances, whereas the first sale-deed had been executed on the 28th August 1905. The criminal case ended in 1907 long before the second sale-deed was executed. No creditor has stated that any particular sum was due or was paid to him about the time when either of the sales was effected. The appellants have to connect the debts incurred by Kanhaya Lal with the sales that he effected; and this, on the District Judge's finding, they have failed to do. That finding is one of fact and cannot be contested in second appeal. Mr. Muhammad Rafi has, however, argued on behalf of the appellants that as the plaintiffs have been found to be governed by Hindu Law, they were co-parceners with Kanhaya Lal and are not competent to sue only for a declaration of their title, but must sue for possession. This contention is correct and, although it was not raised in the lower Courts, or in the memoranda of appeal in this Court, we think it is right to entertain it, the point being an important one of law which clearly arises on the finding that the plaintiffs are not governed by custom. Kanhaya Lal has died since the appeals were filed, so that the plaintiffs, who at the time of the institution of the suits were entitled only to ask for joint possession, are now entitled to claim exclusive possession. Nevertheless, although declaratory decrees were asked for, the plaintiffs can be given decrees for possession of the land if they pay the Court-fees required for possessory suits. Such decrees would, however, in accordance with the ruling of the Calcutta High Court reported as Koer Hasmat Rai v. Sunder Das (1), which we think should be followed, be conditional on payment by the plaintiffs of the purchase-money which has not been shown to have been raised by Kanhaya Lal for immoral purposes.

We accordingly accept the appeals, set aside the decrees of the lower Appellate Court, and in lieu thereof pass a decree in each case for possession of the land in suit

(1) 11 C. 396; 10 Ind. Jur. 26; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1023.

GHULAM MUSTAFA V. GHULAM SADIQ.

on payment of the purchase-money to the appellants, that is to say, on payment of Rs. 2,720 to the appellants in Appeal No. 2119 for the land which was sold by Kanhaya Lal on the 28th August 1905 and on payment of Rs. 4,500 to Sarang and Ghulam Ali Shah, the appellants in Appeals Nos. 2118 and 2176, for the land sold by Kanhaya Lal on the 8th February 1909. These decrees will be conditional on the plaintiffs paying into the Trial Court the Court-fees necessary for suits for possession of the land within three months from this date. If the Court-fees are paid within that period the parties will bear their own costs throughout, otherwise the suits will stand dismissed with costs throughout.

N. H.

*Appeal accepted.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL

No. 811 OF 1922.

November 30, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Harrison.GHULAM MUSTAFA—DEFENDANT—APPELLANTversusGHULAM SADIQ AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 104 (f), Sch. II, para. 21—Arbitration—"Order filing award" what is—Appeal.

An "order filing an award" within the meaning of section 104 (f) of the Civil Procedure Code, does not mean the order by which the arbitrators are directed to send their award or bring it to Court before any objections have been lodged or disposed of. It means the order passed after the objections have been disposed of, and against this order an appeal lies under section 104 (f) of the Code, notwithstanding the provisions of para. 21 (2) of Schedule II to the Code.

Ram Ditti v. Amar Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 512; 123 P. R. 1912; 103 P. W. R. 1911; 172 P. L. R. 1911, followed.

Miscellaneous first appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Amritsar, dated the 7th February 1922.

Messrs. Abdul Aziz and Badar-ud-din Kureshi, for the Appellant.

Sheikh Niaz Ali, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs applied under Art. 20 of the Second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code to have an award given by arbitrators filed. The defendants raised various objections. These were gone into by the Senior Subordinate Judge and disposed of in his order dated the 7th February 1922, which concluded as follows:—

"I accordingly grant a decree in terms of the award and order defendant to pay to plaintiff a sum of Rs. 32 as costs of these proceedings."

From this order the defendant Ghulam Mustafa has lodged this appeal under section 104 (f). Mr. Niaz Ali raises a preliminary objection that the appeal does not lie and that if it does, it is barred by time. He points out that there is no appeal from the decree which was eventually drawn up. He contends first that the order filing the award must mean the order by which the arbitrators were directed to send their award or bring their award to Court before the objections had been lodged or disposed of. In the second place, he objects that there is no order in so many words filing the award.

The first point is disposed of by the wording of paragraph 21 of Schedule II, which makes it quite clear that the order filing an award is passed after the objections have been disposed of. His second objection is technically correct and it would obviously have been better if the Senior Subordinate Judge had consulted the Code and passed an order in the correct terms. There can, however, be no doubt that his order is tantamount to an order filing the award and that this is what he meant by saying, "I grant a decree in terms of the award."

Mr. Niaz Ali further contends that under paragraph 21 (2), as no appeal lies from a decree there can be no appeal from the order. This question has been exhaustively gone into in Ram Ditti v. Amar Singh (1), and it has been decided that an appeal does lie from an order filing an award even if in consequence the decree has to be set aside. The judgment of Rattigan, J., explains the difficulty which arises from there being apparently two contradictory provisions in the Code, and as one must be ignored he explains that the provisions of section 104 (f) should be observed and paragraph 21 (2) of the Code should be treated as a dead letter.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 512; 123 P. R. 1912; 103 P. W. R. 1911; 172 P. L. R. 1911.

LOK NATH v. SATTAN BAI.

In arguing on the merits of his appeal Mr. Abdul Aziz has confined himself to three points and has dropped the remaining grounds of appeal. The first is, that the terms of the reference were clear and directed the arbitrators to give an award regarding the property, moveable and immovable, left by the two brothers, Abdul Rahman and Muhammad Ali, whose descendants are now disputing over the partition. They came to a finding that Abdul Rahman in his lifetime had sold his one-half share to his son and nephew and Counsel urges that this was beyond the scope of the reference inasmuch as they were not empowered to hold that before his death Abdul Rahman had parted with his property. There is, in my opinion, no force whatever in this contention. They had to deal with the property which had belonged to the two brothers and they were quite right in coming to the decision, if satisfied with the correctness of the same, that one of the brothers had parted with the whole or a part of his share during his lifetime.

The second point was that, although there were seven parties to the reference the shares of two only have been defined. The remaining five are the younger brothers and sisters of Ghulam Ali, all of whom are represented by Mr. Niaz Ali. They are quite satisfied that their shares should be left joint, and, therefore, the present appellant has no grievance and the matter is no concern of his.

The third point pressed is that the award did not go far enough and did not deal with certain shares in a shop held by the descendants of the two brothers. It does consider this shop inasmuch as it explains that this is naya karibar and was not included in the property held by the two brothers. It was, therefore, outside the scope of the reference and the arbitrators were quite right in leaving it alone.

The other grounds of appeal, including the alleged misconduct of the arbitrators have been definitely given up.

Finding that there is no force whatever in the appeal, I dismiss it with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 474 OF 1922.

January 16, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

LOK NATH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

—PETITIONERS

versus

Musammal SATTAN BAI AND OTHERS—
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 141; O. IX, r. 9, O. XLIII, r. 1 (c)—Suit dismissed for default—Application for restoration dismissed for default—Application for restoration of dismissed application, whether lies—Appeal.

Where an application for restoration of a suit dismissed in default is itself dismissed in default, an application lies under O. IX, r. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code for restoration of the dismissed application. If, however, this second application is rejected, no appeal lies against the order of rejection.

Bevin Behari Saha v. Abdul Barik, 35 Ind. Cas. 613; 44 C. 950; 21 C.W.N. 30; 24 C. L. J. 446, referred to.

Under O. XLIII, r. 1 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code an appeal lies from an order under O. IX, r. 9, of the Code rejecting an application for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit. This cannot be interpreted to mean that an appeal lies from an order under r. 9, O. IX rejecting an application for an order to set aside the dismissal of an application.

Petition, under section 44 of the Punjab Courts Act, for revision of an order of the District Judge, Multan, dated the 21st December 1921, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Khanewal, District Multan, dated the 3rd May 1921.

Lala Amar Nath Monga, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Anant Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff-petitioner's suit for possession of land was dismissed in default of his appearance on the 4th of October 1920, under O. IX, r. 8, Civil Procedure Code. On the 3rd of November 1920 he made an application for restoration of the case under O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code. The application was dismissed in default on the 7th of February 1921. On the same date he made a fresh application for re-admission of the case and stated at the end of it that the said application might be considered as one for review. This application was dismissed, without making any inquiry, on the 3rd of May 1921. From this order the plaintiff appealed to the District Judge who dismissed it on the ground that no appeal lay. Plaintiff has now applied for revision to this Court.

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

It is contended that an application lies under O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code, for re-admission of an application dismissed in default and in support of this contention a reference is made to Bepin Behari Saha v. Abdul Barik (1). That was a case where a Small Cause Court suit had been dismissed in default and an application had been made under O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code, for the restoration of the suit. That application was also dismissed for the plaintiff's default in the presence of the defendant's Pleader and he again made an application under O. IX, r. 9, and it was held that an application under O. IX, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code, lay. Having regard to section 141, Civil Procedure Code, I am clearly of opinion that an application lay to restore the former application which was dismissed in default. At the same time, I am of opinion that when that application was rejected no appeal lay from the order of rejection. Order XLIII, r. 1 (c) shows that an appeal lies from an order under r. 9, O. IX, rejecting an application for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit. This cannot, I think, be interpreted to mean that an appeal lies from an order under r. 9, O. IX, rejecting an application for an order to set aside the dismissal of an application. I think, however, that the present petition for revision may be treated as one for revision of the order of the First Court dated the 3rd May 1921. The application of the 7th February 1921 should, in my opinion, be considered on its merits as one for restoration of the previous application to re-admit the suit which was dismissed for default.

(1) 35 Ind. Cas. 613; 44 C. 950; 21 C. W. N. 301 24 C. L. J. 446.

I, therefore, allow the revision and setting aside the order of the Trial Court, dated the 3rd of May 1921, remand the case thereto in order that it may dispose, after such inquiry as is necessary, of the application of the 7th February 1921. No order as to costs in this Court.

Z. K.

Revision allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 205 OF 1922.

April 16, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Rao Bahadur MAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF
—APPELLANT
versus

Maharani NAWLAKHBATI AND

ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Guardian and ward—Ward, whether can question act of guardian after disability ceases—Hindu Law—Succession—Ancestral property—Daughter's son, position of—Survivorship—Widow—Surrender, requisites of—Bengal Court of Wards Act (IX of 1879), s. 60, applicability of, to surrender by Hindu widow of life-estate—Estoppel—Incomplete transaction—Conduct—Pardah nashin lady, transaction with—Undue influence—Independent advice—Burden of proof.

A person under disability is bound by the act of his guardian by whom he is represented in a proceeding, but such a person can re-open the proceeding after the disability ceases, if he satisfies the Court that the act of the guardian has prejudiced him. [p. 828, col. 2.]

The doctrine of survivorship, as understood by the Mitakshara Law, is not limited to unobstructed succession and to the succession to the joint property of re-united co-parceners. [p. 837, col. 1.]

MAN SINGH v. MAWLAKHBATI.

Under the Mitkashara Law the right of survivorship will not prevail in favour of a survivor as against the male issue of the deceased. [p. 837, col. 1.]

"Ancestral property," in its technical sense in the Hindu Law, means property which descends upon one person in such a manner that his issue acquire certain rights in it as against him. [p. 837, col. 2.]

It is true that under the Hindu Law it is only the persons who offer the funeral cake to the owner of the property that are regarded as having an interest in the property by birth. But it is well-established that as each fresh member takes a share, his descendants to the third generation below him take an interest in that share by birth. [p. 837, col. 2.]

Whatever the position of a daughter's son may have been under the Hindu Law, before the appointment of a daughter to raise up issue for her father became obsolete, under the present form of that law he is a member of his own father's family and cannot be regarded as a member of his maternal grandfather's family. [p. 837, col. 2.]

Though actual transfers by Hindu widows have, in many cases, been supported by reference to the theory of the relinquishment of the widow's entire interest, there is relinquishment in the true sense of the term, when there is disclaimer by the widow at the time of the death of her husband, or renunciation of the world by her afterwards, or some act by her which might, in the eye of the law, justify the inference that the widow is civilly dead. It is only where the widow is dead, either actually or civilly, that the law steps in and gives the estate of her husband to the next reversioner. On the other hand, there are cases which are called cases of relinquishment but which are in fact not cases of relinquishment at all, where alienations by Hindu widows have been upheld by arguing from analogy. But analogy denotes only a partial similarity; and it does not follow that, because where a widow renounces the world the next reversioners take the estate by operation of law, there is also a succession by operation of law, where, as a result of a transaction not amounting to relinquishment of properly so-called but capable of being supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment, the estate comes to the next reversioners. [p. 829, col. 2.]

For instance, a Hindu widow may sell for valuable consideration the entire estate of her husband to the next reversioner or to an entire stranger with the assent of the next reversioner. The transaction will be upheld by applying the analogy of a relinquishment of her estate by the Hindu widow; but it cannot be argued that there is relinquishment, properly so-called, in such a case, or that the title of the reversioner arises by operation of law. [p. 830, col. 1.]

The law on the subject has grown from precedent to precedent and it cannot be argued that because a certain legal incident is true of a certain proposition, it must also be true of every proposition which may have been logically drawn from the first proposition or which is capable of being supported by reference to the first proposition. [p. 830, col. 1.]

It is one thing to say that because, upon the death of a widow, either actual or civil, the estate would at once vest by operation of law in the next heir of her husband, therefore, the widow can operate her own death by conveying absolutely the estate of her husband to one who, at the moment of the conveyance, is the next heir of her husband; and it is quite another thing to say that, when the widow does convey the estate to the next reversioner, the reversioner takes the estate by operation of law and not by virtue of the conveyance. In other words, it does not follow that, because the heir takes by operation of law where there is real relinquishment by the widow, that is to say, when she elects to die a civil death, he also takes by operation of law when, as a result of a transaction which may be supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment, but which is in fact not relinquishment, the estate is carried from the widow to the heir or to a stranger with the consent of such heir. [p. 830, col. 2; p. 831, col. 2.]

In a case of disclaimer by a Hindu widow at the time of the death of her husband or of relinquishment, properly so-called, afterwards, the title of the heir would arise by operation of law, and if the widow happens to be a ward of Court at the time of relinquishment section 60 of the Bengal Court of Wards Act would not, in such a case, operate to the prejudice of the heir. But wherever the transaction is one, not of relinquishment, but capable of being supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment, the title of the heir arises, not by operation of law, but by the act of transfer on the part of the widow, and if the latter is a ward of Court, on the date of the transaction, the transaction comes within the prohibition contained in section 60 of the Bengal Court of Wards Act. [p. 832, col. 2.]

A deed of surrender executed by two Hindu widows in favour of the next heirs of their husband of their husband's estate after reciting that the widows being old were desirous of spending the remainder of their lives in Divine Worship at the holy City of Benares, stipulated for a substantial monthly allowance for the widows for their lives which was to be a first charge on certain properties. Certain other duties were imposed upon the heirs and the deed provided that if the heirs neglected the performance of those duties the widows would be entitled to enforce them. On the date of the execution of the deed of relinquishment the widows were wards of Court, but the sanction of the Court of Wards to the deed was not obtained:

Held, that the transaction did not amount to a relinquishment, properly so-called, but operated as a conveyance in favour of the heirs and fell within the prohibition contained in section 60 of the Bengal Court of Wards Act. [p. 834, col. 2.]

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

A relinquishment by a Hindu widow becomes operative only when the widow acts upon the declaration and withdraws herself from the estate. [p. 835, col. 1.]

Though a party has complete power to resile from an incomplete engagement, such a power will be denied when the actings and conduct of the parties have carried the incompletely executed engagement into effect. But in order to exclude the plea of locus penitentiae, a party must base his claim, not upon the incompletely executed engagement, but upon the equities that arise from the actings and conduct of the parties. [p. 835, col. 1.]

The jurisdiction of Courts of Law to afford protection to pardah nashin ladies rests on a presumption of the imperfect knowledge of the world and exposure to undue influence, making it the duty of a person taking a beneficial grant or contract from a pardahnashin lady to show that the deed was explained to her and understood by her. [p. 830, col. 2.]

Starting from the elementary principle that every person taking a document from a pardah nashin lady is bound to show affirmatively that the document is her document, that is to say, that she understood the nature of the transaction and the effect of it, Courts of Law have laid down certain rules for assisting them in determining the point; but the rules so laid down are rules of prudence rather than rules of law, and their application depends on the particular facts of each case. There is a grave risk of a failure of justice if these rules are moulded into inelastic formulas or crystallised into inflexible rules and treated as of universal application, regardless of the special facts and surrounding circumstances of the concrete case which requires adjudication. [p. 840, col. 1.]

A Court when called upon to deal with a deed executed by a pardah nashin lady must satisfy itself upon the evidence, first, that the deed was actually executed by her or by some person duly authorised by her, with a full understanding of what she was about to do; secondly, that she had full knowledge of the nature and effect of the transaction into which she is said to have entered; and thirdly, that she had independent and disinterested advice in the matter. [p. 840, col. 1.]

Cases in which these questions arise fall broadly into two groups, viz., first, cases where the person who seeks to hold the lady to the terms of her deed is one who stood towards her in a fiduciary character or in some relation of personal confidence; and, secondly, cases, where the person who seeks to enforce the deed was an absolute stranger and dealt with her at arm's length. In the former class of cases, the Court will act with great caution and will presume confidence put and influence exerted; in the latter class of cases, the Court will require the confidence and influence to be proved intrinsically. The Court must in such cases have regard to the intellectual attainments of the lady concerned and will be disinclined to set aside the deed where she is proved to have been of business habits, to have been literate and to have possessed a capacity to judge for herself. [p. 840, cols. 1 & 2.]

What is meant by independent advice in this connection is that a pardah nashin lady should receive advice as to the legal effect of a particular document which she is about to execute and her position under it as compared with the position which she would occupy if she does not execute the document. [p. 850, col. 1.]

Pardah nashin ladies have a claim to special consideration where they deny on oath an effectual knowledge of documents which they are said to have executed. [p. 852, col. 2.]

Where the question is whether a pardah nashin lady has operated her civil death, which she was not bound to do, the Courts will act with great caution; and will not deprive her of her property unless compelled to do so. [p. 852, col. 2; p. 853, col. 1.]

(Case-law on all points discussed.)

Appeal from an order of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 5th June 1922.

Messrs. Sultan Ahmad, S. M. Mullick, N. C. Sinha, Subal Chandra Mazumdar and A. Sen, for the Appellant.

Messrs. K. B. Dutt, C. C. Das, L. L. Jha and P. Dayal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—Maharaja Sir Harballabh Narain Singh, K. C. I. E., was the owner of a considerable Zemindari known as the Sonbarsa Raj. He was murdered on the 1st of April 1907 by an unknown assassin and he died leaving him surviving two widows, Maharani Tarabati and Maharani Nawlakhbati, a daughter, Maharaj Kumari Padmabati, and two grandsons, the sons of Maharaj Kumari Padmabati, Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh, known as Baria Lal, and Rudra Pratap, known as Chotey Lal. Maharaj Kumari Padmabati died in May 1915, Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh died in October 1919, and Maharani Tarabati died in August 1920. The plaintiff, the appellant before us, is the son of Gobind Singh, and he seeks as against Maharani Nawlakhbati and Chotey Lal, to recover possession of an eight-anna share of the Sonbarsa Raj.

On the 18th December 1918, the two widows of the late Maharaja executed a deed of surrender in favour of their grandsons, Gobind Singh and Rudra Pratap. At the time of the execution of the deed of surrender the Maharanis were wards of the Court of Wards, and the main questions in this appeal are, first, whether the Maharanis were competent to execute the deed of surrender without the concurrence of the Court of Wards; secondly, whether the plaintiff, in the circumstances of the case, can claim under the deed of surrender, and, thirdly, whether the deed of surrender was intelligently executed by Maharani Nawlakhbati and whether she had independent advice in relation to the execution of that document.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

The admitted facts are as follows:—Chotey Lal was suspected of the murder of the late Maharaja, and under an executive order of the Government he was externed from the District of Bhagalpur directly after the murder. The order of externment was not removed until sometime in 1920. On the 30th April 1907, the Maharanis applied to the Collector of Bhagalpur to be declared disqualified proprietors under section 6 of the Court of Wards Act, so that the estate might be managed by the Court of Wards. On the 15th May 1907, the Maharanis addressed another letter to the Collector of Bhagalpur. They alleged in that letter that the late Maharaja before his death expressed a desire that Chotey Lal should succeed him as the proprietor of the Sonbarsa Raj and that, in obedience to the wishes of the late Maharaja, they were willing to surrender their estate in favour of Chotey Lal. The petition was signed not only by the two Maharanis but also by their daughter, Padmabati, and their eldest grandson, Barra Lal, in token of their assent to the proposal made by the Maharanis. Mr. Lyle, the Collector of Bhagalpur, interviewed the Maharanis on the 23rd of May, and it appears that he pointed out to the Maharanis "the grave objections that exist in so important a matter of any precipitate or imperfectly considered action." The Maharanis agreed to postpone the execution of the deed of relinquishment for some months, and the interview came to an end. On the 27th May 1907, the estate was taken over by the Court of Wards and, thereupon, the Maharanis became wards of the Court of Wards. On the 4th February 1916, the Maharanis, it appears, addressed a letter to the Collector of Bhagalpur proposing to surrender their estate in favour of Barra Lal. The letter is not on the record, but is recited in another letter, dated the 4th March 1918, addressed by the Maharanis to the Collector of Bhagalpur. The last mentioned letter sets out the legal difficulty in executing the proposed deed of surrender in favour of one only of their two grandsons and states that to obviate all future difficulty and prospective litigation they have decided that the surrender should be in favour of both the grandsons. To this letter they annexed a draft deed of surrender in substitution of the one which they had sent to the Collector in February 1916 and asked the Collector to obtain the sanction of the Court of Wards to the new deed which would be executed in favour of both the grandsons. In their letter the Maharanis entered into an elaborate defence of Chotey Lal and asserted that there was no evidence to justify the Police theory that Chotey Lal had any concern, direct or indirect, in the murder of the late Maharaja. They asserted, further, that the late Maharaja had affection for Chotey Lal and wanted to make him the sole heir of the Sonbarsa Raj and that, "during the few minutes that he survived the dastardly and murderous attack which resulted in his death, he actually wrote with his own hand a Will bequeathing the entire Sonbarsa Raj to the said Rudra Pratap Singh" but that, "unfortunately, he did not survive long enough to sign the Will and get it legally attested." They also prayed that the Government might be pleased to withdraw the order prohibiting the return of Chotey Lal to the District of Bhagalpur. This letter was, obviously, forwarded through the Commissioner of Bhagalpur to the Board of Revenue, and on the 25th October 1918 the Board of Revenue wrote to the Commissioner stating that it could not accord sanction to the Maharanis to surrender their estate in favour of their grandsons. Notwithstanding the adverse decision of the Board of Revenue, the Maharanis, on the 18th December 1918, executed a deed of surrender in favour of their grandsons. On the 23rd December 1918, the Maharanis wrote another letter to the Collector of Bhagalpur intimating that they had executed and registered a deed of surrender in favour of their grandsons and requesting the Collector "to take steps to make over the charge and management of the said properties to Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh and Rudra Pratap Singh if the Court of Wards do not think fit to retain management under section 13 (a) of Act IX of 1879 (B. C.).” On the 15th April 1919, the Maharanis were informed that the Board of Revenue considered that the deed of relinquishment executed by them in favour of their grandsons was invalid. Barra Lal then applied for registration of his name in the Land Registration Department. The Court of Wards, on behalf of the Maharanis, contested the application of Barra Lal and the application of Barra Lal was refused. Barra Lal died in October 1919 and on the 17th January 1921 the suit, out of which this appeal arises, was instituted by the appellant, the son of Barra Lal, for a decree for possession in his favour and in favour of Chotey Lal whom he cited as defendant second party in the action, and in the alternative for a decree for possession of eight-annas share in the Sonbarsa Raj. The plaintiff’s case is, that the Maharanis were competent to, and did in fact, execute a deed of surrender in favour of his father and Rudra Pratap on the 18th December 1918 and that, upon the execution of the deed of surrender, the estate of which the Maharanis were then in possession as Hindu widows, vested absolutely in his father and in Rudra Pratap. According to him, the Collector of Bhagalpur put undue pressure upon the Maharanis to compel them to agree to the Court of Wards taking charge of the estate and that the assumption by the Court of Wards of the management of the estate was contrary to the provisions of law and did not give it any right to object to the execution of the deed of surrender by the Maharanis. The Court of Wards, on behalf of Maharani Nawlakhbati, put in a written statement in which it contested the claim of the plaintiff. It denied that any pressure was put on the Maharanis to compel them to agree to the Court of Wards taking charge of the estate and it asserted that, as the late Maharaja was heavily involved in debts, the liabilities amounting to about ten lakhs of rupees and as the Maharanis, being pardah nashin ladies, were unable to protect their interest, the Maharanis applied for the protection of the Court of Wards, and that the Maharanis were declared disqualified proprietors upon their own application. In the 6th paragraph of the written statement there is an admission that in 1916 the Maharanis expressed their desire to relinquish their estate in favour of Barra Lal, and there is a suggestion that the deed of relinquishment sued upon was not executed by them intelligently. Then, there is an added paragraph which runs as follows:— “That the defendant No. 2, of whom the Maharanis were very fond, was ordered by the Government to leave the district owing to his suspected complicity in the murder of the late Maharaja Bahadur. The plaintiffs have represented to the Maharanis that it was necessary to have a deed executed by them, so that the Government might be induced to allow the defendant No. 2 to return to Bhagalpur and the Maharanis, on that misrepresentation, without any proper and independent advice, signed the alleged deed of surrender without properly understanding its effects. This defendant submits that, in the circumstances, the deed is legally invalid and inoperative.” The 7th paragraph raises a question of law, namely, whether the deed of surrender was valid, inasmuch as the sanction of the Court of Wards was not obtained by the Maharanis. The 8th paragraph alleges that the deed of surrender was not acted on by the Maharanis and that “the Maharanis continued in enjoyment of the same rights as before the execution of the alleged deed of surrender.” The defendant second party also put in a written statement in which he charged Barra Lal with having procured the execution of the deed of surrender by false representation. The case adds, that Barra Lal took advantage of the fact that the Maharanis were fond of Chotey Lal and that he induced them to execute the deed of surrender by representing to them that the execution of the deed would secure the withdrawal of the order of excommunication against Chotey Lal.

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

The learned Subordinate Judge who tried the case framed the following issues:—

1. Is the suit maintainable?
2. Whether non-compliance with the provisions of section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code bars the suit?
3. Whether the deed of surrender, dated the 18th December 1918, was executed

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

by the Maharanis, widows of Maharaja Sir Harballabh Narain Singh Bahadur, under misrepresentation without getting any independent advice and without knowing or understanding its contents? Is it legally valid or operative?

4. Whether the said deed of surrender amounts to a surrender of the entire interest of the Maharanis in the Sonbarsa estate?

5. Is the deed of surrender valid, having regard to the provisions of section 60 of the Court of Wards Act (IX of 1879 B.C.)?

6. Did the plaintiff's father and defendant second party accept the surrender and gave consent to it?

7. Did the aforesaid deed of surrender accelerate the succession of plaintiff's father and defendant second party the next reversioners to the said estate and vested in them and did they (the plaintiff and defendant No. 2) acquire a right, title to the said estate in equal shares and become entitled to possess it by virtue of the said surrender?

8. Whether the plaintiff has got any right or title to a moiety of the Sonbarsa estate, and is he entitled to succeed to it and get possession, if so, under what terms?

9. Whether the ekrarnama set up by the plaintiff was caused to have been executed under misrepresentation and fraud as alleged by defendant second party?

10. Is the plaintiff entitled to get any mesne profits, if so, to what amount?

11. To what relief or reliefs is the plaintiff entitled?

12. Was any pressure brought to bear on the Maharanis to agree to make over the Sonbarsa Estate to the Court of Wards?

Issues Nos. 1 and 2 were not pressed before him and he answered those issues in favour of the plaintiff. In regard to Issues Nos. 3 and 9 he came to the conclusion that there was no misrepresentation in the case and that there was an intelligent execution of the deed of surrender by the Maharanis. He thought that independent advice was not necessary but that there were circumstances in the case which suggested the inference that the Maharanis had independent advice in regard to the execution of the deed of surrender. He decided these issues in favour of the plaintiff. He found no difficulty in answering Issue No. 4 in favour of the plaintiff. The question raised in that issue was, whether the surrender could be regarded as a surrender of the entire interest of the Maharanis, having regard to the fact that they retained a substantial interest in the estate for their maintenance. The learned Subordinate Judge thought that the provision of a monthly allowance to the Maharanis for their maintenance did not affect the validity of the deed of transfer. Issue No. 12 was not very seriously pressed before him and he decided that issue against the plaintiff. He lastly considered Issue No. 5 and he thought that section 60 of the Court of Wards Act constituted a prohibition on the right of the widows to surrender their estate without the concurrence of the Court of Wards. He answered this issue against the plaintiff and in the result he dismissed the suit.

Before dealing with the arguments that have been advanced to us it is necessary to mention a matter as to which there has been some discussion before us. The hearing of the suit began on the 10th May 1922; and from the 10th May 1922 up to the 31st May 1922 Maharani Nawlakhbati was represented in the record of the suit by the Court of Wards and by the Officiating Government Pleader in Court. The Court of Wards made no attempt to examine Maharani Nawlakhbati as a witness on her behalf but she was examined as a witness on behalf of the defendant second party. While she was being examined on commission, Babu Debta Charan Mukherji, the Officiating Government Pleader, stated to the Commissioner that, under instructions from the Court of Wards, he would not press Issue No. 3 on behalf of Maharani Nawlakhbati and that he would not examine the Maharani as a witness in support of her written statement. Issue No. 3, it will be remembered, raises the very important question of fact, namely, whether the deed of surrender was intelligently executed by the Maharanis and whether they had any independent advice in regard to the execution of this document. The Maharani as the ward of the Court of Wards was completely bound by the act of the Court of Wards on her behalf; and it appears that the Court of Wards intended to raise one point and one point only on her behalf, namely, whether she was competent to execute the deed of surrender, having regard to the fact that the sanction of the Court of Wards had not been obtained. It was obviously a matter of great prejudice to the Maharani that her real defence was not allowed to be raised on her behalf by the Court of Wards; but she was bound by the act of the Court of Wards, and, so long as she remained a ward of the Court of Wards, she had no right, under the Court of Wards Act, to raise any defence on her behalf. The Court of Wards, however, retired from the management of the estate on the 27th April 1922 after the evidence had been recorded in the case and the arguments heard in part. On the 31st May 1922, Babu Debta Charan Mukherji presented a petition stating that the Maharani was no longer a ward of the Court and that the Government Pleader had no further authority to represent her in the suit. On the 1st June 1922, Maharani Nawlakhbati appeared through another Pleader and filed a petition in which she prayed that the written statement filed by the defendant second party might be considered as her written statement; and she intimated to the Court that she desired to press Issue No. 3. This application was opposed on behalf of the plaintiff. The position taken up by the plaintiff was, that the learned Government Pleader representing Maharani Nawlakhbati having given up Issue No. 3, he, the plaintiff, did not adduce evidence in support of his case that the deed of surrender was intelligently executed by the Maharanis and that they had independent advice in regard to the execution of that document. The learned Subordinate Judge thought that there was great force in the contention of the plaintiff and he considered that any attempt on the part of Maharani Nawlakhbati to re-open Issue No. 3 would seriously prejudice the plaintiff. He held that Maharani Nawlakhbati could not be allowed to re-open Issue No. 3.

MAN SINGH V. MAWLAKHBATI.

When this appeal was opened before us, we came to the conclusion that it was not right and proper that Maharani Nawlakhbati should be debarred from presenting a case to the Court which she has undoubtedly made in her written statement. The learned Government Advocate, appearing on behalf of the plaintiff, strenuously contended that she was completely bound by the act of the Court of Wards and that to allow her to resile from the position conceded by the Court of Wards, would operate as a great hardship on his client. A person under disability is, no doubt, bound by the act of the guardian, but it is well-established that such a person can re-open the proceedings after the disability ceases, if he satisfies the Court that the act of the guardian has prejudiced him. In our opinion, it is far better that she should be allowed to re-open the matter now than that she should come to us afterwards, if we should decide the appeal against her on the question of law raised on her behalf, and invite us to deal with the whole case on the footing that the document was not read and explained to her, and that she had no independent advice in relation thereto. We accordingly came to the conclusion that it was open to her to press Issue No. 3, and that the learned Subordinate Judge should have allowed her to re-open that issue and to have met any case of prejudice by adjourning the hearing of the suit and giving an opportunity to the plaintiff to adduce such evidence as he thought necessary. Mr. Sultan Ahmad then pressed before us that if we allowed Maharani Nawlakhbati to re-open Issue No. 3, we should give him an opportunity to examine certain witnesses who are material witnesses on this issue. We recognised the force of Mr. Sultan Ahmad's contention and gave him leave to cross-examine Maharani Nawlakhbati on Issue No. 3 and to examine Mr. B. C. Sen, the Commissioner of the Patna Division, who was the Collector of Bhagalpur from April 1916 to September 1918; Mr. Nil Money Dey, who was the manager of the Sonbarsa Estate from 1914 till July 1920; Mr. Muhammad Abdus Samad, who was the manager of the Sonbarsa Estate under the Court of Wards at the time when the written statement was filed on her behalf; Mr. Surja Prasad, the Government Pleader of Bhagalpur, and Babu Anirudh Prosad Singh, a Zemindur and a Pleader, who is alleged to have taken a prominent part in the matter of the execution of the document by the Maharanis. The plaintiff has examined all these witnesses before us except Babu Anirudh Prosad Singh and we have considered their evidence in deciding Issue No. 3.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATTI.

It will be convenient, first, to deal with the questions of law which have been raised by the defendants in this litigation. The contention which found favour with the learned Subordinate Judge is that section 60 of the Court of Wards Act constitutes a prohibition on the power of a Hindu widow to relinquish the estate (of which she may be in possession as a Hindu widow) without the concurrence of the Court of Wards. It is not disputed that, at the time when the Maharanis purported to relinquish their estate in favour of their grandsons, the estate was under the management of the Court of Wards, and that the Maharanis were wards of the Court. On the 4th March 1918, the Maharanis forwarded to the Collector of Bhagalpur a draft deed of surrender which they proposed to execute in favour of their grandsons and asked him to obtain the sanction of the Court of Wards "to the new deed which will be in favour of both the daughter's sons." The Collector forwarded the application of the Maharanis to the Board of Revenue, through the Commissioner of the Bhagalpur Division, and on the 25th October 1918, the Board wrote to the Commissioner to say that it agreed "with the Collector that the execution of the deed of surrender by the Maharanis during their lifetime in favour of their grandsons will complicate matters and create difficulties in the way of the Court's management." It accordingly directed "that things should be allowed to go on for the present as they are." On the 13th December 1918, the Collector conveyed the decision of the Board of Revenue to the Maharanis. On the 18th December 1918 with full knowledge of the decision of the Board of Revenue, the Maharanis executed the deed of surrender by which they relinquished their widow's estate in favour of their grandsons.

Section 60 of the Court of Wards Act provides as follows:— No ward shall be competent to create, without the sanction of the Court, any charge upon, or interest in, his property or any part thereof, or to assign over or charge any allowance to be received by him from the Court." The question at once arises, whether by relinquishing her estate in favour of her husband's reversioners, a Hindu widow creates an interest in her estate. It has been contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the substance of the transaction is the withdrawal of the widow's estate, and the consequent acceleration of the interest of the heirs who succeeded to the properties, not by virtue of any act done by the widow, but by operation of law. I am quite willing to admit that a Hindu widow may, under certain circumstances, effectively divest herself of her interest in her husband's estate without coming within the prohibition of section 60 of the Court of Wards Act; but I am not prepared to admit that, under no circumstances, would section 60 operate to prevent a Hindu widow from relinquishing her estate in favour of her husband's next reversioners.

It is well to remember that, though actual transfers by Hindu widows have, in many cases, been supported by references to the theory of the relinquishment of the widow's entire interest, there is relinquishment in the true sense of the term, when there is disclaimer by the widow at the time of the death of her husband, or the renunciation of the world by her afterwards, or some act by her which might, in the eye of law, justify the inference that the widow is civilly dead. It is only when the widow is dead, either actually or civilly, that the law steps in and gives the estate of her husband to the next reversioner; and just as the Court of Wards Act cannot prevent the widow from dying, so it has no operation if the widow desires to turn byragee or renounce the world. But there are cases in the books which are called cases of relinquishment but which are in fact not cases of relinquishment at all, where alienations by Hindu widows have been upheld by arguing from analogy. But analogy denotes only a partial similarity; and it does not follow that, because where a widow renounces the world the next reversioners take the estate by operation of law, there is also a succession by operation of law, where, as a result of a transaction not amounting to a relinquishment, properly so-called, but capable of being supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment, the estate comes to the next reversioners. To take a simple case, a Hindu widow may sell for valuable consideration the entire estate of her husband to the next reversioner or to a stranger with the assent of the next reversioner. The transaction will be upheld by applying the analogy of a relinquishment of her estate by the Hindu widow; but it can hardly be argued that there is relinquishment, properly so-called, in such a case, or that the title of the reversioner arises by operation of law. The truth is, that the law on the subject has grown from precedent to precedent and it is impossible to argue that, because a certain legal incident is true of a certain proposition, it must also be true of every proposition which may have been logically drawn from the first proposition or which is capable of being supported by reference to the first proposition.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

A discussion of some of the leading cases will, I think, make good my point. In 1856, the question arose before the Supreme Court in the case of Jadomoney Dabee v. Sarodaprosono Mookerjee (1) whether a Hindu widow could, for good consideration, convey her estate, inherited by her from her son, in favour of the next heir then living. In answering the question in the affirmative, Colvile, C. J., pointed out that it was "but another way of doing that which in former times was continually done without violence to the letter or spirit of Hindu Law, though in a manner shocking to humanity, by means of the rite of Suttee," and he took note of the fact that a "widow can by adopting a certain form of religious life divest herself of the estate and then accelerate its devolution on the next heir in her lifetime." The case before the Supreme Court was a case of conveyance, pure and simple, but arguing from the analogous cases of widows committing suicide or adopting a religious life and thus accelerating the devolution of the estate on the next heir, the Court came to the conclusion that there was nothing inherently wrong in the widow conveying the estate of her husband for consideration to one who would take the estate by inheritance if she were to die at the date of the conveyance. But it is one thing to say that because, upon the death of a widow, either actual or civil, the estate would at once vest by operation of law upon the next heir of her husband, therefore, the widow can operate her death by conveying absolutely the estate of her husband to one who, at the moment of the conveyance, is the next heir of her husband, it is another thing to say that, when the widow does convey the estate to the next reversioner, the reversioner takes the estate by operation of law, and not by virtue of the conveyance.

Jadomoney's case (1) was decided in the Supreme Court in 1856, and between 1855 and 1884 the law was firmly established in Bengal that a Hindu widow by relinquishing her rights in favour of the heir of her husband's estate could accelerate his inheritance, and that the effect of a conveyance by her and such heir was to convey the absolute estate. In 1884, in Nobokishore Sarma Roy v. Hari Nath Sarma Roy (2) the question was raised whether a transfer or conveyance by a widow upon the ostensible ground of legal necessity, such transfer being assented to by the person who at the time is the next reversioner would conclude another person not a party thereto who is the actual reversioner upon the death of the widow, from asserting his title to the property. The facts were these: the widow executed a conveyance of the property in favour of a stranger, reciting necessity. The High Court took the view that there was not a sufficient finding in the judgment of the Appellate Court as to whether there was legal necessity for the conveyance or not, and the whole case was argued on the footing that there was no necessity for the conveyance. The person who at the time was the next reversioner executed a separate document in which he assented to the conveyance by the widow, and covenanted on behalf of himself and his heirs, that he would not lay claim to the property at any future time. That reversioner died, and the person entitled to succeed on the death of the widow was another person who was in no way bound by the covenants executed by the previous reversioners. The Division Bench conceded that the widow might retire in favour of the next reversioner and that, if she did so, that is, if she abandoned her interest in his favour, the next reversioner would have as complete and absolute a title to the property as he could have on her death. It also conceded that there might be a transfer by the widow to the reversioner, and a second transfer by the reversioner to the stranger; but it did not see how the effect of a double transfer could be given to two documents different in their nature and contents. The learned Judges accordingly referred the question for the determination of the Full Bench.

(1) 1 Boul. 120; 3 Ind. Dec. (O. S.) 72.

(2) 10 C. 1102; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 737 (F. B.).

MAN SINGH D. NAWLAKHBATI.

Sir Richard Garth, in delivering the judgment of the Full Bench, pointed out that if the widow died a natural death, her husband's heirs would at once succeed to the estate; or if she were to become a byragee or otherwise die a civil death, the result would be the same; and he thought that just as she might have disclaimed her estate when her husband died, there was nothing wrong or objectionable in her relinquishing her estate at any time in favour of her husband's heir for the time being; after she had once accepted it. So far the position was perfectly clear; but then the question had to be faced whether the widow and the next heir could agree to make an alienation of the estate without any legal necessity to support it. On this question, Sir Richard Garth said as follows:—"But, if it is once established, as a matter of law, that a widow may relinquish her estate in favour of her husband's heir for the time being, it seems impossible to prevent any alienation which the widow and the next heir may thus agree to make." The learned Chief Justice recognised the essential distinction between a case of relinquishment, properly so-called, and a case of sale, without any legal necessity, merely with the consent of the next male heir; but he thought that there was such a long course of authority in favour of the power of the widow to alienate the estate with the consent of the next heir that the Full Bench could not decide the contrary without disturbing the titles which had been acquired on the strength of that authority. Sir Lawrence Jenkins in Debi Prosad Chowdhry v. Golap Bhagat (3) summed up the decision in Nobokishore's case (2) in these words: "Starting then from the established position that the next heir's succession can be accelerated by relinquishment, it was determined in Nobokishore's case (2) as a logical consequence that the widow, with the next heir's consent, could alienate without any legal necessity." And the learned and distinguished Chief Justice said as follows:—"The road to the decision in Nobokishore's case (2) was not without its difficulties, but the learned Judges felt it had to be travelled that titles might be quieted." It seems to me clear beyond dispute that the extension of the doctrine was more or less forced upon the Court; the Court upholding the extension on the ground that it was the logical consequence of the right conceded to the widow either to disclaim the estate at the time of the death of her husband or to turn byragee or otherwise die a civil death afterwards and thus accelerate the succession of her husband's heir. The decision of Sir Richard Garth points out the real distinction between a case of relinquishment, properly so-called, and a case of alienation capable of being supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment; and it seems to me that it does not follow that, because the heir takes by operation of law when there is real relinquishment by the widow, that is to say, when she elects to die a civil death, he also takes by operation of law, when, as a result of a transaction which may be supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment, but which is in fact not relinquishment, the estate is carried from the widow to the heir or to a stranger with the consent of such heir.

It is not necessary for our present decision to discuss any of the subsequent decisions Behari Lal v. Madho Lal Ahir Gayawal (4) recognizes that the widow can accelerate

(3) 19 Ind. Cas. 273; 40 C. 721; 17 C. W. N. 701; 17 C. L. J. 499.

(4) 19 C. 236; 19 I. A. 30; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 603 (P. C.).

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKEBATI.

the estate of the heir by conveying absolutely and destroying her life-estate. In the Full Bench case of Debi Prosad Chowdhri v. Golap Bhagat (3) it was laid down that, to uphold an alienation by the widow on a ground other than that of legal necessity or of the equitable extension founded on legal necessity, it should be shown that there was a consent of the next heir to an alienation capable of being supported by reference to the theory of the relinquishment of the widow's entire estate and consequent acceleration of the interest of the consenting heir, provided the alienation is of the whole estate. The question involved in the Full Bench case was whether a widow could alienate a portion of her estate with the consent of the next reversioner. Sir Lawrence Jenkins pointed out that, if the alienation was to be supported by reference to the theory of the relinquishment of the widow's entire interest, the alienation must be of the entire estate, for, as the Judicial Committee afterwards said in the case of Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden (5), "there cannot be a widow who is partly effaced and partly not so." The decision of Sir Lawrence Jenkins makes it perfectly clear that the Courts have been obliged to have recourse to the theory of relinquishment for the purpose of deciding cases which are not cases of relinquishment, in order that title acquired on the faith of a long series of decisions may not be disturbed.

I have come to the conclusion that it cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule applicable to all cases that the heir takes by operation of law whenever as a result of a transaction to which the widow and the heir are parties, the entire estate becomes vested in the heir or goes to a stranger with the consent of the heir. In a case of disclaimer by the widow at the time of the death of her husband, or of relinquishment, properly so-called, afterwards the title of the heir would undoubtedly arise by operation of law, and, in my opinion, section 60 of the Court of Wards Act would not operate to the prejudice of the heir, assuming that, at the date of the relinquishment, the widow were a ward of the Court. But a case of relinquishment must be carefully distinguished from a case which is not one of relinquishment, but which is capable of being supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment. A true case of relinquishment arises when there is the renunciation of the world by the widow and the abandonment of the estate by her or some act by her which might, in the eye of law, justify the inference that she is civilly dead. But where the widow sells the estate for valuable consideration to the heir or to a stranger with the consent of the heir or enters into an engagement with the heir which has the effect of carrying the estate to the heir or to a stranger with the consent of the heir; in other words, whenever the transaction is one, not of relinquishment, but one capable of being supported by reference to the theory of relinquishment, the title of the heir arises, not by operation of law, but by the act of transfer on the part of the widow and the transaction would come within the prohibition of section 60, assuming that the widow were a ward of the Court, and the sanction of the Court were not obtained to the transaction.

I have now to consider whether the transaction of the 18th December 1918 operated as a relinquishment or as an alienation. Now, the transaction is evidenced by two documents, one executed by the Maharanis in favour of the grandsons, and the other executed by the grandsons in favour of the Maharanis. The deed of surrender is described as an indenture to which the Maharanis and the grandsons are parties, and the deed executed by the grandsons is described as an agreement to which the grandsons and the Maharanis are parties. The deed of surrender recites that the Maharanis were each getting a monthly allowance of Rs. 625 from the Court of Wards and that, as they were growing old and were desirous of remaining aloof from the concerns of the world and of spending their latter days in Divine Worship and meditation in

(5) 50 Ind. Cas. 498; 42 M. 523; 36 M. L. J. 493; 17 A. L. J. 536; 29 C. L. J. 539; 21 Bom. L. R. 640; 23 C. W. N. 777; (1919) M. W. N. 262; 26 M. L. T. 5; 10 L. W. 105; 46 I. A. 72 (P. C.).

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

the holy City of Benares with an allowance for their maintenance befitting their rank and position, they wished to surrender and relinquish their Hindu widow's estate in the property left by their husband to their grandsons who were the next heirs of their husband who had undertaken to pay them or the survivor of them the monthly sum of rupees two thousand out of the income and profits of the estate and ask to defray the expenses of the daily and periodical worship of the family deities. The document then asserts that the grandsons "have agreed to all the terms aforesaid," and proceeds to provide as follows:—

1. That the first party Maharani Tara-bati and Maharani Nawlakhbati do hereby relinquish and surrender all their rights in the property, moveable and immoveable, left by their husband, the late Maharaja Hirballabh Narain Singh Bahadur, K.C.I.E., commonly called the Sonbarsa Estate, now in the charge and under the management of the Court of Wards to and in favour of the second party Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh and Rudra Partap Singh, the next heirs of the said Maharaja Bahadur under the Hindu Law, and in pursuance thereof the first party do hereby make over the entire property aforesaid to the second party in full extinction of their rights as Hindu widows.

2. That the second party will be entitled to the whole property aforesaid from this date and they will hold and enjoy the same in the rights of daughter's son succeeding to the property of their maternal grandfather under the Benares School of Hindu Law, the share of each being a moiety of the said property.

3. That the second party will be entitled to have their names entered as proprietors in equal shares in respect of the revenue-paying or revenue-free estates included in the said property by removing the names of the first party now recorded in the Registers maintained under Act VII of 1878 (B. C.).

4. That the first party will at once inform the Court of Wards of this surrender and request the Court to make over the charge and management of the said property to the second party subject to the Court's retaining the management, if it thinks fit, under section 13 A of the said Act IX of 1879 (B. C.).

5. That the first party, or the survivor of them, will be entitled to receive a maintenance allowance of Rs. 2,000 (Rupees two thousand) per mensem, from the second party out of the rents and profits of the said property so long as they or either of them live or lives.

6. That the second party undertake to keep up and maintain the daily and periodical worship of the family deities Lachmi Narain Jeo, Ram Chandra Jeo and Radha Krishna Jeo, installed at the Sonbarsa House left by the said Maharaja Bahadur, at a cost of Rs. 100 (Rupees one hundred) per mensem and should they omit or neglect to carry out this undertaking the first party will be entitled to enforce the fulfilment thereof.

The agreement executed by the grandsons in favour of the Maharanis contains all the recitals that are to be found in the deed of surrender, and provides as follows:—

The first party, therefore, in consideration of the premises, do hereby agree of their own free-will and accord that from that day they became the proprietors of the said Sonbarsa Estate, by reason of the surrender aforesaid they and their heirs, successors, executors, administrators and assignees shall pay to the second party or the survivor of them, so long as they or either of them live or lives, the monthly sum of Rs. 2,000 (Rupees two thousand) for their maintenance in a style suitable to the rank and position held by their deceased husband, and if they fail to pay the allowance due for any month (which is to be taken as an English month) on the first day of the following month, the second party will be at liberty to enforce the payment thereof, with simple interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per mensem by process of Court, and the said arrears of allowance, with interest and the costs of the suit, if any, to enforce the payment thereof, shall be the first charge on the property mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed which forms a part of the estate surrendered by the second party as mentioned above. And the first party further, agree that from the day aforesaid they shall keep up and maintain the daily and periodical worship of the family deities Lachmi Narain Jeo, Ram Chandra Jeo and Radha Krishna Jeo installed at the Sonbarsa House left by the said Maharaja Bahadur at a cost of Rs. 100 (Rupees one hundred) per mensem (the month being taken as an English month) and should they omit or neglect to carry out this agreement, the second party will be entitled to enforce the fulfilment thereof.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

What, then is the substance of the transaction between the Maharanis and their grandsons? In the first place, it is an agreement an indenture, as the parties themselves describe the document. In the second place, the desire of the Maharanis to retire from the world is not unconditional, but is subject to two important conditions, first, that the grandsons will pay them or the survivor of them a sum of money for their maintenance "befitting their rank and position," that is to say, a sum of Rs. 2,000 per month which, let it be remembered, is a sum much in excess of what the Maharanis were actually receiving from the Court of Wards, and, secondly, that the grandsons will defray the expenses of the daily and periodical worship of the family deities at a cost of Rs. 100 per month. In the third place, the Maharanis are sufficiently alive to their worldly interest to stipulate that their maintenance allowance at Rs. 2,000 per month with interest on arrears at 12 per cent. per month shall form a first charge upon certain specific properties belonging to the estate. In the fourth place, they retain a sufficient interest in the estate of their husband by reserving to themselves the liberty to enforce the fulfilment of the condition as to debsheva.

Now, I do not desire to throw the slightest doubt upon the numerous cases which have decided that transactions similar to the one which I am considering are capable of being supported by reference to the theory of the relinquishment of the widow's entire interest. I have not the slightest doubt that, had the Court of Wards not stood in the way, the transaction would have carried the estate from the Maharanis to the grandsons; but, in my opinion, the estate would have been carried, not by operation of law, but by the act of the Maharanis. In Jadomoney's case (1) the widow relinquished her estate in favour of the next reversioner in consideration of a yearly allowance of Rs. 44,000 to be paid her. The transaction was described by the learned Judges as a conveyance for good consideration. In the case before us, the Maharanis entered into the transaction in consideration of the promise on the part of the grandsons to pay them a sum of money much in excess of what the Court of Wards was paying them. I find it impossible to hold that the act on the part of the Maharani was an act of the renunciation of the world or an act which in the eye of law would justify the inference that they were civilly dead. In my opinion, the transaction operated as a conveyance and fell within the prohibition of section 60 of the Court of Wards Act, and the learned Subordinate Judge was right in dismissing the plaintiff's suit on this ground.

My conclusion on the question which I have just discussed is sufficient for the disposal of the appeal, but as the case is likely to be carried to the Judicial Committee it is necessary that I should express my views on the questions which have been raised before us on behalf of the defendants. It was argued that, assuming that section 60 of the Court of Wards Act did not prevent the Maharanis from surrendering their estate in favour of their grandsons, the deed of surrender, standing by itself, could not carry the estate from the Maharanis to their grandsons, and, as possession still remained with the Maharanis, the transaction was incomplete, and there was a power in Maharani Nawlakhbati to resile from an incomplete engagement. The basis of the argument is that, in order to accelerate the succession of the next heir, there must be a relinquishment in fact, and not merely a paper declaration to that effect. As I have shown before, the present law on the subject of relinquishment is merely the extension of the rule of Hindu Law which permitted a widow to renounce the world and abandon the property. It was determined in the case of Debi Prosad Choudhri v. Golap Bhagat (3) that if logic was to have any place in our system of law, relinquishment must be of the entire estate, and not of a portion of it. And so it is argued that if the analogy is to hold good, there must be an abandonment in fact in order that the heir-at-law may step into the inheritance.

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

I think that the contention is right and ought to prevail. A relinquishment, in my opinion, becomes operative only when the widow acts upon the declaration and withdraws herself from the estate. It is difficult to understand how a widow can be said to have withdrawn her life-estate, if, notwithstanding her paper declaration she continues to be in possession of the estate. It was pointed out by the Judicial Committee in Rangasami Gounden v. Nachlappa Gounden (5) that "it is the effacement of the widow—an effacement which in other circumstances is effected by actual death or by civil death—which opens the estate of the deceased husband to his next heirs at that date." In my opinion, the effacement must be founded on fact, and so long as the widow does not in fact efface herself, she has the right to say—since she is not bound to efface herself "I have changed my mind, and I do not intend to give effect to my declaration."

The learned Government Advocate does not dispute the correctness of the proposition which I venture to think is at the very foundation of the doctrine of relinquishment. But he asserts that circumstances have arisen which make it inequitable for her to change her mind. Now, I quite agree that, though a party has complete power to resile from an incomplete engagement, such a power will be denied when the actings and the conduct of the parties have carried the incompletely executed engagement into effect. But, in order to exclude the plea of locus penitentiae a party must base his claim, not upon the incompletely executed engagement, but upon the equities that arise from the actings and the conduct of the parties. But here the engagement was incomplete because possession was retained by the Maharanis and if possession was retained by the Maharanis there could be no equity upon which a claim could be founded. The equitable rule upon which the learned Government Advocate relies, applies to imperfectly clothed transactions; transactions which in England ought to be evidenced by writing but are not evidenced by writing which in India ought to be evidenced by a registered document but are not evidenced by a registered document, and it is well-established that, provided there have been actings and conduct of the parties unequivocally referable to engagement and productive of alteration of circumstances, loss or inconvenience, a party can found upon the equities arising from the acts done, though not upon the engagement itself. In my opinion there is no scope for the application of the equitable rule to the facts of the present case. It is not suggested by the defendants that the document, upon which the plaintiff relies, was imperfectly clothed, or that all the formalities connected with the document were not gone through. What is suggested is that the relinquishment did not become effective until there was a relinquishment in fact and to a case so put, it is clearly no answer to refer us to the doctrine of part performance.

But supposing it is possible to investigate in a case of part performance, it is relevant to enquire whether the plaintiff does found upon the equities arising from the alleged actings of the parties. The plaint expressly asks for the following declaration:—That the Court be pleased to declare that by the deed of surrender and the ekrarnamah dated the 18th December 1918, the plaintiff's father and the defendant second party became entitled as the next immediate reversionary heirs of the late Maharaja Sir Harballabh Narain Singh Bahadur, K. C. I. E., to all the properties left by him, and the defendant first party has no right to withhold possession of the Sonbarsa Estate from the plaintiff and the defendant second party." This does not look as if the plaintiff has based his claim, not upon the deed of surrender but upon the equities arising from the actings of the parties. A careful perusal of the plaint is sufficient to establish that the plaintiff bases his title on the deed of surrender. We are not told what the actings of the parties were which have given rise to an equity in favour of the plaintiff, and it is, in my opinion, quite impossible to investigate a case of equity on the plaint as presented by the plaintiff.

But I do not intend to rest my decision on this point on so narrow a ground as the construction of the plaint. The evidence does not, in my opinion, establish that there have been actings of the parties on which the plaintiff can base his title. The deed of surrender was executed on the 18th December 1918. On the 23rd December the Maharanis addressed a letter to the Collector informing him of what they had done and requesting him "to take steps to make over the charge and management of the said properties to Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh and Rudra Pratap Singh, if the Court of Wards do not think fit to retain management under section 13 (a) of Act IX of 1879 B. C." This is the sole 'acting' on the part of the Maharanis and it has been gravely argued that, upon this letter an equity can be founded in favour of the plaintiff. I am unable to accept this contention as well founded. It was productive of no alteration of circumstances, no loss or inconvenience, and it certainly does not disclose any act done by the grandsons known to and permitted by the Maharanis to take place on the faith of the engagement as if it were perfect. The letter was written and addressed on the 23rd December 1918, and there is no evidence of any act done subsequent to the 23rd December 1918, which might suggest the inference that the Maharanis acted on the transaction of 18th December or that they permitted their grandsons to act on the faith of the transaction of the 18th December as if it were complete in itself. The Maharanis continued to reside in Sonbarsa and to draw their maintenance allowance from the Court of Wards. The eldest Maharani died in August 1920 and, on her death, her interest in her husband's estate became vested in Maharani Nawlakhbati. The suit was instituted on the 17th January 1921, and the Court of Wards retired from the management of the estate on the 27th April 1922. On the retirement of the Court of Wards Maharani Nawlakhbati became entitled to speak on her own behalf, and she promptly repudiated the transaction of the 18th December. In my opinion, the evidence does not support the contention that there were actings of the parties on which the plaintiff could rely in support of his title. It was then argued that the only way in which the Maharanis could have abandoned the property was by requesting the Court of Wards to make over the properties to their grandsons, and that this they did by their letter of the 23rd December. But the question, in my opinion, is not whether the Maharanis made an attempt to relinquish their estate, but whether there was relinquishment in fact. Upon the withdrawal of the Court of Wards from the management of the estate, it was open to Maharani Nawlakhbati to affirm the transaction of the 18th December. She expressly declined to affirm it, and I do not see on what ground the plaintiff should be allowed to maintain ejectment against her, since she was not at any time bound to relinquish her estate in favour of her grandsons and since she has resiled from the engagement before completing the transaction.

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

It was then contended on behalf of defendant No. 2 that, assuming that the deed of surrender carried the estate from the Maharanis to him and to his brother on the death of his brother, the interest of his brother came to him by survivorship, and the plaintiff as the son of his brother has no title to maintain the suit. The argument is founded on the decision of the Judicial Committee in Venkayamma Garu v. Venkataramanayamma Bahadur Garu (6) in which it was established that, upon the death of a daughter, her sons succeeded to the property of their maternal grandfather as his heirs, and that they took the property jointly with rights of survivorship. The Madras High Court had come to the conclusion that the doctrine of survivorship was limited to unobstructed succession and to the succession to the joint property of re-united co-parceners. This was undoubtedly the view of so eminent a Hindu lawyer as Sir Gurudas Banerji, and was accepted as settled law both in the Calcutta High Court and Madras High Court. It was contended before the Judicial Committee by Mr. Mayne that there was a number of cases in the books in which property inherited as obstructed inheritance was regarded as joint with right of survivorship. Mr. Mayne referred to the case of sons succeeding to the self-acquired property of their fathers to the case of widows succeeding to the property of their husband, and to the case of daughters succeeding to the property of their fathers. The Judicial Committee (6) 25 M. 678; 4 Bom. L. R. 657; 7 C. W. N. 112 M. L. J. 299; 29 I. A. 156; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 286 (P. C.).

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

thought that "where sons succeed, the inheritance as to them is unobstructed" but it accepted the cases of widows and daughters as conclusively establishing that the doctrine of survivorship is not limited to unobstructed succession and to the succession to the joint property of re-united co-parceners. It was urged before us by Mr. Naresh Chandra Sinha, that according to the Mitakshara, upon the death of a widow or a daughter, her co-widow or the surviving daughter succeeds to the property, not indeed, by survivorship, but as the nearest heir of the last male holder of the property; but it seems to me that we are not at liberty to entertain the argument, for to do that would be to throw doubt upon the correctness of the decision of the Judicial Committee. On the decision of the Judicial Committee it must follow that Barra Lal, at his death, did not leave any interest in the estate which was capable of being inherited by the plaintiff.

But the actual decision of the Judicial Committee, by no means decides the question which has been raised in this appeal. The critical question is, is the right of survivorship referred to by the Judicial Committee the right of survivorship as understood by the Mitakshara Law, according to which the right will not prevail in favour of the survivor as against the male issue of the deceased. The passage in the judgment of the Judicial Committee, as to the interpretation of which the Madras High Court and the Allahabad High Court have differed from each other, runs as follows:—"What then was the character of the property which they, that is to say, the daughter's sons, took?" In the grandfather's hand it was separately acquired property. In the hands of the grandsons it was ancestral property which had devolved on them under the ordinary law of inheritance." And then follows a passage which, in my opinion, is the key to the understanding of the decisions. That passage is as follows:—"Niladri and Appa Rao were members of a united family."

Now it must be conceded that if the term 'ancestral property' was used by the Judicial Committee in the sense in which that term is understood in the Mitakshara, it will be impossible to admit the validity of the argument advanced on behalf of defendant No. 2 that his right to take by survivorship will prevail as against the plaintiff. "Ancestral property" in its technical sense means "property which descends upon one person in such a manner that his issue acquire certain rights in it as against him." Mr. Lachmi Kant Jha on behalf of defendant No. 2 maintains that there is an exception to the general rule when we are dealing with daughter's sons and their issue. Daughter's sons, we are told, occupy a special position in the family of their maternal grandfathers; but their sons are not members of the family of the maternal grandfather of their fathers, and they cannot be regarded as having an interest by birth in the property of the maternal grandfather of their fathers, since they do not offer any funeral cakes to their father's maternal grandfather. The argument is an attractive one, but it has two serious defects; first, whatever the position of the daughter's sons may have been before the appointment of a daughter to raise up issue for her father became obsolete, under the present law he is a member of his own father's family and cannot be regarded as a member of his maternal grandfather's family; and, secondly, the fact that a person does not offer funeral cakes to the owner of the property does not decide the question which is in debate before us. It is quite true that it is only the persons who offer the funeral cake to the owner of the property that are regarded as having an interest in the property by birth. But it is well-established that as each fresh member takes a share, his descendants to the third generation below him take an interest in that share by birth. In my opinion, if the estate were ancestral estate in the hands of Barra Lal and Chotey Lal their descendants to the third generation below them would take an interest in that estate by birth, and the plaintiff, as the son of Barra Lal, would be entitled to maintain partition against Chotey Lal.

But a more serious question remains, namely, whether the property could be regarded as ancestral property in the hands of Barra Lal and Chotey Lal. Mr. Mayne answers the question in the negative. "Hence, all property," says Mr. Mayne, "which a man inherits from a direct male ancestor, not exceeding three degrees higher than himself, is ancestral."

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

property, and is at once held by himself in co-parcenary with his own issue. But where he has inherited from a collateral relation, as, for instance, from a brother, nephew, cousin or uncle, it is not ancestral property; consequently, his own descendants are not co-parceners in it with him.... On the same principle property which a man inherits from a female, or through a female as, for instance, a daughter's son... would not be ancestral property." (Mayne, 8th Edition, section 275, page 350). In the case of Utar Singh v. Thakar Singh (7) the Judicial Committee came to the same conclusion. In the course of its judgment, it said as follows:—"Unless the lands came to Dhanna Singh by descent from a lineal male ancestor in the male line through whom the plaintiffs also in like manner claimed, they are not deemed ancestral in Hindu Law." The question is one of difficulty; and I have great hesitation in holding that the Judicial Committee in the Madras case used the expression "ancestral property" in the technical sense in which that term is used in the Mitkshara.

How, then, should the question be answered? In my opinion, the solution lies in the sentence which follows the statement that in the hands of the grandsons, it was ancestral property. The Judicial Committee pointedly referred to the fact that Niladri and Appa Rao were members of a united family, and then cited the following passage from Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shiwagunga (8):—"According to the principles of Hindu law, there is co-parcenaryship between the different members of a united family, and survivorship following upon it. There is community of interest and unity of possession between all the members of the family, and upon the death of any one of them the others may well take by survivorship that in which they had during the deceased's lifetime a common interest and a common possession." Now admittedly Niladri and Appa Rao did not have a common interest and a common possession in the property of their maternal grandfather during his lifetime. But they were undoubtedly

(7) 6 Ind. Cas. 721; 35 C. 1039; 10 Bom. L. R. 790; 1 S. P. W. R. 1908; 35 I. A. 206; 8 C. L. J. 359; 12 C. W. N. 1049; 18 M. L. J. 379; 4 M. L. T. 207; 4 P. R. 1910 (P. C.).

(8) 9 M. I. A. 539; 2 W. R. P. C. 31; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 52; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 251 19 B. R. 843 (P. C.).

edly members of a united family, and there was co-parcenaryship between them and, I would add, their issue, qua the property which was admittedly their ancestral property. In my opinion, the Judicial Committee acted upon the view that the property inherited by Niladri and Appa Rao formed an accretion to their family property, for on no other hypothesis is it possible to explain that decision consistently with the admitted principles of the Mitkshara. This is the view which the learned author of Mayne's Hindu Law has taken: "It will be observed," says the learned author, (8th Edition, section 563 A, 792) "that in this case the property descended to a single daughter, who was the mother of both the sons, and that these sons were members of an undivided family who took the whole property at the same time by the same title. Prima facie there was no reason why they should hold it in any manner different from that of their other family property, to which it would naturally form an accretion." If this view be right, as I think it is, their sons would have an interest equal to their fathers in the property treated as having accreted to the property in which they had an interest by birth. In the case before us, Barra Lal and Chotey Lal were members of a united family, and it is not suggested that there was, at any time separation between them. In my opinion, the question must be answered in favour of the plaintiff and against defendant No. 2.

The only other question which I have to consider is the question of fact raised by Maharani Nawlakhbati, namely, whether the deed of surrender executed by her is operative and enforceable against her. The case of the Maharani on this point is stated in paragraph 6 (a) of her written statement which is as follows:— "That the defendant No. 2 of whom the Maharanis were very fond, was ordered by the Government to leave the district owing to his suspected complicity in the murder of the late Maharaja Bahadur. The plaintiff's father represented to the Maharanis that it was necessary to have a deed executed by them, so that the Government might be induced to allow the defendant No. 2 to return to Bhagalpur District and that the Maharanis on that misrepresentation without any proper and independent advice, signed the alleged deed of surrender without properly understanding its effect. This defendant submits that in the circumstances the deed is legally invalid and inoperative." Now, one thing is clear on the evidence, and that is that the Maharanis made repeated attempts to have the order of externment against defendant No. 2 re-called. On the 5th May 1907, the Maharanis presented a petition to the Collector of Bhagalpur in which they asked for permission to be allowed to surrender their estate in favour of Chotey Lal. With reference to this petition, the learned Subordinate Judge says that this was an attempt "to prove the innocence" of Chotey Lal. "In the peculiar circumstances in which he was then placed," says the learned Subordinate Judge, "his mother and brother could not withhold their consent to the said application if it could remove the strong suspicion of murder from him. A perusal of this application would show that its main object was to save Chotey Lal. The surrender matter played an insignificant part in it. It was rather thrown out as a bait." Between 1907 and 1916, the Maharanis made various attempts in the same direction. Exhibit T is a letter from the Collector, dated the 14th March 1908, to the Maharanis, in which, replying to the letter of the Maharanis dated the 11th March 1908, he states that the Commissioner and he were of opinion that it was "not advisable to re-call Chotey Lal Sahib at present." Exhibit K, is an order dated the 24th December 1912 passed by the Collector on the petition of the Maharanis praying that their younger grandson may be allowed to visit Sonbarsa. The order runs as follows:—"I have fully considered the question and regret I am unable to recommend that the younger grandson of the late Maharaja Bahadur of Sonbarsa should be again allowed the privilege of coming to this District and to Sonbarsa." In 1913, the Maharanis presented a memorial to the Local Government, and Exhibit K is the reply of the Government to the memorial which runs as follows:—"With reference to their memorial dated nil, the undersigned is directed to convey to the Maharani Saheba of Sonbarsa, the regret of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council that he is unable to alter the existing orders under which Lal Rudra Pratap Singh is forbidden to come back to Sonbarsa." In their letter of the 4th March 1918, Exhibit 5, the Maharanis, in forwarding the deed of surrender which they proposed to execute in favour of their grandsons to the Collector, entered into an elaborate defence of Chotey Lal and expressly asked that the Government may withdraw the order prohibiting the return of Chotey Lal to the District. And the evidence of Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad shows that, on the eve of the execution of the deed of surrender, the elder Maharani consulted him as to "what was the best way of getting the younger grandson to Bhagalpur".

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

Now, it is impossible to read the evidence of Maharani Nawlakhbati, without being impressed by the passion with which she exclaims again and again, "I have not given the property to anybody. It has been done by dhokha dhokhi, (that is, by practising deception) about the coming of Chotey Lal." Her evidence is, that it was represented to her that if she executed the document, the order of externment against Chotey Lal would be re-called, and he would be able to return to Bhagalpur. She says that the document was not read and explained to her, and that she would never have signed it, had she known that she was divesting herself of her proprietary interest in the property for ever. In my opinion, the story told by her is inherently probable, having regard to the antecedent history showing what strenuous efforts were made by the Maharanis to have the order of externment against Chotey Lal re-called.

Before examining the evidence on the point, it will be useful to remember the rules which have from time to time been laid down in order to enable the Courts to determine whether deeds taken from pardah-nashin ladies are enforceable against them. The jurisdiction of the Courts of law to afford protection to pardah-nashin ladies rests on a presumption of the imperfect knowledge of the world and exposure to undue influence, making it the duty of a person taking a beneficial grant of contract from a pardah-nashin lady to show that the deed was explained to her and understood by her. Starting from the elementary principle that every person taking a document from a pardah-nashin lady is bound to show affirmatively that the document was her document, that is to say, that she understood the nature of the transaction and the effect of it, the Courts of Law have laid down certain rules for assisting them to determine the point, but it is necessary to remember that the rules so laid down are rules of prudence rather than rules of law, and that their application will depend on the particular facts of each case. As the Judicial Committee once pointed out, there is a grave risk of failure of justice if these rules are moulded into inelastic formulas or crystallized into inflexible rules and treated as of universal application, regardless of the special facts and surrounding circumstances of the concrete case which requires adjudication.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

Now, I do not propose to discuss all the cases bearing on the point. It will be sufficient to refer to the decision of Mr. Justice Mookerjee in Nibaran Chandra Mookerjee v. Nirupama Debi (9), where that learned and distinguished Judge summed up the whole position in these words:—"It is well settled," said the learned Judge, "that the Court, when called upon to deal with a deed executed by a pardah-nashin lady, must satisfy itself upon the evidence, first, that the deed was actually executed by her or by some person duly authorized by her, with a full understanding of what she was about to do; secondly, that she had full knowledge of the nature and effect of the transaction into which she is said to have entered; and, thirdly, that she had independent and disinterested advice in the matter.... On examination, these decisions will be found to fall broadly into two groups, namely, first, cases where the person who seeks to hold the lady to the terms of her deed is one who stood towards her in a fiduciary character or in some relation of personal confidence; and, secondly, cases where the person who seeks to enforce the deed was an absolute stranger and dealt with her at arm's length. In the former class of cases, the Court will act with great caution and will presume confidence put and influence exerted; in the latter class of cases, the Court will require the confidence and influence to be proved intrinsically... The essence of the matter was tersely put by Lord Buckmaster in Sunitabala Debi v. Dhara Sundari Debi Chowdhurani (10), when he stated that the circumstances under which a pardah-nashin woman agrees to transfer property in which she is interested must be carefully examined, in order to ascertain that she had independent advice and that the lady had sufficient intelligence to understand the relevant and important matters, that she did understand them as they were explained to her, that nothing was concealed, and that there was no undue influence or misrepresentation.... It will be observed that the Court must thus have regard to the intellectual attainments of the lady concerned and will naturally be disinclined to set aside the deed where she is proved to have been of business habits, to have been literate, and to have possessed a capacity to judge for herself." I respectfully adopt the view which was expressed by Mr. Justice Mookerjee in the case just cited.

(9) 69 Ind. Cas. 476; 34 C. L. J. 563; 26 C. W. N. 517.

Now, it is relevant to enquire whether the case before us belongs to the first class mentioned above, where the person who seeks to hold the lady to the terms of her deed stands towards her in a relation of personal confidence. The learned Government Advocate strenuously contends that since the Maharanis were under the Court of Wards, Barra Lal did not stand towards her in a relation of personal confidence. Now, one of the most impressive facts in the present case is that, though the Maharanis were wards of the Court, they made no attempt to seek the advice of the Court of Wards in the matter of the execution of the deed of surrender. They kept the Collector informed of what they were doing in the matter; but it is one thing to keep the Court of Wards informed of what they were doing; it is another thing to seek its advice in the matter. The Court of Wards, though the statutory guardian of the Maharanis, was completely ignored; and the evidence of Mr. Nilmoney

(10) 53 Ind. Cas. 131; 47 C. 175; 37 M. L. J. 483; 17 A. L. J. 997; (1919) M. W. N. 821; 22 Bom. L. R. 1; 24 C. W. N. 2971; 11 L. W. 227; 46 I. A. 272; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 2 (P. C.).

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

Deo, who was the manager of the Sonbarsa Estate under the Court of Wards, from 1914 to 1920, shows that, so far as he was concerned, the Maharanis were altogether "reticent" on the question of the deed of surrender. It is idle, therefore, to say that, as the Court of Wards was the guardian of the Maharanis, Barra Lal could not have stood towards them in a relation of personal confidence. In the case of Mariam Bibee v. Muhammad Ibrahim (11) the document was taken by a brother from a sister who was living with her husband. The case was decided on the footing that there was a relation of personal confidence between them. In the case of Niharan Chandra Mookerjee v. Nirupama Debi (9) the document was taken from the lady by her husband's step-brother. The case was again decided on the footing that there was a relation of personal confidence between them. Mr. Justice Mookerji pointed out in the latter case, that, according to the normal structure of a joint Hindu family, the lady would look upon her husband's step-brother as her natural protector in whom she might repose confidence properly to safeguard her rights. The facts of the present case are strongly in favour of the view that Barra Lal would be looked upon as the natural protector of the Maharanis, who, it must be remembered, were old and had no one else to advise them. Barra Lal was their daughter's son, and was brought up in their house. There was no one nearer to them in relationship than Barra Lal and it is Barra Lal to whom they would naturally turn for advice and guidance.

It is necessary, at this stage, to take note of an argument which was pressed before us with some passion by the learned Government Advocate. It was argued that Barra Lal could have had nothing to do with the deed of surrender, since he did not come to Sonbarsa till December 1918, and the draft was prepared in March 1918. It is necessary to point out that Barra Lal's home was in Burawara in Rajputana, and that he ordinarily resided in Burawara, though he frequently came to Sonbarsa. The deed of surrender was drafted sometime in March 1918, and the evidence is conclusive on the point that Barra Lal did not come to Sonbarsa till December 1918. But the evidence also shows that one Anirudh Prosad Singh took a prominent part in the transaction and that he was the agent of Barra Lal. Manbharan Ram Misra, the agent of the plaintiff, swears that he saw Anirudh in the house in Bhagalpur where the Maharanis were staying at the time when the draft was being prepared. In his examination-in-chief, he said that this was in December 1918; but, obviously, he made a mistake and he corrected himself in cross-examination. But he is quite clear that the Maharanis were accompanied by Anirudh when they came to Bhagalpur in connection with the preparation of the draft deed, and that he took part in the preparation of the draft, though he cannot say whether he took a prominent part. In regard to the execution of the document there is no doubt that to him was assigned the most important part, because it was he who is alleged to have read and explained the document to the Maharanis. The evidence, read as a whole, shows that, during the critical period between March to December 1918, Anirudh was throughout in the company of the Maharanis and was taking the most important part in connection with the transaction which began in March 1918 and ended in December 1918.

Now, Anirudh was undoubtedly a relation of the elder Maharani, having married a daughter of her brother. But, according to Probhu Charan Ambastha, a witness examined on behalf of the plaintiff, Anirudh was the agent of Barra Lal. Now, Probhu Charan undoubtedly knew Anirudh; the learned Subordinate Judge says that he was a friend of Anirudh and that he went to Bindwara to attest the deed of surrender at the request of Anirudh. Whether the learned Subordinate Judge intended to throw discredit on the evidence of Probhu Charan, it is difficult to say. He says that his sympathy was on the side of the Maharani and that the truth had to be wrung out from him. But it is unnecessary to pursue the subject because the learned Government Advocate before us claimed him as a witness of truth. It is obvious that, if his testimony is to be discarded, the plaintiff will be in great difficulty in establishing that the document was read and explained to the ladies. According to Probhu Charan, Anirudh was the agent of Barra Lal.

(11) 48 Ind. Cas. 561; 28 C. L. J. 306.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

On a careful consideration of all the evidence; I have come to the conclusion that Barra Lal stood towards the Maharanis in a relation of personal confidence.

That being so, it was, in my opinion, absolutely necessary that the Maharanis should have received independent and disinterested advice in the matter. The learned Subordinate Judge has come to the conclusion, first, that it was not necessary in this case, that they should have received independent advice; and, secondly, that there are circumstances in the case which suggest the inference that they did receive independent legal advice in the matter. I will first consider whether the possession of independent legal advice was essentially necessary to validate the deed. The learned Subordinate Judge bases his conclusion on his view that there is an inherent right in a Hindu widow to surrender her estate to the next reversioners and that "such act is regarded as pious and meritorious on their part for which independent or disinterested legal advice is not necessary." It is impossible, in my opinion, to maintain the proposition. There is an old case in the books, the case of Delrus Banoo Begum v. Nowab Syud Asgur Ali Khan (12), which is still treated as a leading case in our Courts. That was a case in which a Muhammadan widow executed a tawleut-namah with a view to perpetuate certain ceremonies in commemoration of her mother's death. Now, it cannot for a moment be disputed that there is "an inherent right" in a Muhammadan widow to dedicate her properties to religious trust, and that such dedication "is regarded as pious and meritorious" on the part of Muhammadan widows. She, however, denied on oath an effectual knowledge of the document, and the Calcutta High Court came to the conclusion that it was not operative against her on the ground (amongst others) that "she had no professional assistance at the time." The decision of the Calcutta High Court was affirmed by the Judicial Committee [Ashgar Ali v. Delroos Banoo Begum (13).] It is unnecessary to pursue the subject, for there is no authority in support of the proposition for which the learned Subordinate Judge has made himself responsible.

(12) 23 W. R. 453; 15 B. L. R. 167.

The conclusion of the learned Subordinate Judge is also based upon his finding that the Maharanis had "intellectual attainment" and "business capacity" sufficient to bring the case within the decision of Lord Shaw in Kali Bakhsh Singh v. Ram Gopal Singh (14). That was a case in which a Hindu lady made a gift of about one-half of her estate to the son of her paramour. The Judicial Committee found, first, that the lady had been in the habit for a considerable period of years, of managing her affairs, of entering up her accounts, and of attending to business; secondly, that she had much strength of will, and, thirdly, that she was a capable woman, fully alive to the direction of her own interests, and well aware of what she was doing. Upon these facts, their Lordships had to consider whether the fact that the lady did not obtain independent outside advice invalidated the deed. In dealing with this point, Lord Shaw said as follows:—"The possession of independent advice or the absence of it, is a fact to be taken into consideration and well weighed on a review of the whole circumstances relevant to the issue of whether the grantor thoroughly comprehended, and deliberately and of her own free-will carried out, the transaction. If she did, the issue is solved and the transaction is upheld; but if upon a review of the facts—which include the nature of the thing done and the training and habit of mind of the grantor, as well as the proximate circumstances affecting the execution, if the conclusion is reached that the obtaining of independent advice would not really have made any difference in the result, then the deed ought to stand."

Now, in my opinion, there is no resemblance whatever between this case and the

(13) 3 C. 324; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 749; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 444; 2 Ind. Jur. 601; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 794 (P. C.).

(14) 21 Ind. Cas. 985; 19 C. L. J. 172; 18 C. W. N. 282; 16 O. C. 378; (1914) M. W. N. 112; 12 A. L. J. 115; 15 M. L. T. 130; 1 O. L. J. 67; 26 M. L. J. 121; 16 Bom. L. R. 147; 36 A. 81; 41 I. A. 23 (F. C.).

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

case of Kali Bakhsh. The learned Subordinate Judge says that the Maharanis knew how to read and write, that "they kept a staff of their own consisting of clerks mohurris, karpardaz, etc.;" that "they used to interview high officials with whom they had informal discussion regarding the surrender," and that "they used to talk to Nakulswar, the sarishtadar of the office of the manager of Sonbarsa under the Court of Wards," and he concludes that, "all these facts unmistakeably establish the intellectual attainments of the two Maharanis and their business habits and capacity to judge for themselves."

In order to demonstrate how utterly impossible it is to accept the conclusion of the learned Subordinate Judge, it will be necessary to examine the evidence. We have not been referred to any evidence establishing that the Maharanis could read and write, and my own investigation, which has, I hope, been very thorough, has not yielded any result. They could certainly sign their names in Hindi, but there are many persons who can sign their names, but who cannot read and write. The Maharani was cross-examined at great length on two different occasions, and it was not suggested to her that she was literate, in any sense of the term. Let it, however, be assumed that they could read and write; the assumption will not carry us very far, unless we are able to make the further assumption that their training and habit of mind fitted them to defend any attack that might be made on their property. Of that there is no evidence whatever, and it is quite impossible to make the assumption on the materials that are before us. Then, it is suggested that they kept a staff of their own consisting of clerks, muharris, karpardaz, etc., at the palace. With every desire to understand the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge, I have not been able to appreciate how the issue is solved by a reference to the fact that the Maharanis maintained a large household, unless indeed the evidence establishes (which it does not) that they supervised and directed the work of the clerks, muharris and karpardazes, and that they managed their own affairs and did not leave them to the clerks, mohurris and karpardazes. There is not the slightest evidence to suggest that they managed their own affairs; that they checked their accounts and that they attended to business. It is then asserted that they used to interview high officials "with whom they had informal discussion regarding the surrender." There is not the slightest evidence that Maharani Nawlakhbati ever interviewed any high official, although there is evidence that the elder Maharani did interview the Collector from time to time. Mr. B. C. Sen, who was the Collector of Bhagalpur in 1918, makes it perfectly clear that all the conversation that he had was with the elder Maharani and that the Chota Maharani never spoke to him on any occasion. Mr. Nil Money De, who was the Manager of the Court of Wards in 1918, says that Chota Maharani never spoke to him about any matter in connection with the administration or management of the estate. The evidence of Maharani Nawlakhbati shows that she left everything to Barra Maharani who was the malik while she was alive. It will be useful to cite a few passages from her evidence to show how utterly helpless she was, and to what extent she had to depend on others. The passages are as follows:—

Q. Was there any kharchabahi in which daily income and expenditure were entered belonging to the deohri of the two Maharanis?

A. The elder Maharani used to know all about it.

Q. Do you mean to say that you do not know if such bahi was kept?

A. As she was the malik—there could not be two maliks. I do not know. We were both maliks, but now I am the malik.

Q. The elder Maharani used to consult you or not in whatever she did.

A. No.

Q. Whatever work in connection with the affairs of the two Ranis used to be done, they were done by you both after consulting each other?

A. Yes.

Q. The elder Maharani never did anything which was against your wishes?

A. No.

Q. And you also never did anything what was against the wishes of the elder Maharani.

A. No.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

This seems to be a convenient place to take note of an argument which was advanced by the learned Government Advocate. His argument is, that the evidence conclusively shows that the elder Maharani, at any rate, was a capable woman, well able to take care of herself. I think the evidence shows that she used to interview Government officials; but I am unable to agree that we are in any way concerned in this litigation with the question whether the deed of surrender could have been enforced against the elder Maharani, if Maharani Nawlakhbati had predeceased her. Let it be assumed that the elder Maharani knew what she was about and that she executed the deed of surrender with full knowledge as to its effect. But a relinquishment by her would have the effect of vesting her interest in Maharani Nawlakhbati, and would not offer any solution of the problem which we are investigating. This is not denied by the learned Government Advocate but he maintains that there is an admission by Maharani Nawlakhbati, that the elder Maharani always consulted her and that she never did anything against the wishes of the Chota Maharani. In my opinion, no such conclusion follows from her evidence. The question was a perfectly general one, and she answered it in a general way; but in order to see whether there is any admission of the kind claimed by the learned Government Advocate, we have to examine the whole of her evidence; and there is little doubt, when we examine the whole of her evidence, that there is no admission of the kind claimed by the learned Government Advocate. In my opinion, there is no evidence that Maharani Nawlakhbati had any interview with any high official or that she had informal discussions "regarding the surrender" with any of them. Lastly, it is asserted that she used to talk to Nakuleswar who was the sarishadar of the office. It is difficult to understand what conclusion can be reached on a consideration so irrelevant as the one to which the learned Subordinate Judge refers. The single line upon which the learned Subordinate Judge has built his argument is as follows:—"The Maharanis used to talk to me through pardah." I quite agree that if his evidence could be read as establishing that the Maharanis directed the affairs of the estate, and that they expressed their views to him regarding the management of the estate and that they insisted on their views being given effect to, and otherwise took an intelligent interest in the management of the estate, something might be said in favour of the view of the learned Subordinate Judge. But the evidence does not establish that which might form the basis of the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge, and, for my part, I intend to disregard the evidence of Nakuleswar altogether on this point.

While the consideration to which the learned Subordinate Judge refers should not have weighed with him, there are circumstances which, in my opinion, establish that this was a case in which the possession of independent advice was absolutely necessary. The transaction was between grandmothers and grandsons by which the grandmothers were parting with their proprietary interest in the estate in consideration of a payment to them of Rs. 2,000 per month. The transaction was, on the face of it, an attractive one, for, though the income of the estate was nearly three lakhs a year, they were actually receiving from the Court of Wards Rs. 1,250 per month. They were, however, entitled to know what their position would be if the Court of Wards retired from the management of the estate, and whether there was any likelihood of the Court of Wards retiring from the management of the estate in the near future. Had it been suggested to them that they should take independent and disinterested advice in the matter and had they sought that advice, they would have discovered that most of the debts had been paid off, and that the retirement of the Court of Wards could not be long delayed. I attach great importance to the fact that, though the Court of Wards was the statutory guardian of the Maharanis, no attempt was made to take the advice of the Court of Wards. On an anxious consideration of all the evidence in the case, I have come to the conclusion that, in order that the plaintiff may be able to enforce the deed of surrender against the Maharani, it is necessary for him to establish that she had independent and disinterested advice in the matter.

MAN SINGH P. NAWLAKHBATI.

I will now deal with the question whether they did have any independent advice in the matter. It is conceded that there is no direct evidence on the point; but the learned Government Advocate contends—and that is the argument of the learned Subordinate Judge—that the circumstantial evidence is sufficient to establish that the Maharanis were in possession of independent advice. It is contended that the Maharanis knew perfectly well the meaning of the term 'surrender', for they expressed a wish to surrender their estate, first in 1907 and then in 1916. The argument, in my opinion, begs the whole question which is in debate before us, for, before any assumption can be made, it must be established that the Maharani understood what she was about, first in 1907, and secondly in 1916. I will first consider the proposed transaction of 1907. The evidence on this question consists of a petition of the Maharani to the Collector of Bhagalpur dated the 15th May 1907, and an endorsement of Mr. Lyall, the Collector, on that petition, dated the 25th May. It will be remembered that, at this date, Chotey Lal had already been exonerated from the District, and the learned Subordinate Judge has destroyed his own argument by expression of the view that the main object of the petition was to save Chotey Lal, and that the proposal to surrender "was thrown out as a bait." The petition of the Maharanis alleged that they were informed that after the gunshot which brought about the death of the late Maharaja, he with his own hand signified his desire on a piece of paper that after his death the Chotey Lal should succeed to his estate. It went on to say that, assuming that the Maharaja had died intestate, they were with the consent of their daughter and the eldest grandson willing to surrender their estate in favour of Chotey Lal. The endorsement of Mr. Lyall is as follows:—"I pointed out to them the grave objections that exist in so important a matter of any precipitate or imperfectly considered action. They agreed accordingly to postpone the execution of the deed of relinquishment for some months, possibly till dasahara." It is argued upon the endorsement of Mr. Lyall that the Maharanis must have known what relinquishment meant in Hindu law and that there is no scope for the argument that Maharani Nawlakhbati in entering into the transaction of the 18th December 1918 did not know the meaning of the word 'surrender'. It is, in my opinion, wholly unnecessary to consider whether the Maharani did or did not know the meaning of the term surrender. The question, in my view, is did the Maharani enter into the transaction of the 18th December 1918 with the full knowledge that she was divesting herself of all proprietary interest in the estate to which she had succeeded as a Hindu widow. This question is not solved by a reference to what the Maharanis intended to do in 1907. It may well be that the Maharanis were told that if they executed a document of this nature the Government would be compelled to withdraw the order of exonerment as against Chotey Lal. We have no direct evidence on the point and Mr. Lyall has not been examined in the case. It is quite impossible to say upon the petition of the Maharanis dated the 15th May 1907 and upon the endorsement of Mr. Lyall dated the 25th May 1907 that the Maharanis intended in 1907 to divest themselves of their proprietary interest in the estate. I regard the findings of the learned Subordinate Judge on the proposed transaction of 1907 as a finding in favour of the view that there was no intention in 1907 to relinquish the estate in favour of Chotey Lal.

I now come to the proposed transaction of 1916. On this point there is no evidence at all, either documentary or oral, but there is a reference to what the Maharanis intended to do in 1916 in Exhibit 5, the letter of the Maharanis to the Collector of Bhagalpur dated the 4th March 1918. It appears from this letter that on the 4th February 1916, the Maharanis had addressed a letter to the Collector intimating a desire on their part to relinquish their estate in favour of their eldest grandson Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh. In the letter of the 4th March 1918 they say that their attention has since been drawn to a legal difficulty in executing the proposed deed of surrender in favour of one only of their two daughter's sons. They go on to say that they have been advised that the other grandson, namely, Chotey Lal, would also be entitled to a moiety of the property although the deed of surrender might stand in the name of one only of their grandsons. They then say that to obviate all future difficulties and prospective litigation they have decided in consultation with both the daughter's sons to surrender their estate in favour of both of them. They annex a draft of the deed of surrender which they proposed to execute in favour of their grandsons and ask the Collector to obtain the sanction of the Court to the new deed which would be in favour of both the daughter's sons. They then enter into a long and elaborate defence of Chotey Lal and assert that the suspicion against him was wholly unfounded. They allege that some enemies of the family must have poisoned the ears of the Police and that there was no evidence to justify the Police theory that Chotey Lal had any concern, direct or indirect, in the murder of the Maharaja. They then invite the Government to accept their "earnest protestations regarding his innocence and withdraw the order prohibiting his return to the District" which as they say "has so long been an unmerited punishment both to him and ourselves." Now this letter was written on the 4th March 1918 and we are asked to hold upon this letter that the Maharanis were anxious in February 1916 to surrender their estate in favour of Barra Lal. Maharani Nawlakhbati in her evidence denies any knowledge of this letter. No doubt it bears her signature; but the letter is in English and there is no evidence whatever as to who drafted this letter and whether the letter was read and explained to Maharani Nawlakhbati. It was contended that there is an admission in the 6th paragraph of her written statement that she was desirous of relinquishing her widow's estate in favour of the elder grandson in 1916; but this written statement was filed on her behalf by the Court of Wards and the question whether she knew anything about this written statement has formed the subject-matter of much discussion before us. The learned Subordinate Judge assumed, without any evidence, that the written statement was prepared upon her instructions. There was no evidence before the learned Subordinate Judge to justify this assumption; but also there was no evidence to contradict it. In this Court, however, the Manager of the Court of Wards has been examined on behalf of the plaintiff and he states definitely that he had no talk with Maharani Nawlakhbati on the question of the written statement to be filed on her behalf. Mr. Mohamed Abdus Salam is a Deputy Collector and he was the Manager of the Court of Wards on the 22nd May 1921 and it appears that he is still the Manager of the Sonbarsa Estate, his services having been lent by the Government to the Sonbarsa Estate. He says that he filed the written statement on behalf of the Court of Wards and that he had no talk with the Maharani about the written statement because the Estate was under the Court of Wards. He explains that it was not necessary to take any instructions and he adds that he "stated the facts in this paragraph," that is to say, the 6th paragraph, "from the Estate papers which were in the possession of the Court of Wards." It is obvious, therefore, that the assumption made by the learned Subordinate Judge is incorrect and no inference adversely to the Maharani can be drawn from the facts stated in the 6th paragraph of the written statement. In my opinion, there is no evidence whatever excepting the letter dated the 4th March 1918, to establish that Maharani Nawlakhbati intended in 1916 to divest her proprietary interest in the estate to which she had succeeded as a Hindu widow in favour of Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh. So far as the letter of the 4th March 1918 is concerned, there is no evidence whatever that she was aware of the contents of this letter or that it was read and explained to her or that it was drafted on her instructions.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

It is then suggested that the transaction, which began in March 1918 and culminated in the execution of the deed of surrender on the 18th December 1918, makes it impossible for us to accept the story of Maharani Nawlakhbati. The case of the plaintiff on this point is as follows:—In March 1918 the Maharanis came to Bhagalpur for the preparation of the draft deed of relinquishment. They stayed at a house near the houses of two eminent Pleaders, Babu Chandra Sekhar Sarkar and Rai Bahadur

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

Surja Prosad and that they consulted them, took their advice and got the draft prepared by them. They then forwarded the draft to the Collector on the 4th March 1918 with a covering letter in which they intimated their desire to relinquish the estate in favour of their grandsons. Having done so, they went back to Sonbarsa. They returned to Bhagalpur again in November 1918, took the advice of Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad in the matter and then went to Bindwara in the District of Monghyr, the paternal home of the elder Maharani where, on the 18th December 1918, they executed the document in the presence of many respectable persons. They returned to Bhagalpur and on the 23rd December 1918 they addressed a letter to the Collector of Bhagalpur informing him of what they had done and asking the Collector "to take steps to make over the charge and management of the said properties to Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh and Rudra Pratap Singh if the Court of Wards do not think fit to retain management under section 13 (a) of Act IX of 1879 (B. C.)." The case of Maharani Nawlakhbati is that she did not come to Bhagalpur in March 1918, but that she came in November 1918 and then proceeded to Bindwara to execute the document on the 18th December 1918. She admits her signature to Exhibit 5, the letter of the 4th March 1918, and to Exhibit 5A, the letter of the 23rd December 1918. Her explanation, however, is that from time to time she signed various letters and documents for the purpose of making representations to the Government to withdraw the order of expropriation against Chotey Lal. She denies that she ever consulted anybody or had any talk with anybody regarding the relinquishment of the estate in favour of her grandsons and she definitely states that she executed the document of the 18th December 1918 in the belief that it is a petition to the Court to secure the return of Chotey Lal to Bhagalpur. It will be necessary to examine the evidence very critically in order to see whether the plaintiff has established his case against Maharani Nawlakhbati, but I ought to say that her story receives strong corroboration from the antecedent history to which I have referred, and which establishes that from time to time the Maharanis made various attempts to have the order of expropriation against Chotey Lal recalled, and that in 1907 they proposed to execute a document apparently for the purpose of relinquishing their estate in favour of Chotey Lal, but really for the purpose of securing the cancellation of the order against Chotey Lal. In regard to the incident of March 1918 the evidence of Manbharan Ram Misra and Mr. B. C. Sen, who was the Collector of Bhagalpur in 1918 and who is at present the Commissioner of the Patna Division. I will first consider the evidence of Manbharan Ram Misra. He is a Marwari shopkeeper who, for a consideration of Rs. 100 per month, is looking after the case on behalf of the plaintiff. It appears that his firm has business dealings with Maharaja Harballal Singh and he pointedly refers to the fact that the Maharaja once gave him "a photo of his with an endorsement by his own hand." His evidence in regard to what happened in March 1918 is as follows:—Phucho Babu alias Ram Chandra Singh informed him that the Maharanis had arrived in Bhagalpur. He then went to the house where the Maharanis were putting up and he saw the Maharanis who told him that they had come to Bhagalpur "as they wanted to execute document for giving their estate to their grandsons." He says that he saw the drafts being prepared and that Phucho Babu and others used to go to the house of Pleaders, Chandra Sekhar Babu and Surja Prosad Babu. It ought to be pointed out that in examination-in-chief he put this incident not in March 1918, but in December 1918. In other words, his evidence in examination-in-chief was that all this happened in December 1918. In cross-examination, however, he corrected himself and said that the draft was prepared in March 1918 and not in December 1918 that the Maharanis told him that they had come to Bhagalpur "as they wanted to execute document for giving the estate to their grandsons." Now, in my opinion it is quite impossible to accept the testimony of Manbharan Misra. It is quite true that he had business dealings with the Sonbarsa Raj family, but it is unlikely that such business dealings as he had with the Sonbarsa Raj family would give him an entry into the house and to hold conversations with the Maharanis on the most intimate subjects in which the Maharanis were or might have been interested. He is at present serving the plaintiff for a consideration. His service began in March 1919, and, in my opinion, it is unlikely that the Maharanis should have gone out of their way to make a statement to a Marwari shop-keeper as to why they had come to Bhagalpur. Manbharan admits that the admission which Maharani Nawlakhbati is alleged to have made to him in March 1918 was an important piece of evidence in favour of the plaintiff; but it is remarkable that this alleged admission was not put to Maharani Nawlakhbati when she was examined as a witness in the lower Court. I pointed this out to the learned Government Advocate and the reply of the learned Government Advocate was that as the Court of Wards had decided not to press Issue No. 3 it was considered unnecessary to cross-examine Maharani Nawlakhbati on Issue No. 3. This is the explanation of the learned Government Advocate, but this is not the explanation of Manbharan Ram Misra. In cross-examination he said as follows:—"I gave instructions to my Pleaders when defendants' witnesses were being cross-examined. Don't recollect if I informed my Pleader who went to cross-examine the Maharani to ask her about the conversation I had with her and her co-widow at Bhagalpur regarding the deed of surrender as deposed to by me in my chief nor do I recollect if I informed my Pleader about the said conversation before I came to the box. My evidence regarding the said conversation with the Maharani I considered to be very material in my case. Can't give any reason why the Maharani was not asked about the alleged interview with me and their talk regarding the surrender, in her cross-examination by my Pleader. Don't recollect if I mentioned my said conversation with the Maharani to anybody else. It is not true that my evidence regarding the alleged conversation with the Maharani is a concoction and deliberately false and that, therefore, I did not mention it to any one. There is no reason nor I can offer my explanation of my not remembering having mentioned the conversation incident to anyone, though it is true and material for the purpose of my case." Nor is it correct to say that the Maharani was not cross-examined on Issue No. 3. The whole of her cross-examination was on Issue No. 3 and the cross-examination was a long and protracted one. But having regard to the grievance which was made by the learned Government Advocate and having regard to the view which we took that it was open to Maharani Nawlakhbati to re-open Issue No. 3 we gave him the opportunity to further cross-examine Maharani Nawlakhbati in this Court. A formal question was put to her in cross-examination in this Court as to whether she did not make an admission to Manbharan Ram Misra in March 1918, and the Maharani denied that she ever made such an admission to Manbharan. We have then to choose between the evidence of Manbharan Misra and Maharani Nawlakhbati, and for my part I have no hesitation in whatever in preferring the evidence of Maharani Nawlakhbati. There is also the evidence of Mr. B. C. Sen which, in my opinion, does not touch the question which we have to consider. Mr. B. C. Sen says that he had an interview with the Maharanis at Bhagalpur about the time he received the letter of the 4th March 1918 from them, but he explains that although he was told that both the Maharanis were there he had a talk only with the elder Maharani who spoke to him from behind the purdah. In cross-examination he says that he had never seen the Maharanis face to face and nobody had ever identified the Maharanis; but he adds that he has himself no doubt that he did speak to the elder Maharani on this occasion. In my opinion the evidence establishes that the elder Maharani was in Bhagalpur in March 1918 and that she did have an interview with Mr. Sen in Bhagalpur in March 1918. But the evidence does not touch Maharani Nawlakhbati because Mr. Sen is very careful to point out that his conversation was with the elder Maharani and not with the younger Maharani. I have already pointed out that there is no evidence that the letter of the 4th March 1918 was read and explained to Maharani Nawlakhbati or that she was aware of the contents of that letter. There is also no evidence whatever as to who drafted the deed of surrender in March 1918, and on whose instructions the deed was actually drafted. Manbharan Ram suggests that it was drafted by Babu Chandra Sekhar Sarkar and Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad. Babu Chandra Sekhar Sarkar is unfortunately dead and his evidence is not available to the Court. Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad was not examined in the Court below, but, without permission, he has been examined in this Court on behalf of the plaintiff. Now it is a remarkable fact that he was not asked by the learned Government Advocate as to whether he had anything to do with the draft of the deed of surrender. I have no doubt whatever that the learned Counsel in the exercise of a wide discretion made up his mind not to examine Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad on this point. The evidence of Manbharan accordingly must be rejected in so far as he has suggested that the Maharanis took the advice of amongst others, Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad in March 1918 and that the draft deed was prepared by or under his direction. There is, in my opinion, no evidence to connect Maharani Nawlakhbati with the transaction of March 1918.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

I now come to the incident of November 1918. The case of the plaintiff is that in November 1918 the Maharanis again came to Bhagalpur and took the advice of different lawyers including Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad. Muhammad Ishaq, a clerk of Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad, was called by the plaintiff and he proved an entry in the fee book of Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad showing a receipt of Rs. 10 on the 7th November 1918 forgiving opinion to the Maharanis. Muhammad Ishaq in his evidence to the Court said that Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad went and saw the Maharanis either a few days before or a few days after the fee of Rs. 10 was paid. Upon this evidence the learned Subordinate Judge built the theory that the Maharanis had independent and disinterested legal advice. It did not strike the plaintiff to call Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad to give evidence in the Court below; but he has been called as a witness in this Court on the invitation of the learned Government Advocate, and his evidence is clear and precise and destroys the entire case of the plaintiff on this point. He admits that he saw the Maharanis at or about the time the fee of Rs. 10 was paid to him. His evidence is as follows:—"I do not recollect all the conversations that I had, but I have some recollection of the fact that the Maharani or Maharanis wanted to know what was the best way of getting the younger grandson, that is, Chotey Lal Sahib, to Bhagalpur as there was an order of Government prohibiting him from going to Bhagalpur." The question was put to him "Is this all the talk that you had?", the answer was "yes, that is my recollection." As I have said before, the evidence of Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad destroys the theory of the learned Subordinate Judge. There is not the slightest evidence in the record that in November 1918 the Maharanis obtained any outside legal opinion on the subject.

The learned Subordinate Judge also relies upon the fact that the Maharanis took advice and opinion from the Government Advocate and the Advocate-General of Bengal and upon the fact that Anirudh Prosad, a respectable Zemindar and lawyer, accompanied the Maharanis from Bhagalpur to Bindwara. He also refers to the fact that another lawyer, Bindeshwari Prosad, was also present at the time when the document was executed. Now, there is no evidence that the Maharanis took the advice of either the Government Advocate or the Advocate-General of Bengal. The allegations in the 8th paragraph of the plaint upon which the learned Subordinate Judge relies are as follows:—"That the draft of the surrender deed was prepared and placed before the Advocate-General of Bengal and the Government Advocate of Bihar and Orissa, and it was approved by them. The approved draft was sent to the Collector of Bhagalpur with an accompanying letter, dated the 4th March, 1918 for his information but no objection was taken, and afterwards on the 18th of December 1918 the aforesaid Maharanis in order to give effect to their wishes, shared in by the Hindus, executed and registered the said deed of surrender in favour of their grandsons

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

Rao Bahadur Gobind Singh, the plaintiff's father and Rai Bahadur Rudra Pratap Singh, his uncle the defendant 2nd party so that the succession of the aforesaid grandsons might be accelerated and the said Maharanis might pass the remainder of their lives in the holy city of Benares spending their latter days in the Divine Worship and meditation keeping themselves entirely aloof from the concerns of this mundane world. It will be noticed that all that the plaintiff does allege in paragraph 8 is that the draft of the surrender deed was placed before the Advocate-General of Bengal and the Government Advocate of Bihar and Orissa for their approval. Now, in my opinion, it is one thing to say that the draft was approved by lawyers and another thing to say that independent advice was received from lawyers. The learned Subordinate Judge has an idea that so long as a document is placed before lawyers and they approve of the form of it, the rule as to independent advice is satisfied. The idea is wholly erroneous. What is required is that pardah-nashin ladies should receive advice as to the legal effect of a particular document which they are about to execute and their position under it as compared to the position which they would occupy, if they do not execute the document. There is no suggestion whatever that this was done in the present case. All that was done was that the draft deed was placed before them and they approved of it. In other words, they gave their opinion that the document complied with the formalities of law, just as they gave their opinion that the document which they proposed to execute in 1916 did not comply with the formalities of law. In my opinion there is no evidence whatever that the Maharanis received that independent advice—as distinguished from opinion—from the Government Advocate or from the Advocate-General of Bengal which it was necessary for them to have in order that the deed might be enforced as against them. It is then suggested that Anirudh Prosad, a respectable Zemindar and Pleader, accompanied the Maharanis from Bhagalpur to Bindwara. But as I have already shown before, Anirudh Prosad was the agent of the plaintiff's father; and there is no evidence that Anirudh Prosad was asked to give his advice to the Maharanis or that he did give it. It may be pointed out that Anirudh Prosad has not been examined in this case at all. The learned Subordinate Judge suggests that it was the duty of the defendant to have examined him. With this view I am unable to agree. The learned Government Advocate asked for permission to call Anirudh Prosad as a witness in this Court and we acceded to the application; but while the Government Advocate examined the other witnesses named in his petition, he expressly stated to us that he did not propose to call Anirudh Prosad. We are not concerned in this case with the reasons which prompted the learned Government Advocate not to call Anirudh Prosad. None has been given to us, and we are bound to assume that the evidence of Anirudh Prosad would have been against the plaintiff had the plaintiff called him as a witness in the case. As regards Bindeshwari Prosad, all that I need say is that, although an attesting witness to the deed of surrender, he was not called as a witness by the plaintiff.

It is necessary to mention certain other matters which have been referred to by the learned Subordinate Judge in this connection. The learned Subordinate Judge says that the allegations in the 8th paragraph of the plaint, to which I have already referred, are admitted in the written statement of Maharani Nawlakhbati and that it must follow from such admission that the Maharanis received independent legal advice from the Advocate-General of Bengal and the Government Advocate of Bihar. I have already, in connection with another matter, dealt with this argument. I have pointed out that there is no suggestion in the 8th paragraph of the plaint that any independent advice was received either from the Advocate-General of Bengal or from the Government Advocate of Bihar and I have also pointed out that Maharani Nawlakhbati is not responsible for the written statement, and that there is positive evidence in the record, and that from the side of the plaintiff, that the written statement was not drafted upon her instructions. The learned Subordinate Judge then refers to the fact that the defence which is taken in paragraph 6 (a) of the written statement was not taken in the Land Registration proceedings. It will be remembered that after the execution of the deed of surrender Barra Lal applied in the Land Registration Department to have his name recorded in respect of 8-annas share in the Sonbarsa Raj and that application was resisted by the Court of Wards on behalf of Maharani Nawlakhbati. The view of the learned Subordinate Judge is that, though the Court of Wards contested the application of Barra Lal on the ground that the deed of surrender was not a bona fide document, the Court of Wards should have gone further and alleged that in regard to the deed of surrender the Maharani did not have any independent advice and that, not having contested the application on that ground, it is not open to the Maharani now to put forward the defence that she did not have any independent or disinterested advice in the matter. In my opinion the argument is wholly without foundation. The Maharani was not in any way concerned with the defence which was taken on her behalf in the Land Registration proceedings. The matter rested with the Court of Wards and it is the Court of Wards that defended those proceedings on behalf of Maharani Nawlakhbati. Nor am I impressed by the argument that the point as to independent legal advice not having been taken in those proceedings it is not open to the Maharani to take the point now. The Court of Wards alleged in clear terms that the deed of surrender was not a bona fide document. In order to prove that it was a bona fide document, it was necessary for the applicant to establish that the document was read and explained to the Maharani and that she understood the legal effect of that document. The learned Subordinate Judge then refers to the fact that the Officiating Government Pleader expressly stated that he would not press Issue No. 13. In my opinion Maharani Nawlakhbati ought not to be prejudiced by the action taken on her behalf by the Court of Wards. Her disability has come to an end and she is entitled to press that issue.

MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI.

There is one other point to which the learned Subordinate Judge refers. He says that Nakuleswar Prosad who was called as a witness on behalf of Maharani Nawlakhbati admits in his evidence that the Maharanis were anxious to surrender their estate in favour of the next reversioners. Nakuleswar Prosad was a sartstadar in the Sonbarsa Court of Wards office. He was called by the plaintiff to prove a mortgage executed by the Collector and the Maharanis in favour of Rai Bahadur Dalip Narain Singh. In cross-examination he stated that the Maharanis wanted to surrender their rights to their grandsons by executing the document, and he proceeded to say that with that object they consulted the Collector to whom letters were written and that the opinion of the Advocate-General and the Government Advocate was taken and that the expenses incurred by the Maharanis for such advice and opinion were entered in the books. His evidence is obviously based upon the documents which were in the record of the Court of Wards. There is no suggestion that he has any independent knowledge of the matter. He refers to the letters which were from time to time written to the Collector and to the opinion which was taken from the Advocate-General and the Government Advocate. I am unable to read the evidence of Nakuleswar Prosad as establishing that Maharani Nawlakhbati had independent advice in the matter or that she understood the effects of the document which was executed by her on the 18th December 1918. On an anxious consideration of the evidence in the case, I have come to the conclusion that the circumstances do not establish that Maharani Nawlakhbati obtained any independent legal advice in the matter or that she understood that by executing the deed of surrender, she had effectively divested herself of all proprietary interest in the estate of her deceased husband. It remains for me to consider whether the deed of surrender was read and explained to the ladies. There are eight attesting witnesses to the deed, namely:—

1. Bindeswari Prosad Singh, Vakil, High Court.

2. Ajodhya Prosad Chowdhury, Municipal Commissioner, Monghyr.

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

3. Prabhu Charan Ambasta.
4. Bindeswari Prosad Singh, Vakil, Mouglhyr.
5. Anirudh Prosad Singh, Pleader and Zerrindar.
6. Ramchandra Singh of Mohanpur.
7. Ram Chandra Singh of Mauza Chakla Hanuman Nagar.
8. Nirbhay Narain Singh of Bindwara.

The plaintiff has called Ajodhya Prosad Singh and Prabhu Charan Ambasta. The defendant has called Nirbhay Narain Singh and Ramchandra Singh of Mauza Chakla Hanuman Nagar. I may at once say that I have not been impressed by the evidence of the witnesses called on behalf of the defendants. The learned Subordinate Judge has rejected their testimony and I see no reason to take a different view.

But the onus is on the plaintiffs and it is for the plaintiff to prove that the document was the document of the Maharanis and that they executed the document after understanding the nature of the document and the effect thereof. Prabhu Charan's evidence is that the document was read out to the Maharanis who were sitting behind the pardah. It will be noticed that he does not say that the document was explained to the Maharanis. It has been argued before us that reading a document, which was in English, carried with it the implication that it was explained to the Maharanis. Mr. Dutt's argument, on the other hand, is that on the evidence of Prabhu Charan we ought to hold that all that was done was that the document as it stood was read out to the ladies. I am unable to agree with either contention. Reading out a document means reading it out in a language understood by the persons to whom the document was being read out; but it is another thing to say that it was explained to the ladies. The document is by no means a simple one. It is expressed in the language of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Debi Prosad Chowdhri v. Golap Bhagat (3). That the document needed careful explanation, I have no doubt whatever; and I am unable to hold on the evidence of Prabhu Charan that the document was in fact explained to the Maharani. The evidence of Ajodhya Prosad is that Anirudh Babu read and explained the document to the Maharanis in Hindi, and that he had no difficulty in understanding the nature of the document. The question, however, is not whether he understood the nature of the document but whether the Maharanis understood it. There is a conflict between the evidence of the two attesting witnesses called on behalf of the plaintiff, and, in my opinion, it is difficult to hold on this evidence that the document was explained to the ladies. We have not the evidence of Anirudh Prosad who is alleged to have taken the most prominent part in connection with the events of the 18th December 1918 and I am unable to hold that the document was in fact explained to the ladies. Since the evidence of Prabhu Charan was unsatisfactory from the point of view of the plaintiff, it was open to him to call other witnesses. There is no explanation whatever why he has not called the four remaining witnesses who signed the document as attesting witnesses. Mr. Justice Woodroffe once said that the reading of documents to illustrate pardah-nashin ladies is sometimes a meaningless formality, [See Mariam Bibee v. Muhammad Ibrahim (11)]; and I am unable to hold on the uncorroborated testimony of Ajodhya Prosad that the document was explained to the ladies, especially Maharem Nawlakhbati denies on oath that it was so explained.

To sum up: I have been impressed by the fact that Maharani Nawlakhbati has denied on oath an effectual knowledge of the deed of surrender. The act imputed to her is an act of effacement, an act by which she is said to have operated her death. In the witness-box, she denies that she is dead and she explains the circumstances under which she came to execute the deed of surrender. It was determined in the case of Delus Banoo Begum v. Nowab Syua Asghar Ali Khan (12) affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Asghar Ali v. Dilroos Banoo Begum (13) that pardah-nashin ladies have a claim to special consideration where they deny on oath an effectual knowledge of documents which they are said to have made. It may, of course, be that her explanation is untrue, and that she is really dead; but where the question is whether a pardah nashin lady has operated her own death which she was not bound to do, the Courts will, I apprehend, act with great caution, and will not deprive her of her property

MAN SINGH V. NAWLAKHBATI.

unless compelled to do so. Most of the cases that come before the Courts are cases which arise after the death of the pardah-nashin ladies; but the question here is raised in the lifetime of Maharani Nawlakhbati and the claim of the plaintiff is disputed by Maharani Nawlakhbati. In the next place, it seems to me that the explanation given by the Maharani has received considerable support from the admitted history of the transactions from 1907 to 1918. Again and again attempts were made by the Maharani to have the order of externment against Chotey Lal recalled; and we know that in 1907 they proposed to surrender the estate to Chotey Lal, not with a view to carry the estate from them to Chotey Lal, but with the object of forcing the Government to recall the order of externment against Chotey Lal. And the advice which they sought from Rai Bahadur Surja Prosad on the eve of the transaction in suit is not without significance, and suggests that, in the minds of the Maharanis there was some connection between the execution of the document and the cancellation of the order of externment against Chotey Lal. In the third place, I consider that Barra Lal stood towards the Maharanis in some relation of personal confidence, and should have dealt with them at arm's length. This he did not do and, what is more, he completely ignored the Court of Wards which was the statutory guardian of the Maharanis. The Court will, in such a case, presume confidence put and influence exerted, and I am not satisfied on the evidence that confidence was not put and that influence was not exerted. But, apart from the question of presumption and, assuming that Barra Lal did not stand towards the Maharanis in some relation of personal confidence I am quite clear that the possession of independent and disinterested advice was essential to give validity to the deed of surrender. There is no evidence that the Maharanis had an intellectual attainment or business capacity sufficient to fit them to be on guard against any attack that might be made on their property, and I am unable to say that the possession of independent advice would have made no difference in the case. The terms of the deed were, on the face of it, attractive so far as the Maharanis were concerned, for the immediate effect of the deed would be to give them Rs. 2,000 per month, whereas they were getting much less from the Court of Wards. But the debts of the estate had practically been liquidated and the retirement of the Court of Wards could not long be delayed. Then again it is established beyond doubt and controversy that the motive which impelled the Maharanis to enter into the transaction of the 18th December 1918, was to secure the withdrawal of the order of the externment against Chotey Lal; and I think that this was a matter in which they were entitled to have independent advice. I think that it is established that Maharani Nawlakhbati did not have any independent advice; and though I agree that the document was read to the Maharanis in the language understood by them, I am unable to hold, on the uncorroborated evidence of a single witness, since that evidence is contradicted by Maharani Nawlakhbati; that the document was explained to them. Differing from the learned Subordinate Judge, I hold that the deed of surrender is not enforceable as against Maharani Nawlakhbati.

I would dismiss this appeal with costs.
Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K. & N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

SOHAN SINGH v. JAWALA SINGH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 406 OF 1922.

July 22, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Campbell.

SOHAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JAWALA SINGH AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Ac V of 1908), s. 11—Findings not necessary for decision of suit—Res judicata.

Findings upon matters which are not necessary for the determination of a suit do not constitute a final decision so as to be binding as res judicata. [p. 854, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 14th November 1921, affirming that of the Munsif, dated the 24th June 1921.

Mr. Rustumji, for the Appellant.

Lala Mehar Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal is the outcome of a suit in which Sohan Singh, son of Nand Singh, claimed possession from his two brothers, Jawala Singh and Sundar Singh, of 4 kanals of land which he alleged himself entitled as one of the heirs of his deceased father. He was met by the pleas that his share had been separated off in his father's lifetime and that in a previous suit between the same parties he was held not to be entitled to any more land than was then in his possession.

The Courts below have concurred in finding that the question of the plaintiff's right to the 4 kanals in suit is res judicata by the previous suit. The First Court also held that, apart from this legal bar, the plaintiff had failed to prove his right to the land. The learned District Judge appears to have affirmed this decision also but not in very clear terms. His main reason for dismissing the appeal is manifestly his finding on the point of res judicata.

The plaintiff has preferred a second appeal and Counsel for the appellant has conceded that section 11, Civil Procedure Code, does not bar the suit. He contends, however, that the law of estoppel precludes the plaintiff's claim and also that there is a finding of fact against the plaintiff on the merits.

The previous suit was filed against the present plaintiff by the present defendants on 20th June 1919, after the death of Nand Singh and was for possession of 47 kanals

10 marlas left by Nand Singh which Sunder Singh and Jawala Singh alleged had been forcibly appropriated by Sohan Singh. The latter replied that he was only in possession of 27 or 28 kanals which his father had made over to him in his lifetime and that he was actually entitled to more than this, viz., of one-third what his father had died possessed of.

The Munsif proceeded to frame an issue in the following terms:—

Is the defendant No. 1 (i.e., Sohan Singh) entitled to an area in excess of that held in possession by him?

On this he recorded a finding that Sohan Singh in 1887-1888 was "settled apart from his father, getting possession of 27 or 28 kanals of land as his own share, in the way of complete partition of his interests," and that the defendant is entitled to 28 kanals of which he held possession at the death of Nand Singh, deceased." He dismissed the suit "inasmuch as the defendant holds possession of 28 kanals to which he is entitled as Nand Singh's son by virtue of the partition of 1887-8."

It is obvious that no issue was necessary as to the title of Sohan Singh to any land which was not then in his possession. The question was merely whether he was entitled to retain the land which he then held. The other question whether he was to succeed on the death of Nand Singh to a share in the land retained by the latter for himself of which possession at the time was held by the then plaintiffs whose claim he was resisting, was not one necessary to the determination of the suit, a finding on that question was not one against which he could have appealed and thus, as ruled, inter alia, in Narain Das v. Faiz Shah (1), the question was not a matter directly and substantially in issue which was heard and finally decided. Jamaitunnissa v. Lutfunnissa (2) is explicit to the same effect. This, as stated already, is conceded by the learned Counsel for the respondents.

I confess that I am unable to follow the same Counsel's argument about estoppel. He contends that Sohan Singh is estopped

(1) 157 P. R. 1889 (F. B.).

(2) 7 A. 606; A. W. N. (1885) 89; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 657.

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. MAKHAN SINGH:

from raising now a plea that he is entitled on his father's death to obtain a further share because he deliberately raised it in the former suit and obliged the Court to put it in issue and decide it. I can find nothing in support of this proposition in Chapter VIII of the Indian Evidence Act, nor do I see that the Court was obliged by the present plaintiff or by any one else to frame an issue regarding rights in property which was not in suit. The other point whether, apart from the question of res judicata, the plaintiff has established his claim was dealt with by the learned District Judge as follows:—

"Neither in the present plaint nor in the previous suit is there any mention of the chief contention now put forward, namely, that after the Settlement of 1911-12 Nand Singh took back 9 kanals of land from each of his sons for his own maintenance, nor, though the point is covered by Issue No. 2 in the present case, is there any sufficient proof of this on the record. The Patwari (P. W. No. 1) does not support the allegation while P. Ws. Nos. 2 and 3 are not themselves credible witnesses."

I find that in a statement made before the framing of issues the plaintiff did say that after Settlement his father had taken back some land and I fancy that the learned Sessions Judge has overlooked this portion of the pleadings. I have also seen the deposition of the Patwari and I do not think that the learned Sessions Judge can have read it carefully. It appears to me that the learned Sessions Judge's finding on this second point is not a considered one based upon all the evidence on the record and that, in reality, he dismissed the appeal entirely upon the view taken by him of the applicability of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, with which I am obliged to disagree.

For these reasons I accept the appeal, set aside the order of the lower Appellate Court and remand the appeal under O. XLI, r. 23, for a fresh decision on the points arising other than those covered by Issue No. 1 framed by the Trial Court. Stamp on appeal to this Court to be refunded and costs to be costs in the cause.

W. C. A.

Appeal accepted.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 21-9 OF 1922.

April 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pison, J. C.

Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN

—APPELLANT

versus

Rai Bahadur MAKHAN SINGH AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), s. 3 (2)
(3)—Urban immoveable property and village immoveable property—Town, what is—Pre-emption, origin of.

In order to determine whether property in dispute in a pre-emption suit is village or urban immoveable property, the Court has to deal not with the mauza or revenue area as a whole unit, but with the character of the particular land in suit. [p. 857, col. 1.]

Muhammad Din v. Shah Din, 90 P. R. 1907; 151 P. W. R. 1907, relied on.

Areas which were formerly agricultural may be absorbed in towns and losing all their former characteristics become suburbs indistinguishable in character from the town itself. [p. 857, col. 1.]

Kishan Dyal v. Ali Bahksh, 87 P. R. 1890, Umar Bahksh v. Abdul Karim, 70 P. R. 1898, Abdulla v. Punnu Ram, 42 P. R. 1906; 85 P. L. R. 1907; 79 P. W. R. 1906 and Ghulam Murlaza v. Rupa Mal, 57 P. R. 1906; 100 P. L. R. 1906; 84 P. W. R. 1906, referred to.

It is not necessary to have a gradual development in order to make an area become part of a town; an entirely new suburb may suddenly spring up by the constitution of a block of buildings. [p. 857, col. 2.]

Allah Ditta v. Muhammad Nazir, 7 Ind. Cas. 716; 84 P. R. 1910; 102 P. W. R. 1910, relied on.

The inclusion of an area within Municipal limits is a highly important factor to be taken into account in determining whether that area is within a town or within a village. [p. 858, col. 1.]

The law of pre-emption is derived from three sources, Muhammadan Law, the necessities of the existence of racial communities and public and private convenience. One of the main reasons for the acceptance of a pre-emptive right is the vital necessity felt by every community, when it first becomes homogeneous, to preserve to itself its essential homogeneity. To allow landed estate to pass into the hands of strangers is not only to deprive the community of a valuable asset into which its communal right has not been entirely abandoned, but also to entail the dissolution of its internal organisation by the engrafting of strangers upon the common body. For these reasons the first right of pre-emption in the case of agricultural land or of the sites of agricultural villages accrues primarily to the relatives of the original owner and after them to other members of the proprietary body. [p. 859, cols. 1 & 2.]

On the other hand, pre-emption in towns, though the principle may have originally been evolved from Muhammadan Law, depends at the present time purely on the consideration of public and private decency and convenience; here it is not relationship but contiguity which is of prime importance. [p. 859, col. 2.]

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. MAKHAN SINGH;

In order to determine whether any specified area is to be considered as part of a town or part of a village, the test to be applied is whether such an area has retained any of its original characteristics which would be consistent with the organisation of a society to whom the principles of pre-emption among agricultural communities would apply, or whether, on the other hand, it is one to which the principles of town pre-emption are applicable. [p. 859, col. 2.]

First appeal from an order of the District Judge, Kohat, dated the 30th November 1921, whereby the suit of appellant for pre-emption of 5 kanals 3 marlas in Kohat was dismissed.

Mr. Parma Nand, R. S., for the Appellant.

Mr. Dewan Chand, R. S., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The present suit is one for pre-emption of a 3-8th share of a certain area of a land occupied by a "mandi" situated just outside the walls of Kohat City. The suit was resisted upon a number of grounds upon all of which it will not be necessary for me to adjudicate in this appeal. Pre-emption is claimed on the basis of relationship between the plaintiff and the vendors. It has been found by the Trial Court that the property in suit is urban immoveable property as defined in section 3(3) of Act II of 1905 and that, therefore, pre-emptive rights in it are governed by section 13 of the same Act and not by section 12. It is admitted that, if this finding is correct, the plaintiff cannot pre-empt, the defendant-vendee being himself a co-sharer in the property. The first point, therefore, which I am called upon to decide is whether or not the property in suit is urban immoveable property. It is contended by the plaintiff-appellant that it is not, and that it is village immoveable property within the meaning of section 3(2) of the Act. The position taken up by the respondents is that the property is urban immoveable property and that, if it is not, it is nevertheless not village immoveable property. This alternative contention of the respondents depends upon the construction to be placed upon the words "immoveable property within the limits of village sites" contained in section 3(2) of Act II of 1905 and of certain rulings which had been passed excluding buildings of various natures from the above definition. This alternative contention, of course, need not be considered if the appellant fails to upset the finding of the Trial Court to the effect that the property is urban immoveable property, as that finding necessarily implies that the present suit must fail.

The following facts may be stated with regard to the property in suit. The property in suit is comprised in an area of 5 kanals 3 marlas situated in the revenue area of Mauza Kohat. It is assessed to revenue. It is entirely occupied by a "mandi," or market, which contains a large number of shops. It is recorded in revenue papers as "ghair mumkin mandi." The revenue area of Mauza Kohat includes also Kohat City proper which is fortified and enclosed by a wall and which has been given a separate number in the Revenue Records as "qasba Kohat." The site in suit lies just opposite the Tahsil gate of the City outside the wall, but separated only from the City by a main road. It is within the limits of the Municipality and of the octroi area. The property is undoubtedly used purely for commercial purposes. An excellent map of the property is attached to the record.

The case is very parallel to that recently decided by me in the case of Sher Ali v. Kalandar Khan (1), Civil Revision No. 109 of 1922, where it was held that the buildings of Bhanamari, occupying a situation just outside Peshawar City very similar to that occupied by the land in suit in regard to the City of Kohat, were, for purposes of pre-emption, a sub-division of the town of Peshawar. That ruling is now in course of publication, and was not before the Trial Court when the present suit was decided. I have in it reviewed various authorities on the subject of the creation of new suburbs in the immediate vicinity of a town. There is, however, one distinction between the two cases. The ruling in the case of Sher Ali v. Kalandar Khan (1) was one which covered the whole of the site of Bhanamari and declared Bhanamari to be a sub-division of Peshawar. In the present case we are not dealing with anything except the area covered by the suit itself. In this respect the Punjab Chief Court ruling Muhammad Din v. Shah Din (2) is important as a precedent. It dealt with an area situated in Qila Gujar Singh near the town of Lahore, and it is an authority that the Courts have to deal not with the "Mauza" or revenue area as a whole unit, but with the character of the particular land in suit. I have no doubt of the correctness of the view that Courts may and should consider the position and character of any specified plot quite apart from the character of the unit in which it is included. That ruling is also parallel to the present case in that it deals with an area included in an estate which is also particularly agricultural and which has all the administrative characteristics of village estates; that is to say, it has its assessment of revenue, its Record of Rights, its ordinary village population and its village officers. The particular area, however, dealt in Qila Gujar Singh was nevertheless declared to be an area which had been absorbed in the town of Lahore. I have to see, therefore, whether the area now in suit has been similarly absorbed in the town of Kohat. It can hardly be denied and there is a consensus of authority for the proposition, that areas which were formerly agricultural can actually be absorbed in towns and, losing all their former characteristics, become suburbs indistinguishable in character, from the town itself. We have, for instance the case of Batala in the Punjab very parallel to the present case [Kishan Dial v. Ali Bakhsh (3)] and another case referring to the same town Umar Bakhsh v. Abdul Karim (4), Abdulla v. Punnu Ram (5) relates to the outgrowth of suburbs from Multan town and Ghulam Murtaza v. Rupa Mal (6) to the creation of a new quarter called "Mohalla Giddarpur." Allah Ditta v. Muhammad Nazir (7) is again authority for the view that it is not necessary to have a gradual development in order to make an area to become a part of a town, but that an entirely new suburb may suddenly spring up by the construction of a block of buildings. The block of buildings referred to in that case was very similar in character to that with which we are concerned in the present suit. The inherent weakness in the present case of the position of the appellant in denying that the area in suit has become a portion of the town may be seen from the line of argument adopted by his learned Counsel. He would argue that a distinction must be made between the expansion of a town afterwards and the extension of an existing village towards a neighbouring town. It is almost impossible to follow this argument as having any real bearing upon the matter in hand. The question is not whether the inhabitants of the town or the inhabitants of an outside area have taken the initiative in creating a suburb, but whether such a suburb has or has not been actually created. The learned Counsel would also endeavour to distinguish the case of Multan from that of Kohat by arguing that residence in or near Multan is not exposed to the same danger as is unfortunately prevalent in a Frontier town like Kohat. He argues that the urban population of Kohat necessarily confines itself to the fortified walls of the City, and it is unlikely that it can extend the boundaries of the town beyond its own walls. This argument, again, I am unable to regard very seriously. It is perfectly possible to recognize the extension of a town like Kohat outside its fortified walls and there cannot be the least doubt that this expansion has been regularly taking place in recent years. Indeed, there are documents on the record which explain the present expansion and which are strongly in support of the view that it is an actual expansion of the town. Applications on the subject of re-claiming the land in suit were made by the plaintiff's father and another relative in the year 1893. It would seem clear from those applications that the Executive Authorities had been endeavouring to encourage the reclamation of this land, and its occupation by buildings in order to improve the sanitation of the City. There is no doubt that from 1893 onwards a gradual develop-

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN V. MAHAN SINGH.

(2) 90 P. R. 1907; 151 P. W. R. 1907.

(3) 87 P. R. 1890.

(4) 70 P. R. 1898.

(5) 42 P. R. 1906; 85 P. L. R. 1907; 79 P. W. R. 1906.

(6) 57 P. R. 1906; 100 P. L. R. 1906; 84 P. W. R. 1906.

(7) 7 Ind. Cas. 716; 84 P. R. 1910; 102 P. W. R. 1910.

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. MAKHAN SINGH.

ment took place. The site was originally occupied by a few "kachoha" huts and shops which were gradually re-placed by masonry buildings and practically by a new Bazar or regular trading centre.

Peshawar City, it may be remarked, is similarly surrounded by a fortified wall, but has similarly extended its Bazar outside that wall and, indeed, some of the most important trading centres of Peshawar City lie actually outside the original perimeter wall. To take another test, I have already remarked that the area in suit is situated not only within the limits of Kohat Municipality, but within the limits of octroi administration. Many Municipalities, including Kohat, have not applied their octroi administration to the whole of their notified limits. The inclusion of an area within Municipal limits is a highly important factor to be taken into account in determining whether that area is within a town or within a village. In fact, both Messrs. Ellis and Shadi Lal in their Commentaries would appear to accept the proposition that, ordinarily, every place within Municipal limits is a town. I consider myself, however, that this view goes rather too far. The sounder view, no doubt, is that taken in two cases by the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh where it was held that a purely administrative act including a certain area within the limits of Municipalities could not per se operate to destroy the pre-existing character of that area. The correct view, in my opinion, is that which has already been expressed in the case of Sher Ali v. Kalandar Khan (1) relating to Bhanamari, i. e., that the inclusion of an area in Municipal limits, while not being conclusive as to its urban character, is, at the same time, a strong evidence of that character. It is at least a complete answer to the attempt to deny the urban character of that area by reference to the fact that it is included also on an estate paying revenue and having in other respects, Revenue Record of Rights and Village Officers. The appellant has referred to a ruling of the Divisional Court passed with regard to the area in the case of Sukha Singh v. Muhammad Ismail Khan on the 16th of January 1901. It was there held that the area in the suit was not within the town. The learned Divisional Judge remarked: "No doubt, Kohat is a town qua its urban portion, but it is also a village as regards the lands beyond the town which are assessed to land revenue and form a 'Mauza.' The land in suit lies beyond and outside of the town and clearly for a portion the revenue unit forming a village called Kohat." The effect of that ruling, however, upon the present case is, in my opinion, nil. In the first place, the learned Divisional Judge was dealing with an entirely different Pre-emption Act from what which is now in force. The pre-emptive right then depended upon sections 11 and 12 of the Punjab Laws Act. Further, the ruling was passed some two years before the Settlement of the Kohat District which took place in 1903. In 1901 no such area as "kasba Kohat" or "Kohat town" was recorded in revenue papers at all. In the Settlement of 1893 Kohat town was recognised as a separate portion of "Mauza" Kohat, again and this is the most important point of all, we are not now dealing with the character of the land in 1901 but with its character in 1922. To draw an inference from that ruling would be to lose sight of the principle that an area may develop into a portion of the town by change, expansion and development. Again, a comparatively recent ruling of a Divisional Court in this Province which relates to Garhi Mawaz Khan which is one of the villages surrounding Kohat, does not appear to me to have any bearing on the present case. We are not considering whether Garhi Mawaz Khan, as a whole, or even whether Mauza Kohat as a whole is urban immoveable property, but whether the area now in suit is urban immoveable property. All the considerations mentioned above raise to my mind the strongest presumption that the area in suit has lost every character connected with the organisation of an agricultural village and has taken upon itself the entire characteristics of a town suburb.

It is noticeable that no definition of the word "town" is given in the Acts of 1905 or 1913. Mr. Ellis in his Commentary has attempted a definition. He says, "the safest definition appears to be an area inhabited by the residents not bound by any interest in agriculture that is a place which depends mainly on trade." This definition had been quoted and accepted by the

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN V. MAKHAN SINGH.

Lahore High Court in Letters Patent Appeal No. 27 of 1919 [Shankar Das v. Mathra Das (8)]. Now, with all due respect to the learned Commentator and the learned Judges of the Lahore High Court, I cannot personally agree that this definition furnishes the true test. It seems to me perfectly possible to conceive a genuine and true town which does not owe its origin or existence in any way to trade. There are, undoubtedly, in Europe and possibly also in India towns which owe their entire development and existence to educational, artistic, religious, political or even military considerations. One may take, as an instance of town created purely for political purposes, the construction and development of new Delhi, or more properly Raisina. It would probably not be denied that Raisina, when completed, will have the character of the town, but at the same time it would be difficult to suppose that it is a place which depends mainly upon trade. It appears to me that we must go somewhat deeper in estimating the ratio decidendi between a town and an agricultural village. The Law of Pre-emption may be said to be derived from three sources, Muhammadan Law, the necessities of the existence of the racial communities, and public and private convenience. There is also no doubt that the framers of the Acts of 1905 and 1913 were not guided purely by the principles of pre-emption to be discovered from Muhammadan Law, or from archaic custom, but also by consideration of public policy and convenience as they existed at the time when those Acts were passed. Now, it is very easy to realise that one of the main reasons for the acceptance of a pre-emptive right is the vital necessity felt by every community, when it first becomes homogeneous, to preserve to itself its essential homogeneity. To allow landed estate to pass into the hands of strangers is not only to deprive the community of the valuable asset in which its communal right has not been entirely abandoned, but also to entail the dissolution of its internal organisation by the engrafting of strangers upon the common body. Such a necessity is predominant in the case of trans-frontier Pathans outside the strict limits of British India, who are still governed purely by Tribal Law and who are in a continual state of warfare with their neighbours which makes the preservations of their essentially homogeneous character a matter of life and death. But the same considerations even now prevail, though to a limited extent, among tribes actually domiciled within British territory and no longer subject to Tribal Law. The necessity is still felt among them for the rigid exclusion of strangers from among the proprietary and governing body of the tribe. The same consideration may be said to exist, though in a still more limited degree, among nearly all agricultural communities in the North of India. It is also easy to realise how important was the recognition of this principle among the communities for whom the Law of Islam was originally framed in view of their social, religious and military organization. For all these reasons the first right of pre-emption in the case of agricultural land or of the sites of agricultural villages accrues primarily to the relatives of the original owner and after them to other members of the proprietary body. On the other hand, pre-emption in towns, though the principles may have originally been evolved from Muhammadan Law, depends at the present time purely on the consideration of public and private decency and convenience. Here it is not relationship but contiguity which is of prime importance. Apart from the origin of the custom, it is tolerably clear that the framers of the modern Pre-emption Acts were primarily guided by considerations of the kind which I have just enumerated. If the above view of the Law of Pre-emption is kept in mind, I think we can arrive at a truer test for determining whether any specified area is to be considered as part of town or part of a village. The test to be applied is, whether such an area has retained any of its original characteristics which would be consistent with the organisation of a society to whom the principles of pre-emption in agricultural communities would apply, or whether, on the other hand, it is one to which the principles of town pre-emption are clearly applicable. There cannot, in my opinion, be any doubt in the present case. I have already shown that the area in suit has all the characteristics of the town property. It is used purely for the purposes of trade, it is subject to Municipal taxation and it enjoys all the conveniences, privileges and disabilities, which attach to town property. Its system of lighting, sanitation and restrictions upon new buildings is that which obtains in the town of Kohat. By no stretch of imagination can it be said to have retained any of those characteristics which attached to land owned by any agricultural body, and over the rights of which an agricultural community is interested in its capacity of a homogeneous community. I have no hesitation, therefore, in agreeing with the view taken by the Trial Court that the land in suit is essentially urban immoveable property within the meaning of section 3 (3) of the Pre-emption Act.

ROOP CHAND V. GOKAL CHAND.

On the above finding the question as to whether, if the area in suit is not within the limits of a town, it would nevertheless be property excluded from the definition of village immoveable property and would, therefore, not be subject to pre-emption, in any case, does not arise. I may remark, however, on this subject that there has been a certain conflict of view as to the meaning of the limits of "village sites" in the Punjab. The view, however, would appear to have been ultimately accepted that buildings which are not included in the original village site as demarcated by what is known as the "lallukhr" in Revenue Records are not immoveable property within the limits of village sites. This view was taken by my predecessor in this Court in the case Mia Pir Muhammad v. Abdul Ghani, Civil Revision No. 72 of 1915, which related to certain water-mills. The same view had been taken in Civil Revision No. 48 of 1914. I may remark, however, that it would be extremely difficult to apply the principles there adopted to all villages in the North-Western Frontier Province. It has been pointed out, for instance, that in the Hazara District the residential houses of a village community are often scattered about over a number of hills, and that it would be quite impossible to define any particular area as the village site. I need not, however, enlarge further upon this question, as it is one, in the present case, of purely academic importance.

I do not consider it necessary now to adjudicate upon any other question which arises in the present suit. It has been admitted that if the property in suit is urban immoveable property, and the suit for pre-emption cannot succeed, I, therefore, uphold the dismissal of the suit by the Trial Court and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K. & N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION NO. 28
OF 1923.

February 10, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice.

In re, PANDIT ROOP CHAND AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

GOKAL CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 22, 23—Transfer of case—Jurisdiction of Court—
Convenience of parties.*

In sections 22 and 23 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Legislature has left it to the unfettered discretion of the Court to determine upon the circumstances of each case whether or not the venue should be changed from the place where the plaintiff has laid it, and has wisely refrained from attempting to crystallise this discretion into a definite formula. [p. 861, col. 1.]

The jurisdiction conferred upon the Court by these sections is, however, of an exceptional character and should be exercised very cautiously and only when a clear cause has been shown. [p. 861, col. 2.]

The cardinal principle to be observed in such cases is, that the plaintiff, as the arbiter litis, has a right to choose his forum and that a Court should be exceedingly reluctant to interfere with this right. [p. 861, col. 2.]

The mere circumstance that the defendant's convenience would be promoted by the transfer cannot be regarded as an adequate ground for depriving the plaintiff of his right to file his suit in any Court allowed by law; but if the defendant establishes a manifest preponderance of convenience in his favour, the Court would be justified in granting his prayer. [p. 861, col. 2.]

Application under sections 22 and 23, Civil Procedure Code, for transfer of the case from the Court of the Senior Sub-Judge, Ambala, to some Court in the District of Saharanpur.

Pandit Sheo Narain, R. B., for the Petitioners.

ROOP CHAND V. GOKAL CHAND.

Lala Manohar Lal, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

Lala Jagan Nath, for Respondent No. 3.

ORDER.—On the 26th June 1913, the parties entered into a contract at Jagadhari, in the Ambala District, for the purpose of carrying on timber business in partnership. It is common ground that the plaintiffs, who reside at Jagadhari, were to finance the business, and that it was to be managed by the defendants, who belong to Kankhal in the Saharanpur District. The defendants also undertook to keep the accounts of the partnership and to submit a weekly statement thereof to the plaintiffs at Jagadhari.

It appears that for nearly nine years the parties worked together amicably, but they have now fallen out. The plaintiffs have consequently brought an action in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Ambala for the dissolution of the partnership and the rendition of accounts; but the defendants, while admitting the jurisdiction of the Ambala Court to try the action, contend that the balance of convenience is in favour of the venue being changed to Saharanpur. They have accordingly made the present application under section 22, read with section 23(3), of the Civil Procedure Code, asking this Court to determine that the suit shall proceed, not in the Ambala Court, but in a Court of competent jurisdiction at Saharanpur.

Now, a comparison of section 22 of the present Civil Procedure Code with section 20 of the Code of 1882 makes it clear that, while the latter required that the Court must be satisfied that justice was more likely to be done by the suit being instituted in some other Court before it interfered with the right of the plaintiff to choose his forum, no such provision is to be found in the present Code. The Legislature has left it to the unfettered discretion of the Court to determine upon the circumstances of each case whether or not the venue should be changed from the place where the plaintiff has laid it, and it has wisely refrained from attempting to crystallise this discretion into a definite formula. Though there is no statutory provision governing the jurisdiction of the Court in a matter of this kind, there are certain principles which are recognized by the English Courts as well as the Indian Courts. Now, the cardinal principle, the soundness of which is beyond dispute, is that the plaintiff as the arbiter liti has a right to choose his forum, and that the Court is exceedingly reluctant to interfere with this right. The jurisdiction conferred upon the Court is of an exceptional character and should be exercised very cautiously and only when a clear cause has been shown. I am not prepared to accede to the proposition that the mere circumstance that the defendant's convenience would be promoted by the transfer should be regarded as an adequate ground for depriving the plaintiff of his right to file his suit in any Court allowed by law; but I recognize that, if the defendant establishes a manifest preponderance of convenience in his favour, the Court would be justified in granting his prayer.

Coming now to the substance of this case, I find that there is no question here of the plaintiffs abusing the process of the Court or harassing the defendants. The application rests, as stated above, solely upon the ground of convenience, and I do not think that the applicants have succeeded in making out a clear case of preponderance of convenience such as would justify an exercise of my discretionary jurisdiction. It would, no doubt, be more convenient for the defendants to have the action tried at Saharanpur. They reside in that district and probably a large number of their witnesses belong to various places in that district and in the neighbouring districts where the major portion of the business was transacted. The plaintiffs, on the other hand, reside in the Ambala District and a large portion, if not the whole, of their evidence is only obtainable there. But the determining factor, in my opinion, is that the contract of partnership was admittedly entered into at the plaintiffs' place of residence, and it was there that the defendants were required to submit an account of the business carried on by them. It is to be observed that the action brought by the plaintiffs requires the defendants merely to discharge, in the presence of the Court, the duty which they had undertaken to perform outside the Court.

The nature of the action, moreover, shows that the determination of the issues arising between the parties will depend mainly upon documentary evidence, and that oral evidence will play only a subsidiary part. The defendants will probably be required to produce the books of the partnership, but it would not add materially to their inconvenience if they take them to Ambala instead of Saharanpur.

BHAU DAJI KHADE v. PATLU MALU SABLE.

I have bestowed my careful consideration upon the case, but I am not prepared to hold that the defendants have shown any sufficient cause for depriving the plaintiffs of the right which the law undoubtedly confers upon them. I must, therefore, dismiss the application with costs.

Z. K.

*Application dismissed.BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL, APPEAL No. 673 OF 1921.

August 25, 1922.

Present:—Sir Mallubhai Shah, Kt.,
Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice
Crump.

BHAU DAJI KHADE—PLAINTIFF
—APPELLANT

*versusPATLU MALU SABLE AND OTHERS—*DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II,
r. 2—Mortgage of three plots of land—Suit to redeem two plots—Consent decree—Subsequent suit to redeem third plot, whether maintainable.*

P. mortgaged three plots of land to D. He brought a suit to redeem two of the plots only and this resulted in a consent decree giving him possession on payment of a certain sum. He then brought a suit to recover possession of the third plot.

Held, that under O. II, r. 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure, the suit was not maintainable as by omitting to sue in respect of the third plot in the first suit the plaintiff must be deemed to have relinquished his claim to it. [p. 863, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decision of the Assistant Judge, Satara, in Appeal No. 184 of 1920, confirming a decree passed by the Second Class Subordinate Judge at Dahiwadi, in Civil Suit No. 146 of 1919.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. N. Walavalkar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the plaintiff sues to recover possession of one Survey Number which, along with two other Survey Numbers, was mortgaged in 1869 to the defendants' ancestor. In 1911 the present plaintiff, as purchaser of the equity of redemption, sued to redeem the mortgage of 1869. He mentioned only two Survey Numbers in that suit omitting the Survey Number now in suit. In that suit a compromise decree was passed as a result of which, on payment of a sum of Rs. 75, he was to recover possession of the two Survey Numbers mentioned in that suit. He recovered possession of these two lands after paying the amount.

He has now filed the present suit on July 10, 1919, to recover possession of the remaining land alleging that the defendants were in wrongful possession of that Survey Number. Several issues were raised in the Trial Court, but on the facts as stated above the Trial Court dismissed the suit holding that the land in suit had not been redeemed, and that the defendant's possession, therefore, was not wrongful.

The learned Assistant Judge in appeal confirmed the decree of the Trial Court on the ground that the land now in suit not having been included in the previous suit the plaintiff's claim could not be allowed.

In the appeal before us, it is urged by Mr. Shingne that after the mortgage-amount fixed under the consent decree was paid by his client, the possession of this property by the defendants became wrongful, as the mortgage was satisfied. He is, therefore, entitled, he contends, to recover possession of the property. It seems to us that the contention is unsound. In the first place, it is difficult to say that when the sum fixed under the decree was paid, the whole mortgage was satisfied. It is quite possible that the parties might have fixed the amount at a lower figure in view of the fact that the plaintiff had omitted to sue in respect of the land now in suit. It is difficult to hold that the possession of this Survey which was rightful under the mortgage became wrongful when the decretal amount was paid.

Apart from that, however, it seems to us that it was incumbent upon the plaintiff to sue in respect of all the lands comprised in the mortgage, if he wanted to recover possession of all the lands. His omission to include the land in suit in the redemption suit seems to be fatal to his present claim for the possession of that land. In view of the provisions of O. II, r. 2, he cannot be allowed to sue to recover possession of the land, in respect of which he must be deemed to have relinquished his claim by omitting to sue in respect of it. It is not suggested before us that the plaintiff was not aware of this land forming part of the mortgaged lands, nor is it suggested that the omission was due to any inadvertence or mistake on his part. He may have a remedy by applying to the Court which passed that decree to include that Survey Number in the decree. Whether that remedy is open to him, under the circumstances of this case or not, is a matter upon which we express no opinion. It is clear that his present claim for possession cannot be allowed according to law. We, therefore, dismiss the appeal with cost.

PARAMASIVAM PILLAI v. MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI.

W. C. A.

*Appeal dismissed.MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 314 OF 1918 AND 60 OF 1919.

August 15, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and Mr. Justice Devadoss.

IN APPEAL NO. 314 OF 1918.

S. PARAMASIVAM PILLAI—

DEFENDANT NO. 1—APPELLANT

*versus*MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI DEAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF AND REMAINING
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Minor, transaction with—Fairness of transaction—Partition—Adult co-owner, position of—Partial partition.

It is the duty of an adult person dealing with a minor through his guardian to show that the transaction is a fair one and the minor is not prejudiced in any way by any act or omission on his part. [p. 868, col. 2.]

Yeechurt Ramamurthy v. Yeechurt Ramamma, 33 Ind. Cas. 961; 30 M. L. J. 308; 3 L. W. 322, Nallappa Reddi v. Balammal, 2 M. H. C. R. 182, relied on and followed.

A Hindu co-parcener seeking to set aside a partition effected during his minority must allege and prove that the partition is unfair or prejudicial to his interests. An alienee from the guardian of a minor has to prove necessity or benefit to sustain the alienation. But the case of a co-owner who wishes to sustain a partition between himself and a minor occupies a position midway between the above two cases. [p. 868, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where in a partition between one co-owner and another minor co-owner represented by his mother, it appeared that the land allotted to the adult was twenty times the size of that allotted to the minor and was situated in a locality of growing commercial importance and the mother had not independent advice and important facts were suppressed from her knowledge:

Held, that the onus of proving that the transaction was fair or beneficial to the minor was on the co-owner and the transaction on the above facts was an unconscionable one and must be set aside. [p. 870, col. 2.]

In a partition between co-owners it is proper that each co-sharer should ordinarily be given his share in every item of property belonging to the co-owners unless the items cannot be divided either conveniently or without prejudice or without affecting their utility or commercial value. [p. 869, col. 1.]

Mahomed Ibrahim v. Haji Mahomed Ibrahim, 7 Bom. L. R. 482 at p. 485; 13 C. L. J. 322; 15 C. W. N. 552, Ashanullah v. Kall Kinkur Kur, 10 C. 675; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 453, relied on.

Appeals against the decrees of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Ramnad, at Madura, in Original Suit No. 82 of 1916 (Original Suit No. 2 of 1915 on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Ramnad.)

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Iyar (with him Messrs. K. Bhashyam Iyengar, and K. S. Ramashandra Iyar), for the Appellant.—This is a suit by the plaintiff to set aside a partition entered into with the defendant co-owner by plaintiff's mother as guardian during his minority. The Sub-Judge has given plaintiff a decree.

The onus is on plaintiff to show fraud or undue influence or that the partition was grossly unfair or prejudicial to his interests. Parties were only co-sharers and not members of a joint family. Mere inequality is not enough to vitiate the partition. Gross inequality and clear pre-judice must be shown by plaintiff [Nallappa Reddi v. Balammal (1) and Yeechuri Ramamurthy v. Yeechuri Ramamma (2).]

PARAMASIVAM PILLAI v. MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI.

Further, inequality notwithstanding, if the guardian acted fairly bona fide and honestly with a due consideration of the minor's interests, the transaction must be upheld. Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (3); Mayne's Hindu Law, page 662.

Here though the extent of land allotted to defendant was 11,000 kulis as against 512 to plaintiff, the value of each share is stated to be Rs. 500. The recital has not been proved to be false.

Partition is not an alienation and principles as to burden of proof applicable to cases of alienation do not apply. Again, there is no fiduciary relationship between co-owner and the minor son of a deceased co-owner. [Siddick Hajee Sumar Sait v. Mahomed Hussain Sait (4)] (analogous case of partners). There is no duty cast on the defendant to look to plaintiff's interests provided there is no over-reaching, concealment or fraud. Every co-owner is entitled to demand partition and is not bound to wait till the majority of another. Right to partition is an ordinary incident of co-ownership.

Mr. T. Rangachariar (with him Messrs. N. Srinivasa Charya and V. N. Venkatavardachari), for the Respondents—Unlike in Hindu Law, every co-owner is entitled to his definite specific share in every item of joint property.

It is impossible to predicate in a Mitakshara joint Hindu family what share each member has; but in a Dayabhaga family or amongst co-heirs, every co-owner is entitled to his share in every item.

It is on this principle that it has been held that whereas an alienee from a Mitakshara co-parcener of an undivided share has only an inchoate right to work out his equity in a partition suit, an alienee from a co-heir of an undivided share is entitled to his share in the property claimed.

See section 44, Transfer of Property Act; Ashanullah v. Kali Kinkur Kur (5), Mahomed Ibrahim v. Haji Mahomed Ibrahim (6), Debendra Nath Bhattacharjee v. Hari Das Bhattacharjee (7).

Thus, it is also a partial partition by a co-owner is not bad. Moideensa Rowthen v. Mahammad Kasim Rowthen (8).

This being the right of a co-owner, a partition amongst co-owners is really the alienation or transfer by one co-owner to the other of his interest in one item in lieu to the other co-owner surrendering his right in some other property.

A partition between one co-owner and another is thus in effect an alienation. Here, we have an alienation by a guardian in favour of the defendant and the principles as to alienation apply to the present case.

Further, I come within the exception recognised in Yeechuri Ramamurthy v. Yeechuri Ramamma (2). That case is a joint Hindu family case and the actual decision can thus have no bearing on the point here. But every person who deals with a guardian has to prove fairness of the transaction before it can be sustained against a minor. See also Keramutulla Miah v. Keramutulla Meah (9).

Assuming the onus is on plaintiff, it has been shifted to the defendant when it is apparent, on the face of the transaction, that 11,000 kulis were allotted to defendant and only 512 to plaintiff. The inequality in extent and presumably of value is so gross and patent that the defendant is bound to explain and cannot rely merely on some onus of proof. Yeechuri Ramamurthy v. Yeechuri Ramamma (2) and Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (3).

The evidence in the case also shows that the lands allotted to defendant were in a commercial locality of growing importance and rising value. The defendant suppressed real facts from guardian who relied on him and had no independent advice. The defendant's conduct has been fraudulent and the minor

(1) 2 M. H. C. R. 182.

(2) 33 Ind. Cas. 961; 30 M. L. J. 368; 3 L. W. 322.

(3) 30 C. 738 at p. 752; 7 C. W. N. 578; 5 Bom. L. R. 461; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 489; 30 I. A. 139 (P. C.).

(4) 37 Ind. Cas. 728; 4 L. W. 521; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 341.

(5) 10 C. 675; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 453.

(6) 7 Bom. L. R. 482 at p. 485.

(7) 7 Ind. Cas. 844; 13 C. L. J. 322; 15 C. W. N. 552.

(8) 28 Ind. Cas. 895.

(9) 49 Ind. Cas. 886; 23 C. W. N. 118 at p. 123.

PARAMASIVAM PILLAI v. MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI.

is not bound by an obviously unjust and pre-judicial transaction.

JUDGMENT.

Devadoss, J.—The first defendant is the appellant in Appeal No. 314 of 1918. The suit is by one Meenakshi Sundaram Pillai for a division of the plaint property which belonged to him and to the first defendant or for the value of his share, should the Court consider that it was inequitable that he should get possession of a moiety of the plaint land. The main allegations in the plaint are, that plaintiff's father Chellaperumal Pillai was a First Grade Pleader at Sattur; that he purchased the plaint land in 1900 along with the first defendant under Exhibit D; that his father died in 1902; that in 1904 when the plaintiff was a minor, the 1st defendant entered into an arrangement with his mother as evidenced by Exhibit A, whereby the plaint plot was allotted to the first defendant and another plot which belonged in common to his father and the first defendant was allotted to him for his share; that he attained majority on 3rd January 1914 and that the plaint plot was worth much more than Rs. 500 the value given in Exhibit A; that he was entitled to be given a moiety of the plaint site as there was no necessity for the execution of Exhibit A by his guardian, and that it was not binding on him. The first defendant pleaded among other things that the arrangement evidenced by Exhibit A was a bona fide arrangement, that the plaint plot was not worth more than five hundred rupees in 1904; that the plot allotted to the plaintiff was the more valuable of the two as it was situated opposite to the District Munsif's Court-house and other public buildings; that he did not act in any way unfairly to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff's guardian had "the very competent, independent and absolutely disinterested advice of the plaintiff's father's best and trusted friend;" that the arrangement was beneficial to the plaintiff and that he was not entitled to claim a moiety of the plaint land, and that the suit was barred by limitation. The other defendants are aliens from the first defendant who have built houses on the plaint land. They adopted the defence of the first defendant and added that in any event the plaintiff was not entitled to possession of the plaint land; that they had invested large sums of money in erecting houses, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to ask that they should be pulled down and removed.

The Temporary Subordinate Judge, Ramnad, held that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by limitation; that the arrangement evidenced by Exhibit A was without any necessity; that the first defendant did not act bona fide and that the other defendants were not bona fide purchasers for value, and gave a decree to the plaintiff for a sum of Rs. 16,500 being the value of a half share of the plaint property. Against this decree the first defendant has preferred Appeal No. 314 of 1918. The other defendants have preferred Appeal No. 60 of 1919.

It is unnecessary to consider Appeal No. 60 of 1919 as the appellants did not bring the legal representatives of the first respondent on record within the time allowed by law. The plaintiff who was first respondent died in April 1921 and the application of the Vakīl at the time of the hearing of the appeal to be allowed to bring on record the legal representatives of the plaintiff-respondent cannot be entertained after the lapse of one year and three months. The decree of the Subordinate Judge will stand so far as the appellants in Appeal No. 60 of 1919 are concerned. Appeal No. 60 is dismissed.

Appeal No. 314 of 1918 was argued at great length and the main contention for the appellant was that Exhibit A, being an ordinary partition arrangement unless the plaintiff could show that it was brought about by fraud, or any improper act on the part of the first defendant, it could not be set aside, and that the Subordinate Judge had wrongly thrown the onus of proving the necessity for the transaction on the first defendant and that the finding of the Subordinate Judge was vitiated by his wrong view of the law as regards the onus of proof. It is necessary to see what the facts are before applying the law to the facts of the case. The admitted facts are that the plaintiff's father Chellaperumal Pillai was a well-known First Grade Pleader in Sattur and acquired considerable property. He purchased the plaint property in 1900 under Exhibit D for Rs. 500 in his name as well as in that of the first defendant. He died in 1902 leaving the plaintiff and another son aged about 3 and his wife aged about 23 or 24 years. His wife was his own sister's daughter and after his death his affairs were managed by his widow and sister. In his Will he appointed four persons to assist the widow in the management of his estate one of whom is defendants' witness No. 1. Another piece of land consisting of 4 plots situated opposite to the present District Munsif's Court-house was purchased for Rs. 500 in the joint names of first defendant and Chellaperumal Pillai. Though the document evidencing the purchase of the latter four plots has not been exhibited, yet it can be fairly held to have been proved that it was purchased in 1897 for Rs. 500. It is also well-known that Sattur is a place of commercial importance. There are several Cotton Mills and a number of Factories. The plaint site is near the road leading to the Railway Station, one of the principal thoroughfares of the town. The extent of the plaint land is 11,000 kulis. The extent of the other plot opposite to the District Munsif's Court-house is 512 kulis. The plaintiff was a minor of about seven years of age and his mother a young Hindu widow at the time of Exhibit A. There is no evidence that there was any need for partition in 1904. The plaintiff's father had acquired before 1900 two plots of land called Marakadai or Timber depot land adjoining the road to the Railway Station which could connect the plaint land with the road. There was no access from the plaint land to any of the public roads in 1904 and, subsequent to the date of Exhibit A, the first defendant bought the plots to the south and north of the plaint land in order to get access to the road on either sides by Exhibits III and H. There is also evidence to show that from 1897 people began to build near and about the plaint land. There is no evidence, that the plaintiff's mother consulted any independent person with regard to the division of the plaint land excepting defendants' witness No. 1 about whose evidence I shall have to say something later on.

PARAMASIVAM PILLAI V. MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI.

On these facts the question is, whether the onus which was primarily on the plaintiff to show, that the transaction was not one for his benefit has really shifted to the first defendant. The plaintiff has, no doubt, to make out a case before he could ask for a decree in his favour. When it is admitted that the plaintiff was a minor and that his mother was a young widow and there were no near male relations, who could give independent advice to her; when it is remembered that the first defendant knew all about this property from the very beginning, and when it is also remembered that defendants' witness No. 1 who was supposed to give disinterested advice acted, to say the least, most carelessly, for he says in his evidence, "I did not look into the extent as to how many kulis it was. I did not then question any of them for what sum the land opposite to the Court-house has been bought and how much had been spent on it," and when we find a great disparity in extent between the extent of the plaint land, and that of the land opposite to the Court-house and when there is no ostensible reason for the division except the wish of the first defendant, the onus shifts and it is for the defendant to make out that the transaction was a fair one and not an unconscionable one. The plaintiff's father had acquired, as I said above; the timber depot land adjoining the road, and that would have given access to the plaint land from the road. When he acquired such a large plot as the plaint one measuring over two acres and when it is proved that houses were beginning to spring up from 1897 in or about the locality, one cannot but come to the conclusion that the plaintiff's father knew that the land would become valuable as a house-site in the course of a few years, that it would appreciate very much in value and that considerable profit would accrue by parcelling it out and selling the parcels to different people. That such an idea was also in the mind of the first defendant could be inferred from the fact that, soon after the purchase under Exhibit D, he began to purchase land adjoining the plaint land, vide Exhibits I and II. When the circumstances were such that the first defendant must have known that in the course of a few years the land would become very valuable as house-sites, it was most unfair on his part to take the whole of the plaint land for his share and give the plaintiff a small plot which, according to him, was worth Rs. 500.

PARAMASIVAM PILLAI v. MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI:

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Iyer very strenuously contended, that all we have to look to, is the value of the two plots on the date of Exhibit A in order to decide whether the transaction was a fair one or an unfair one. If the two plots were in the same locality and the environments were the same, his argument might be considered tenable. But when it is shown that one plot was more than 20 times the size of the other, and when it is remembered, that in a growing town of commercial importance open land inside the town may sooner or later become valuable as house-sites, it is impossible to resist the conclusion that the first defendant induced the plaintiff's mother and her advisers to take the small plot near the public buildings and got for himself a large plot likely to rise in value in a short time. In this connection, we have to see whether the plaintiff's mother had not only really disinterested, but sound advice. The defendants' 1st witness Mr. Viswasa Nadar is a respectable Second Grade Pleader, who is also the Government Pleader of Sattur. But a reading of his evidence shows that either he was careless of the interests of his friend's son or paid no attention to the contents of the document to which he put his signature as attesting witness. He does not seem to have made any enquiry as regards the extent of the plaintiff land or its value on the date of Exhibit A. He made no enquiries as to the value of the plot opposite the Court-house or the superstructure thereon, and his statement that some pariahs offered Rs. 3 to 5 per kuli for a portion of the plot for a pathway without taking the trouble to find out how much he could realise by such sale is not of much value. As a Pleader he ought to have known that a minor's property could not be parted with unless some advantage was likely to accrue to him by such transaction; and his utter indifference as to what really happened to the minor's property shows that, however honest his intention might have been, his conduct was wholly against the interests of the minor. He, as a Vakil, ought to have advised the mother not to part with an extensive property which was likely to become valuable. He, as a local resident, must have known the state of things not far from his own house. That houses were beginning to spring up from 1897 about the plaintiff land, he must have been aware of, as it is near the road going to the Railway Station. That the plaintiff site was attracting the attention of would-be buyers must have been known to him, and his not advising the plaintiff's mother not to part with the whole of the plaintiff site, I can only attribute it to sheer indifference and carelessness. He could very well have advised the mother to take a half share of the plaintiff property as well as a half share of the property opposite to the Court-house. Defendants' 2nd witness is an old retired First Grade Pleader of Sattur. His evidence that Chellaperumal Pillai was anxious to build an office or bungalow opposite to the District Munsif's Court-house cannot have any influence in deciding whether the transaction evidenced by Exhibit A was beneficial to the minor or not, because that wish had ceased with his death and no body in his senses could have imagined that the plaintiff, a young boy of seven years of age, was going to become a Vakil and was going to build an office opposite the Court-house. There is some inconsistency in the evidence of defendants' witness No. 1 when he says that the District Judge of Tinnevely, Mr. Phillips, inspected the site for a Court-house in 1897. It is well-known that Mr. Phillips, now Phillips J., was District Judge of Tinnevely from 1903 to 1906 and from the records called for from the office, it is found that the Government placed funds at the disposal of the D. P. W. for building a Court-house only in 1902. So it cannot be said to have been satisfactorily made out that Chellaperumal Pillai expected in 1900 that a Court-house was going to be built about 1905-1906 and he had an intention of building an office in front of the Court-house which did not exist before 1905. It may be that Chellaperumal Pillai had an idea of building an office on that road. But that is no ground for depriving the plaintiff of a very valuable house-site of considerable extent.

Mr. Ramachandra Iyer's main conten-

PARAMASIVAM PILLAI v. MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI.

tion is that Exhibit A was a partition arrangement and that a partition arrangement, unless it was brought about by fraud, or undue influence, ought to be upheld and he relies on Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (3). No doubt, in a joint Hindu family partition at some time or other is likely to take place and the mere existence of minors cannot prevent a partition taking place. But it is always open to a minor member to show that the partition was not fair. Lord Davey delivering the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council observes at page 752: "There is no doubt that a valid agreement for partition may be made during the minority of one or more of the co-parceners. That seems to follow from the admitted right of one co-parcener to claim a partition; and (as has been said) if an agreement for partition could not be made binding on minors, a partition could hardly ever take place. No doubt, if the partition was unfair or prejudicial to the minor's interests, he might, on attaining his majority, by proper proceedings, set it aside so far as regards himself." This is the principle which governs partitions in Hindu joint families—it is open to a minor member to show that a partition was unfair or prejudicial to the minor's interests. The case of a co-owner claiming a division with a minor stands on a slightly different footing. In a joint Hindu family there may be a number of members and it may not be in the interests of the family to keep them joint. But in the case of a co-owner who is only interested along with a minor in one or more items of property, when division is effected, such division must be a fair one and not prejudicial to the interests of the minor. The case of an alienation by a minor's guardian stands on a different footing. In order to justify the alienation of a minor's property the tests laid down in Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Babooee Munraj Koonweree (10) should be satisfied—the actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted or the benefit to be conferred. But the case of a co-owner asking for a division of property belonging to himself and a minor occupies a position midway between that of partition in a joint family and that of alienation by the guardian of a minor. Whenever an adult person deals with a minor through the minor's guardian, it is his duty to see that the transaction is a fair one and that the minor is not prejudiced in any way by any act or omission on his part. Reliance was also placed by the appellant on Yeechuri Ramamurthy v. Yeechuri Ramamma (2), as supporting the contention of the appellant. Srinivasa Ayyangar, J., in delivering the judgment of the Court observed at page 311* "Partition amongst the members of the family is a family arrangement and is generally resorted to in order to keep peace in the family or preserve the family properties; and the principles applicable to family settlements are applicable to partitions among the members of a family. There must, of course, be equal knowledge on the part of the members and there must not be any overreaching or fraud. . . . In some cases the very nature of the transaction or the method of division may show that it was unfair or prejudicial to the interests of the minor, and in such cases the burden which was on the plaintiff in the first instance may be shifted at once. The burden may also be shifted in cases where the facts are specially in the knowledge of a particular party (See section 106 of the Evidence Act)." This case instead of supporting the appellant's contention is against it. The ruling in Nallappa Reddi v. Balammal (1) was strongly pressed upon our attention by the appellant; there a minor on attaining majority sought to set aside a partition in which he was represented by his mother as guardian. The learned Judges say: "In this case the plaintiff and his brothers appear to have been represented in good faith by their mother and natural guardian, and there is nothing to indicate fraud, or that any undue advantage was taken of the plaintiff's minority, or of the sex of their mother." It appears that the plaintiff's branch in that case obtained only one muttah as its share while four muttahs were allotted to the other branch, and it was contended that the division

(1.) 6 M. L. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81n.; Seevastre 253n.; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 B. R. 1471 was unequal on the face of it. Dealing with this contention the learned Judges observe, "there is no evidence of the relative value of these five muttaks" and in the concluding portion of the judgment says that "no such gross inequality has been shown, as would justify us in setting aside the division of 1837 on this ground."

*Page of 30 M. L. J.—[Ed.]

PARAMASIVAM PILLAI v. MINAKSHISUNDARAM PILLAI.

It was urged by Mr. T. Rangachariar for the first respondent's legal representative that a tenant-in-common or a co-owner was entitled to be given his share in every item of the property belonging to himself and other co-owners and he relied upon Debendra Nath Bhattacharjee v. Hari Das Bhattacharjee (7); Ashaniullah v. Kali Kinkur Kur (5); Mahomed Ibrahim v. Haji Mahomed Ibrahim (6) and Moideensa Rowthen v. Mhammad Kasim Rowthen (8). It is no doubt proper that, wherever practicable, co-owners should be given a share in each item of property but this doctrine should not be too strictly applied by Courts. Where property cannot be divided conveniently or where division into small portions would affect the value of the property prejudicially it is inequitable that Courts should grant to the various members, property which according to his estimate would be equal in value, but where property could be divided without in any way affecting its utility or its commercial value into a number of plots, it is proper that each co-sharer should have a slice of it according to his share. In India the feeling against parting with immoveable property is strong and Courts should give due regard to it in effecting division of family or ancestral property. The principles governing cases of a partition in joint Hindu families cannot apply to cases of co-owners as is seen from Moideensa Rowthen v. Mahammad Kasim Rowthen (8), where Ayling and Tyabjee, JJ., observed at page 896: "It is, therefore, futile to describe a suit in which one heir claims to receive his share of the property of the deceased from another heir as a suit for partial partition and to say that, therefore, the suit is not maintainable. Both the terminology and the principles of the Hindu Law are in such a case inapplicable. This point must be kept distinct from the questions that may arise when an heir claims his share of the property of the deceased, and when he in reality ought to institute a suit for administration he asks for what is styled 'partial partition.' In such a case it would be a question for the Court whether in order to avoid multiplicity of suits the plea of any defendants ought not to be given effect to in order that the whole estate of the deceased should be administered and in due administration should be partitioned for once. But the question cannot permit of a hard and fast rule to govern all circumstances."

It is clear, therefore, that a co-owner can bring a suit for division of a particular item of property and any subsequent suit for division of other items would not ordinarily be barred. It is unnecessary to consider the contention of the respondent that a person effecting a division of property with a minor is an alienee of the property and, therefore, the necessity for it and the advantage to be gained by it should in all cases be proved by the party dealing with the minor. Each case must depend upon its circumstances. The learned Subordinate Judge, no doubt, considered that it was the duty of the first defendant to prove the necessity for the division in 1904 and the advantage to be gained by the plaintiff thereby. That is not a correct view of the law. All that he had to show was that it was a fair transaction and the guardian acting on behalf of the plaintiff had all the information which he himself could have had if he had taken the trouble to get it.

The decision reported in Keramutulla Miah v. Keramutulla Meah (9) may seem to support the respondent's contention but a careful reading of it would show that it cannot support such a wide proposition.

Justice Newbould in delivering the judgment of the Court observed at page 123*: "There is nothing in the doctrine of family arrangements opposed to the general principle, that, when it is sought to bind a minor by an agreement entered into on his behalf, it must be shown that the agreement was for the benefit of the minor. If improper advantage has been taken of the minor's position, a family arrangement can be set aside on the ground much as there is no allegation that this settlement was not come to after careful scrutiny of the accounts, there is no reason to doubt that this sum did not represent the actual amount due to the minor on the date of the settlement."

* Page 23 C. W. N.—[Ed.].

MOHAMMAD USMAN KHAN V. ATA MOHY-UD-DIN.

The next contention urged by Mr. Ramachandra Ayyar was that no preliminary decree was passed. This can be no objection to the decree as it stands, as it gives the plaintiff only the value of his share. There is no direction to divide the plaint property by metes and bounds. The plaintiff very rightly gave up his claim to a moiety of the plaint property and was content to receive its market-value, inasmuch as a number of people, about 80, had built houses on the plaint land. Mr. Ramchandra Aiyar further contended that the plot opposite the District Munsif's Court-house was not brought into the hotchpot. The learned Subordinate Judge directed that the plaint should be amended by including it. Evidently, owing to some oversight, it was not included. The plaintiff's legal representative does not object to the first defendant getting his share of it. In respect of that there will be a preliminary decree for division by metes and bounds.

Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar further objected to his client being made responsible for the whole of the decree amount as he had realised by sale of the plaint property a much smaller amount. I think there is some force in this contention. The plaintiff could have insisted upon his getting possession of the plaint property and could also have insisted upon defendants other than the first defendant removing their superstructures because the transaction under Exhibit A was wholly void so far as he was concerned. But the plaintiff was well advised in not asking that the land should be vacated by the defendants and it is in the interests of the defendants that a money-decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. The land has considerably risen in value since the purchase by the various defendants on account of their having built houses on the plots purchased by them. The Subordinate Judge has found that the alienees from 1st defendant were not bona fide purchasers for value. I think the Court could very well exercise its discretion in the circumstances by directing the defendants other than the 1st defendant to bear a proportionate share of the value of the property after deducting the actual amount paid by them. In other words, the 1st defendant is liable as between himself and the other defendants only to the extent of the amounts received by him as the price of plots sold to them. The plaintiff could execute his decree against the 1st defendant and other defendants for the whole amount. But the other defendants could claim as contribution from the first defendant amounts not exceeding the amounts actually paid by them for buying the property. A note should be made in the decree to this effect. The question of limitation was not pressed by Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar. He did not challenge the finding of the lower Court on the point.

Subject to the modification as regards the other plot, the appeal is dismissed with costs of the first respondent's legal representative.

Mr. Rangachari pressed his Memorandum of Objections and claimed a higher amount than that allowed by the Subordinate Judge. There is no clear evidence that the value of the plaint land was anything more than that estimated by the Subordinate Judge. The evidence of defendants' witness No. 4 is not at all satisfactory; and the few documents, such as Exhibits XIV (a) and XXIX, do not throw any light on the actual value of the plaint land on the date of the plaint. I see no reason to disturb the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge as regards valuation. In the result, the Memorandum of Objections is dismissed with costs.

Spencer, J.—I agree.

V. N. V.

N. H.

Appeals dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1665 OF 1919.
July 21, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway and
Mr. Justice Brasher.

MOHAMMAD USMAN KHAN—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

ATA MOHY-UD-DIN AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—Necessity—Money borrowed

MOHAMMAD USMAN KHAN v. ATA HOHY-UD-DIN.

for trade—Antecedent debt—Mortgage, prior.

Money borrowed for the purposes of trade is not taken for necessity. An alienation, therefore, by an agriculturist of ancestral land for such purposes would not be justified.

Where two mortgages, executed within a few days of each other in favour of the same mortgagee, form practically one transaction, the mortgage prior in date cannot be considered as an antecedent debt.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 21st July 1919, reversing that of the Sub-Judge, Jullundur, dated the 10th June 1915.

Mr. Hargopal, for the Appellant.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs sue to recover possession of certain land which had been mortgaged by their deceased father, on the ground that the mortgages were without consideration and necessity. The defendants pleaded, inter alia, that the plaintiffs, who are Maliks of Jullundur, were governed by Muhammadan Law and not by the ordinary agricultural custom. The first Court held that the plaintiffs were governed by custom, and upheld the mortgage in part. Both parties appealed, and the District Judge, while agreeing with the first Court that the plaintiffs were governed by custom, held that they were debarred from suing by reason of the delay in filing the suit. The plaintiffs then appealed to this Court with the result that the order of the District Judge was set aside, and the case was remanded under O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code, for a fresh decision. The District Judge who then heard the appeal, considered that the only point which remained for decision was to which extent consideration and necessity for the mortgages had been proved. He modified the original decree so as to render the plaintiffs liable for the payment of Rs. 1,154 instead of Rs. 1,046-8-0. The defendant has again appealed to this Court, and his Counsel urges that after the order of remand was passed, the whole case had to be decided again by the lower Appellate Court, and that the District Judge was in error in not giving any decision as to whether the plaintiffs were governed by custom or Muhammadan Law. This contention appears to us to be correct but, at the same time, the admission contained in the grounds of appeal render a remand unnecessary. The second and third grounds clearly mean that though Maliks are in general governed by the ordinary agricultural custom, they as dwellers in towns have a right to alienate ancestral property for purposes which would not constitute legal necessity in the case of an ordinary agriculturist living in a village. The appeal really relates to an item of Rs. 265 out of the consideration for the first mortgage, and the whole of the consideration (Rs. 1,300) for the third mortgage, which the District Judge has held not to be binding on the plaintiffs because the money was taken for the purpose of trade.

Having regard to the grounds of appeal, it is clear that the appellant cannot now maintain that the plaintiffs are governed by Muhammadan Law, and that the only ground on which he can be heard is whether the items referred to above were taken for necessity.

The consideration (Rs. 1,300) for the third mortgage was taken by the mortgagor for trading purposes, and it has been held in Santa Singh v. Waryam Singh (1) that this would not justify an alienation of an ancestral land by an agriculturist.

Out of the money which formed the consideration for the first mortgage, Rs. 265 were taken to pay off a previous mortgage, the money due on which had also been borrowed for the purpose of trade. The previous mortgage cannot be considered as an antecedent debt because it was in favour of the same mortgagee and was effected only a few days before the mortgage in dispute. The two mortgages formed practically one transaction and we do not consider that the learned District Judge has erred in placing this item of Rs. 265 on the same footing as the money taken for the later mortgage.

The contention of the appellant is that while, in accordance with Santa Singh v. Waryam Singh (1), an alienation of ancestral land by an ordinary agriculturist for the purpose of trade is not justified, such an alienation might be sanctioned by custom when made by a resident of a town whose principal occupation is business. This contention may be perfectly correct, but we feel that we are precluded from making any investigation into the matter. What the appellant wishes to show is that a special custom at variance with the ordinary agricultural custom is followed by the community to which the plaintiffs belong. No such contention was raised in the Courts below and in the absence of a certificate a second appeal on this ground cannot be entertained.

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 361; 19 P. R. 1915; 207 P. L. R. 1914; 147 P. W. R. 1914.

RAM DAS V. RAM LAL.

We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs. The cross-objections filed by the respondents have not been pressed and they are also dismissed.

W. C. A. Appeal dismissed.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 213 OF 1922.

April 27, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Pison, J. C.

RAM DAS—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

RAM LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Revision—Interference, when justified.

A petitioner who invokes the revisional power of a High Court must come into Court with clean hands and must show that he has been unjustly treated. [p. 874, col. 1.]

A High Court will not exercise its revisional jurisdiction when the finding of the Court below has resulted in substantial justice, even where that finding has proceeded upon a wrong determination of a question of law. [p. 873, col. 2; p. 874, col. 1.]

Ghasita v. Sultan, 11 Ind. Cas. 445; 93 P. R. 1911; 151 P. W. R. 1911; 228 P. L. R. 1911, relied on.

The Judicial Commissioner will not in the exercise of his revisional jurisdiction interfere with even a wrong decision come to by an Appellate Court so long as the latter had jurisdiction to determine the question and actually did determine it, except where the wrong decision is of a vitally important description and where it cannot possibly, in the interests of justice, be allowed to stand. [p. 873, col. 2.]

Petition for revision of an order of the Divisional Judge, Derajat, dated the 11th of June 1922, reversing an order of the Munsif, First Class, Dera Ismail Khan, dated the 15th March 1922.

Mr. Jai Deva, for the Petitioner.

Lala Mathra Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—There is only one point upon which the revision could be possibly entertained by this Court, and that is upon the finding of the Divisional Judge that the agreement of August 1917 (the recorded date was the 10th of Bhadon 1974) was, though unregistered, admissible in evidence. Now, even assuming that I disagreed with the finding of the learned Divisional Judge on this point that fact could not constitute a valid ground for revision. I should follow the ruling of this Court published as Judicial Record No. 15, which is to the effect that the Judicial Commissioner will not interfere with even a wrong decision come to by an Appellate Court so long as the latter had jurisdiction to determine the question actually did determine it. It may be admitted that certain cases in which a wrong decision of law was involved, might be taken up on the revisional side when the wrong decision in question was of a vitally important description and where it could not possibly, in the interests of justice, be allowed to stand. The present case presents no feature of this nature. It may be admitted that the liability of the document in question to registration is, to a certain extent, a contentious one and that there are arguments of some force for considering it so liable. On the other hand, the document itself created no lease, the position of lessor and lessee being already established by a previous instrument, and there is a great deal to be said for the view adopted by the learned Divisional Judge. I can see, therefore, not the slightest reason why I should take up this question at all upon the revisional side. There is a further reason in the present case which should make me slow to interfere on revision. Ghasita v. Sultan (1) is a good authority for the proposition that a High Court will not exercise its revisional jurisdiction when the finding of the Court below has resulted in substantial justice, even where that finding has proceeded upon a wrong determination of a question of law. In the case referred to the learned Judges of the Punjab Chief Court went so far as to admit that the finding of the Court below that the suit was within time was wrong and that it should have been held time-barred. They, nevertheless, following the above principle, declined to interfere. It is indeed a cardinal principle that a petitioner who invokes the revisional power of a High Court, must come into Court with clean hands and must show that he has been unjustly treated. These conditions appear to me singularly absent in the present case. It is perfectly obvious, as realized by the Divisional Judge, that the sole reason which induced the plaintiff to repudiate his own agreement was that the value of the serai had become abnormally enhanced and that he would, therefore, lose money over the transaction. He nevertheless allowed Pokhar Das to pay on his behalf the decretal amount which formed the basis of that agreement. He comes into Court to repudiate his own agreement upon the purely technical point of registration. He cannot, therefore, be regarded in any way as a person entitled to invoke revisional and purely discretionary powers in his interest. There are no other grounds in the present case on which I could even consider the question of interference, although certain grounds connected with the question of interest have been argued before me.

(1) 11 Ind. Cas. 445; 93 P. R. 1911; 151 P. W. R. 1911; 228 P. L. R. 1911.

MAYA DAS v. JINDA RAM.

For the above reasons, I must decline to interfere and I dismiss this application with costs.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1456 OF 1919.

June 14, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Abdul Qadir.

MAYA DAS AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JINDA RAM—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata—Jurisdiction, absence of, in previous case.

Where a Court has no jurisdiction in law to try a case, its decision therein does not operate as a bar to a consideration in a subsequent suit, of the questions involved in the suit. [p. 875, col. 2.]

The fact that at the time of the decision of the former suit, the case-law was in favour of the Court having jurisdiction, does not make any difference.

Llabati Misra v. Bishun Chobey, 6 C. L. J. 621, followed.

Panchu Mandal v. Chandra Kanta Saha, 12 Ind. Cas. 9; 14 C. L. J. 220, Langat Singh v. Radha Kishen, 7 Ind. Cas. 781 and Dyal Singh v. Ram Rakha, 14 Ind. Cas. 78; 54 P. R. 1912; 122 P. W. R. 1912, distinguished.

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jhang at Sargodha, dated the 10th May 1919.

Lala Ram Chand Manchanda, for the Appellants.

Lala Mehr Chand Mahajan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 12th November 1919, one Jinda Ram instituted a suit claiming to redeem a house, which was held in mortgage by Maya Das-Gulab Singh on payment of Rs. 275. The plaintiff alleged that he had purchased the said house subject to that mortgage from the original mortgagors. The defendants pleaded, inter alia, that the house could not be redeemed except on payment of a total of Rs. 1,381.

The original mortgagors had sued the original mortgagees for redemption in 1896. That case had been tried by a Munsif Second Class, who, holding that the interest was a charge on the property, decreed redemption on payment of Rs. 873. This decree had been varied on appeal by the Divisional Court, but the Trial Court's decree was restored by the Chief Court in its order dated 18th January 1900. This decree was, however, never executed and in the present case, the defendants urged that the decision in the former case acted as res judicata and that, therefore, redemption could only take place on payment of the amount then arrived at, i. e., Rs. 873, subsequent interest and further costs of repairs or a total of Rs. 1,381. The Trial Court held that as the final decision in the former suit was that of the Chief Court, the parties were bound by it and decreed the plaintiff's suit for redemption on payment of Rs. 1,381 and subsequent interest at the rate entered in the mortgage-deed. The plaintiff appealed to the learned District Judge against this decision, contending that the decision of the former suit could not act as res judicata or estop him from urging that, according to the terms of the mortgage-deed itself, the interest was not a charge on the property. The learned District Judge agreed with this contention and held that the former suit did not prevent the plaintiff from raising this question again and further, that having regard to the phraseology of the mortgage-deed, interest was not a charge on the property. He, therefore, modified the decree of the Trial Court and granted the plaintiff a decree for redemption on payment of Rs. 358. Against this decision Maya Das and others, defendants, have come up to this Court in second appeal through Mr. Ram Chand Manchanda.

MUKANDI BAI v. JAMNI BAI.

Mr. Ram Chand Manchanda stated that he did not urge that the doctrine of res judicata applied but that the parties were estopped by the judgment of the Chief Court in the former case. The present suit was tried and triable by a Subordinate Judge. The former suit was tried by a Munsif of the Second Class with powers upto Rs. 500. That Munsif, therefore, had no jurisdiction to pass the decree he did. The learned Vakil for the appellant cited Lilabati Misra v. Bishun Chobey (1), Panchu Mandal v. Chandra Kanta Saha (2) and Langat Singh v. Radha Kishen (3) and contended that both the parties were estopped from agitating any point which had been decided in the former suit. While we have no quarrel with the authorities cited we are unable to see that they have any bearing on the point before us. It is perfectly clear that the Munsif Second Class who tried the former suit had no jurisdiction and his findings, therefore, cannot be regarded as binding on the parties. Mr. Ram Chand contended that the authorities at the time when the former suit was decided were in favour of the Munsif having had jurisdiction. That may be so, but as laid down in Dyal Singh v. Ram Rakha (4) and other authorities, the Munsif, Second Class, had no jurisdiction in law to try the case. We, therefore, hold that the former suit does not operate as a bar to the consideration of the question relating to interest.

Again, after reading carefully the mortgage-deed itself we are unable to see that it has been in any way misinterpreted or misconstrued by the learned District Judge. We, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

W. C. A. & N. H. Appeal dismissed.

(4) 14 Ind. Cas. 78; 54 P. R. 1912; 122 P. W. R. 1912.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 147-26 OF 1921.

May 4, 1923.

Present.—Mr. PIPON, J. C.

Musammat MUKANDI BAI—DEFENDANT
—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat JAMNI BAI—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Succession—Widow, disqualification of—Unchastity—Hostility.

Under the Hindu Law unchastity disqualifies a widow from succeeding to her husband's estate but it must be physical unchastity which occurred during the lifetime of the husband. [p. 878, col. 2.]

In the absence of unchastity, a widow will be excluded from succeeding to her husband only on proof of malignant or unjustified hostility towards her husband for which she is alone, or at least partly, responsible. [p. 879, cols. 1 & 2.]

Khettermont Dassi v. Kadambini Dassi, 17 Ind. Cas. 83; 16 C. W. N. 964, relied on.

Kery Kohitany v. Moneram Kohla, 13 B. L. R. 1 (F. B.); 19 W. R. 367, referred to.

(1) 6 C. L. J. 621.

(2) 12 Ind. Cas. 9; 14 C. L. J. 220.

(3) 7 Ind. Cas. 781.

MUKANDI BAI V. JAMNI BAI.

First appeal from an order of the District Judge, Bannu, dated the 9th November 1921.

Mr. Saaduddin Khan, K.S., for the Appellant.

Mr. Chiman Lal, R.S., for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this case are the two co-widows of Harbhajrai, deceased. The defendant, Musammat Mukandi Bai, has taken entire possession of the property left by the deceased, and the plaintiff, Musammat Jamni Bai, sues for possession by partition of a half share in the whole estate to which she claims to succeed as a co-widow. The date of the marriage of Musammat Jamni Bai, the plaintiff, to Harbhajrai cannot be exactly ascertained but it was certainly prior to 1901. The date of Harbhajrai's second marriage to Musammat Mukandi Bai must apparently be placed about 1900. It has been shown that the plaintiff bore one daughter and two sons to the deceased. Both her sons, however, died. Her surviving child, the daughter Musammat Bharawan Bai is now about 20 years old. Musammat Mukandi Bai, the defendant, bore three daughters to Harbhajrai, two of whom survive. Harbhajrai died in April 1920. It is common ground that since at least the year 1907 there had been an estrangement between the deceased and the plaintiff. The suit is resisted on the ground that the plaintiff is disqualified from succeeding to her husband's estate by reason of (1) her unchastity, and (2) her open hostility to her husband. The plaintiff has obtained a decree in the Trial Court for possession of half the immoveable property left by the deceased. The suit also included a claim to certain alleged cash property, but this claim has been disallowed and no appeal has been lodged against that portion of the suit which has been rejected. The decree of the Trial Court omits to state that the decree for possession is one by partition, but this appears to be purely a clerical error which can be corrected, if necessary, on the present appeal. The appeal is a first appeal and is lodged by the defendant Musammat Mukandi Bai against the decree granted to the plaintiff.

Before dealing with the points for determination on this appeal, it will be as well to state clearly all the facts which have been ascertained regarding the relations between the plaintiff and her husband. The first document on the record is a post-card dated the 1st December 1901 written by Harbhajrai to the plaintiff's father Rup Chand. It is a curiously worded document which shows that at the time the plaintiff had already left her husband and returned to her parents. In this post-card Harbhajrai remarks that he has heard that Rup Chand intends to send back Musammat Jamni Bai to him, and threatens that if he does so, Harbhajrai will set his dogs upon her. This gives some indication of the terms on which husband and wife were living in 1901. It is, however, tolerably clear that at a later date the plaintiff returned to her husband and that they lived together, at any rate for some period, as husband and wife. In fact, in an application made by Harbhajrai on a guardianship proceeding on the 16th of May 1917 he refers to this post-card and says that Musammat Jamni Bai has since been living with him, that she has since borne him three children, and that the post-card was written under provocation given by his father-in-law, Rup Chand, and that it is not worthy of serious consideration by a Court. It may be assumed, therefore, that for some period after 1901 the plaintiff and Harbhajrai lived together on fairly good terms and that the bore him three children the parentage of which he has never denied. However this may be, in 1907 the parties were again estranged. The plaintiff put in an application under section 488, Criminal Procedure Code, against her husband claiming maintenance on the ground that he had turned her out of his house. The parties, however, arrived at an agreement on the 21st of July 1907 which is recorded on the file of that case. Under this agreement Harbhajrai undertook to keep his wife and, in order to avoid quarrels with his mother, that they should reside in separate houses. He promised to give her jewelry and to treat her in an honourable manner, and bound himself, in the event of his acting contrary to the agreement, to pay her Rs. 15 per mensem as maintenance from the date of his breach of the agreement. The estrangement, however, evidently continued. On the

MUKANDI BAI v. JAMNI BAI.

10th of January 1908 - Harbhajrai lodged a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, which was decided by the District Judge on the 4th of February 1908. Musammāt Jamni Bai pleaded that she had all along been perfectly willing to reside with the plaintiff. Harbhajrai obtained his decree, but it was found by the District Judge that Musammāt Jamni Bai had always been ready to live with him and in consequence he allowed the husband no costs in the suit. Harbhajrai applied for execution and the parties left the Court together. In 1909 the plaintiff sued for three months' arrears of maintenance at Rs. 15 per mensem and Harbhajrai endeavoured in his pleas to repudiate the agreement of the 21st of July 1907 by alleging that it was extracted from him by fraud and undue influence, and that it contained penal clauses. In the Appellate Court (on the 22nd of March 1910) the plaintiff obtained a decree in full for the amount claimed and it was held that Harbhajrai had broken his agreement, had turned the plaintiff out, had re-married and had refused to take her to his home. Another suit was lodged by the plaintiff for Rs. 165 arrears of maintenance, and this was finally decided by the Divisional Judge's appellate order of the 18th of November 1910. It was held in that suit that no question of Musammāt Jamni Bai's misconduct had ever been raised and that her claim to maintenance could not be validly resisted. From that time up to 1917 no litigation appears to have taken place between the parties. On the 2nd of May 1917 Harbhajrai lodged an application for the guardianship of Musammāt Bharawan Bai, the daughter of himself and Musammāt Jamni Bai. He alleged that the girl was now old enough to be betrothed and that he was entitled to her custody. The application was rejected on the ground that the girl was quite old enough to know her own mind. It was clear that the dispute between the parties was one regarding the betrothal of Musammāt Bharawan Bai. On the 22nd of May 1917 Harbhajrai lodged a civil suit against Musammāt Jamni Bai, Musammāt Bharawan Bai, Rūp Chand and the man to whom Musammāt Bharawan Bai had been betrothed praying for a declaration that he alone was authorized to effect the girl's betrothal. His suit was dismissed on the 2nd of July 1917, it being held that the fault lay with Harbhajrai himself, that he had consented to the betrothal but had later repudiated it because he demanded that the maintenance which he paid to the mother should be reduced to Rs. 10 in view of the fact that Musammāt Bharawan Bai was about to marry a rich man. There was no further litigation up to the death of Harbhajrai in 1920. The above practically exhausts all the documentary evidence which we have upon the record as to the relations between the plaintiff and her husband.

In the Trial Court the suit was resisted, inter alia, on the ground that the respective daughters of the plaintiff and the defendant were necessary parties to the suit and should be impleaded. This ground has been dropped by the learned Counsel for the appellant who admits that in the presence of widows daughters have no right to the estate.

Another ground argued on this appeal is that the Trial Court had improperly disallowed the production of certain witnesses, who had been summoned by the appellant. Counsel points out that, after a large number of adjournments, the 14th of October 1921 was fixed for the hearing of evidence and that on the 6th of the same month the defendant had applied to summon six witnesses for that date. The record shows that on the 14th of October only two witnesses were heard on each side and a date was then given for the hearing of arguments. Now, I cannot accept the appellant's contention that the procedure of the Trial Court in this respect was, in any way, defective, because the record shows conclusively to my mind that the defendant entirely acquiesced in those proceedings. She was at the time represented by able Counsel and the order of the Court dated the 14th of October 1921 shows that her Counsel never raised any sort of objection on the score that he had other evidence to produce, but that it was at the request of Counsel on both sides that an adjournment was granted purely for the production of arguments. It is perfectly obvious that the other witnesses had been abandoned by the defendant's Counsel and, as a matter of fact, it is difficult to see in any case how the witnesses could have been material even if he had not abandoned them. They were apparently summoned solely upon the question of the plaintiff's chastity. Now, the allegation of the plaintiff's unchastity, although it is one of the grounds upon which the present appeal is based, was one which was never made in the pleadings. There is not the slightest indication on the record that such an allegation was ever put before the Trial Court prior to that date, or argued before it. Further, the proceedings which I have detailed above, show one outstanding fact, and that is that, throughout the whole of the very acrimonious litigation between Harbhajrai and the plaintiff he never on any occasion alleged that the plaintiff had been unchaste. This is particularly remarkable in view of the fact that he seems to have taken every possible ground, tenable and untenable, for defeating his wife's claim to maintenance. The plea of unchastity was one which must inevitably have been raised by him if there had been the slightest justification for it. Not only this, but we have a judicial pronouncement by the Divisional Court in the order of the 18th of November 1910 to the effect that no question of misconduct had ever been raised against Musammal Jamni Bai. The inherent weakness of the plea now put forward is illustrated by the only evidence which I am shown by the learned Counsel for the appellant. He refers me to the fact that Harbhajrai in his application for guardianship of Musammal Bharawan Bai stated that "it was na mauzun" that she should remain with her mother. He wishes me to infer that this is an insinuation against the unchastity of the girl's mother. I am unable, however, to concede this, as it is perfectly clear that no such allegation was ever made. The second piece of evidence to which he refers me is the record of a murder case which took place after the death of Harbhajrai in which it was alleged that one of the motives for the murder had been a liaison between the murdered man and the girl Musammal Bharawan Bai. I fail to see, however, that this is in any way relevant to the present case. In the first place, neither Musammal Bharawan Bai or her mother were parties to that case, or were ever examined as witnesses, or ever had the least opportunity of rebutting the insinuation made. In the next place, it is not the moral conduct of Musammal Bharawan Bai which we are considering, but that of her mother, the present plaintiff. I cannot seriously listen to the argument that we are entitled to draw the inference either that Musammal Bharawan Bai was herself a bad character, or that, even if she were, her mother's misconduct is thereby proved, or even to be presumed. On the contrary, I have shown above that there is what amounts to overwhelming evidence to show that throughout the whole course of her long estrangement from her husband the plaintiff remained perfectly chaste.

MUKANDI BAI v. JAMNI BAI.

The trend of judicial authority is to the effect that under Hindu Law unchastity disqualifies a Hindu wife from succeeding to her husband's estate, but that it must be physical unchastity which occurred during the lifetime of the husband. For this proposition a Calcutta ruling, Khettermoni Dassi v. Kadambini Dassi (1), is authority. I need not discuss this question, further, as I hold it fully proved that during the lifetime of her husband Musammal Jamni Bai remained perfectly chaste and, indeed, there is not the slightest ground for holding that she has been unchaste since his death.

The only remaining ground on which she can be disqualified from inheritance is that she has been openly hostile to her husband. The learned Counsel for the appellant relies upon the general principles and growth of Hindu Law in support of his contention. He would argue that Hindu Law, at the outset, did not recognize the claim of a widow to succeed at all, and that her right of inheritance depended upon the introduction of a legal fiction under which she was regarded as a single person corporate with her husband. Under this legal fiction it was recognized that on the death of her husband the widow as a portion of his person, remained and therefore, could not be ousted from his estate. He has referred me to the very lengthy judgment of a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court published as Kery Kolitany v. Moneeram Kolita (2). That judgment alludes to the principle of Hindu Law that absolute and unqualified obedience is exacted from a wife. The result of the ruling was to find that, in spite of the original principles of Hindu Law, a widow could not be deprived of her inheritance by reason of unchastity which took place after the death of her husband. It recognized the adaptation of the principles of strict Hindu Law to modern ideas of equity and modern social organization. The ruling which I have quoted above, Khettermoni Dassi v. Kadambini Dassi (1), shows, again, that, in the absence of unchastity, there must be not only hostility on the part of a wife but what is described as "malignant hostility" if she is to be excluded. Now it is not difficult to apply these principles to the present case. I cannot agree with the contention that mere hostility between the parties in itself will disqualify a widow. It is abundantly clear that there must be something more than hostility on the part of the husband resulting in estrangement, and there must be malignant or unjustified hostility on the part of the wife. Certainly unilateral hostility on the part of the husband will not be sufficient. It is undeniable in the present case that the parties became estranged, and it may even be possible that Harbhajrai himself was not, in the first instance, responsible for this unfortunate state of affairs. In fact the agreement of the 21st of July 1907 gives a very clear indication of how the trouble originally arose. It would seem from that agreement that the disturbing element was Harbhajrai's mother. It is not, however, necessary to speculate upon the original causes of the estrangement. It is sufficient to say that throughout the whole of the long litigation Harbhajrai consistently put himself in the wrong. He invariably failed to establish his allegations, or to escape from his responsibility for maintaining his wife. Indeed, he even found it worth while seriously to impugn his wife's personal character. As against this, the learned Counsel for the appellant would take his stand upon that absolute dependence of wife upon husband which was one of the first principles of Hindu Law. The argument would seem to imply that the question as to whether the husband or the wife were responsible for the estrangement is immaterial. This view would seem to depend upon that somewhat difficult metaphysical conception of the wife as part of the corporate person of her husband. Now, it is impossible to hold that Courts will recognize this theory, when pushed to the extreme limit of implying that the woman can have no personal right in the matter at all and that she is, in other words, at the mercy of her husband in this respect. It is clear from the use of the word "malignant" in the ruling to which I have referred above, that the open hostility which disqualifies a wife must be one for which she is alone, or at least partly, responsible. In the present case the facts are overwhelmingly clear. We have judicial pronouncements to the effect that the husband alone was responsible for the litigation which took place between the parties. The agreement for the payment of maintenance was one which was to take effect only if Harbhajrai committed a breach of his undertaking to treat his wife honourably and to permit her to live with him. The fact that maintenance was decreed against him and that he has been obliged to continue the payment of the allowance in itself proved that he himself broke the terms of the agreement. Even his suit for restitution of conjugal rights clearly showed that Musammal Jamni Bai was at that time, as before, ready to live with him, and the result of the suit showed, that, in spite of the conduct of Harbhajrai and the litigation, she at once accompanied him to his home at the conclusion of the suit. I have already mentioned that the original causes of the estrangement must be a matter of speculation only, and there is reason to think that the mothers of the respective parties were at least partly responsible for it. No doubt, the estrangement arose not only from this cause, but from a certain mutual incompatibility of temperament between the parties. But it is impossible to twist this or any proved fact which has come to light into an attitude of malignant hostility on the part of Musammal Jamni Bai. I must, therefore, hold that no such hostility has been proved on her part which would disqualify her under Hindu Law, from succeeding to her husband's estate. It is not denied that if neither unchastity or hostility is proved, the two co-widows must succeed equally. I, therefore, agree throughout with the conclusion arrived at by the Trial Court,

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 83; 16 C. W. N. 964.

(2) 13 B. L. R. 1 (F. B.) 19 W. R. 367.

MUKANDI BAI v. JAMNI BAI.

VASU KRISHNA YEKAVDA v. MADHAVRAO MORESHWAR BHADANEKAR.

I have already mentioned that there appears to be a purely clerical omission in the decree in that it omits to state that the decree for possession is one for possession by partition. I herewith amend this clerical error and insert the words "by partition." The appeal is dismissed with costs.
Z. K. & N. H. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 745 OF 1921.

August 30, 1922.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, Kt., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

VASU KRISHNA YEKAVDA—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MADHAVRAO MORESHWAR BHADANEKAR—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Khoti Settlement Act (I of 1880), s. 10—Mortgage of Khoti land, effect of—Khot, right of, to claim land.

A simple mortgage of Khoti land by the occupant thereof, amounts to a transfer of his interest in the land, within the meaning of section 10 of the Khoti Settlement Act, and entitles the Khot to claim the land, even though the mortgage was paid off before the Khot advanced his claim.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Ratnagiri, in Appeal No. 215 of 1920, confirming a decree passed by the Second Class Subordinate Judge at Devgad, in Civil Suit No. 161 of 1918.

Mr. A. G. Desai, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The point arising in this appeal is very simple. The facts are that the defendant effected a simple mortgage of his one-third share in the Khata. The mortgage is said to have been paid off on November 5, 1917, and the Khot filed the present suit in 1918, to claim the right which accrued to him under section 10 of the Khoti Settlement Act, as amended by the Acts of 1912 and 1913. In virtue of the provisions of section 9, as amended, the interest of the occupancy tenant is heritable but not transferable without the consent of the Khot. The exception laid down in that section does not apply to the facts of the present case, and under section 10 "if the occupant does any act purporting to transfer his land or any portion thereof or any interest therein without the consent of the Khot, his land shall be at the disposal of the Khot as Khoti land free of all incumbrances, other than the liens or charges created or existing in favour of Government." That is the provision which the plaintiff seeks to enforce in his favour, and both the lower Courts have awarded his claim.

In the present appeal before us by the occupant, the original defendant No. 2, it has been urged that that simple mortgage is not a transfer of the interest of the occupant in the land within the meaning of section 10. But it is difficult to hold that a simple mortgage is not a transfer of the interest of the mortgagor within the meaning of that section. There is no decision on the point, and on the plain meaning of the word 'transfer' it is difficult to exclude such a transfer as we have in the present case from the scope of that section.

It is also urged that as the defendant No. 2 paid off the mortgage before the suit was filed, it must be treated as not having been made at all and that at the date of the suit there was no cause of action. The words of the section are clear that, if the occupant does any act purporting to transfer any portion or any interest in the land without the consent of the Khot, his land shall be at the disposal of the Khot. It is the defendant's act by way of effecting a simple mortgage that gives the Khot a right which he claims to enforce in the present suit, and the satisfaction of the mortgage before suit cannot afford any answer to the claim made by the plaintiff. It is apparently a hard case; but we have to give effect to the provisions of the section as enacted by the Legislature, and defendant No. 2 has not been able to show that the present transfer is outside the scope of the section. We, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

W. C. A.

Appeal dismissed.

MARYAM BIBI v. GHULAM MAHOMED.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 762 OF 1919.

January 31, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice,
and Mr. Justice Fforde.Musammāt MARYAM BIBI—DEFEND-ANT—APPELLANT
versusGHULAM MAHOMED AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.Custom—Succession—Ancestral property—Equal holdings—Common ancestor expressly mentioned in pedigree table—Presumption.

Where in a suit relating to succession under the Customary Law of the Punjab it was found that the holdings of the plaintiffs, collaterals of the deceased, were almost equal in area to those of the deceased, some of the *khata*s being still joint, and that the common ancestor of the parties was expressly mentioned in the pedigree tables prepared at the different Settlements:

Held, that, in the absence of any indication that the property was self-acquired, the presumption was that it was ancestral.

The express mention of a common ancestor in a pedigree table furnishes a presumptive proof that the land originally belonged to him.

Jiwan Singh v. Har Kaur, 22 Ind. Cas. 415; 41 P. R. 1914; 51 P. L. R. 1914; 34 P. W. R. 1914, followed.

First appeal from a decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Sialkot, dated the 31st March 1919.

Messrs. Aziz Ahmad and Abdul Rashid, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Zafar Ullah Khan and Din Dayal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The dispute in this case relates to the estate of one Allah Dad, a Chinna Jat, of the Daska Tahsil, in the Sialkot District, whose relationship with the contesting parties is shown in the following pedigree table:—

The plaintiffs, who are the collaterals of the deceased in the fourth degree, allege that the property is ancestral, and that they are entitled to inherit the estate in preference to the deceased's daughter, Maryam Bibi. The Trial Court has found in favour of the plaintiffs and decreed their claim.

The defendant has preferred an appeal to this Court, and the sole question argued before us is, that the plaintiffs have failed to establish that the land has descended from the common ancestor. The estate of the deceased consists of four plots of land, two situate in the village Manpur, and the remaining two in a neighbouring village called Kothi Channu. Now, the Manpur estate comprises two parcels,—

(1) Two kanals 3 marlas out of a small joint holding, which mainly consists of two disused wells, of which Allah Dad and the plaintiffs were joint owners.

(2) A holding of 262 kanals which corresponds to a holding of 259 kanals owned by the plaintiffs in this village.

Coming now to the property in Kothi Channu, we find that Allah Dad and the plaintiffs were joint owners in a khata of 659 kanals 10 marlas to the extent of $\frac{1}{4}$ th share each, and that each branch of the family has also a separate holding of nearly 85 kanals.

The learned Subordinate Judge has, in view of the fact that the holdings of the parties are almost equal in each of the two villages, and that two of the *khata*s are even now jointly owned, reached the conclusion that the whole of the property descended from a common ancestor. This conclusion receives support from the fact that the common ancestor, Sultan, is expressly mentioned in the pedigree table, and it has been held by a Division Bench in Jiwan Singh v. Har Kaur (1), that the express mention of the common ancestor in the genealogical tree furnished a presumptive proof that the land originally belonged to him.

The facts mentioned above do not entirely negative the theory that the two branches of the family jointly acquired all the plots otherwise than by succession from a common ancestor, but there is not a scintilla of evidence on the record in support of such acquisition. At any rate, the Trial Judge has drawn from these facts the inference that the property in dispute is ancestral and we are not prepared to hold that his conclusion is erroneous. We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

(1) 22 Ind. Cas. 415; 41 P. R. 1914; 51 P. L. R. 1914; 34 P. W. R. 1914.

SARJU PRASAD MISSIR v. MAKSUDHAN CHADHURY.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE PATNA HIGH COURT.

April 27, 1922.

Present:—Viscount Cave, Lord Shaw and Sir John Edge.

SARJU PRASAD MISSIR AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MAKSUDHAN CHADHURY AND OTHERS
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr 58, 63—Property sold in execution of money-decree—Attachment under mortgage-decree—Objection by prior purchaser allowed—Sale under mortgage-decree, effect of—Order on objection, whether final. Certain property belonging to S was mortgaged to L. K. sued S to recover a certain sum of money and obtained an order for attachment before judgment of the property. The suit was subsequently decreed. L then obtained a decree on his mortgage and attached the mortgage property. K brought the property to sale under his money-decree and purchased it himself. He then filed an objection against the attachment and sale of the property in execution of L's mortgage-decree. This objection was allowed and the property was exempted from sale under L's decree. K then obtained possession of the property. Several years later, L's representatives brought the property to sale under L's mortgage-decree and purchased it themselves. Thereupon they brought a suit for possession and mesne profits against K.

Held, that the order on K's objection having become final and binding on L and his representatives, the sale of the property under L's mortgage-decree was ineffective as against K and he could not, therefore, be evicted from the property. [p. 885, col. 2.]

Privy Council Appeal from the judgment and decree of the Patna High Court, dated 30th July 1917, reversing the judgment and decree of the District Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 21st May 1914.

Messrs. DeGruyther, K. C. and Dube, for the Appellants.

Mr. J. M. Parikh, for the Respondents.

